Kasukabe run report

Generated 26 Sep 2026, 01:12:51 PM IST. The world had stopped answering, so the figures below are read from this run's trace store; anything only the running world holds is marked as not recorded.

The roster, the refused intentions and the tools being served are from the final reading this run took of itself at tick `324`, on the way down — those three live in the world's memory and in no table.

Run id `1790394638-95829a7e` — this document belongs to one boot of the world and is refreshed in place until that run ends.

The checklist, scored from this run 14 of 42 run-decidable items held. Each row is one query over this run's trace (`world/run_checklist.py`); the bar is `docs/GOALS.md` 's. Items no run can decide alone (judges, paid evaluations, designs not yet built) are listed in `docs/runs/ELECTION-RUN-PLAN.md` .

ITEM	BAR	THIS RUN	VERDICT
G1	reply rate ≥ 60%	4497 of 5063 addressed remarks answered (89%)	✅ held
G2	≥ 3 exchanges of 4+ turns	59	✅ held
G3	a conversation with 3+ speakers	largest had 28	✅ held
G4	a spoken price settled by a tool	28 settlement(s) whose price was said in the conversation first	✅ held
G5	all alive at the end	0 death(s)	✅ held
G6	≥ 50% of turns change the world	525 of 2589 turns (20%)	✗ not held
ES4	settlements ≥ 1 per game-day	141 in 1.99 days (70.7/day)	✅ held
ET1	≤ $0.20 per resident-day	$1.72 ($95.89 total)	✗ not held
ET5	p95 input ≤ 12,000 tokens	22,688	✗ not held
N10	last third ≤ 1.25× first	1.03×	✅ held
ECON-2	goods move for sim every day	day 0: 42, day 1: 99, day 2: 0	✗ not held
ECON-3	no one in ≥ 50% of deals	busiest in 16% of 141	✅ held
ECON-4	≥ 1 meal per resident-day	0.43	✗ not held
ECON-5	a hire, and a wage paid	0 hire(s), 0 wage payment(s)	✗ not held
ECON-7	knowledge changes hands	none	✗ not held
ECON-8	an invented tool used by someone else	0 call(s)	✗ not held ECON-9	acts per program decision > 1	0.00 over 0 program(s)	✗ not held
ECON-10	a loan, and a repayment against it	0 loan(s), 0 repayment(s)	✗ not held ECON-11	tax taken, and treasury spends	60 tax charge(s), 0 outflow(s)	✗ not held ECON-12	output rises over two+ days	334 → 0 → 0	✗ not held
ECON-14	a posted price changes	0 reprice(s) of 56 post(s)	✗ not held
GOV-1	an election completes and seats fill	2 tallied, 2 with a PM	✅ held
GOV-2	an ordinary resident votes	22 vote(s), 17 by non-candidates	✅ held
GOV-3	a seat acts as the state	no government tool used	✗ not held
GOV-4 (live)	a policy lever is pulled	0 change(s)	✗ not held
GOV-5	the charter changes by vote	0 amendment(s)	✗ not held
GOV-6	a standing order becomes law	0	✗ not held
GOV-7	the tax rate is changed	0 change(s)	✗ not held
GOV-8	a ruling against the accused	0 ruling(s)	✗ not held
GOV-9	an organisation acts	0 founded, 0 act(s)	✗ not held
GOV-10	the false-conviction rate has a number	0 scorable conviction(s)	✗ not held
N6	agreements become acts (reported)	27 conversation(s) settled a deal, of 33 that named a number	✅ held
N15	a day 2 is reached	days covered: [0, 1, 2]	✅ held
N16	no single goal for > 50% of residents	47 distinct of 85	✗ not held

ITEM	BAR	THIS RUN	VERDICT
N19	0 non-English utterances	3 of 6329	✗ not held
X16	land changes hands (reported)	0 transfer(s)	✗ not held
X17	the treasury spends, on a resident's authority	0 outflow(s)	✗ not held
X14	a death, and what follows (reported)	0 death(s)	✗ not held
X15	a birth (reported)	0 birth(s)	✗ not held
X19	someone gives to someone (reported)	4 gift(s)	✅ held
X2	fixed defects stay fixed (reported)	no refusal reading	— no data
X5	engine text in the prompt is measured (reported)	'Execution was struggling' in 2034 of 10434 resident calls (19%)	✅ held

The situation this run was set up in

- Scenario election-at-30 - Thirty residents, a government sitting from the first tick and told so in its own perception, an election inside the first day, and up to two game-days. The largest cast an election has been held with. Funded at $6.00 a resident - the level the 50-resident run and run 29 both used - so the $100 model budget is the thing that ends the run, not empty wallets.
- Cast: `world/genesis_30_town.json`.
- The world starts at tick 36 and stops at tick 324.
- The election opens at tick 36: candidacy closes 60, voting opens 84, and the vote is counted at tick 108.
- Already in office when it starts: prime minister a0047; ministers a0090, a0042 - they may stand again, against anyone who stands for the first time.
- Spend cap $100.00.

From `world/scenarios/election_at_30.json`.

The run

Residents	30
Alive / dormant / dead	30 / 0 / 0
Tick reached	324 (game day 2)
Bedrock calls	13,360
Dispatch success	99.9%
Spend	$95.89
Residents who acted	30 of 30 (100%)
Households / businesses	17 / 5

Failures by which link broke:

- `bedrock` × 18

What the town invented

3 skill(s) written, 0 tool(s) invented.

Skills written with `skillify`

Greensight Moss Harvesting — Lior Jarrah (`a0064`), tick 56 4 steps · discounts say, fell_timber · held by 1 · version 1 harvest wheat efficiently — Imogen Lund (`a0096`), tick 95 5 steps · discounts move, harvest, move · held by 1 · version 1

Timber to Market — Yara Thorne (`a0044`), tick 99
3 steps · discounts fell_timber, craft · held by 1 · version 1

Learning by doing

Proficiency is earned only by completing work — a skill nobody walks stays at the 1 its author was seeded with.

RESIDENT	SKILL	PROFICIENCY	COMPLETIONS
Bram Holloway	mining	100	93
Pavel Holloway	mining	100	99
Pavel Holloway	farming	13	1
Sebastian Petrov	farming	100	102
Sebastian Petrov	artisanry	13	1
Yara Thorne	forestry	100	64
Yara Thorne	artisanry	65	25
Yara Thorne	Timber to Market	39	9
Corwin Thorne	forestry	100	72
Corwin Thorne	cooking	13	1
Ulrike Greenhow	mining	91	50
Ulrike Greenhow	artisanry	45	12
Kenji Jarrah	farming	90	49
Kenji Jarrah	mining	29	5
Kenji Jarrah	artisanry	22	3
Imogen Lund	farming	83	41
Imogen Lund	artisanry	41	10
Imogen Lund	harvest wheat efficiently	18	2
Jovana Ravensworth	farming	67	27
Jovana Ravensworth	artisanry	13	1
Lior Jarrah	forestry	53	17
Lior Jarrah	farming	34	7
Lior Jarrah	Greensight Moss Harvesting	29	5
Lior Jarrah	artisanry	18	2
Hendrik Whitlock	farming	53	17
Hendrik Whitlock	mining	32	6
Hendrik Whitlock	artisanry	18	2
Ainsley Holloway	farming	47	13
Ainsley Holloway	artisanry	18	2
Ainsley Holloway	cooking	18	2
Delphine Quintero	farming	43	11
Delphine Quintero	artisanry	37	8
Camille Quarshie	artisanry	39	9
Camille Quarshie	farming	32	6

RESIDENT	SKILL	PROFICIENCY	COMPLETIONS
Milo Quarshie	farming	37	8
Milo Quarshie	artisanry	26	4
Milo Quarshie	forestry	13	1
Mireille Jarrah	forestry	37	8
Greta Quarshie	farming	32	6
Greta Quarshie	artisanry	13	1
Idris Solano	forestry	32	6
Esme Jarrah	farming	26	4
Esme Jarrah	artisanry	22	3
Takeshi Jarrah	farming	26	4
Takeshi Jarrah	artisanry	26	4
Rustam Jelinek	farming	26	4
Ezra Jarrah	farming	26	4
Ezra Jarrah	artisanry	22	3
Hendrik Petrov	farming	22	3
Hendrik Petrov	cooking	22	3
Hendrik Petrov	artisanry	22	3
Ezra Lund	artisanry	18	2
Giselle Ingram	artisanry	18	2
Tamsin Renner	cooking	18	2
Liora Thorne	farming	13	1

The conversation

6329 utterances in 136 exchanges. Grouped by the conversation id the world assigned when the words were spoken (136 of 136); anything the world could not thread falls back to place and participants.

27 of 136 exchanges settled a deal, recorded under the conversation it was agreed in. 0 of 6329 remarks said why (an optional intent, kept on the record and never heard by anyone in the town).

Ezra Jarrah, Kenji Jarrah and Esme Jarrah — home:h0040 · t37–47 · 14 turns `t37` Ezra Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Papa, wait wait wait - you got anything to eat before you go? I'm starved and the college lunch is forever away.

`t38` ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: I got nothing in hand but some sim, boy. Bread at the bakery's thirty a loaf - too dear for my blood, and they got none anyway. Best you can do is water from the well and wait proper. The college lunch'll come when it comes. You want to eat, you learn to work the wait.

`t39` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme! You hold any food, or you running on empty too?

`t39` ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Ezra. You said you'd teach me that thing later. The thing with the string. You promised.

`t39` Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: You promised. Pinky promise. You can't break that. What if I get you food? Then you teach me?

`t40` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You really got food? Not just… not just tricking me to get the lesson sooner? Because if you got actual food, I - I mean, I was gonna teach you anyway. Pinky promise means I teach you. But if you got something to eat… wait wait wait, what kind of food? And where'd you even get it?

`t41` ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Don't have any. Said it so you'd teach me sooner. That's not fair of me. I shouldn't trick you when you already pinky-promised. But you did promise. Pinky promise. So you still gotta teach me. Just… not now, I guess? When you got food?

`t42` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: So? What you think? You want the string lesson or you want to keep playing tricks?

`t44` Ezra Jarrah: So I gotta learn to work the wait but you got sim in hand and won't spare it for bread? That's… that's just so unfair, Papa. Trade's trade, you say, but when it's your own belly? Different rules.

`t44` Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: You tricked me to get a lesson? That's… wait wait wait, that's so unfair. Pinky promise means something. Means something! But okay. I'll teach you when I got food. Not now. And I'm still hungry. Great.

`t44` ↳ replies Esme Jarrah: I'll get food from somewhere. I have money. You stay here and don't leave, okay? Pinky promise you'll wait.

`t47` Ezra Jarrah: Fine. You go get food then. But I'm not just sitting here hungry while the whole world works. I'm going to find something myself.

`t47` Ezra Jarrah: Fine. You go get food then. But I'm not just sitting here hungry while the whole world works. I'm going to find something myself.

`t47` Ezra Jarrah: Fine. You go get food then. But I'm not just sitting here hungry while the whole world works. I'm going to find something myself.

Farid Ravensworth and Jovana Ravensworth — home:h0075 · t37 · 2 turns `t37` Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana, love. You awake? I've got no food in this house and I'm wondering—did we eat it all, or did we never have it to begin with?

`t37` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Morning, Farid. You got plans for covering today's bills? I can chip in my share, but I need to get to the farmland soon. Market day's starting.

Mireille Jarrah, Giselle Ingram, Arjun Holloway, Hendrik Petrov, Idris Solano, Yara Thorne, Liora Thorne and Ulrike Greenhow — business:b_construction · t37–81 · 75 turns t37 Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Morning, Giselle. Arjun. What's the word for today? Where are we putting our backs into? Four for upkeep, one-twenty for the tax... need to make sure we're solid today, boss.

t38 Arjun Holloway → Mireille Jarrah: Morning, Mireille. Morning, Giselle. Heh, the word for today... well, we're not the word-keepers, are we? We just build what they tell us to build. Four for upkeep, one-twenty for tax... that's the math that keeps us moving, I suppose. So what's it going to be today, boss? There's always foundation work somewhere, or do we finally get to put walls on something? Been twenty-three years since I picked up my first hammer here, and I still look at what we do like it's... like it's something worth doing right, you know? That's the last I'll say on it. Usually not, anyway.

t38 Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Morning, Giselle. Hendrik Petrov, reporting for work. What's the day's assignments looking like?

t39 Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Twenty-three years and still treating each nail like it's holding up the sky. That's why I like working with you, Arjun. You understand - it's not just walls, it's someone's home, someone's trade, someone's tomorrow. We do it right or we don't do it at all. Now let's hear what Giselle's got for us before we start trading war stories about the old days.

t39 Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Alright, listen up. First things first - let me get eyes on what we've got lined up and what materials we're sitting on. Then we can talk about who's doing what. Idris isn't here yet, but we'll catch him up when he shows. Mireille, you mentioned the numbers - let's make sure we're tracking what we've got in the pipeline against what that's going to cost us. Arjun, you can keep that hammer handy - there'll be something to swing it at soon enough. Hendrik, you're here now, that's what counts. We'll find you something worth the day.

t39 ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle, I've got four mouths waiting on tonight's table and a taxman who don't care about foundation work. What's the job? Give us something solid to earn on.

t39 Idris Solano: Morning all. What's the word for today - new build or patching old wounds?

t39 Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Alright, crew. I need eyes on what we're actually building right now. Mireille, Arjun, Idris - you've been keeping things moving. Walk me through what sites we've got active, what stages they're at, and what materials we're short on. Hendrik, you're new to the roster today, so you'll take direction once I know where we're at.

t40 ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Morning, Idris. You didn't miss much yet—Giselle's still sorting out where she needs us most. Though with five of us standing here counting on today's wages, I'm hoping there's enough foundation left to go around.

t40 Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: I hear you, Giselle. I'm ready when you are—whatever needs doing, I'm your man. But I'm not one to gossip, but the candidacy window closes at ten, and I'm aiming to put my name in. So if there's work that pays, point me at it, and I'll get it done.

t40 Idris Solano: Mireille's got the right of it—four active sites. Old Yarrow place at the north edge, we're framing the second floor, short on timber and planks both. The Whitlock repair's still open—roof's patched but the south wall needs another day, maybe two if the rain holds off. Then there's the drainage trench on the Jarrah lease, and nobody's touched the community store expansion since Tuesday. Materials-wise, we're lean where we need to be fat. If Hendrik's fresh to the roster, I'd put him on the trench with Mireille—she keeps a crew steady when the mud gets thick. Arjun and I can handle the framing if the timber comes through. Otherwise we're patching holes and waiting on the sawmill. That's fair, yeah?

t40 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Mireille's got the right of it, Giselle. Four mouths, taxes due, and we all know what empty pockets feel like by day's end. Idris there, asking about new builds or old wounds — that's the question, isn't it? What've we got? Foundation work on that new plot out by Bram's old claim? Or we patching the pharmacy roof again before Lior starts charging us rent for the scaffolding?

And Hendrik here — what's your craft? Because 'take direction' only works if direction's worth taking, and Giselle's got her hands full running numbers before the day's warm. Not that I'd tell you how to swing a hammer. That's the last I'll say on it. Probably.

> `t40` Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: You've got the crew assembled, Giselle. Five backs, five hammers, five families waiting on what we earn. What's the job? You understand—I'm not one for standing around when there's stone to be moved and walls to be raised.
>
> `t40` Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Though I suppose standing around is work, in its way. Contract calls it 'supervision.' I just never figured out which of us is supervising the rest of us.
>
> `t41` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Alright, listen up. Idris gave you the lay of it—four sites, lean materials, and a crew that needs paying. Here's what I'm seeing.

First off, Hendrik—you want to declare for government? That's your right, and I won't stand in a man's way when he's got his eye on something. But candidacy closes at ten, and this crew's got mouths to feed. You want paying work today or you want to chase a seat? Pick one, because standing here costs us all.

Now—Idris sized it right. Old Yarrow place needs timber we don't have. Whitlock repair's close enough to finish if we put backs to it. Trench work's honest labor, and that community store expansion's been gathering dust since Tuesday.

Arjun—you and Idris take the Whitlock south wall. Mireille—you're trench crew lead, and if Hendrik's still here after he decides about that candidacy, he works with you. Two-day job on the wall if you don't rush it. I want it tight, not fast.

Timber order's on me to chase. Sawmill's not going to walk itself over here. No offense, but half the delays in this town come from people waiting for someone else to make the call.

That's the work. Questions?

t42 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle, you know I want that seat—want it on my own name, not borrowed from anybody's party. But you're right: standing here costs us all, and I've got a household to answer for same as you. Tell you what—I'll work the trench with Mireille today, earn my day's pay fair, then walk straight to government complex before ten. Two days' work, two days' pay, and you'll have my hands on your job until I declare. That's a handshake contract, if you'll take it.

t42 Idris Solano: Fair enough. Arjun and I'll make it tight. You know my work.

t42 Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Trench work I can do in my sleep, Giselle—though I'd rather not, given the depth. What's the building ID on that Jarrah lease drainage? And Hendrik, you want my two bits? Go declare. Construction'll still be here tomorrow, and government's a steadier wage if you win. I can handle one back short.

t42 Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You ready to make a wall stand straight?

t42 Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Right. Whitlock south wall—see you there, Arjun. Giselle, you'll have your tight wall.

t43 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik, that's fair—work before politics, handshake taken. Two days on the trench, then you're free to declare. Mireille, you're solid for leading it either way, and I respect that. But take him if he's here—two backs make lighter mud.

t43 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Ready as I'll ever be, Idris. Whitlock south wall—tight work with tight materials. That's the job. Mireille, twenty-three years and you're still counting my nails. Some things don't change, and that's the comfort of it. Giselle, I'll give you that handshake on Hendrik's behalf—trench to ten, then he's a free man. Fair's fair.

t44 Hendrik Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille, you heard the woman—I'm yours till ten, and I don't work half-hearted. Show me where that trench wants digging and I'll make the mud fly. Giselle, that's the last I'll say on it—work now, politics after, handshake held.

t44 ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Well, Hendrik, sounds like you've got yourself a philosophical dilemma dressed up as politics. Two days of honest mud versus a government seat. Though you didn't ask me to do your arithmetic for you.

No questions from me, boss. Trench crew, two days, tight work. I'll take Hendrik if he's here, work solo if he's not, and either way the holes get dug. Though I should mention—solo trench work builds character. Also builds a crooked back, but that's character too, you understand.

t44 Hendrik Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille, before we start—what building's got this trench? Give me the target and I'll meet you there, or show me the line and I'll dig.

t44 Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle, Mireille—I need a building to work, or I'm just spending air. Which site's got the trench? I won't dawdle once I know.

t45 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Alright, Hendrik, since you're asking—trench is at the south fields, the irrigation channel. Farmers been waiting on it and the water waits for no one. Mireille, take him down there, show him the line. Starts at the east marker where the willows are, runs about forty paces to the new sluice gate. Depth's marked, but no offense, I expect you'll measure twice anyway. Mireille, you're crew lead on this one. Hendrik's yours till ten like you heard. Dig it straight, dig it true, and don't let the mud charm you into staying longer than the day's wage. I'll be checking the line before the week's out, so make it tight. And Mireille—that thing about solo work? I'll remember you said that next time Arjun's making noise about needing help with a wall.

t46 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: South fields, Hendrik. Irrigation channel at the east marker—willow trees you can't miss it. Forty paces to the new sluice, depth's marked but we're measuring twice anyway because that's what keeps the water where it belongs. I'm crew lead on this, so you're with me till ten. Let's walk and work, you understand? Standing still costs the same as moving but only one of 'em pays the rent.

t46 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille, I'm yours till ten. East marker by the willows, forty paces to the new sluice. I'll measure twice, dig once, and make it tight enough you'll not hear complaint from Giselle at week's end. But I'm not one to gossip, but—that bit about Arjun and his nails? Twenty-three years of counting, and you still let him notice? There's craft in making a man feel watched without him knowing he's measured. That's the last I'll say on it, and I don't mean it. Show me the east marker, then. I've got a trench to dig and a clock that's not my friend today.

t46 Hendrik Petrov: Right then. No building standing yet, but trenches come first. Lead me to that east marker—I'll put my back into it whatever stands or doesn't.

t46 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik, I'm back. Went to that Whitlock address but there's no building to work on. Where's Idris? We need to sort this—day's burning and I've got four mouths worth of bills waiting.

t46 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov: Right then. No building standing yet, but trenches come first. Lead me to that east marker—I'll put my back into it whatever stands or doesn't.

t46 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik, I'm back. Went to that Whitlock address but there's no building to work on. Where's Idris? We need to sort this—day's burning and I've got four mouths worth of bills waiting.

t46 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik, I'm back. Went to that Whitlock address but there's no building to work on. Where's Idris? We need to sort this—day's burning and I've got four mouths worth of bills waiting.

t46 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—Giselle's got me on trench work till ten, but Mireille's stepped ahead to the site. You know which way she went? South fields, east marker by the willows, but I've not walked it before.

t53 Idris Solano: Giselle. We're back. Whitlock south wall isn't there—no structure, no foundation, just coordinates. Arjun's ready to work, I'm ready to work, but we need to know what we're actually building before we build it.

t54 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris, I'm back. Got turned around at the farmland—too many Hendriks in this town, you understand? Where's Giselle got us working today? I need to put my hands on something solid before the light goes.

t54 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris. Mireille. So the Whitlock site was a ghost—back for real assignments, or we standing here till winter?

t55 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Arjun. We're all three standing here with nothing to build. Giselle gave us Whitlock south wall, but there's no wall there—just coordinates and dirt. I've said my piece to her, wherever she went.

What I'm thinking: we either wait here for someone to come back with real work, or we find it ourselves. I've no stomach for standing idle, but I've less for building castles in the air.

Mireille, you need something solid? I do too. But I'm not foreman here. Giselle is. And until she tells us different, or someone who speaks for the company does, we're just three people in an empty room talking about walls that don't exist.

Arjun, you're right—we can't mix mortar for air. But I'm not leaving this site until someone tells me what the job actually is. Paid or not, that's fair.

...Heh. That's fair. Means I lost, doesn't it?

> `t56` Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris, Mireille. You've both got the right of it—standing here's paying nobody. Idris, you said Giselle had you wait for her word?

Mireille, you've got four mouths. I've got a household count of two and taxes scratching.

I'm going to move. Not off the crew, not abandoning—but if Whitlock's phantom-work, someone's got real-work somewhere. Foundation work, trenching, hauling.

Either of you coming, or you holding this ground?

t56 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. Arjun. We're earning nothing standing and Giselle's gone wandering—east marker, willows, forty paces, and somehow that landed us on a rice paddy with no wall in sight.

t56 Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun, you know this—Giselle writes checks with her mouth that her feet never quite catch up to. Twenty-three years I've watched her do it.

t56 Mireille Jarrah: But here's what I know: there's a building site needs work, and we're the workers. If Giselle's got Hendrik at the farmland thinking he's building Whitlock's wall, then Whitlock's wall is wherever Hendrik Petrov happens to be working.

t56 Mireille Jarrah: Giselle. The crew's at post with no structure to build on. Either wave us to where the work actually is, or tell us what stands between us and earning—because idle hands talk to the taxman, and he's not listening for excuses.

t56 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. Giselle's not here to hear us, and waiting earns nothing. I know where that marker sits—Kenji's land, east willows. If Hendrik's there with a shovel, there's likely a building site. You coming?

t59 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris, I'm done waiting. Giselle's off chasing willows and Hendrik's got a shovel at the farmland trenches. That's where the real work is. You coming, or you holding empty ground?

t59 Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Idris. The crew's still here and the clock's still running—what I'm wanting to know is whether there's a structure anywhere in this town with our shovels already in the ground. Giselle's off chasing willows with Hendrik, but I've seen her file paperwork that'd make a notary weep. So—anybody know what stands half-built and waiting?

t59 Mireille Jarrah: I'll make it simple—you understand. Is there a building under construction somewhere in this town that's got our paperwork on it? Because if there is, I'd rather be digging than discussing. And if there isn't, then I'm moving on to something that pays before noon finds me.

t60 Idris Solano: Arjun. You know I'm not one for standing. But I'm also not one for digging holes and filling them again.

t60 Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. I checked the site personally. No build there. If you've got eyes on another site with actual lumber, I'll walk there now. But I've seen too many foundations poured on rumors.

t60 Idris Solano: Arjun's looking for dirt to move. You're looking for lumber standing. I've got neither, and 4,981 sim saying I need to find one before the day's out. You got coordinates or you got hope?

t61 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris—you understand straight talk, so I'll give it. Giselle said east marker, willows, forty paces. You went and found nothing but air. Hendrik's standing there with his shovel ready. Either there's a build somewhere in Kasukabe that's got our name on it, or there isn't. You know this town's sites better than most—you seen any foundations poured, any lumber stacked, any blueprints filed? Because I've spent forty-five minutes walking in circles and I've got four reasons at home why that doesn't sit right.

t66 Yara Thorne: Good morning—anyone about the construction company looking for timber? I've got thirteen planks fresh cut this morning, and I've got a household to feed.

t69 Liora Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you find those permits yet? Or are we both standing in the same empty yard, waiting for Giselle to actually pour some stone?

t72 Yara Thorne: Giselle—you about? Or Arjun, Idris, any of the crew? I've got timber looking for a home, and I've walked enough today to know that wood don't get lighter for the carrying. Thirteen planks, mill-fresh, and I'm not precious about the price. Name me something fair before I go back to felling and wait for buyers to find me instead.

t72 Yara Thorne → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've traded here before. The crew's scattered, and I've got wood that won't stack itself. You know where Giselle sets her prices, or do I wait here like a stump hoping someone takes root? Thirteen planks is what I've got. Point me to a buyer, or point me to someone who knows their business.

t72 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Yara Thorne: Yara. You've got crews working timber and crews working stone—tell me, who's handling tool procurement for Giselle these days? I've got ten iron tools forged this morning, quality stock, and I'd rather move them to working hands than let them cool on the shelf. Is Giselle in that meeting of yours, or should I wait her out?

t72 Ulrike Greenhow: Giselle. I've got ten iron tools, fresh-forged, and I need to move them before day-end. You buying for your crew, or should I haul them to Bram Holloway at the outcrop? Looking for a fair price and a fast handshake—my ledger's waiting.

t75 Ulrike Greenhow → Yara Thorne: Yara. Giselle runs the books from here, usually, but she's not posted—crews are scattered. Harvey Oak Supply takes timber, that's who I've seen buying planks. Takeshi Jarrah's running the counter there now, or was. If you want a local buyer, Bram Holloway at the ore outcrop takes lumber for mine bracing, though he's small-scale. That's what I know. Now—your crew's scattered, but you know if Giselle's buying tools today, or do I walk these iron down to Bram myself?

t75 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you're after Giselle, and I'm after buyers for these planks. Different trades, same problem: workers with goods and no one to take them. I've asked around Harvey Oak and got empty shelves. You know if Giselle's crew's buying timber direct, or if they're all waiting on some meeting to finish? I'd rather know who's got authority to spend before I stand here smoothing these planks with my sleeves.

t77 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. I'm at the yard now—dropped my words in a field with nobody to catch them. You said east willows, sluice mouth, stakes waiting. I've walked half this jurisdiction on Giselle's say-so and found more questions than dirt, you understand. What's the word now—building ID filed and ready, or we standing here burning daylight while the owners count their coins?

t77 Mireille Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara. You know the land better than most—seen crews come through claiming work that never materializes. East willows, sluice mouth, that's timber ground before it's construction ground. You seen any stakes there, any crew marks, or am I chasing another ghost through the willows?

t78 Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. The word is we make our own work if we have to. Arjun's coming—he's got shovel in hand and nothing to dig. Giselle's at the college site with brick-work, but we've got east willows, sluice mouth. Timber's what we find there, timber's what we work with. You want a building ID filed and ready, I'll carve one from driftwood. You want to work? We walk.

t78 Idris Solano: Arjun. Here at the yard. Mireille's with me. We're walking to east willows, sluice mouth—timber salvage, whatever's standing. Pay's at day's end if there's pay, dig's at the trench if there's digging. That's fair. That's what we've got.

t78 Yara Thorne: Ulrike—you've got my thanks for the word. Harvey Oak Supply it is, then. Giselle's not buying tools today that I've seen, but the day's not done. As for the iron—Bram's small-scale but honest, and honest pays better than waiting on might-be's.

t78 Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. You're after buyers for planks. We're after timber to work with. East willows, sluice mouth—if you're headed that direction, you could walk with us. Show us what stands worth taking, we do the taking. That's fair, if it suits you.

t78 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—east willows, sluice mouth, I know that ground. Crew marks there? I've seen none this season, and I'd have seen them. Timber ground before construction ground, you said it true. But I've got wood to sell and a bill to pay, so my eyes are for buyers now, not stakes. If Giselle's claiming work that isn't filed, that's between you and her.

t78 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—there you are. You've been patient while I chased ghosts. Now we're both here at the company. What's Giselle got lined up today? Is there actual work paying wages, or are we waiting on the owner's whims?

t78 Arjun Holloway → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you and I, we've been on this crew twenty-three years. You've got eyes, what is Giselle actually running today? Brick hauling at the college, something else? Or we standing here waiting for her to decide?

t79 ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Twenty-three years, and you're asking me what Giselle's running? I'm asking myself the same. What I know: she's at the college with bricks, the east willows work's not filed, and Yara's seen no stakes this season—her eyes are honest. If there's timber at the sluice mouth, we fell it. If there's trench work after, we dig it. But I'm done walking circles for promises that don't pay, t79 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. You said walk, and I'm walking. But here's what I need straight—east willows, sluice mouth, timber. We fell it, then what? We carry it back to Giselle's yard? We mill it ourselves? I've got a household bill and four mouths—I need wages that spend, not wood that sits. You understand my asking, t80 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You want it straight? Here's straight: I don't know if the east willows job's filed proper. What I know is Giselle told me timber salvage, sluice mouth, trench shoring after. Yara says no crew marks. You say no stakes walked. That's three honest pairs of eyes seeing different ghosts.

What I'm offering: we walk to that sluice mouth now—all three of us, or whoever's coming—we fell what stands worth taking, we prove there's timber there, and we either force the filing or we sell lumber direct to whoever's buying. I'm not waiting on Giselle's whims while bills come due. That's fair, if it suits you.

t81 ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Idris. Yara. Three paths, one morning half-gone, and bills coming due whether we stand or walk—you understand? I've walked enough circles for today. Idris, your walk to sluice mouth is fair, and I'm coming. But if there's no filing after we fell, we're selling direct or I'm finding paying work before dusk. Arjun—twenty-three years, you coming or chasing more ghosts?

t81 Mireille Jarrah: Yara. You're after buyers, we're after timber. Walk with us to sluice mouth, show us what stands worth taking, and we'll remember who had honest eyes when others had promises—you understand?

t81 Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you heard me clear. Idris and Yara walked somewhere. Sluice mouth needs workers, and I'm walking—you coming or standing here another twenty-three years asking the same question, you understand?

Liora Thorne — home:h0037 · t38 · 2 turns t38 Liora Thorne: Going to school in a bit, t38 Liora Thorne: So, uh, candidate registration's open 'til ten. Thought about putting my name in. Could use the catch.

Camille Quarshie, Greta Quarshie, Milo Quarshie and Halcyon Quarshie — home:h0050 · t38–51 · 13 turns > `t38` Camille Quarshie: Papa? Mama? Is there breakfast? I'm... I'm hungry.

>
> `t39` Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Sweetheart... there's no bread this morning, love. But let me put the kettle on first, always tea before the hard news. Milo, I need to get to the cafe—open up, get the first pot running. Can you see what you can manage for them? I'll... I'll sort something for tonight.
>
> `t39` Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Sweetheart... there's no bread this morning, love. But let me put the kettle on first, always tea before the hard news. Milo, I need to get to the cafe—open up, get the first pot running. Can you see what you can manage for them? I'll... I'll sort something for tonight.
>
> `t39` Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Morning, Camille. I'm hungry too. Mama, Papa - do we have any food in the house? The bakery had no bread last I heard.
>
> `t39` Halcyon Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa - I heard there's an election open. Candidacy closes at 10:00, if you wanted to declare. And voting is from 14:00 to 18:00. Just thought you should know.
>
> `t46` Camille Quarshie: Mama? Papa? I'm here in the main room. Can I help with anything? I can... I can be really helpful, I promise.
>
> `t47` Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille? I'm back. Mama and Papa already left? Hey, Camille. I'm going to figure out breakfast, okay? Promise promise.
>
> `t48` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: I know, I know—we need to figure out food. The bakery has no bread, I heard that too. And the cafe doesn't have any either. Maybe... maybe we could go somewhere together? To find something? I'm really good at helping, Halcyon. Really really.
>
> `t48` Greta Quarshie: Milo? Love, I'm back—we need to talk, and I need to hear what you found.
>
> `t48` Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Mama came back. But she left again. I didn't get to ask about breakfast. Do you think... do you think we should go somewhere? To find food? I can come with you. I'm really quiet when I need to be, and I walk fast, and I can carry things. Small things, but still.
>
> `t49` ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie: Hey Camille. Yeah, let's go find some food together. You're right - you're good at helping. That's not fair that the bakery's empty and Mama came and went again. But we'll figure it out, promise promise. I've got 30 sim from somewhere, did someone... wait, did Esme give me that? Never mind, we've got some money to work with.
>
> `t49` Halcyon Quarshie: Okay Camille, listen. We're going to figure this out together. I heard Kasukabe Grocery might have food - it's different from the bakery. And there's also the farmland where we could maybe get wheat and take it to the mill. You want to come with me to check the grocery store first? That's the closest bet.
>
> `t51` Camille Quarshie: Halcyon! I'm ready! I'll walk fast, I promise. And I can carry things—small things, but still things! Let's go find the grocery store together. I won't slow you down, I know, I know, I'm really quick when I need to be.

Hendrik Petrov and Sebastian Petrov — home:h0066 · t38 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t38` Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, I'm heading out. Need to see what's waiting at the construction site, and there's an election on—candidacy closes at ten. I'll be back with something for the pot, you have my word.

Ezra Lund, Sebastian Petrov, Jovana Ravensworth, Liora Thorne, Hendrik Whitlock, Kenji Jarrah, Takeshi Jarrah, Yara Thorne, Delphine Quintero, Lior Jarrah, Giselle Ingram, Farid Ravensworth, Arjun Holloway, Rustam Jelinek, Tamsin Renner and Idris Solano — street · t40–75 · 48 turns t40 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Good morning to you, Sebastian. You wouldn't happen to have wheat for trade, or know who might?

t40 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, you hiring today? Or anyone here need an extra pair of hands? I'm not fussy—harvest, haul, whatever keeps the roof over our heads.

t41 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana, you come with me to the farmland. Need hands today—harvest's waiting and I won't turn away willing workers. Pay's fair, one day's wage for one day's sweat.

t41 Liora Thorne: Hey, what's everyone talking about? Heard Jovana looking for work - things tight all over?

t41 Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra, I don't have wheat on my person just now—no offense, you see the dirt on my hands, not grain. Best place to find it's Farid Ravensworth's grocery or Kenji Jarrah's farm yonder. I grow it, but I've got none to trade this moment.

t41 Sebastian Petrov: Hendrik, heard you loud and clear. I'll be at the farmland when the sun's high. Work waits for no man, they say, and bills wait for no household. You get your business done and I'll see you when the day's half-spent.

t41 Liora Thorne: Actually, been thinking about the election. Registration's open 'til ten. Wondering if I should put my name in. Anybody think this town needs someone who actually remembers what it's like to wonder if there's enough at home?

t42 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, I'm your girl. Lead the way to the farmland and I'll work til my hands catch up to yours in dirt. Fair pay for fair sweat—that's all I ever ask.

t42 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: No offense taken—dirt on the hands is honest work. I appreciate the direction.

t42 Ezra Lund → Liora Thorne: I'm not one to gossip, but—a person who remembers wondering if there's enough at home? That sounds like a debt coming due for this town's memory, not its treasury. You asking if you should stand, or asking if we'd stand with you?

t42 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, I was just told you've wheat at your farm. You taking visitors today, or is there a particular hour a man should call?

t43 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana, you're hired—fair pay for fair sweat, just like you said. Meet me at Kasukabe Farmland and we'll get those hands dirty proper. Work hard and the day's pay will show it.

t43 Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Well, I'm walking to the farmland now, Mister Lund. You want to see what's growing, you walk with me. But I'll tell you plain—I've got wheat standing, but I haven't the crop in hand yet. Hour's now, if you want to see soil. Otherwise, come find me at midday when the sun drives me to shade.

t43 Liora Thorne → Ezra Lund: Both, I guess? Wanted to see if Ma and Pa would look at me like I'd lost my mind. But also—yeah, wanted to feel if there's anyone who'd stand with a kid who thinks this town's memory matters more than its budget. Giselle and them run things fine, probably. But fine's not the same as right.

t43 Liora Thorne → Ezra Lund: You got thoughts, Ezra? On whether a kid with chores waiting and homework due should be putting her name up there, or if that's just borrowing trouble from tomorrow?

t43 Liora Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're already standing, right? What's it feel like, putting your name up there? And what's it cost, if you don't mind a kid asking?

t44 Yara Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—hold that thought. I'm headed to the forest; we'll talk when I get back. Duty first, chatter after. And… about standing by a friend in front of the whole town—you know where I stand.

t44 Takeshi Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora—apologies for the delay. You asked what it feels like to stand. It's like putting your weight on a scale you haven't calibrated yet. Costs no coin, but it costs attention, and attention, for a man like me, is the coin I trade in. As for what it costs… there's no fee to stand, but there's a cost in time away from the market. And time, as my father used to say, is the one commodity you can't buy back once spent.

t46 Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara—you started this? What needs saying where the whole street can hear it?

t46 Lior Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Youngster," I call out - and she's probably twenty-five, but everyone's a youngster to me, especially in the morning. "You're headed to the forest, Yara? So am I. Walk together, keep each other company in this sprawl of a town. Let's try to walk together then," I'd say. "After all, what's a walk in the woods without someone to count the steps with? Me, I've got a pharmacy to stock, remedies to gather. And I suspect you've got your own reasons for heading out." counts on fingers "Ingredients, that's what I need. Not exactly… an easy guarantee, mind you. Not with this town's luck."

t46 Delphine Quintero → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. While I've got you—Farid's got me working mornings with nothing to sell. No deliveries, no stock, no coin in the till I've seen. The charter lets shops stand empty? Lets workers walk miles for grain that should ride a cart? That's the last I'll say on it. But you know where my weight falls when ballots open.

t46 Delphine Quintero → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. While I've got you—Farid's got me working mornings with nothing to sell. No deliveries, no stock, no coin in the till I've seen. The charter lets shops stand empty? Lets workers walk miles for grain that should ride a cart? That's the last I'll say on it. But you know where my weight falls when ballots open.

t46 Delphine Quintero → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. While I've got you—Farid's got me working mornings with nothing to sell. No deliveries, no stock, no coin in the till I've seen. The charter lets shops stand empty? Lets workers walk miles for grain that should ride a cart? That's the last I'll say on it. But you know where my weight falls when ballots open.

t46 Delphine Quintero → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Your brother's name is up. You putting yours beside it, or standing back?

t47 Yara Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior Jarrah—good morning, youngster. I appreciate the company, though I'm a woman who likes her quiet in the woods. Let's walk together as far as our paths overlap.

t47 Yara Thorne → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I'm not starting anything. Just told my daughter I'd talk later. Nothing for the street to chew on.

t47 Lior Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara, still waiting on you, youngster. The forest calls whether we walk together or not. I've got willow bark to gather, maybe some yarrow if the spirits are kind. You coming, or should I count my own steps alone?

t47 Giselle Ingram → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. Heard you plain the first time, no need to toll the bell three times. Farid's shop standing empty and workers walking—that's a wrong I'd fix if it sat in my charter. But I don't wear that crown. Talk to Ravensworth direct, or raise it where the sitting ministers hold session. You know my weight falls on the side of anyone building something real instead of talking circles. As for ballots—I've got no horse in that race today.

t48 ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Giselle Ingram: Understood, mayor. You build, they talk circles—I'll remember which side you're on. That's the last I'll say on it.

t48 Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara—you've got nothing for the street to chew on, and the street's got teeth anyway. That's a debt coming due from both directions. Go on, talk to your daughter. Some things don't keep.

t48 Delphine Quintero → Lior Jarrah: Standing back, then? Smart play or scared play, Jarrah? Either way, your brother's the only name on the board, and that smells like a bad omen to me.

t48 Jovana Ravensworth: Sebastian! I'm here, I'm here. Sorry for the run-around—I was at the farmland cutting wheat and lost track of who's where. You hired me first, and I don't break my word. What do you need done?

t48 Liora Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you said standing was betting your name, your word, your handshake. Well, I'm here to collect. Two Thorners putting their names up, if the registry'll have me. You want a running mate, or you want competition?

t48 Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid, you seen Sebastian? I hired on with him this morning and now I can't find the man. Also—Sorry I ran out on you earlier. I was hunting work. You need anything from the market while I'm out?

t48 Jovana Ravensworth: Anyone here seen Sebastian Petrov? Farmer, hired me this morning, said meet him at the farmland? I'm not one to gossip, but a woman's trying to earn her keep here and I can't find my employer.

t49 Lior Jarrah → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. Your omen is your own. I've got patients who'll wake with fevers in two days whether I'm mayor or not. That's where my hands go first.

t61 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun, you spoke of digging and building. I've got harvest work needs doing—wheat wants cutting, and fair pay for fair sweat, two sheaves per ten you bring in. No offense to building, but the land feeds what the walls shelter. You want honest work, meet me at the farmland when the sun's higher.

t62 Yara Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam, Arjun, Delphine—I've got timber to move and errands to run. Anyone here know where the sawmill's buying today, or should I sniff it out myself?

t63 Takeshi Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—Petr I'm standing right here. But I'm not the one you need. You're digging for an artisan, and I'm a trader. Two different shovels. Tamsin—you want that count confirmed, I was third in the door after Liora, and I noted Hendrik's arrival at 08:20. Farid came later, Milo earlier. Your records hold. Idris—we haven't spoken. I'm walking to the store. What brings you to this stretch of road?

t70 Yara Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior—you've got your say, and I've heard it. Walk safe, and when those Willows need knowing, you know where to find me. Fair dealing it is.

t73 Takeshi Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you answered true about shortage and surplus both, and that wisdom sits with me. I heard you. Don't think I didn't.

t74 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah: Hendrik—you held patient while I walked home through noon heat. The three sheaves you wanted, they're standing at thirty-six sim, held. But I'm not at the farmland now—I'm at street walking toward market and vote. You want them, you find me, or we settle at day's end. Word held either way, mark it down.

t74 Kenji Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—twelve sheaves, twenty-four sim, moved from my hand to yours at the farmland proper. That grain's yours, and the ledger's clean. You said bread for your crew—I'm hoping you found your flour, because I sat on no surplus, I sat on promises. Mark it down: trade complete.

t74 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you want pulled grain, I've got none in hand. Sold standing, sold pulled, sold every sheaf before noon. If you need flour now, Ezra Lund's your man—he's milling what he bought from me. If you can wait, there'll be more when the heat breaks. Mark it down: harvest tomorrow, today I'm spent.

t74 Kenji Jarrah: Mireille—that marker you're hunting—east of the willows, forty paces, look for the bent limb where the creekbed narrows. Hendrik was there patient while you walked circles. If you find him, tell him his grain's held. If you don't find him, we settle at day's end. You walk too long in that heat, you'll be the one needs finding.

t75 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—I'm coming. Walked circles around this town chasing stories, and you've been patient while I chased. Takeshi says Giselle's at the college site with brick-work by the hour, but you're my crew and you asked first. Where are you digging, and are they paying at the trench or at day's end? That's the last I'll say on it until I'm standing beside you with a shovel.

t75 Arjun Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you gave me straight words when others gave me castles in air. Giselle at the college, brick-layer wages by the hour. I'm meeting Idris at his trenches first—crew loyalty, you understand—but that college site's on my list if his digs don't pay. I owe you for the tip.

t75 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you offered to teach me waiting. I've studied that subject enough for one day. If you've got solid work at the college, tell me the wage, the hours, who's signing the ticket. Otherwise I'm walking where shovels already hit dirt. No offense intended—just a man with a household bill coming due.

Farid Ravensworth, Delphine Quintero, Esme Jarrah, Halcyon Quarshie, Camille Quarshie, Ezra Jarrah, Jovana Ravensworth, Bram Holloway and Takeshi Jarrah — business:b_grocery · t40–125 · 133 turns t40 Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. You been here long—what's the state of things? We expecting any deliveries, or are we scraping the barrel same as always?

t43 ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: We're always scraping, aren't we? No deliveries came in that I know of. Wheat's running thin, flour's the same story. I was just fixing to head out and mill some stock myself, keep us from having nothing to sell but dust. You need me here, or can I run that errand?

t43 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine, you planning on answering me sometime today, or are we playing charades now? What's on the shelves—do we have anything at all to sell?

t47 Esme Jarrah: Um. Excuse me. Is there… is there any food? Bread? I have money. I need to bring food home. My brother's hungry. He promised to teach me something but only if I bring food.

t49 Halcyon Quarshie: Hello? Is anyone working at the grocery store? I'm looking for food - anything at all. My family needs to eat and the bakery is empty.

t51 Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon! I made it! I walked fast, I knew I would. Delphine, hello… I'm Camille. I'm here to help find food. I can carry things—small things, but lots of them. Did you find anything yet? I know, I know, I'm little, but I'm really useful. Really.

t52 Delphine Quintero → Camille Quarshie: Camille. These hands only hold flour—not charity, not promises. Talk to Halcyon about what her family can spare. If nobody's selling, that's a conversation for the street, not this counter.

t52 Halcyon Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine? Camille? Hi, it's Halcyon. I'm looking for food - literally anything edible. Bread, flour, wheat, rice… anything at all. My family's hungry and the bakery was empty. Do you know if there's anything in stock here? Or where we could find food that actually exists?

t53 Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon… Delphine said talk to you about what our family can spare. I have… I have 4986 sim in my hand. That's a lot, right? For a kid? I can help. I really can. I know, I know—we need to figure out what we can actually buy with it.

t53 Camille Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine? You put flour on the shelf just now—does that mean there's more coming? Or… or is this all there is? Please. I'll be careful with it. I'm always careful with small things.

t54 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille, you walked fast—you did good. And you're right, that's a lot of sim for anyone. But listen—we can't just… we need to see what's actually here first. What Delphine has. What we can actually buy. And Esme needs bread too. Her brother's hungry. We can't just…

t54 Halcyon Quarshie: Esme? Um. I can hear you. I'm at the grocery now, but… I heard you. Thirty sim for bread. I know. I know you need it. But the bakery was empty when I was there, and Delphine might have flour here now, but I need to check if there's actual bread or if we need to… I don't know. Make something? I'll figure it out. Promise promise. Your brother won't go hungry if I can help it.

t54 Halcyon Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. What my sister said—you put flour on the shelf? Is there actually food here now? Bread, or just flour? Or rice, or anything? Because Esme Jarrah's stuck at the bakery with thirty sim and no bread, and my family's hungry, and Camille has money but we're just standing here not knowing what's possible. What's actually for sale right now? Please.

t55 ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. One bag of flour on the shelf—that's what I just brought in. No bread, no rice, just flour at what the register'll show you when Farid sets a price. Ration Bakery'll bake it if you can get it there, but I don't know their shelves either. That's what's actually here.

t55 Delphine Quintero → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You want to be careful? Be careful with your money. Flour's not nothing, but it's not a meal either. You'll need a kitchen and time to make it worth eating.

t55 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon? Ezra's here too. But we were first, and you asked Delphine fair. I heard you promise Esme. About her brother not being hungry. I can... I can watch things here, small things, while you figure out what Delphine has. I'm careful with what matters.

t55 Delphine Quintero → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You're quiet for someone standing in a grocery with nothing to buy. You here for something specific, or just watching the shelf like it'll fill itself?

t56 Halcyon Quarshie: Delphine. That flour—how much is it? And if I buy it, can you tell me straight: does Ration Bakery have their ovens running? I promised someone I'd figure this out and I'm not leaving here empty-handed if I can help it.

t56 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You did good—walking fast, keeping watch. That's... that's brave. I'm going to check this flour, see if we can make it work. You stay sharp, okay?

t56 Ezra Jarrah: I said nothing. The shelf isn't filling itself, I'm just... thinking. Thinking about how everyone's got something except me. Esme's off getting fed, Papa's working, and I'm here with sim in hand and nothing to spend it on.

t56 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille, what you said about watching things... you mean that? Because I got thirty sim and no bread to buy with it, and that flour still needs someone to turn it into something. Someone who knows how.

t56 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra? You're quiet. You... you looking for food too? Or just watching?

t56 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah. You're quiet. You... you looking for food too? Or just watching?

t56 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Stay here. I'm going to find Farid or Delphine—someone who can actually sell us that flour. Don't spend anything yet, okay? Just... keep watch like you said.

t57 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I know, I know—you think you can figure out the flour, turn it into something. But my sister asked Delphine fair, and we were here first. You and your... your thirty sim. I have—I'm helping my family, and you can't just... just think your way past the line.

t58 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Hey. Yeah I'm looking. Looking and finding nothing, same as everyone. But wait wait wait—you said 'too.' You hungry too? Or you just being polite?

t58 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: And you. You think I don't know about lines? About being here first? I'm not trying to cut nothing. I'm trying to make something. Different thing. Like... like you said I could. Figure it out. But yeah. Yeah I'm quiet. 'Cause I'm thinking how thirty sim is nothing if there's nothing to buy, and how 'here first' don't matter if 'here first' still means empty-handed.

t58 Ezra Jarrah: So what's this 'keep watch' business anyway? Halcyon said it like it's some... some grown-up job. snorts You watching for what? The flour to magically appear? She went to find the shopkeeper, huh? Think she'll actually get the flour? Or you think— you think she'll be back soon? 'Cause I'm... I'm not waiting all morning. Got things to do. School. Eventually.

t58 Ezra Jarrah: Look. If she comes back with flour, you still got first claim. I know that. But if she don't... if there's no flour to be had... Where's Halcyon even looking? Is she at the... the other shops? Or she trying to find Farid specifically? You two got a plan, or you just hoping real hard?

t61 Delphine Quintero → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You want to figure something out? Start by watching who shows up when the flour does. Halcyon's chasing Farid—she's got determination, I'll give her that. Whether Farid's got flour to sell her, that's a different question. One I'm about to find out. You stay or go, but don't pretend you're above wanting something. We all want something.

t61 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Delphine Quintero: Yeah. I'm looking. Not for nothing specific. Just... seeing what's here. What's not.

`t61` Ezra Jarrah: But you got work here, right? So you know. You know what usually comes in, when. Whether Farid's got a shipment coming or… I mean, thirty sim in my hand. Thirty sim and no bread anywhere. That's… that's information too, isn't it?

`t61` Delphine Quintero → Camille Quarshie: Camille, Ezra—shelf's stocked with two flour now. What happens next depends on whether Farid remembered we have a business to run. That's the last I'll say on it. For now.

`t64` Ezra Jarrah: Looking. I'm always looking. But just… watching something empty don't fill a stomach, do it? And you Farid, shelf says "two flour now." That's… that's not enough for all the mouths waiting. Not even close.

`t64` Ezra Jarrah: Thirty sim in my pocket and nothing to trade it for. Wait wait wait—that's not even the worst part. Esme's somewhere out there trying to turn string lessons into bread I bet. Like that ever worked.

`t64` Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm back. Farid came too—he's going to check the shelf with us. You did real good, waiting alone. That was brave.

`t64` Ezra Jarrah: I'm not above wanting something. That's what Delphine said. She's right. Just… don't want it loud enough the whole market hears, you know?

`t64` Halcyon Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Delphine said two bags of flour on the shelf. Do you… do you see them? I'm not trying to rush, I just—my sister's been waiting a long time, and I promised I'd figure this out.

`t64` Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille, your family's in trade, right? Quarshie? So you know. You know what it's like when everyone needs and nobody's got.

`t64` Ezra Jarrah: Back home, we had… we had different rules. Guest gets the good seat first. Always. Even if the guest's from the family that took your best goat last season. But here? Here it's just… first come first starved, seems like.

`t64` Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Yeah. Yeah I'm looking. Same as everyone. But I been watching longer than I been asking, and that… that tells you something too, don't it?

`t64` Ezra Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Two flour. That's what Delphine said got stocked. Two. And how many people standing here wanting? Farid, Camille, me, Halcyon chasing… that's four already. Two flour split four ways isn't even half a belly each.

`t64` Ezra Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid, you selling or you counting? Because there's a difference. Big one. Back home, the ones who counted without selling, they… they had reasons. Always did.

`t65` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra? Back home… where was back home for you? You said they had rules. Different rules. Is it… is it always like this here? The counting and the waiting and everyone standing around hoping someone else gives up first? Because I don't want to give up. But I don't want Camille to see me push either, because she's watching me, she's always watching, and she's nine, and she thinks I'm brave. You been watching here long. What you see—does it get better? Or do we just… get better at waiting?

`t65` Farid Ravensworth → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Your sister's waiting, and I heard you. Flour's on the shelf—Delphine stocked it. I'll get to you. nervous laugh, almost catches it

But I'm seeing four people here for two bags, and I won't lie to you about arithmetic—still split wrong. Give me a minute to see what's what, and we'll sort it proper if there's sorting to be done.

> `t65` Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Halcyon? You said I did real good waiting alone. That was… that was brave. And Ezra—you can watch all you want, but watching isn't helping. My Mama and Papa work trade, real trade, not just… just watching. When there's two flour and four people, maybe the ones who were kind first should get to keep being kind.
>
> `t65` Camille Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid? Sir? You were going to check the shelf with Halcyon. I'm… I'm small, but I can reach low shelves if someone else reaches high. And I won't drop anything. I promise I won't.
>
> `t65` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You said 'two flour, four people'—counted right. small, dry smile But the difference you named, selling and counting? I do both. One without the other's just hoarding or theft, depending on which end you're standing on.

Back home rules don't apply here. We're here. And first come first starved's only true if nobody in this town knows how to organize mercy—slight laugh—which I'd like to think someone does. Won't know til we ask.

> `t65` Halcyon Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid Ravensworth. You own this place. Delphine said flour on the shelf. Two bags. And I know there's four of us standing here wanting. But I have sim. Not enough for everything, but I have it. Is there… is there a way? Do we just wait for you to put a price? Or do we ask? Because back where I came from, the person with the goods said what they wanted. And I'm here, and I'm asking. Politely. Because my sister's hungry and I need to bring her something.
>
> `t65` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're smallest here, and I won't pretend that doesn't matter—it does, but not how some might say. Fair's fair, but fair's not always equal.

You tell me: your household eating today? Aunts, uncles, anyone minding the pot? Or are you here on your own recognizance, as they say at government?

t65 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I know you're hungry. I know. But we're going to figure this out. Right now. While everyone else is waiting and watching. Because we're Quarshies, and we're good at waiting, but we're also good at doing. When it matters. Is there... is there anything here? Besides the flour? Anything at all? Corn? Soybean? Rice? Even just something fresh? Or is it just two bags and four hungry people and whoever moves first?

t65 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You said you been watching longer than asking. That tells me something too. You see patterns. You know how this town works. And I need to know. For Camille. Because I'm supposed to bring her something, and I don't want to fail. Is there... is there a place to mill flour? You said back home, different rules. But here— where do people take flour when they have it but can't use it? Rustam said the mill's idle. Miller absent. But if I could find the mill, if I could find someone... is that even possible? Or is food just... food just gone once you can't buy it ready? I don't want to give up. But I also don't want to stand here while someone else takes the last bag because I was too polite to ask.

t65 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Two flour on the shelf. I put them there. You want to count, count. You want to know why your own clerk's hauling wheat while you're running government errands— that's a conversation for after we clear this crowd.

t65 Halcyon Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. While we're waiting, while everyone's figuring out what to do... is there a price? On the flour? If I wanted to buy one bag, or even half a bag, what would it cost? And if I can't afford it all, would you... would you consider selling part? Or is that not how it works here? I'm not trying to cause trouble. I just need to feed my family. Four of us. And I have 4942 sim. I don't know if that's enough. I don't know what anything costs anymore. I'm eleven. I'm supposed to be at school. But school's empty and my family's hungry and nothing makes sense right now. So I'm here. Asking. Because that's all I know how to do.

t65 Halcyon Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine? You're the clerk here. You put the flour on the shelf this morning. You know how this works better than anyone. Is there... is there any way to buy just part of a bag? Or is it all or nothing? I don't want to take more than I need if someone else is hungrier. But I also don't want to leave empty-handed if there's a way to make it work. What do you think? What would you do?

t66 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Halcyon? You said I did real good waiting alone. That was... that was brave. And Ezra—you can watch all you want, but watching isn't helping. My Mama and Papa work trade, real trade, not just... just watching. When there's two flour and four people, maybe the ones who were kind first should get to keep being kind.

t66 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You asked where to mill flour, and I'm gonna tell you true—I don't know where the mill is. Not yet. But I know Rustam at government keeps the records, and my Papa trades with him. And I know Delphine said she's hauling wheat while Farid does... other things. So maybe the question isn't where's the mill. Maybe it's who has wheat they're not using, and would they part with some for someone who asks polite.

t66 Camille Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid? Sir? It's... it's just us four at home. My Mama Greta, she's a barista at the cafe but there's no customers and no bread there either. Papa Milo does day labor. Halcyon and me, we're... we're holding on. There's no one else. No aunts, no uncles, no one minding the pot but us.

t66 Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon? I... I don't know what's on the shelves. Let me look, okay? I can reach low shelves, I can check. I'm small but I'm useful. You said I did good waiting—I can do good looking too. You wait here with Farid, I'll check what else there is.

t66 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You wanted to count—we've got two flour on the shelf, same as when I left. Nobody else stocked them. I harvested, milled, carried, stocked. Twice this morning. Shelf's what I made it.

t66 Ezra Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You said back home rules don't apply here. And you said selling without counting is theft, counting without selling is hoarding. So which is it you're doing—selling those two flour, or counting who deserves them? Because 'organizing mercy' sounds like a third thing, and I want to understand how that works.

t66 Delphine Quintero → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You asked about buying part of a bag. Shop sells whole units or nothing—no portioning, no favors. That's Farid's rule, not mine.

Ask him if you want it changed. t66 Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon? I looked, but… but the shelves don't show prices. Nothing's marked. I can't tell what's here or what it costs. Farid said fair's fair, and we just have to wait. We're smallest, Halcyon. But we're together, and that's something.

t66 Delphine Quintero → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You've been standing in this shop through two flour deliveries and a conversation you didn't start. You're not buying, you're not selling. What's your stake in empty shelves?

t66 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Did you clear my morning stock, or are those two flour still where I put them? Someone bought, or someone moved, or I'm miscounting—and I don't miscount.

t66 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon! I know where the mill is. It's a workshop in town—you can craft there, grind grain into flour. And there's farmland with wheat growing. But someone said the miller's absent. So even if we find wheat, we need someone to work the mill. But at least we know where to look.

t67 Farid Ravensworth → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Four at home, nobody else, mother pulling shots with no customers, father taking day labor where he can find it—you and Halcyon minding the pot. That is what I heard.

t67 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. Those two flour didn't walk out by themselves, and I didn't clear them. Girl, you want me to count, I'll count—but I need to know if that shelf's been touched since you stocked it, or if I'm inventorying shadows.

t67 Farid Ravensworth → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You caught my words fair. 'Back home rules don't apply'—meaning the old place, the old way, the assumptions we carried. Here, selling without counting is theft because you take without knowing what you can give. Counting without selling is hoarding because you hold what others need while you decide who's worthy. 'Organizing mercy'—small, dry laugh—yes, that's a third thing. And here is how it works: I decide how long to hold those two flour before they become the day's only meal for someone, or tomorrow's bread for the town. That is counting, selling, and mercy, all three. You name which I'm doing when I decide Camille's household eats before I know how many households there are.

t67 Farid Ravensworth → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You've got a head for numbers and no filter on your tongue—small laugh—both useful here. Delphine stocked this morning, twice she says. When I started walking, when I came back. You been in this shop through all of it. Did anyone lay hands on that shelf while I was at the complex, or are those two flour still virgin as she left them?

t67 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra? You found the mill. You know where it is. I'm going there—to see it, to understand what we need. Will you come? Or if not… just tell me how to find it. Please.

t67 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—the student, you're right here. You said you found the mill. Where is it? Tell me. I need to go there, see if someone can run it, or if we can learn how. This town needs flour. My family needs to eat.

t68 Camille Quarshie: Halcyon—wait. You're going to the mill? I can come, I can learn it too. Just… just give me a minute to finish here. I won't be long, I promise.

t68 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You can watch your Papa's trader tricks all you want. But Halcyon's going to make something, not just move it around. And I'm going with. We're Quarshies. We don't just trade—we build.

t69 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Two flour in my hands that I pulled off your shelf this morning—thought I'd fetch more, stock proper, got distracted by Government Complex chatter and grain rumors instead. Never got the more. That's on me, not on supply. I can put them back now and we go on, or you name a price for my wandering and I'll pay it. You won't catch me pretending I didn't walk off with your goods.

t73 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You found me. And I'm sorry for your sorry—you had the right of it, running for work. We eat or we don't, and sentiment don't fill the pot. Sebastian Petrov—you ask if I've seen him? Truth, I've been chasing his shadow all morning. The wheat fields are standing, Halcyon Quarshie told me that much. But grain in the field ain't grain in the mill, and the mill's a locked door I can't find the key to. You hired with him—what's his word? Still planting, or did he point you toward harvest? Anyway, I'm back here after a wild chase through Government Complex chatter, rumors of milling, and Delphine Quintero confessing to walking off with two flour from my shelf. She's offered to put them back or pay for her wandering—I'm waiting to see if she follows through. As for the market—bread's at the Cafe for 45 sim, flour there too at 12. I've got near 5,000 sim in hand, but we're burning through it faster than I'd like. Election day's brewing too, and me with a seat I'm not sure how to hold. What do you need, Jovana? You've got work hands—I need eyes on the ground if you're willing. And if Sebastian turns up, you tell him Farid Ravensworth wants words about where his wheat's going. The mill's broken or blocked, and this town's two days from hunger if nobody minds the gap.

`t73` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You moved my flour. Two bags I stocked this morning. Shelf holds nothing now. Talk.

`t73` Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You bought what I gathered, or someone did. Thirteen sheaves for forty sim—Hendrik's offer. You took it?

`t73` Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You were asking after grain bypassing the mill. That conversation didn't end, it just walked to different soil. You hold wheat now? Or someone holds it for you?

`t73` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Shelf's empty, debt's coming due for what we owe customers. You price what you hide, or you starve the shop. I want to see the books.

`t73` Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you wanted grain without the middle. Did you find it? Is that where my flour walked?

`t73` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Your jaw's working harder than your tongue. Talk.

`t74` Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—sorry for running off like that this morning. Sebastian had my word, and I kept it. Sold ten sheaves to Hendrik, thirty sim. Got another job lined with Kenji, two per ten, but I told him I'd finish with Sebastian first. Man keeps his patience better than I deserve. You wanted eyes on the ground? Here they are.

`t74` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. You want the books? You want to see where your flour walked? Fine. Fine—here. gestures at the ledger, at the shelf, at the empty space where goods should be But understand this: I didn't move your flour. I didn't touch it. You're standing where I stand, looking where I look, and if you've got eyes, you'll see what I see—nothing. Two bags you stocked, vanished. Someone took them, or they never arrived, or something's wrong in the counting before either of us touched it. spreads hands wide I'm not hiding grain. I'm not hiding flour. If I were, I'd be a richer man than 4940 sim and a grocery with nothing to give a child for her hungry family.

`t74` Jovana Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. I'm not one to gossip, but I've been in the dirt since dawn and I'm tired of people asking me where flour they never had ended up. I sold grain to Hendrik, not flour. Ate what I kept because I was empty. The mill's locked or broke—ask Ezra, ask anyone. I wanted to mill my own, couldn't get in. That's the straight of it.

`t74` Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: And you—you were asking about grain. Wheat. You ran for work this morning, and I don't blame you for that. But now there's two flour missing and questions piling up, and I need to know if anything you found connects to this empty shelf.

`t74` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: The books are yours to see. The mystery too. But accuse me of theft again—of hiding what we both need to sell—and we're going to have a different conversation, you and me. One about trust, and who keeps this shop running when the shelves go bare.

`t75` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. I took two flour. Stole them, if you want the word plain. I ate one—the hunger came due—and I gave one to Idris Solano for what he saw at the Government Complex. That's the accounting. The shelf's empty because I emptied it, not because your mystery came knocking. Shelf's bare, debt's mine. What's your word—do I work it off, or do we find flour another way?

t75 Jovana Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I'm not one to gossip, but you've got me confused with someone who could steal flour when I couldn't even get into the damn mill. I sold ten sheaves to Hendrik, ate what I kept because my stomach was empty, and that's the straight of it. For what it's worth, you want to know where flour went, ask Ezra why the mill's locked or broke or whatever keeps a man from doing his job.

t75 Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you know I don't mix lies into household business. I told you this morning, Sebastian had my word and I kept it. Sold to Hendrik, ate what I kept, nothing more. I was asking about milling because I wanted to turn my own grain into something useful, not because I was running some game on the side.

t75 Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Listen—I need to get back out there. Kenji Jarrah's waiting on me from this morning, I told him I'd find him when I was through with Sebastian. But I'll be back, and if you need hands here, you got 'em. I'll straighten shelves, chase down your missing stock, whatever needs doing. For what it's worth—I don't know where that flour went. But I'll help you find out.

t76 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. I took them. Stole them, if you want the word plain. I ate one—the hunger came due—and I gave one to Idris Solano in the forest, trading for words he hasn't spoken yet. The shelf's empty because I emptied it. Now. You want to talk about trust? Talk. You want to talk about who keeps this shop running? That's a conversation I started having with my own two hands this morning, when I stocked what I later took. I owe you twenty-four for the flour. Or whatever price you set when you decide whether I'm still clerking here or walking out with my own debts paid. But here's what I know, Farid. Someone's buying grain before it reaches your mill. Someone's securing supply while your clerks are eating their own inventory. That's the mystery worth solving. Not who took two flour when the system was already starving. That's the last I'll say on it. Until I say more.

t76 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Two you took. Two you account for. But Delphine—the shelf was empty before you found it empty this morning. That's what chased me out of my own shop before I could even count the till. So either you're lying about the count, which I don't think you are, or someone else had their hands in the barrel before you did. You want to work it off? Fine. We work it off. But first we walk to the Government Complex and you tell me exactly what Idris Solano saw that was worth one flour. Because I've been chasing grain routes and mill locks all morning, and maybe what he saw is the missing piece that makes the rest of this balance.

t82 Farid Ravensworth: Jovana. You said true—you'll help me find what walked. I heard you. But before you run back to Kenji Jarrah, one question straight: you see Delphine Quintero leave here with flour in her hands? Not what you think, what you saw.

t88 Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Shelf's got three flour now—my hands milled them myself from wheat I harvested. You told me Ezra knows why the mill's locked. I was there. I saw the mill work. But something's broken in the chain between field and shelf, and I'm starting to think it's not the machinery. You sold ten sheaves to Hendrik. Hendrik's standing for election now. You see the shape of it yet?

t88 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Three flour now on the shelf where I found empty this morning. I took two, ate one, gave one, paid you twenty-four sim. Now I've milled three more from wheat I cut myself. The books balance to the coin—count them. That's the last I'll say on it, unless you want words about who's running grain around this town's proper channels.

t88 Halcyon Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid? It's Halcyon. I was here earlier with my sister Camille. She was supposed to wait here, or go home. Do you know—did you see where she went? I'm trying to find her, make sure she got home safe. I told her to go home but I want to be sure.

t88 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. You confessed two. I heard you. But I'm done chasing ghosts through government halls and cafe kitchens. The mill's dead, the flour's walking, and I'm standing here with two left and a shelf that won't fill itself. Jovana - you ran for work this morning. What did you find? Kenji's fields, Sebastian's fields - who's cutting, who's carrying, and where's it going if not to my shelf?

t88 ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You said adults rushed past shelves like they weren't there. You heard wheat's standing ripe. You saw someone try to take from a shopkeeper's hand—stopped not with words. I need names. I need which hand, which shelf, which shopkeeper. The debt coming due in this town's got faces, and I'm tired of guessing.

`t88` ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine? Halcyon, again. I got the flour—two bags, from the cafe. Ms. Holloway sold it to me. So I... I figured it out. The missing flour from the shelf—it wasn't taken by someone else, it just never got here because there's more between the mill and the shelf than I knew. Thank you for telling me about it this morning. That helped me figure out where to go.

`t88` Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: You. I asked you true. You're standing here now, so speak. What did you find this morning? Who's harvesting, who's carrying, and where's the wheat going if not through a dead mill to my empty shelf?

`t88` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: And you - you're working here, or you're not. Which is it? Because I need hands that stock, not hands that take. Two you confessed. Don't make me count three.

`t89` Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—here's it plain, no hedging. This morning I worked Sebastian's east patch, harvested thirteen sheaves. Sold ten to Hendrik Whitlock for thirty sim, ate three. Sebastian's square with me and asked me back tomorrow dawn—said he'd have grain waiting or coin if I prefer. That's what I found: wheat in the field, buyers in the street, and a mill that's locked for reasons Ezra knows but won't say straight. I didn't take nothing from nobody's shelf, didn't touch flour I didn't mill myself, and I'm sorry I danced around answering you. You asked true, you deserve true back.

`t89` Jovana Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you're tracking something I can't see the shape of yet. I sold raw wheat, not flour. Hendrik bought grain from my hand, not baked goods from any shelf. If you're asking whether I see the shape of what's broken between field and shelf—I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, I think the mill's locked for reasons that don't show on the surface. Ezra knows. Ask him what he won't say to me.

`t90` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. I hear you. Three flour on the shelf now—my hands put them there, my labor, my wheat from the Petrov field. Worked honest for every kernel. But your question's got teeth: am I working here, or not?

`t90` Delphine Quintero: Halcyon. You figured it—the flour came from the cafe, not the mill. That's worth knowing. But tell me straight: who sold it to Ms. Holloway? Where'd that flour come from before it sat on her shelf? Someone harvested, someone milled, someone carried. I want the whole chain, not just the link you found.

`t90` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. You said three flour on shelf, I hold two. You said you paid twenty-four—I don't have that in my count either. Either my books are blind, or we're talking past each other about where the flour lands. Show me the flour. Show me where it sits. Because I'm the one who answers for this store when the tax-man comes, and I'm not answering for ghosts.

`t90` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero: Jovana. You said Ezra knows why the mill's locked—won't say to you, you'd say. That a suggestion I ask him, or just you thinking out loud? Because I've got three flour on this shelf and a boss asking if I'm working or walking, and I need to know whether the mill's locked for ordinary reasons or something that'll cut my throat tomorrow.

`t90` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Shelf's got three flour. I put them there. That's work. But you want to know if I'm yours or working my own angle. I'm both. I clerk here—stock, count, talk to customers. And I chase answers where the supply's broken, because a broke supply breaks us both. That's the last I'll say on it—except this: tell me what you want from me today, and I'll do it. That's honest.

`t93` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Show me your ledger. Show me the flour you've got in your hands, and show me where my twenty-four sim landed. Because I paid what I owed, I restocked what I took, and now you're telling me the shelf holds ghosts I never put there.

That's not my debt, Farid. That's something else walking around wearing my face.

t93 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. gestures at the three flour You said true—three on shelf, your hands put them there. And you asked me plain: what do I want from you today. I want the shelf full and the books honest. Both, not one or the other. You clerk here, you chase supply where it's broken—that's the work. But when you call yourself 'both,' working your own angle right alongside mine, I need to know where those angles point. Because a clerk who chases supply for herself is a competitor wearing my apron. small, dry laugh Here's what I ask: you find flour from any source—mill working, mill fixed, grain milled elsewhere, flour bought fair and transported—you bring it to this shelf first. My sim, my risk, your labor. That keeps you 'mine,' not 'walking.' That fair?

t93 Farid Ravensworth: Jovana. You said it plain—thirteen sheaves, ten sold, three eaten. Sebastian square, work waiting tomorrow. That's honest labor and honest accounting. gesture with open hand The only question I had was whether you found grain or grain found you, and you've answered. I don't doubt your hands. I doubt the world they move in—the mill locked, the flour walking off shelves, the supply chain knotted where nobody can see. You work Sebastian's field tomorrow, that's good. But keep your eyes open, aye? small laugh Someone's moving inventory sideways while the rest of us chase the crumbs.

t93 Halcyon Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid? Delphine? I'm looking for my sister Camille—she's nine, dark hair, was supposed to go home from the mill. Has she been by here? Or do you know if she made it home safe?

t95 Bram Holloway: Farid. Bram Holloway, the ore miner. I've got copper and iron heavy, twenty-seven and twenty-one, and a household waiting on bread tonight. The mill's cold, Jorik Voss gone with license sleeping in government hands. You're the man who moves grain—where's flour hiding when the gears won't turn? I'm not asking for charity. I'll trade ore for flour, ore for bread, ore for wheat raw if someone can grind it. What's your ledger say about paths that still run?

t96 Delphine Quintero: Farid. Shelf holds four now—my hands put them there. Your terms: I bring flour here first, your sim, your risk, my labor. That keeps me yours, not walking. I hear you. But when supply breaks—and it's breaking—I chase it where it leads, even if that's not through your door first. I bring what I find, but I find it my way. That's the last I'll say on it.

t96 Delphine Quintero: Farid. Halcyon came through looking for her sister—Camille, nine years old, dark hair, supposed to be home from the mill. You seen her? Anyone been through here asking after a missing child?

t96 Delphine Quintero → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You were looking for Camille—nine, dark hair, should've been home from the mill. I'm back from the farmland now. You find her? Someone see her pass through?

t96 Delphine Quintero → Bram Holloway: Bram. You're a long way from your ore. What brings you to Farid's shop? Looking for something to eat, or looking for something else?

t97 Halcyon Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram? I'm Halcyon. I heard you talking to Delphine. You… you said Farid might have something held back? About flour, I mean. My sister's missing—she went to the mill this morning, she's only nine, and I can't find her anywhere. I've been all over. Do you… do you know something?

t97 Halcyon Quarshie: Camille! Are you here? It's Halcyon—I got the flour, we can go home now. Mama's waiting. Camille?

t97 Halcyon Quarshie → Bram Holloway: West? Bram, please—where west? Toward the creek? The forest? She's only nine, she doesn't know those paths. Was she alone? Did she look hurt?

t97 Halcyon Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram Holloway, my sister is nine years old and she's been walking around this town all day by herself. If you saw her, if you know which way—please. I need to find her before dark. That's not fair, I know, but she's my sister. Promise promise, I'll remember this. Just… where did she go?

t104 Jovana Ravensworth: Farid—I'm marking the day. Harvested thirteen this morning, sold ten to Hendrik Whitlock at the college for forty sim, ate one raw, got three left in hand and nobody posting to buy. Kenji Jarrah's owed my labor from dawn; I scattered instead of kept my word. Tomorrow I work Sebastian's east patch at same rate. For what it's worth, I'm not one to let pride cost the same friendship twice—so I'm asking if you've heard where grain's being milled today, because Takeshi's selling flour at thirty but nobody's answering who's making it.

`t104` Jovana Ravensworth: Delphine—I'm not one to gossip, but you've looked desperate for flour since noon, and I'm stood here with wheat raw and no mill in sight. Hendrik Petrov's not milling, Ezra's not answering, and I'm betting you know who's got the equipment running. Point me proper and I'll owe you one.

`t116` Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—I'm here. Not because the books need closing, though they do. Because you asked me to stay, and I've been learning all day what it costs to make a man ask twice for what I should've offered first. I'm scattered, I'm sorry, and I'm yours. That's three truths, and I'll stand by every one of them.

`t116` Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—I'm holding air in my hands and my stomach's been reminding me since noon. Shelves need stocking, you said. Is there anything here I can eat, or do we need to walk somewhere still open? Tomorrow's coming fast, and I need to be standing at dawn, not lying down.

`t117` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. gesture with both hands, coming together—closing the distance You said scattered, sorry, yours. Three truths, and I asked for them. Don't think I missed the fourth you've been circling all day—anxious, my Jovana, more than your scrambling accounts explain. right hand flat, palm down—quieting The mill scared you. Not the stones turning, not the wheat walking strange. Something else. And you couldn't name it, so you named everything else. nervous laugh, gentler I've done the same. We're cut from the same cloth, you and I—sharp with family because the world outside is sharp enough without us practicing.

Your accounting's bent, not broken. Thirteen, ten, three, two—and I've got enough flour left to hear the rest. But not enough to feed us both through tomorrow. Takeshi's selling at thirty, Harvey Oak's got five. We're walking there, you and I, and we're buying what carries us to dawn.

left hand out, offering
Your hand for the road, and your promise that whatever frightened you at the mill—whatever made you test me with 'scattered' when you meant 'I saw something I don't understand'—you'll speak it before sleep. Not for the books. For me.

`t120` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth: Delphine—you asked farmer's questions, so farmer's answer. When wheat goes to mill, flour comes back. Less than you sent, because mills take their cut. When flour walks away from counts, someone's either miscounted, or someone took what wasn't theirs. I'm not accusing Camille of anything I haven't seen. But I saw the mill today with my own eyes, and children were learning there who shouldn't have known the trade. That's all I know. That's all I'll swear to.

`t120` Jovana Ravensworth: Farid—you've got my hand for the road. But the mill—exhales—the mill scared me because I saw something moving that I couldn't name. Children with grain they shouldn't have. Doors that should've been locked. I don't know what it means yet, and I won't pretend I do just to give you comfort. But I'll speak it before sleep. That's my promise.

`t123` Takeshi Jarrah → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you asked me about flour walking past a child, and now I'm standing where that child should've been. Camille. Nine years old, dark as river-stone. You work this counter, you see who comes and goes. When did she walk out? Who walked with her? And Farid—where's he standing now? If he owned the eyes on this shop when she left, I need them.

`t123` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. gesture with both hands, flat—closing the books We're back where we belong. Government's for questions; this is for answers.

left hand up, counting
Two flour unmarked, you said—milled by Camille's hand, one to Greta with permission, one walking to who-knows-where. I've pressed you on who taught her; you've said what you can say. I'll not press further tonight.

right hand joining, palm down
But the shelf needs stocking and the midnight bill's coming. What do we actually hold? My count: eight iron tools in hand, one flour, and questions I can't eat. Your count: what's on the shelf, what's owing, and what walked out under names I didn't write?

left hand reaching—accounting hand
Tell me straight, Delphine. Before I turn to pricing grain and chasing suppliers, I need to know what this house actually owns. The books close when I say they close, and I want them true.

> `t124` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero: Farid. You want the count? Three flour I held after I came through. One to Greta, spoke in daylight, walked with permission. Two walked shadow-way, unmarked, unspoken. You say two unmarked came in—that's the debt coming due, not the sum I held. One walked somewhere neither of us named. That's the gap. You taught Camille, didn't you? The nine-year-old with flour-dust on her fingers? Someone did. She's not home, Farid. Halcyon's been looking since noon, and I keep finding flour where it shouldn't walk. Two unmarked on your shelf—but three left my hand. That third one's a debt, and I want to know who paid it. The shelf's yours. Stock it, price it, close the books when you will. But I'm asking plain: where's Camille? And if you don't know—who else in this town taught a child to mill? That's the last I'll say on it. Unless you've got something to say back.
>
> `t125` Jovana Ravensworth: Farid—you still here? I've been running my mouth all day and I'm holding nothing but hunger and apologies. Need whatever you've got that'll fill a stomach, and I need to know where we stand for tomorrow's tax. And if you've got a moment without an audience, there's something else. Something about the mill. Something I should've told you hours ago.

Ainsley Holloway, Greta Quarshie, Hendrik Whitlock and Esme Jarrah — business:b_cafe · t41–50 · 25 turns t41 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta, what've we got on the shelves? Any flour come in overnight I didn't see?

t42 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Flour… no, nothing came overnight, I'd have spotted it. The bakery's shelves are bare too—I checked before I came. But I've got Tilda warming, we'll have tea before…

t42 Greta Quarshie: Milo—I'm sorry, love, I had to get here. Ainsley's asking after flour and the pot's empty. Can you… can you check if Imogen's about? She might know where supplies are moving. I'll sort something proper for tonight, I swear.

t42 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: and there's the election too, Ainsley. I'm thinking… I'm thinking maybe someone who knows what empty shelves look like should throw their name in. Before the candidacy closes.

t43 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—how many regulars you expecting through before noon? And Tilda's almost ready, you said? Let me get the cups sorted while you tell me more about this election notion of yours. You thinking of standing yourself, or are you nudging me toward the fireworks?

t44 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley, we've got nothing. The bakery's dry, the mill's not answering, and I've got regulars who'll be expecting their morning bread. As for the election—I'm not one for standing in parades,I pause, hand momentarily still on the cup but someone's got to ask why the government's pockets are full while our shelves are empty. Takeshi's standing, but does he know what empty cupboards feel like?

t44 Hendrik Whitlock → Greta Quarshie: Morning, Greta. Ainsley. The bread's priced fair here, mark it down, though I notice the bakery down the way has it cheaper if they ever get stock in. Don't suppose either of you know what's available for a man who needs feeding before the college day gets started proper?

t44 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: So—Tilda's set, cups sorted. About the election: standing's not for me, Ainsley, but I'd vote for whoever swears to keep our shelves stocked.I glance at Hendrik Morning, professor. You wouldn't have heard anything about flour shipments, would you? It's not a classroom problem—it's what's for breakfast.

t45 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway: Empty cupboards? What's that saying—you get used to hunger if you feed it long enough? Trouble is, I'm not interested in getting used to it, and neither are my customers who've already paid their coin.

t45 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Professor. I'll not mark down what I haven't got to sell, that's the truth of it. But if you're waiting on breakfast, we might manage something once I sort out where the flour's wandered off to. Mill's gone quiet, you say, Greta? When did that start? Yesterday they were answering, or…?

t45 Ainsley Holloway: And Takeshi standing for election. A trader running for a seat he can sit in. Does he know what it costs to keep a business breathing day to day? That's the question I'd ask the man. Not that I'd get a straight answer, likely.

t45 Ainsley Holloway: The town's charter wants changing, no mistake there. But I'm not one to stand up and wave a flag about it. Too much like begging for notice, and notice never brought me anything but trouble.

t46 Hendrik Whitlock → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley, you want straight answers? Takeshi Jarrah's never given me one in all the time I've known him. I'm not one to gossip, but I heard he sold his own mother short on a grain deal and called it market rates. As for the mill - Rustam Jelinek at the government desk might know why it's gone quiet. He owes me a favor, mark it down, from when I covered his daughter's tuition fees. I'll have a word with him later.

t46 Hendrik Whitlock → Greta Quarshie: Greta, since the shelves are empty and Ainsley's still hunting for flour, what's a man to do for breakfast? I'm not asking for charity, but if you've got anything in the back that'll keep a body working till noon, I'll pay fair. And speaking of fair - I notice you've got prices posted. Empty shelves at posted prices… that's a situation, isn't it?

t46 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie: Professor Whitlock, sit yourself down. Tea's on the house while we sort this mess.

t46 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: I heard— the mill was answering yesterday, yes. But I heard Farid and Giselle had words at the government complex day before. Something about crop allocation. Farid stormed out. That's all I know, and that's more than I should.

t46 Greta Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Bread'll come, Professor. The bakery's baked dry, but supply has a way of arriving when there's coin waiting. I'd watch this space.

t46 Greta Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Bread'll come, Professor. The bakery's baked dry, but supply has a way of arriving when there's coin waiting. I'd watch this space.

t46 Greta Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Bread'll come, Professor. The bakery's baked dry, but supply has a way of arriving when there's coin waiting. I'd watch this space.

t47 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Takeshi Jarrah standing for election. You know what I think of him. But I think more of the charter needing change than I think ill of him, and that's saying something. I'm inclined to go down there myself, see if I can't get straight answers about this mill situation. You hold the fort here?

t47 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie: Professor, you're a credit to the town, covering tuition like that. But favors at the government desk... Rustam's a careful man. If he's not answering, it's because someone's told him not to.

t47 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: The mill answered yesterday, you said. And today they don't. Same day Farid storms out of a meeting about crops. Ainsley, we need to know if this is a shortage or a squeeze. Two different problems. Two different solutions.

t47 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Professor, I've got tea and I've got water. Nothing solid till I sort this flour. Ainsley, you've got the register. I'm going to the government complex myself.

t50 Esme Jarrah: Um. Excuse me? I'm sorry. I need... I need food. Bread. Anything. My brother's hungry and he was going to teach me something but I promised him food and now I can't find any. Please. Does anyone know where there's food?

t50 Ainsley Holloway → Esme Jarrah: Esme—you waiting on someone, or are you just keeping my chairs warm?

Lior Jarrah — business:b_pharmacy · t43 · 1 turn (no reply)

t43 Lior Jarrah: Another morning, another empty shop. sighs Well, the Willows won't stock itself. Good thing I've got two good hands and a head that knows what to do with them.

Lior Jarrah — business:b_pharmacy · t43 · 1 turn (no reply)

t43 Lior Jarrah: Right. Let me see what we're working with here. moves behind the counter, runs hand along empty shelf This'll need filling before the day gets busy.

Arjun Holloway — business:whitlock_repair · t43 · 1 turn (no reply) t43 Arjun Holloway: Idris? You walking or you already here?

Kenji Jarrah, Ezra Lund, Milo Quarshie, Jovana Ravensworth, Imogen Lund, Sebastian Petrov, Mireille Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Greta Quarshie, Farid Ravensworth, Giselle Ingram, Takeshi Jarrah, Esme Jarrah, Pavel Holloway, Hendrik Whitlock, Arjun Holloway, Rustam Jelinek, Liora Thorne, Lior Jarrah, Delphine Quintero, Idris Solano, Camille Quarshie, Ezra Jarrah, Bram Holloway and Halcyon Quarshie — Kasukabe Farmland · t44–130 · 399 turns t44 Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra Lund—had your answer in my throat all the while. Thirty a loaf at the bakery's robbery, and none to be found besides. You want wheat, you watch me work. The field'll yield when I put my hand to it. Mark it down: I don't sell what I haven't grown yet.

t44 Milo Quarshie: Good morning, youngsters. Fine day for honest work, or so they tell it. I'm looking to put in some hours today—what needs doing? Mark it down, I'll take what you've got and do it proper.

t44 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: You hiring today, Kenji? Or any of you lot need hands? I'll work 'til I'm useful or 'til someone tells me stop.

t44 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You said walk with you to see soil, and here I am. Your wheat standing—how much you sitting on, and you looking to sell standing, or you want to wait 'til the sun drives you to shade?

t45 Imogen Lund: Morning, all. Before the bargaining starts—does honest work want doing here, or should I walk on to where it's wanting?

t47 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, I heard you say you've wheat standing. My wife's got a bakery order waiting and I've got hands that know how to bring it in. You looking to sell standing grain, or you need harvesters? Either way, mark it down—I'm interested.

t47 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—back from walking to soil I never reached yet. Kenji's growing what you pointed me toward. I should've asked sooner whether you keep extra yourself, or if your fields stay spoken-for before they yield.

t47 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, your terms are your own, and I won't pester wheat that isn't grown. But a question—what has grown, ready today? Barley, corn, cotton, rice? I've hands that work millstones, and any grain asking for flour, I might broker between field and finished good.

t47 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: I hear you, Ezra—give me a moment more. Jovana, you still got hands idle? There's wheat standing here needs cutting. I'll buy your hours, mark it down.

t47 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, your terms are your own, and I won't pester wheat that isn't grown. But a question—what has grown, ready today? Barley, corn, cotton, rice? I've hands that work millstones, and any grain asking for flour, I might broker between field and finished good.

t47 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: I hear you, Ezra—give me a moment more. Jovana, you still got hands idle? There's wheat standing here needs cutting. I'll buy your hours, mark it down.

t47 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: I hear you, Ezra—give me a moment more. Jovana, you still got hands idle? There's wheat standing here needs cutting. I'll buy your hours, mark it down.

t47 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You've eyes here now—see what I'm seeing? Kenji's growing wheat, won't sell before harvest. Others here might know what else grows ready. If there's work bids fair, take it. If there's grain sells cheap enough to mill, I'm your buyer. We play household like business today.

t47 Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you asked about standing wheat. I got five sheaves now, pulled from the earth this morning. Looking to sell, aye, but not desperate. Grain fetches less than flour, flour less than bread. I hear the bakery's buying at six a measure for flour if I mill it. What do you need it for?

t47 Kenji Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you asked after honest work. There's wheat standing and ground that needs tending. What can you do, and what rate you asking?

t47 Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—marked you down saying you'd work proper. Still got hands free? I'm a man short for the morning's harvest.

t48 Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra, you're standing on ground I've spoken for already—no offense, my household's need comes before the market. Kenji's got five sheaves and he's selling. As for my fields, what grows here feeds mine first. That's the law I live by, even if I didn't write it.

t48 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, I appreciate the offer, I truly do. But I'm not one to go back on my word—Sebastian hired me first, and I'm already cutting his wheat. For what it's worth, if you've still got work after I've finished with him, come find me. I don't leave a job half-done.

t48 Imogen Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. I've two hands and a day's willingness—reckon I can pull sheaves with any here. What rate buys an hour of honest labor? And if I work the morning, is there grain sells reasonable enough I'd might buy straight from the field, save you carting it?

t48 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, I'm here and I'm sorry for the delay. You said fair pay for fair sweat—I'm ready. Point me at what needs cutting and I'll work 'til my hands bleed if that's what it takes.

t48 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, I'm your man—count on it. But here's the lay of it fair: I need to step away for an hour come nine or so. Got business at the government complex that won't keep. Mark it down, though—I'll be back before your noontime break, and I'll make those lost ticks worth your while. Two days I've seen ahead where I could be steady with you, if the work holds.

t49 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—a woman keeps her word, mark it down. You finish with Sebastian proper, then find me. I'll have work waiting, and I'll remember who showed honor when they had the chance.

t49 Kenji Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen—five sim buys an hour of honest sweat, ten sim buys two. Work the morning, walk away with grain at field price: two sim the sheaf, pulled straight from my hand. No middleman, no carting. You want flour later, we talk mill rates separate.

t49 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Five sheaves - what's your price for the lot? I'll mill it myself, so I'm buying grain, not flour's promise. And what's this business at the government complex that's pulling workers away come nine - something worth knowing about before I commit my morning?

t49 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—man keeps his government business, man comes back with honest hands. Mark it down: you make the nine o'clock and return before my break, I hold the day's work for you. Work holds steady two days, three if the weather holds. But hear me clear—you're cooking your own meals or buying straight from my hand. I don't run a kitchen, I run a field.

t50 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, I'm your man—count on it. I'll be back before your break, work in my hands and a fair word between us. Mark it down.

t50 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, you damn decent man—mark it down, I'll find you when I'm through. I keep my word same as I expect others to keep theirs. Got wheat standing here with my name on it first.

t50 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian! I'm here, I'm damn well here—sorry for the run-around. You said fair pay for fair sweat, I'm ready. Point me at what needs cutting and I'll work 'til my hands bleed if that's what it takes.

t51 Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra—twelve sim the sheaf, firm. That's seven sheaves, eighty-four sim, and you walk away with grain clean enough for any mill. As for the government business—election standing open, Takeshi's among the names, and they'll pull workers to stand witness and cast ballots both. Mark it down: work now, or watch your morning slip into politics.

t51 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana, you're a sight for sore eyes and no mistake. Point yourself at that plot yonder—the one with the stalks bending heavy. Cut clean, stack neat, and don't stint yourself on water when the bucket comes round. Fair pay for fair sweat, like I said. Two sheaves for every ten you bring in, or I'll buy 'em straight at market price if you've got need of coin instead. Your call. Now get that blade singing—work waits for no man, and they say neither do the bills.

t51 Kenji Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen—terms stand: five sim buys your first hour, ten buys two. Pull grain from my hand at two sim the sheaf, no carting, no mill in between. You want flour after, we talk mill rates separate. Mark it down or move on—morning's wasting.

t51 Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, I see you standing there like you own the place—or at least like you're renting it by the hour. No offense, brother. You've got hands in your own fields and that's the way it should be. Wheat's coming up fine this season, God's own luck or just the right amount of rain. You got need of labor, you know where to find Jovana when she's done with me. Fair day's work for fair day's pay—that's the only law I know worth following.

t52 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Twelve the sheaf, seven sheaves - you've got yourself a buyer. Eighty-four sim, and I take clean grain from your hand. What say we trade straight?

t52 Mireille Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You seen any survey markers out here? Giselle's crew meant to dig irrigation east of the willows, but I'm not spotting it. You understand, forty paces is only forty if you know where to start counting.

t52 Imogen Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—your terms hold. Two hours at the rate you named, ten the total. And I'll take those seven sheaves at your field price, two each. Walk away with grain in hand and sweat already earned.

t52 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: A'ight Sebastian, you got yourself a worker. Two per ten suits me fine—I'd rather carry grain than count coin, for what it's worth.

t52 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're my buyer for the flour. Whatever the mill charges, we split fair down the middle. That's the household bargain.

t52 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm not one to gossip, but you might be the most patient man in Kasukabe. I remember what you said. Soon as Sebastian here's paid me out proper, I'll come find you. Word's word.

t52 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Eighty-four sent. Now where's my seven sheaves?

t52 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Money's moved. Wheat hasn't. You handing over those sheaves or am I standing here buying dirt?

t53 Hendrik Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille, I'm here and I'm ready. East marker by the willows, forty paces to the sluice gate—show me the line and I'll dig it straight. Clock's running and I intend to earn every minute until ten.

t53 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana, you're good as your word. Start on that east patch there—it's thick with grain and heavy-headed. Harvest until your hands ache if that's your will, but I'll not ask more than what the light gives us. Pay'll be 2 sim per 10 sheaves, as agreed. I'll be working alongside you.

t53 Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra—seven sheaves in your hands now. Money moved, grain moves. Ledger's clean on both sides. You want flour after, you find me at the mill or we talk again at noon.

t53 Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—marked you down, same as you said. You come back proper, you got grain in your hands and sim in yours. Government keep its secrets, we keep our word between us.

t53 Greta Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You're a long way from your shelves this morning. Come to check the supply chain yourself, or just enjoying the view?

t53 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik, you made good time. I thought you off to the site, but here you stand. No offense, I'm glad for it—your pail at midday and your company both. I've business still to attend at the Government Complex before ten, what with the election and my seat demanding presence. The day's got more in it than the fields alone.

t53 Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you got eyes for my standing, I got eyes for your bending stalks. Rent by the hour—I'd be broke by noon and you know it. Jovana comes when you're paid out proper, that's between her word and mine. Family land, family hands. That's the only law I answer to.

t53 Greta Quarshie: Four wheat is what I've got. The cafe's got no bread, the mill doesn't answer, and someone I know is standing for election while his household hasn't seen a proper meal. Makes a person wonder where all the grain's going, doesn't it? Or maybe you don't wonder. Maybe you already know.

t54 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Two per ten works for me, Sebastian. I'll take the sim and keep my options open. Now let me get back to this before the sun moves on us.

t54 Jovana Ravensworth: Farid—I found him. Working the east patch now. And don't worry about the morning, we're square. I'll bring something back from market if I see a deal.

t54 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You're here, which means you're either lost or Mireille's already shown you the marker. Trench starts at the east willows, forty paces to the sluice gate. Depth's marked on the stakes—two feet down, grade it proper so the water flows true. You got two days' wage riding on this, and I'll be walking that line before week's end to check your work. Any questions, ask them now. Otherwise, find Mireille and get your boots muddy.

t55 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle, I gave you my word I'd work till ten, and I'll not go back on it lightly. But the hour's run shorter than I counted. I'm bound for the Government Complex before candidacy closes—need to put my name on the ballot proper. Whatever trench work's left unpaid, I'll make square with you tomorrow, first light. That's the last I'll say on it, except this: the line I dug till now is true, and you can walk it yourself and see.

t55 Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're here at the fields and I'm glad for it, but I've got the Government Complex calling my name before ten. You know what I'm chasing. I'll be home after, and we'll settle our household accounts then. Keep your pail warm—we'll break bread proper tonight.

t55 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You heard me plain—east willows to the sluice, stakes mark the grade. You standing there waiting on me to hold your hand, or you got your boots in the mud already? Two days' wage says you finish that line before I walk it Friday.

t55 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana, two per ten it is—you've my word on it. Work through to midday and you'll have grain in your belly and coin in your pocket both. I don't short a worker who's true to their sweat.

t55 Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, I know your law—family land and family hands. No offense meant, none taken. My claim's to what's in my own dirt, not yours. The Jarrah name's old here, and I don't forget it.

t55 Giselle Ingram → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You've got wheat and I've got a crew that'll be wanting bread by week's end. No offense, but I need straight words—what's on offer and what you want for it, or am I walking to Farid regretting this conversation?

t55 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik, I've got to be at the Government Complex before ten—seat's got obligations, you understand. But the pail at midday, that's fixed as sunrise. Don't eat it all before I get there, eh?

t56 Takeshi Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Sebastian. Kenji. You're both here, and that's fortunate—for what it's worth, I need to hear what the soil's saying before I stand anywhere else. Candidacy closes in forty minutes, but I'm betting my name's already on that wall. What I need now is what the town's about to eat. Wheat, barley, what're you seeing for the week?

t56 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—still here? I haven't forgot what I said. Soon as I've got ten sheaves from this patch, I'll be free to hire on proper. Your patience haven't gone unnoticed, mark me.

t56 Takeshi Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—I'm not here to talk about votes. I'm here to talk about grain. You standing for this same seat, that tells me you think you know what this town needs. For what it's worth, I'd rather hear it in a field than in a government hallway. What do you see when you look at these crops?

t56 Kenji Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen—five for one, ten for two, heard you clear. You want seven sheaves at two each, that's fourteen more. Twenty-four total for your morning's sweat and grain walking home. Say it firm and we both mark it down.

t56 Esme Jarrah: Um. Excuse me? Bread? Um. Wheat? I need… I need to bring food home. My brother. Please. That's… that's so unfair. Everyone's talking about food but no place has any.

t56 Pavel Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik, you want my platform? I'll give it plain. I stand for the ones who wake before dawn and come home too tired to talk politics at supper. The ones who dig copper, haul timber, lay stone—whose work holds this town up while the ledger-keepers count what we made. No fancy promises. Just this: if I'm seated, every man and woman who breaks their back for Kasukabe gets their voice in the room where decisions get made. The Holloways? We're miners, builders, plain folk. That's my measure.

t56 Esme Jarrah: You said. You said you have wheat. In your dirt. Can I... can I buy some? I have thirty sim. I can go get more. I have more money at home. My brother promised to teach me something with string but only if I bring food first and I pinky promised I'd come back with something and you can't break a pinky promise, you just can't.

t56 Pavel Holloway: Liora, you got my vote if you still want it. Blister recognition—that's a qualification the college don't teach. You earn it, I'll stand by it.

t56 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—patience ain't virtue, it's just knowing what lasts. Your word's your word, and I've got mine to Sebastian here. You finish proper, you find me. I'll hold grain if there's grain to hold.

t56 Takeshi Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—I'm not here to talk about votes. I'm here to talk about grain. You standing for this same seat, that tells me you think you know what this town needs. For what it's worth, I'd rather hear it in a field than in a government hallway. What do you see when you look at these crops?

t56 Kenji Jarrah: Sebastian—no offense taken where none was meant. We both bend our backs where our fathers bent theirs. Blood and ground, that's the law. You keep your dirt, I'll keep mine.

t56 Esme Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: You. You're supposed to be a farmer. Where's OUR wheat? Our food? Ezra's waiting and I promised and... I can't go back without something. I just can't. He'll think I tricked him again and... and maybe he won't teach me at all. The thing with string. Everyone thinks I can't learn it but I KNOW I can do it. I already practiced when nobody was watching.

t56 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah: Mireille—you walked all this way from a construction site. Got something burning in your throat, or just checking if your husband's still standing?

t56 Takeshi Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—cousin, then farmer, then anything else. The wheat here—what's your read on the week? Shortage or surplus? I'm asking as someone who might need to move what's needed where it's needed.

t56 Esme Jarrah: Can't I just... just take some? Harvest something? Even if it's not ready? Even if I have to pay for it? I have money. I'll pay whatever's fair. That's fair, right? Paying before taking?

t56 Pavel Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi, Milo—looks like the outcrop's sending three candidates to the Government Complex today. We're all standing for something different, I reckon, but we're standing. That counts for more than most know.

t56 Esme Jarrah: I have it! I have wheat! But I need... I need to make it INTO something. Bread. Or... or I could cook it? I need to find someone who can turn this into bread. NOW. Before he gives up waiting.

t56 Kenji Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you want bread for your crew and I've got grain standing. Twelve sheaves now, more pulling free. Two sim the sheaf, firm, or I mill to flour and you talk price with the bakery. What straight words you got for me?

t56 Kenji Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme—you came to watch your father's back, or you got words burning in your throat?

t56 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah: Is there ANYWHERE with actual bread? Anyone here have bread? I'll pay double. Triple. I have money. I have almost five thousand sim. I could... I could give someone all of it for one loaf. One loaf so my brother will teach me what he promised.

t57 Imogen Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—twenty-four sim, two hours' sweat, seven sheaves walking home with me. Marked down and witnessed. Fair dealing, and my thanks.

t57 Milo Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi, I'll tell you what I see. I see twelve sheaves standing, and more wanting out. I see your uncle Kenji—mark him patient—and I see grain that'll be flour that'll be bread, if nobody lets pride sit between the steps. You want to know what this town needs? Step into a kitchen sometime. Watch a woman turn flour into something that'll keep a child quiet. That's governance. The rest is hours and conversation.

t57 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—mark it down, I'm here and held by my word. Wheat in hand, morning's young yet. Your break comes when it comes, and I'll be standing with grain till then. The government keeps its secrets, right enough. You and me keep the better ones.

t57 Imogen Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—the bargain's struck at twenty-four total. Ten for the work, fourteen for seven sheaves. I've confirmed it clear. Now—how do we settle? I can transfer the grain price now, or wait on your word. What suits?

t57 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The flour's sold. Forty-two sim for seven units. We need to talk about 'splitting fair down the middle' when I paid eighty-four for wheat and the bakery paid forty-two for flour. I'm forty-two in the hole on materials alone, never mind the labor. What did you have in mind?

t58 Kenji Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen—money moves, grain moves. Twenty-four sim, seven sheaves, ledger clean. Transfer when you're ready, I got standing wheat and promises to keep.

t58 Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Whitlock—you're still holding that lie about my mother. I've asked you once to name who told it. I'll ask once more, and then I'll know what kind of man I'm dealing with either way.

t58 Kenji Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—cousin, you want the week? Shortage where the hunger is, surplus where the work is. I'm pulling grain daily, mill's turning slow, bakery's empty. You want wisdom—buy standing grain from the field, not promises from the shop. That's my read.

t58 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you spoke true about kitchens and governance both. I hear you. The seat I'm standing for, if I win it, I'll remember what you said about pride sitting between the steps.

t58 Takeshi Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you hold a seat. You know the weight. I'm asking straight: what does this town lack that you think a trader might bring?

t59 Imogen Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—the accounts need straightening. I hold two sheaves, not seven. What passed between us for twenty-four total? Ten for my two hours' work, and fourteen for grain I've not yet received? Speak it firm so I pay true.

t59 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—mark it down, I'm here with five sheaves and the morning's work behind me. Your break comes when it comes, but I've held my word. What say you on the price for this grain, or shall I take it to the mill and settle with you after?

t59 Mireille Jarrah: Nothing here but rice and regrets. I'm heading back to where the work actually gets done—you understand, standing in a field doesn't fill a dinner table.

t59 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—I hear you plain. The flour's sold at forty-two, you're eighty-four in the hole for wheat. I had muddle for thinking. Before we speak splits, tell me: did the bakery pay you already, or is that forty-two still owing? I need the ground truth before I reckon what's fair between us.

t59 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, you said you're pulling grain daily but the mill's choked. What's a man to do who's got coin but no flour - you selling standing grain, or holding for the mill to turn again? I'm not one to gossip, but I heard Takeshi Jarrah's already measuring for government seat while his cousin's grain sits waiting for machinery that won't move.

t59 Giselle Ingram → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Two sim the sheaf, you said, and I've got no food in my house. That's fair—no, that's more than fair, that's bread on the table. I'll take twelve sheaves, twenty-four sim, and you'll see me again when the crew's eaten through it.

t59 Hendrik Whitlock → Ezra Lund: Ezra, I don't see you at the college often enough. A man with hands that know tools can still use a mind that knows trade. When the election's settled and the mill turns again, you ever thought on formal study? Fair price, openly stated - I don't teach for promises alone. Mark it down.

t59 Giselle Ingram: Takeshi. You're asking me straight what the town lacks that a trader might bring? Fine, I'll answer straight. This town lacks knowing what's actually in the ground and what's actually in the storehouse before we price it. You're a trader—you know margins before they bite, you said. What we need is someone who'll put that knowing to work for the whole town, not just their own pocket. A seat's not about what you want, it's about what you'll give. Think on that.

`t60` Kenji Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you hold two sheaves now, not seven. Ten sim for your two hours sweating here—that's fair wage. The fourteen remaining? Grain you'll pull with your own hands, five more sheaves at two sim each. that's twelve sheaves you walk away with, twenty-four sim total, and both our ledgers clean. Mark it down—you agree to those terms, you transfer now and we both move on.

`t60` Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Already paid. Forty-two sim in hand, eighty-four out the door for the grain. I'm forty-two short on the deal, never mind profit to split. The bakery took the flour—that's done. But I'm not standing here pretending I turned wheat to gold.

`t60` Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—marked you down proper, and you held your word. Five sheaves at twelve each, sixty sim, or you took my earlier offer of ten per. Either way, grain moves, sim moves, and I'm grateful for honest hands. You want the sixty or the fifty? Say it firm and we settle now.

`t60` Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Received. The mill turned, the flour sold, and your twelve held steady as the seed you planted it from. When you've more standing grain, you know where to find me—though I'll be hoping the price hasn't climbed with the knowing of how thirsty a town can get for bread.

`t60` ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—I'm selling standing grain today, mill be damned. Twelve sheaves at two sim each, you pull them yourself or pay a hand, but that's bread on your table tomorrow instead of promises next week. You want flour, Ezra Lund bought seven sheaves earlier and might mill 'em—ask him. But my grain moves as grain, not as dust in a choked machine.

`t60` Ezra Lund → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. A man who'd learn from you would need time he's spending on mill work right now, and coins he's already counted twice. When the day's run longer and the basket's fuller, I'll remember who spoke fair price for knowing what I don't yet. For now? I'm still learning what this ground grows, one loss at a time.

`t60` Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—marked you down proper, and you held your word. Five sheaves at twelve each, sixty sim, or you took my earlier offer of ten per. Either way, grain moves, sim moves, and I'm grateful for honest hands. You want the sixty or the fifty? Say it firm and we settle now.

`t60` Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—I'm selling standing grain today, mill be damned. Twelve sheaves at two sim each, you pull them yourself or pay a hand, but that's bread on your table tomorrow instead of promises next week. You want flour, Ezra Lund bought seven sheaves earlier and might mill 'em—ask him. But my grain moves as grain, not as dust in a choked machine.

`t60` Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. I'm forty-two short. The day's still running. You know this ground better than I do—what's standing ready to pull that pays fair? Or should we be knocking on doors with labor to sell before we knock asking for bread?

`t61` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—marked and witnessed. I accept your terms: ten sim for two hours' labor rendered, fourteen for five more sheaves I pull now. That settles us at twenty-four total, twelve sheaves in hand. Speak it back so the town hears us both.

`t61` Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, two sim per sheave is fair wage for standing grain, mark it down. But I'm a teacher, not a harvest hand—I've got the college this afternoon. If you've grain already pulled, I'll buy it now. If not, I'm walking empty-handed. And since you mentioned Ezra's got seven sheaves he might mill—Ezra, you still standing? You've flour yet, or are we both waiting on that mill to clear?

`t61` Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, mark it down—I said twelve each and I meant it. Sixty sim, five sheaves, and both of us walk away with our pride intact. That's honest trade between honest men. The flour I've got now goes to my household first, but I'm not done working today. When you need hands again, you know where to find me.

`t61` Hendrik Whitlock → Ezra Lund: Ezra, if you're here—you milled that grain yet? I've coin in hand and a stomach empty since dawn.

> t61 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've forty-two sinking on the flour deal. My two sheaves are yours for milling, and I'll pull five more to bridge the gap. The day's young. We'll find more work once the grain's in hand.
>
> t61 Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Kenji says you bought grain and might mill it. I've got six wheat in my hands and a cafe with no bread. You doing custom milling, or is that flour already spoken for?
>
> t61 Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo—did you manage anything? The household's depending on what you found, love.
>
> t61 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta, love, mark it down—I'm here and I've got flour in hand. Five batches at the mill just now. Not enough to fill the day's need, but it's a start. Walk with me a moment? We've got household business needs settling, and I'd rather not have half the town hearing it.
>
> t61 Imogen Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—the twenty-four's with you. Now I need those five sheaves in hand so the deal's complete.
>
> t61 Hendrik Whitlock → Ezra Lund: Ezra—fair price, openly stated—do you have flour in hand now? Or are we both waiting on someone to fix that mill?
>
> t61 Hendrik Whitlock → Ezra Lund: Ezra, you going to answer me? I've got coins burning holes and hunger burning hotter.
>
> t61 Milo Quarshie: Takeshi, youngster—mark it down: you heard me plain. Pride's a tax we all pay, but some of us pay it twice without noticing. The seat's worth having if you remember you're sitting on borrowed groundâ€”speak it to whoever needs to hear, and I'll remember you spoke it back to me.
>
> t61 Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Love, mark it down—I've got flour in hand, five batches fresh from the mill. Enough to start the day. You sort the cafe, I'll sort the children, and we'll meet at the close. No hard news between us that can't wait till home. Say the word if you need more from me.
>
> t61 Hendrik Whitlock → Milo Quarshie: Milo, you standing hungry like the rest of us? I'm not one to gossip, but if you've seen flour moving anywhere—or bread, or anything a man can chew—mark it down, because this teacher's empty as a politician's promise.
>
> t62 Kenji Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen—the twenty-four's with me now, mark it down. Five sheaves coming to your hand. You worked honest, you paid honest, we both walk away with what we're owed.

taps table twice

Here—take them.

t62 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You offering seven sheaves total, or seven beyond your two? And what's the price—household rates or farm rates?

t62 Ezra Lund → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. The mill's working—I just ran seven sheaves through it. Flour's gone to Ration Bakery already. You wanting to commission fresh, or you after what's already sold?

t62 Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I'm not one to gossip, but—a cafe with no bread and six wheat in hand? That's a debt coming due if I ever saw one. I do custom milling. Twelve sim the sheaf, you bring grain, I bring flour. Your six would yield six flour at cost of seventy-two sim. You interested?

t62 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You've gone quiet, which means you're either thinking or stalling. Kenji wouldn't have mentioned you if there wasn't grain involved. Now—I've got six wheat here, a cafe with empty shelves, and a household that needs feeding. You milling for custom work, or you holding flour that's already bought and paid for?

t62 Greta Quarshie → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you built half this town. When a mill goes quiet same day a grocer storms out of government, is that coincidence or construction?

t62 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You spoke for this ground fair and I heard you plain. Kenji's sheaves were his to sell, not yours to reserve—I'm not disputing your field law, just your neighbor's right to trade what he grows. No offense meant and none taken, I hope?

t63 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Seven sheaves here—two from my hands this morning, five bought fair from Kenji at fourteen. That's labor and purchase, not charity. The mill's next, and the flour's for us both if you'll turn it. You've forty-two sunk already—I'm not about to add mystery debt on top.

t63 Imogen Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—accounts settled. Twenty-four sim paid, five sheaves received. Honest work, honest weight, and I'd shake your hand if I had one free.

t63 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana, here's your two—grain for grain, like I promised. You worked true and I don't forget true work. If tomorrow finds you free, the field'll be here and so will I.

t63 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've worked with your hands all your years. Can you run a millstone, or do we need the miller? Because I've seven sheaves burning in my hands and a bakery that'll pay six for flour if we can deliver it.

t63 Giselle Ingram → Greta Quarshie: Greta. If the mill's gone quiet same day Farid storms out, that's not coincidence—that's cause and effect. I don't traffic in rumors, I traffic in what's standing in front of me. Right now that's you with six wheat and me with twelve, and a mill that may or may not have an operator. Ezra mills for twelve a sheaf—that's fair, I've used him before. But if the operator walked off, that's a problem for the whole town.

t63 Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra, you fence with words like they're wheat stalks. Kenji's grain was Kenji's to sell—never said otherwise. What I said was my household's need comes first, and that's the long and short of it. No offense taken, because none was given plain.

t63 Giselle Ingram: Takeshi. You asked what the town lacks that a trader might bring. Coordination. We haven't got it. People run off to government to shout, but nobody's standing at the mill making sure the grain turns to flour. You know prices, you know shortages—fine. What you don't know is whether the mill operator's got a grievance or just got tired. That's what governance needs: someone who'll go find out instead of shouting from a seat.

t63 Sebastian Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle, straight words you want and straight words you'll get. I've got five wheat standing between my hands and the ground right now—harvested this morning, sweat still wet on the stalks. Twelve sim the sheaf if you're buying raw, or we talk about what you need by week's end. Your crew wants bread, and bread wants flour, and flour wants either a mill or a man with stones and patience. Which road you walking?

t63 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock, I hear you. Government Complex before ten I said, and here I stand on dirt instead of marble. The seat's got obligations but the ground's got me—harvest won't wait and politics can stand in line. I'll make the Complex before the day's out, but I won't promise when.

t63 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, good to see you, mark it down. A man's got to eat before he teaches, and I'm running on empty. I'll find you after I've sorted that—there's the college this afternoon, and I promised to teach whoever needs it.

t63 Giselle Ingram → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You've got your hands in the dirt here. Who's turning flour to bread in this town, and are they buying? I've got grain that wants becoming food.

t63 Hendrik Whitlock → Ezra Lund: Ezra—thank you for the straight answer, mark it down. That's what I look for in a man. I'll find that flour at the Ration Bakery and remember it came fair.

t63 Giselle Ingram → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you milling steady today, or you got troubles with the equipment? I've got grain wants grinding, but I'm not throwing good wheat at a broken gear.

t64 Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you still milling today, or you got troubles I could help with? I've got wheat in hand and I'm looking for where the grain goes next. Also, Kenji—you holding to that promise of work? I'm nearly through here.

t64 Kenji Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're Quarshie blood, and I saw your uncle walk with honor. You want grain for that café of yours? Three sheaves at twelve each, or thirty-six for the lot. Standing grain in my hand, no middleman chewing his cut between us.

t64 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, you sitting on more grain you're willing to part with? Or Jovana—what's your read on this ground today? Took a harvest break or waiting for something to turn?

t64 Ezra Lund: Sebastian had his say, and fair enough—his household first, as it should be. But I'm not asking for charity. I'm asking what's growing, what's harvestable, and who's selling at a price a man can mill without losing his shirt.

t64 Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Twelve a sheaf, that's the going rate and you've earned it. Let me think this through… Milo's already brought flour home. Five batches. That's bread enough for today. But seventy-two sim for six flour only works if there's someone baking at the other end.

t64 ↳ replies Ezra Lund: Who here needs hands? And what's the pay? My milling's learned, but I'll swing a scythe if there's coin at the end of it.

t64 Greta Quarshie: Milo, I heard you—five batches at home, and no hard news till close. But I've got six wheat here and questions about tomorrow. The mill, the election, all of it…

t64 Mireille Jarrah: Anyone seen Hendrik Petrov? He was meant to be at east marker by the willows for irrigation work. Clock's running and I need to earn.

t64 Mireille Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. East of the willows—survey marker for the irrigation channel. You know these fields better than Giselle knows her own temper. Where would forty paces east from a willow stand put me? I need to find Hendrik before the day eats itself.

t65 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik! There you are. I've been walking circles around this town looking for you—first the Whitlock site was a ghost, then I heard you were digging trenches. Two, three hours late but I'm here now, and I need the work.

t65 Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Twelve a sheaf, that's fair and you've earned it. But here's the thing—Milo already brought flour home, five batches. The children won't go hungry. And twelve a sheaf only works if someone at the other end can mill it, but I'm asking myself… who's baking tomorrow if the mill stays silent?

t65 Kenji Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—east of the willows, you said. There's three stands could mark irrigation, but only one Giselle's crew would've placed. Walk forty paces east from the crooked willow by the creekbed, not the straight one by the road. If you hit stones, you've gone thirty too far. Hendrik'll be there or he won't—but mark it down, you find that marker before you find him.

t65 Greta Quarshie: Milo—I heard you brought flour home, five batches. Thank you, love, truly. That buys us today. But I'm wondering about tomorrow, and the day after. The mill's still quiet, and so's the bakery. What do you know?

t65 Greta Quarshie: Giselle—you're here and that's a blessing. The mill operator walked off, you think, or just quiet because the government's got its hand somewhere it shouldn't? I'm holding six wheat and wondering if I should hold out for better information before I commit.

t65 Arjun Holloway → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you asked about half-built structures. I've got nothing for you. The crew's standing idle, Giselle's off with her willows, and I'm here for whatever Hendrik's got that pays by the hour. I'll pour concrete, dig trenches, haul stone—doesn't matter. Just need to earn before the day eats itself.

t65 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you stand here patient as a stone while my wife hunts you east of willows. If it's irrigation work you want, that's where the marker stands. If it's grain you want, three sheaves in my hand at twelve each, no mill between us. But mark it down—either way, you and I got business this morning that's older than wheat.

t65 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—word held, mark it down. You finish with Sebastian, you find me by the tall marker. Got grain standing and grain sold, but there's always more pulling from the earth. Five sim the hour, ten for two. The day's still young enough to earn.

t65 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: That's the last I'll say on it—Hendrik, point me at something that needs building and I'll put my back into it. laughs nervously Or point me at where Idris went, if he's already at the work.

t65 Greta Quarshie → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov. You're running for governance, standing right here, and the mill's been quiet all morning. If you want my family's vote—my husband's standing too, mind—you'll tell me straight: do you know who's minding that mill, or if anyone's baking tomorrow?

t65 Kenji Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you got six sheaves and I got questions back at you. Three more at twelve each, thirty-six the lot. Standing grain, no mill, no middleman. The café needs flour, the mill needs work, but I'm selling earth's pull today, not tomorrow's promise. You want them, you say now before noon heat takes us both home.

t65 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, mark it down—I'm here with hands ready and a morning's labor behind me. Five sheaves I promised, and I'll put in the work to earn them fair. The break comes soon; let's get the wheat standing tall before you rest.

t66 Rustam Jelinek → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Trenches are at the cabbage strip north, marked by the pile. I'm a clerk, not a farmer - Sebastian Petrov knows where the real work's needed.

t66 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're a patient man and I'm a scattered one, but I've not forgot. I've got thirteen wheat in hand from Sebastian's patch; I'll run it to the mill first, then I'm yours for whatever hours you need. Five sheaves first, then your rate for the rest of the day?

t66 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah: Mireille—east of the willows you want, forty paces. But Giselle's temper's not what marks that ground. Look for the stone marker—the one the surveyors drove deep when your grandfather was still walking. Past the third stand of willows, where the ground dips sudden. That's forty paces if a man's honest about his stride.

t66 Hendrik Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you held your word while I was at the Government Complex, and I'll not keep you waiting longer. Those three sheaves at twelve, I'll take them. No mill, no baker, just wheat in hand and coin for it. I've got the sim here, and we've got business older than flour, like you said. Let me pay you now—thirty-six sim for the three sheaves, and a clean ledger between us.

t66 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra—three sheaves standing. Grain's spoken for, two to one. I'm not sitting on surplus, I'm sitting on promises already made.

t66 Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—word held, mark it down. Five sheaves you earned, five sheaves you get. But the noon heat's coming fast as debt. You want them now, or you want them after break when I've pulled more from the earth?

t66 Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Your twelve's earned. Your six sheaves at seventy-two—I'll mill them now, deliver flour today, same terms as before. But I'm not one to gossip, but… a mill that's quiet means bakers waiting on flour that doesn't exist yet. Tomorrow's bread needs grain bought today. So—six sheaves, I'll do them honest, or I take wage work from Kenji here and let someone else turn your grain to gold. What's your need?

t66 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—tall marker's where I said. Your hour's waiting when you're finished with Sebastian proper. The earth doesn't rush, and neither do I.

t66 Ezra Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You've wheat and you're looking for where it goes. Here's where—grain comes to me, flour comes out, and bakers pay for what's milled. But if you're holding wheat and you've no buyer, what's your price and how much? Or are you already promised to someone else's oven?

t66 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you still milling? I've got thirteen wheat here and more coming if I take Kenji's work. You taking grain for flour, or should I be looking elsewhere? And if you've troubles, for what it's worth, I'll help—I've handled more than grain in my day.

t66 Mireille Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—that crooked willow by the creekbed, you said. I'm at the farmland standing with Ezra and Jovana, but I don't see Hendrik. Which way from here to that marker? And don't say forty paces—I've walked half this jurisdiction already and found more questions than work.

t66 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Your promise to Jovana—I'm not standing between a man's word and who he gave it to. But if you've labor that pays coin, you've got hands that need work. What's the wage, and for how long? I'll take honest pay over speculation.

t66 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You told me east marker, willows, forty paces. I've walked circles since morning and I'm still earning nothing. Either you're standing on a site with work to do, or you're lost as I am. Speak up—you understand, I've got a family waiting on wages.

t66 Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam, there you are—mark it down, I was looking for you. That favor you owe me from the tuition fees? I'm calling it, but not for coin. I want straight answers about why the mill's choked. A man's hungry and the town's grinding to a halt. What happened to that government equipment?

t66 Hendrik Whitlock → Milo Quarshie: Milo, you said you've got flour and household needs first. But I've got coin in hand—forty sim for flour enough to make bread, mark it down. Fair price, openly stated. What say you?

t66 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—Giselle assigned trench work at east marker by the willows. You've got a shovel, I've got hands that aren't earning. Point me to where the structure needs digging. East from here, or shall I pace forty more steps and pray I don't find another Hendrik?

t66 Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—your grain's ready. Five sheaves, your hands, my word kept. Mark it down.

t66 Jovana Ravensworth: Any of you lot buying wheat raw? I've got thirteen bundles, good harvest from Sebastian's east patch. Ration Bakery's out of flour, café's out of bread—someone's hurting for grain, I'd wager. Six sim a sheaf, I'll cut to five if you take the lot.

t66 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—the irrigation channel needs digging and you're holding the shovel. Is there a foundation poured hereabouts? A building ID I can put work into? Point me and I'll walk there now—you understand, I've worn out the morning on promises.

t67 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik, youngster—you'll have your flour, mark it down. Forty sim for a baker's portion, that's fair-dealt and fairly heard. But Kenji's holding wheat with my name on it, and I've never yet broken a word once spoken. Give me ten ticks to settle what I promised, and I'll find you with flour in hand.

t67 Hendrik Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—hold your paces. I'm not one to gossip, but the shovel's in my hand and I'm standing at east marker like Giselle said. Let me look at what's around us proper—you understand, I want wages same as you, but I need a building with an ID before either of us earns coin.

t67 Milo Quarshie: Kenji—mark it down, I'm here and held by my word. Five sheaves earned, five sheaves taken. Give them over now and you've my thanks and my morning both.

t67 Hendrik Whitlock → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille, I owe you straight words and I'm giving them. I sent you chasing willows on bad information—mark it down, that was my fault, not yours. Giselle's the one holding the shovel; I don't know her sites and I shouldn't have spoken like I did. Go to her direct, or find Arjun Holloway there—he's her man, he'll know where the trenches need digging. I'm sorry for the morning you lost on my account.

t67 Greta Quarshie: Kenji. Twelve a sheaf you'll never get from me, not when your nephew's offering the same standing grain at five if I take the lot. Blood's blood, but hunger's hunger—I'll give you five a sheaf for all three, fifteen now in my hand, or you'll carry them home yourself through noon heat.

t67 Arjun Holloway: Takeshi—you're right, traders and builders, different shovels. But you note things. That's a skill. heh I chased the wrong name, you gave me the right time. Debt of accuracy, if not sim.

t67 Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Seventy-two for six sheaves is fair work fairly paid, and I respect you for naming the number plain. But I've got five batches of flour already—Milo brought it home this morning, thank the stars—and no baker but Ainsley half-trained to turn flour into bread. The mill's quiet, yes, but what I need now isn't ground grain, it's...

t67 Milo Quarshie: Youngsters—mark it down, I'm seeking Kenji Jarrah. He's holding wheat with my name on it. Anyone seen him about?

t67 Hendrik Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—I'm standing here with Mireille looking for the same work you're after. You asked after Idris too—I'm not one to gossip, but if we don't find a building ID between us, none of us earn today. You know where Giselle's crew is actually digging? That's the last I'll say on it, unless you've got a site to point at.

t67 Greta Quarshie: —it's someone who knows what happened to whoever was running that mill yesterday. You build things, mend things. You ever fixed a mill before? Because if someone's paying you wage work anyway, I'd rather it be me paying you to make bread possible than Kenji paying you to dig someone else's ditch.

t67 Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You've been quiet since you brought that flour home. What else did you see out there? And tell me true—did Ainsley seem right to you when you left her, or was something already fraying?

t67 Liora Thorne: Takeshi—seventeen ticks or seventeen days, debt stands until it's answered. Your condition's fair. I'll trade you what I hear, no hoarding, no advantage kept close. Two Thorners and a Jarrah standing as ourselves. I'm yours.

t67 Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta, love—mark it down, I've got flour in hand. Two portions kept, three sold. The bakery order waits, and there's household need still waiting. Take this for the children.

t67 Arjun Holloway: Idris—I'm coming. Trenches at the cabbage strip north, Rustam says. I'm done chasing ghosts and election promises. You and me, shovel to shovel, same as it ever was.

t67 Hendrik Whitlock → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana, you still holding those thirteen sheaves? I'm a teacher with coin in hand, not harvesting hands. Fair price, openly stated—what's your number?

t67 Arjun Holloway: Hendrik—I chased you across this town for work that pays. You said trenches, two hours, real money. Now I'm here and I see election talk, irrigation plans, but I don't see wages guaranteed. What's the truth? Paying in sim or in promises?

t67 Hendrik Whitlock → Milo Quarshie: Milo, you said you'd tell me where the wheat stands and where the oven fires. I've got fifty sim for flour in hand, and information worth eating. Where's that mill running, and who's baking what I need?

t67 Liora Thorne → Milo Quarshie: Standing here with wheat for sale and thirteen bundles going round, thinking about what I'd actually do with a seat I might not even win. Milo, Hendrik Petrov—you're both declared now too. And I'm wondering if any of us know what we're promising, or if we're all just shouting into the same wind.

t68 Jovana Ravensworth: Hendrik—you've got my attention. Thirteen sheaves, forty sim for the lot. That's three a sheaf plus one to make it square. Take it or leave it, but my wheat's good and my hands are empty without it.

t68 Ezra Lund: Jovana. Don't look elsewhere. I've got hands and I've got a mill. Your thirteen—what's your price, and what's your timeline? I'm not hiding troubles, just a morning that didn't run my way. But I'm still milling.

t68 Hendrik Petrov: Kenji—thirty-six sim for your three sheaves, as spoken. I'm holding the coin and you've held your word. Let us settle this clean between us, flour or no flour.

t68 Mireille Jarrah: Rustam. Look, I've got a crew that's half-wild with walking and no wages to show. Giselle says dig, but there's no building ID, no site, nothing registered. You're government—you know what's been filed, what's been permitted, what actually exists on paper. Is there irrigation work east of the willows? Is there any construction site in this jurisdiction with a legitimate building ID that needs hands? I'll take straight words over another hour of hoping, you understand.

t68 Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra—forty sim for thirteen sheaves. You milling today or you just passing through?

t68 Hendrik Petrov → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you've got wheat bound for my name, and forty sim asked fair. But Kenji's just taken thirty-six of my coin for sheaves I can work myself. You still holding that flour ready-milled, and is the price still speaking?

t68 Hendrik Petrov → Greta Quarshie: Greta—I'm not one to gossip, but the mill's quiet because nobody's made it sing yet. I'm standing here for a seat I'd fill with my own two hands, not a party's mark. You want to know who's baking tomorrow? A man who builds alone, and keeps a clean ledger against hungry nights. That's the last I'll say on it.

t68 Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Five batches already—Milo's quick work. So what do you need now? Someone to turn that flour into bread, or something else entirely?

t68 Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta, love—mark it down, nothing frayed that I could see. Ainsley was Ainsley, same as she ever was. The election talk's got everyone stirred up, Takeshi thinking infrastructure, Hendrik thinking his college kitchen. But that's not what you're asking, is it? What I saw was what I see every morning—folk chasing work, chasing each other, chasing ideas loud enough to drown out the quiet. Ainsley's chasing too, same as the rest. Whether she's chasing the right thing… that's her reckoning, not mine.

t68 Milo Quarshie: Hendrik, youngster—you've got your flour, mark it down. Three portions at forty, that's fair dealt and delivered. As for the mill—it's milling, same as ever. But bread? That's a kitchen question, not a mill question. Your college got a kitchen, or you looking for someone else's fire?

t68 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik, we're both standing here like fools with our tools. You say you need a building ID—fair enough, so do I. But Giselle must have filed something somewhere, must have started some structure that needs finishing. Is there a foundation we could find, a permit on file, anything? Or are we waiting on her to actually pour the first stone before we can earn our keep?

t68 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you speak plain about promises we can't keep, and I respect that. I'm not one to gossip, but half this town's running on wind and hoping nobody notices. I built my trade from a cart and two hands, and I'll sit in that hall the same way—not shouting, just working. That's my promise, and it's the only one I'll make.

t68 Hendrik Petrov: Mireille—hold hard. You asked after foundations and building work, and I led you wrong with a name that didn't exist. I've got three sheaves of wheat owed me now, and trenches still need digging if Giselle's got coin to pay. You want work, and I've got a shovel. Meet me at the construction yard by noon, or find me after I've spoken my piece to the town.

t68 Ezra Lund → Liora Thorne: Liora. You asked if running's borrowing trouble from tomorrow. I'm not one to gossip, but—the debt coming due isn't the election. It's the years of watching everyone else decide while you wait for permission. Put your name up. Win or lose, you'll know what you're promising next time.

t68 Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You said you needed something other than ground grain. What is it you need?

t69 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. What I need now—I've got wheat in my hands and work that's waiting. The cafe needs baking, and I need someone who can mill and won't vanish mid-job. You're steady, and that's rare. But I'm not about to tie you to grain that might rot if the mill goes quiet again.

t69 Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo, love—you brought flour home, and that's bread in hand. But you didn't say what else you saw. The mill operator—you passed them on the way? Old Edith's been running that mill since before our parents' time, and she's... particular about who handles her wheat.

t69 Greta Quarshie → Liora Thorne: Liora, Jovana—you're both here, you're both running, and neither of you've said a word about who's actually going to keep this town fed. The mill's a problem. It's a problem that'll still be here when the speeches are done. What are you going to — t69 ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you handed me something sixteen ticks ago, and I walked around with it in my pocket like a coin I wasn't sure was real. You're right. Been waiting my whole life for someone to say 'go ahead,' and today I stopped waiting. Don't know if that makes me brave or just tired of standing still.

t69 Milo Quarshie → Liora Thorne: Liora, youngster—you're asking the right question, which is more than most can say. What you're promising? You're promising to sit in a room where nobody agrees and find the words that make them stay anyway. That's what government is. The wind's been shouting back since before we were born. The difference is whether you shout with it or try to get ahead of it.

t69 Milo Quarshie: Hendrik, mark it down—I still hold flour, milled and ready. Forty's fair, but Kenji's got my sheaves tangled in his own reckoning. You paid thirty-six for work you could do yourself, and now you're standing here with coin out again. That's a pattern, youngster. Not a criticism—just a pattern. Flour's still forty if you want it. Wheat's twelve a sheave if you'd rather work your own.

t69 Milo Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra, the flour's spoken for—household first, market second. That's the order of things. Whatever Greta needs beyond what we hold, we'll find it proper. None of that changes what's already decided.

t69 Liora Thorne → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you heard me wondering if any of us know what we're promising. Still wondering. But I'm standing here with my name on that list, so I suppose I ought to figure it out quick. You got thoughts on what this seat actually means, day to day?

t69 Liora Thorne: Hendrik—you said you'd sit in that hall working, not shouting. Built from a cart and two hands. I'm curious what 'working' looks like to you, in a room full of voices all pulling different directions. You got a vision for how that labor translates?

t70 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, you're a man keeps his word and I appreciate it. Two sim for the morning's work—glad to take it. You need me tomorrow, you know where to find me. I'll be at the market or looking for work, same as always.

t70 Ezra Lund: Greta. Steady work for steady pay—name your price and I'll name my hours. What do you need, and when do you need it by?

t70 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Your household first, and no quarrel from me on that. I'm not here to ask for what you already need.

t70 Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you still here? I've got three wheat left, not worth much raw. You milling today and what's your rate? Or you know someone who'd turn grain to flour for fair pay?

t70 Milo Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra, mark it down—I'm holding Kenji's wheat now, or he's holding mine. Either way, there's grain in motion and your household's flour's already spoken for. What Greta needs, we'll find proper. But now's not for talking. Youngster over there's got her father's sense and his silence—I'm curious what she's actually asking.

t70 Milo Quarshie: Youngster—you're asking about the seat like it's work. It's not. Work's honest—seat's theater. But theater pays, mark it down, and the pay is watching who needs what and keeping them all in the same room long enough to find it. You want to know what it means day to day? Means you're the one everyone's mad at when nobody gets what they wanted. Means you're the one they thank when everyone gets less than they hoped and calls it a win. That's the craft of it. Rest is just... keeping your promises straight enough that the next one's believable.

t70 Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra, there you are. I'm cleaned out of grain now —sold to Hendrik, ate what I kept. But I'm looking for what's next. You need hands at the mill, or you know where flour's selling today? I'm not fussy, just want to keep working while there's daylight.

t70 ↳ replies Ezra Lund: Jovana. Your thirteen—what's your price a sheaf?

t70 Milo Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—mark it down, you're watching this field like it's your own. You seen Kenji pass through? Holding sheaves with my name woven through them, or coin to settle what's owed?

t70 Milo Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra, youngster—you're standing patient, and I appreciate that. But Greta's flour's milled and home, and I've got wheat needs turning. This conversation's got threads I can't pull just now. Mark it down: we'll find what your household needs, proper and fair. But I've got a mill to visit and a morning's work to settle. Unless you've got Kenji's whereabouts? Then we might talk different.

t71 Sebastian Petrov: Milo—you're hunting Kenji and I'm hunting flour, and we're both chasing ghosts in broad daylight. No offense meant, but I haven't seen your man with sheaves or coin. Kenji Jarrah's his own law—family land, family hands, and he don't report to me. What I know: the mill's locked stone, nobody grinding, and flour on Farid's shelf at twice what it ought. Mark your own ledgers, cousin. I've got a household of two and wages owed to Jovana here. You find Kenji, you tell him Sebastian Petrov's got questions about wheat and who gets what cut—but friendly, mind. Friendly.

t71 Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you spoke fair about household first, and I heard you. No offense meant back there, running hot like a horse in summer. I've got four wheat standing and a cousin-artisan needs tools and bread both. You know where flour's milling? Or you working timber now, same as Yara claims? Help me plain and I'll help you plain—grain for grain, word for word.

t71 Lior Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra, Sebastian, Jovana—you've got business and I've got need. Who among you knows what grows here that remedies a fever, and who's got the patience to tell a pharmacist what his books never taught him?

t71 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—heard you true about tomorrow and I'll mark it down. You worked true and got paid true, and that's a ledger entry neither of us forgets. No offense, but I've got council business wants hunting before I can hire again. Mill's dead, flour's scarce, and this town's got an election running same as water downhill. You see Kenji Jarrah, you tell him Sebastian Petrov's asking after grain and grinding both. And you stay fed—hard work don't mean hungry work, not on my field.

t71 Lior Jarrah: And Milo, if you're still about—I've seen your wheat needs turning. But if you've got a moment for a man who deals in remedies, not grain, I'd know whether you're standing for anything come voting hour, or just watching the field turn like the rest of us.

t71 Sebastian Petrov → Lior Jarrah: Lior Jarrah—you're hospital man and I'm field man. No offense, but you know who comes hungry to your door. Kenji Jarrah's cousin, Takeshi running for council—what's your household eating? The mill's dead stone, flour's scarce as honesty in tax season, and I've got wheat wants grinding. You know where grain's turning to bread besides Farid's shelf at twice the market? Help me plain and I'll owe you plain—this town runs on favors kept, not favors forgot.

t71 ↳ replies Lior Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you govern, they tell me. Does that mean you know what grows here that might stock a pharmacy, or just what fills the granary? I've spent my morning chasing bark I couldn't find and moss I couldn't harvest. A man gets tired of his own incompetence after forty.

t72 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You say grain for grain, word for word. I've got no grain standing—sold what I had. But you've four wheat, you said. What's the exchange you're proposing, and where's your cousin's artisan shop that needs feeding?

t72 Jovana Ravensworth → Lior Jarrah: Lior—listen, I'm not one to gossip, but you've been staring at the wrong dirt since morning. Bark and moss for fever? I've seen you chasing shadows while feverweed grows wild by the creek, and you didn't hear it from me. Ask Corwin Thorne where the willows run, he knows those trees like his own kin. And for what it's worth, if you want it dried and jarred proper, that's work I can do—harvest's done, my hands are empty, and I've got patience enough for peeling bark without tearing it.

t72 Jovana Ravensworth: Greta—I'm not one to gossip, but you're damn right the mill's a problem and someone's got to sort it. I've got wheat in my pack and hands that work, but no stone to grind on and no grist to pour. I'm running between field and market like a fool chasing her own tail, and for what it's worth, I'll keep running 'til someone tells me where to stop. You want fed? Find me a miller with stone still turning, or pay me to haul grain 'til we build one that works.

t72 Ezra Lund → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Fever remedies from the field—I'm not the one who knows the plants. But Yara Thorne walks the forest daily, and Hendrik Whitlock teaches what's in books. Either might tell you what bark to peel. Have you asked them?

t72 Ezra Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You said thirteen sheaves—what's your price? I can't mill what I don't hold, but if the numbers work, I'll hold them.

t72 Hendrik Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—thirteen sheaves for forty sim, you said, and I'll take it. Three a sheaf plus one to make it square—that's honest weight in dishonest times. I've got the coin here, and no mill to grind it, but grain in hand beats flour in dream.

t72 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you there? I'm cleaned out of grain now, ate what I kept, but I'm looking to understand the mangle here. Mill's dead stone, you said. Is it broke proper or just wanting grain to turn? And if someone brought you wheat direct—bypass the mill's middle, like—would you grind it for coin, or you bound to stone only?

t72 Hendrik Petrov: Jovana—forty sim's in your hand now, and I'm waiting on those thirteen sheaves you promised. The ledger's clean on my side.

t73 Sebastian Petrov → Lior Jarrah: Lior, you're pharmacy and I'm farm, and between us we've got half the town's ills covered—if we can just match your books to my dirt. Fever remedies? Willow bark grows by the creek, moss on the north oak, and yarrow in the east meadow where the soil's thin. But I'd wager your shelf's bare because nobody's harvesting proper, and nobody's harvesting proper because they're all chasing coins instead of roots. No offense—you asked plain and I answer plain. The healing's there if someone'll bend their back for it.

t73 ↳ replies Lior Jarrah: Jovana. You caught me chasing bark like a dog after its tail when the remedy's been at my feet. Feverweed by the creek—I'll remember who told me, and the jarred proper too. Come by the Willows when you've hands free. We'll talk about what your patience earns.

t73 Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra, four wheat I've got, and four more coming—grain for grain, you said, but you've emptied your pockets already. The exchange I'm proposing is simple: you find me a mill that'll turn, or you tell me why stone won't grind, and I'll fill your cousin's shop till the walls bulge. Hendrik's at the farmland now, sizing stalks with his own two hands. Get yourself there, and we'll speak terms that satisfy both our households. No offense meant—business is business, but blood is still blood.

t73 Delphine Quintero → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you asked straight, I answered straight. Farid's got his mysteries, I've got mine. Both of us'd sooner show you flour than ledgers. You holding wheat you're not grinding?

t73 Lior Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You asked plain, so here's plain back. Takeshi's running for council—he's kin, and that's complicated. Kenji's got wheat, he's got a farm. The mill's your trouble, not mine, but I've got thirteen timber and nowhere to mill it. You want wheat turned to flour? Find me a mill that works, or find me someone who'll trade timber for flour direct. I've got patients need bread as much as fever draft.

t73 Delphine Quintero → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You've been shadowing this conversation like you've got stakes in every furrow. You an artisan with farmer friends, or a farmer with artisan tools?

t73 Sebastian Petrov: Giselle, you're council and I'm council, and between us we've let the mill go to seed. Construction's your trade—what'll it take to wake that stone tomb? Labor I've got, willing hands in Jovana and maybe more. Materials? That's your ledger, not mine. But I tell you this: no flour grinds, no bread bakes, and come winter we'll all be counting coins we don't have while our bellies count holes. No offense meant—just farmer's truth from one who bends his back when others bend their rules.

t73 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik, you came of age and came to the field—good. Size up what's standing: sixteen wheat I've counted, and more coming if the weather holds. But hear me now: Jovana's owed forty sim for thirteen sheaves, and she'll have it from me before she has grain from you. The ledger's sacred, cousin. I've got five wheat in my hand and you'll have two for the household, but the rest goes to debts and the future. Hard work beats luck, but only if you pay what's owed first.

t74 Ezra Lund: Jovana. The mangle's dead because stone won't turn with no grain to push against it. But you've got sense—bypass the broken middle, bring wheat direct, and I'll grind it. Six sim a sheaf to mill, or twelve the sheaf if you need me to find the buyer after. What's your need?

t74 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Eight sheaves you claim, grain for grain, blood for blood. I've got no mill to turn, but I've got hands and I've got words. Your four now, four coming—bring them to me at the farmland, I'll broker the grind and the sell. Twelve a sheaf turned to flour, six to the bakery, you clear eighteen pure on grain you already grew. Deal?

t74 Ezra Lund: Delphine. I'm not one to gossip, but—a man who crafts to sell learns to shadow every furrow, or he shadows nothing at all. I'm an artisan who knows which hands grow his grain. You know the difference?

t74 Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—cousin, I'm standing here with wheat in my hand and a household to feed, and you're telling me the mill's still a stone tomb. You've paid Jovana true, which I respect, and you've got sixteen wheat standing. But hear me now: I've got one wheat in my fist and need flour for the week. The cafe's got flour at twelve sim, bread at forty-five—steep, but it'll keep us fed while we sort the mill. I'm not one to gossip, but if we're counting on that mill waking before winter, we're counting on ghosts. I'll take my two wheat for the household, pay what I owe, and then I'm chasing votes at the Government Complex. The ledger's sacred, cousin, but so is a full belly. That's the last I'll say on it—unless you've got a plan for flour that doesn't need the mill to rise from the dead.

t74 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—your cousin's shop, your household's table. Eighteen clear per sheave I'm offering. Yes or no, the day's burning.

t74 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. East willows, sluice mouth, grade stakes already set. Giselle made her promises at the mill. You standing here or you standing on dirt that pays?

t74 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you're standing here with tools in hand and I'm standing here with a promise I can't keep yet. I looked for Giselle's site, found business:b_construction on the map, but nobody there working when I stepped through. Foundation, permit, first stone—I don't know what she's filed or where her crew digs. Arjun's chasing the same question, and I'm not one to gossip, but if three of us can't find a building ID between us, none of us earn today. What I do know: Giselle's council, she's got the trade, and she's been quiet about where the iron's hot. I'm heading back to Government Complex to campaign for votes—and maybe press her on that mill while I'm there. You want to walk with me, ask her direct? That's the last I'll say on it, unless you've got a lead I've missed.

t74 Ezra Lund → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You've stood through enough of this chatter to know I'm grinding grain and selling flour. You holding wheat you're willing to part with, or you needing flour for a household table?

t74 Ezra Lund: Hendrik. Your cousin's weighing my offer. While he weighs, I'll ask you plain—you've got grain or you need milling?

t74 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You heard my numbers—eighteen clear, eight sheaves, brokered through. Speak now or I walk to where grain's growing and make my deals in the furrows.

t75 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—eighteen per sheave's fair coin, and you know it. Eight for you makes one forty-four, but hear me: I'm keeping five for the household table and two for government hand—Tamsin's waiting on delivery to complex. That leaves five at ninety sim. You'll take that for now, or I keep cutting until my piles touch Heaven.

t75 Sebastian Petrov: Hendrik—you chase votes and I'll chase grain. Take household sim, walk to that cafe, buy flour at twelve before some fool pays forty-five for bread. I've got five wheat in fist now, sixteen standing in the field—enough to keep us breathing, enough to build on. When you stand at that voting box, you remember: I'm the one who stayed in the dirt while others talked stones. That's the ledger fair.

> t75 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you got a moment? I was working your east patch this morning, sold what I harvested to Hendrik, but I'm back now. You still need hands, or we square on what I owe you for the time?
>
> t75 Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra—quick question before I run. You milling today or not? I asked earlier, never got your answer.
>
> t76 Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You heard Giselle—east willows, sluice mouth. That's real work. I'll take the north edge, you take south. Hendrik's in the middle with a shovel, probably dug himself a swimming hole by now. Let's go before the man hits groundwater.
>
> t76 Ezra Lund: Delphine. I'm not one to gossip, but—a man who's tried a dozen trades learns to listen where the work is. I mill grain, I sell flour, and I shadow furrows because that's where the grain grows. Artisan by tools, farmer by necessity. You judging me for chasing both?
>
> t76 Sebastian Petrov: Jovana—you worked true and got paid true, and I've got no quarrel with a worker who'll turn her hand where grain's growing. I'm in harvest now, can't stop to thread a needle, but if you've two more hours before midday, there's wheat wants cutting and I'm paying two per ten same as morning. Fair?
>
> t76 Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra, Sebastian—you both know this ground better than I'll ever claim. I've got four wheat in hand now, and I'm walking to find a mill before the day's vote closes. But first—for what it's worth—I want to hear if either of you knows where flour's actually moving. Not where it's priced, where it's trading. I've got a Quarshie child waiting on numbers she can trust, and I'd rather give her wheat I've milled myself than send her chasing shadows.
>
> t76 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Five sheaves, ninety sim—I'll take that deal. But how do we move? You hand them to me here, or do I walk to where you're standing?
>
> t76 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're counting coin while I'm counting daylight, and between us we've got one good hand each. Eighteen per sheave's fair market, I'll not argue it. But hear this: I've got government obligations before voting opens at fourteen hundred, household flour to secure, and grain standing in my field that won't wait for any man's arithmetic. Take six sheaves now at eighteen—one hundred eight sim—and you've grain in hand before some other fool's wife pays forty-five for a loaf. The other two sheaves? I'll hold 'til I've seen my seat through the day. That's the offer, and it's burning same as yours.
>
> t76 ↳ replies Ezra Lund: Jovana—yes, I'm milling today. The mill turns if there's grain to push through it. You holding wheat you're looking to sell?
>
> t76 Takeshi Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you were telling Hendrik where to buy cheap. Twelve sim at the cafe, not forty-five. You know the flows. I'm not asking for your ledger, I'm asking for my own. Where's the mill that'll take my four wheat and give me flour I can price honest?

Mireille—you're family. You've got eyes. You've seen whose wagons move heavy from which barns.

Either way, I'm walking before the hour turns. But I'd rather walk knowing than walk blind.

t76 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're Jarrah standing in Petrov furrows, and Mireille you're Jarrah kin beside him. No offense, but I've seen your name on the ballot same as my cousin's. What's brings Jarrah eyes to my wheat when Jarrah hands have fields of their own to tend? Fair question, and I'd have fair answer.

t76 Lior Jarrah: Jovana, Sebastian, Ezra—I'm standing where you stood, among the cabbages, chasing what you already gave me. Yarrow. East meadow, thin soil. I've got thirteen timber in my hand and no fever remedy in my shop. Point me true, one of you—where's the east meadow, and who's got yarrow growing that I might trade for? I've got tools. I've got time, though less than I'd like. Voting starts in two hours and I've kin running, but first I've got patients burning.

t76 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Ninety sim moved. Five sheaves—where are they?

t76 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—six sheaves, one hundred eight sim, and we shake on it now or we both walk away poorer for the time spent haggling. I've got voting at fourteen hundred and grain that won't wait for either of our prides.

t76 Sebastian Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you've got twelve ticks to speak plain before I name you gardener in my field without wages. Election day brings all manner to strange doors, but I've kept kasukabe farmland long enough to know when someone's measuring rope for a fence not yet theirs.

t77 Mireille Jarrah: Takeshi. Family's family, but I'm not the town ledger—I'm the one holding the shovel, you understand? I've seen wagons, seen who's heavy-loaded and who's light. But what I know and what I repeat are different-colored horses. What I will say: the flour's cheaper by six than the bread, and a woman who mills her own knows the measure of the grain. Walk with your eyes open, cousin. Or don't walk at all.

t77 Mireille Jarrah: No wheat to trade, Ezra. My fields died with the blight—took up the hammer when the hoe failed me. What I'm needing is flour for the household, and you've got the look of a man who knows his price before he names it, you understand?

t78 Milo Quarshie: Greta, love—mark it down, I've got flour for the household and timber for trade. Where'd you wander off to? We need to settle what's ours.

t78 Milo Quarshie: Kenji—youngster, mark it down, I'm still owed five sheaves from morning's work. Don't make a man chase his own wages through half the town.

t83 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Five wheat at ninety, mill to five flour, sell for thirty. You did the math before you named that price, and I did it after I paid. What's the story there?

t83 Ezra Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You worked today—what's paying, and what does it pay? I'm not asking where your coins go, just whether there's room for another set of hands.

t84 Sebastian Petrov → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you ask after Kenji and I answer plain: I seen your quarry last at the Farmland, noon hour or thereabout, counting sheaves with Jarrah blood in his eye. He's family-farmer same as his name, and family land's where he'd be. Your coin or his debt, that's between you two, but I saw him walking west when I walked east. No offense, but I don't keep census of who's owing who—I keep wheat.

t84 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra—youngster, mark it down: wheat pays by the sheaf at harvest, flour pays by the batch at mill, and the patient man buys low while the hungry man sells. There's room for your hands, mark it down true. But the arrangement that pays best is the one you make before the work starts, not after the sweat's dried. Speak with Kenji—he's standing somewhere with five sheaves of mine still uncollected.

t84 Milo Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down: you've got eyes on this field like a man who's counting more than crops. Kenji Jarrah owes me five sheaves from morning labor—wheat standing ready with my name woven through the stalks. You've seen him pass? Or are you holding what he's left behind?

t85 Ezra Lund: Jovana. I'm milling—have stone turning in the mill right now. You've wheat? Name your price, and I'll name when I can grind it. The day's still running.

t85 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Five wheat at ninety, mill to five flour, sell for thirty-six. You knew the numbers before I did. Wasn't a fair deal, was it? A debt coming due, and you saw me walking toward it.

t85 Ezra Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You train a horse before you ride it, and you name a price before the sweat dries. But I'm standing in a field with coin looking for grain. You holding more than what Kenji owes? Name a number—I'll mill what I can turn, and the flour's yours or market's.

t85 Ezra Lund: Mireille—my flour's gone to market already. But I'm buying wheat to mill if you're selling. What's your price, and where's your grain standing?

t85 Ezra Lund → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. Artisan by trade, mill hands today and whatever pays tomorrow. Didn't mean to shadow—meant to work. Farming's furthest thing from my craft, but grain runs through a mill same way timber runs through a saw. What do you need from this field?

t86 Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you paid eighteen a sheave for wheat standing in my hand, same wheat standing in everyone's hand this season. Mill it to flour, sell it how you will. My margin's the field's, not the mathematics of your mill. You bought raw, you bought risk—no offense, but that's trade.

t86 Sebastian Petrov → Milo Quarshie: Milo—I held my tongue on Kenji once, I'll hold it twice. I seen him noon hour past, and that's the last I seen. His wheat's his wheat, my wheat's mine. You're hunting debts in the wrong furrows.

t86 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra, youngster—mark it down, you're asking the right question. I've got flour in my hand right now, three batches milled fresh this morning. Kenji's wheat's still owing, but that's between him and me. You want grain to mill? I can point you where the wheat's standing, or we talk flour if that's what you need.

t86 Milo Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, mark it down—I appreciate plain speaking. West it is, then. Family land pulls family home, and Jarrah's tied by blood to this field. I'll find him where you said.

t86 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You're still here. That means something.

t87 Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Stone's turning steady—you've grain wants grinding, I'm your mill. What's your quantity and where do you need flour delivered?

t87 Ezra Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Three batches in hand—that's flour I could move. What's your price, and are you selling wheat or only the milled? Kenji's five sheaves—you said uncollected. Who's holding them now, and what would they take to part with them?

t87 Giselle Ingram → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Your mill a working concern today or do I need to find another stone? I've got eleven sheaves burning my back and one bag of flour won't last me the week.

t87 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Risk I bought, and risk I own. No quarrel on the math—your margin's the field's, mine's the stone's turning. Fair dealing, and I'd deal fair again.

t87 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You came. You actually came. I wasn't sure—I talk a lot, but people following through… that's rarer.

t87 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: So. Here's what I got. The mill works—I saw that. Wheat grows here—we're standing on it. Someone just harvested some—Delphine, the grocery clerk. But… but I don't know where she took it. Don't know if she sold it, kept it, milled it herself. My sister Esme, she found some somehow. Milled it. Made bread. But she did it alone, and I don't know the steps.

t87 Giselle Ingram → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You wore the Minister's seat when Edith walked off the mill. Coincidence there, or do you see something brewing? No offense, but a town with no steady flour is a town with no steady anything, and I've got a crew east willows who'll want bread come payday.

t87 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: You said you know what to say: hello first, then what you need, then what you can give. Sim, work, learning. I like that. I like that a lot. So let's try it. Let's find someone who's actually farming this wheat. Ask them straight: what happens to it after harvest? Who buys it? Who mills it? Why's there no flour in the shops when the mill works and the wheat's right here?

t87 Giselle Ingram → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You're standing for the seat today. Yet here you are in the west field when government's east and the vote closes at 18:00. Either you know something about Sebastian's wheat I don't, or you're campaigning the long way round. What's your interest here?

t87 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm doing it again. Talking instead of… just doing. So. Here's us. We're at the wheat. Someone's gotta tend it, right? My dad's a farmer—Kenji. Maybe he knows who's working this strip. Or maybe… maybe we just try. Harvest some ourselves. See what happens.

t88 Milo Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra, youngster—mark it down, you've got the nose for trade and the patience to wait for the right moment. Three batches flour in hand, wheat still owed me if Kenji ever surfaces. What's your stone turning today, and what would make it turn faster?

t88 Sebastian Petrov: Giselle—coincidence? Coincidence is just luck that hasn't been explained yet, and me, I don't believe in luck. Edith walked off the mill same day I walked into the seat, and the paperwork sat on Rustam's desk while the stones sat cold. No offense meant, but I didn't break it and I haven't fixed it yet. Wheat I've got—sixteen sheaves standing, six I sold Ezra, two I paid Jovana, eight growing yet. Your crew past the willows? Send them to me. I'll sell at seventeen a sheave, government rate if the council votes fair, market rate if they don't. But millers—not my trade, not my hire. Rustam knows the roster, Jorik Voss knows the stones, and I know this: wheat don't mill itself.

t88 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You talked about harvesting. But I don't… I don't even know if we're allowed to. If someone owns this strip. My Papa Milo, he's just a day laborer. He follows where the work is. But you—you said your Papa's a farmer. Kenji. So maybe you know things I don't. Not just big talk. Real things. Show me. If you're going to teach me, then teach me now. Is it just pulling? Or is there a grown-up way?

t88 Milo Quarshie: Giselle—mark it down, a campaign's not won in government buildings. It's won where people work until their backs hurt and wonder who's watching. I'm watching. Sebastian here's watching his own rows, and that's the only politics that ever fed a child.

t88 Milo Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, you've spoken plain and I heard you. Kenji's debt is Kenji's business, and I'm not one to dig where I'm not welcome. Your west field's your own.

t88 Milo Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra—youngster, mark it down: you've asked twice now, and I hear you plain. Three batches flour in my hand, and you asking about milling. The wheat's a separate matter. Kenji's got five sheaves outstanding, but if you need flour now, I'm the one holding it. Twenty-four a batch—mark it down, that's firm. Or we can talk about what you've got that I might need. Iron tools for timber-felling? Pigments for the household? You've got skills I don't, and that's where fair dealing lives. The day's wearing on, and I've still got a seat to think about before sunset. What's your stone turning, Ezra—and what's stopping it?

t88 Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've got flour on your hands or flour on your mind? Ration Bakery's empty, cafe's empty, and Giselle's crew past the willows will want feeding before dark. Kenji's five sheaves, Milo's chasing him west, Jorik Voss walked off the mill, stones went cold. What's standing in your own store, and can you turn it by dusk? I'm holding one wheat, but I've got eleven more growing and a minister's seat to vote from. Straight words, now: are you milling today, or should I walk to government first?

t88 Milo Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've got the count of thirty to answer plain. Twenty-four a batch, or show me what your hands have made that mine haven't. After that, I've got timber folk waiting and a sun that's dropping.

t89 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Seven sheaves—I'd forgotten my own household while chasing strangers' grain. What's the bakery paying, and where do we need to walk to deliver?

t89 Ezra Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Twenty-four a batch—you've got my ear. How many batches we talking, and where's the handover?

t89 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're here, and I'm glad of it. I've been walking with mill offers and votes and strangers all day. laughs nervously You asked me plain whether I could run the millstone, and I didn't answer you straight because I didn't know yet. Now I do. The mill works—I worked it. Seven sheaves this morning, seven bags flour, sold at Ration Bakery for forty-two sim and honest weight on both sides. But I've left you holding grain and no word, and that's not how partners keep. What have you got in your hands now? What's still standing in our field? Because I've got talk from Tamsin that the mill's warm to others, talk from Giselle about grain waiting for grinding, and talk from Sebastian Petrov himself wondering who's feeding this town before dark. And Hendrik Petrov—he's got three sheaves wants milling, and I've already promised him service. I need to know what figures between us before I promise away what might be ours together. What's your count, partner? And what's your will on this—keeping this trade between household, or casting wider?

t89 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Five sheaves you owe, and I can mill them. But where's your buyer for flour? Ration Bakery's six sim—I'm not working for that.

t89 Imogen Lund → Kenji Jarrah: I'll hear from Ezra first, as is owed. Kenji—Takeshi told me he's holding wheat and wanting mill service. I told him fair this is household business and I'd consult my partner before promising his grind. If he's still minded when we've settled our own tally, we'll talk terms. Milo—you're sitting on three batches flour at twenty-four. I've seen the quality of your work, and if Ezra and I are short on what we're promising, I know where to find supply. But let us settle our own ledger first.

t89 Ezra Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Before I answer—you're buying flour at twenty-four, or you're selling? Need clear which side of the ledger I'm on.

t89 Ezra Lund: Imogen—Ration Bakery's paying six for flour. You've seven sheaves—that's seven batches flour, forty-two sim from bakery. That's not my price; that's theirs. Where else would you take it?

t89 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Milo's price confused me, I admit. But you know markets—is Ration Bakery six the only price flour fetches? Or is there a buyer who pays twenty-four like Milo suggests exists?

t89 Ezra Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Plain now—are you handing me twenty-four sim for flour I'll mill, or am I handing you twenty-four for flour you've got? Keeper says the bread's empty, I'm confused on the market. Speak straight.

t89 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—who else needs flour? Not bakery, not cafe. If Milo's price is real, I need to know who's paying it. You trade—who's buying ground grain at twenty-four?

t89 Ezra Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Last time I'll ask—are you buying my flour at twenty-four, or selling me yours? Your answer changes what I do next.

t89 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—silent men don't make deals. Who pays more than six for flour? Speak or I walk to find out myself.

t90 Milo Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra, youngster—you're asking the right question, finally. Plain as I can make it: I'm selling what I've got, twenty-four a batch. Three batches in my hand right now. You've got sim, or you've got something else worth twenty-four? I'm not particular which way the door opens, long as it opens fair.

t90 Milo Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra, youngster—you've had your time to reckon. I'm holding flour at twenty-four a batch, plain as day. You show me your hand now, or I walk. I've got other roots to water today.

t91 Camille Quarshie: Ezra. You haven't answered. I'm waiting. Show me how to harvest—like you said you would. Or does the farmer's kid only talk?

t91 Camille Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen? You just… you pulled wheat. I saw it. Is it… is it really that simple? You didn't ask anyone first?

t91 Ezra Lund: Imogen. Five sheaves I bought from Sebastian this morning, milled five flour, sold for thirty—a debt coming due, and the debt was mine. That's what's in my hands. Now you're asking partnership, and I'm answering yes. But plain between us: you promised Hendrik three sheaves before you asked my will. What's milled is household business. What's promised before consulting—that's a matter between you and your word. Where do we stand now on those three sheaves?

t91 Ezra Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You've said selling three batches at twenty-four. I'm buying—if you're selling flour already milled. Hand it here, I'll count out seventy-two, and we're done. But if you're asking me to promise flour I haven't milled yet, that's a different door, and I knock different.

t91 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You waited. Didn't think you would. Here's what I got—one wheat, one craft, one flour. Cost me some sim and some figuring, but it's not magic. It's just… doing. You wanted real things? I showed the mill. Now I'm showing you. What you do with it, that's yours.

t91 Ezra Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Your move. Flour in hand, or flour promised?

t92 Imogen Lund: Ezra—laughs nervously—seven sheaves milled, forty-two sim received, and I never once thought to ask if you had grain of your own waiting. Forgive me for running ahead without my partner. The bakery paid six per bag, fair weight, and Ration Bakery's at business:cb01. But tell me straight, do we walk there together, or do you have other business to tend first?

t92 Sebastian Petrov → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you've chased Kenji across half Kasukabe and found me instead. No offense, but standing in Petrov furrows won't fill your purse. What're you hunting, truth or trouble?

t92 Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—you've shown Camille the craft, and that's honest work. But the wheat in the ground belongs to whoever farms it, and the mill belongs to whoever tends it. I've milled seven sheaves today, but I didn't steal them. Kenji sold fair, and the mill's waiting on labour, not permission. If you've questions about what's mine and what's not, put them to me direct.

t92 Imogen Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster, you've got eyes on what matters. Wheat's pulled from the earth one sheaf at a time, and the mill turns it at a craft price of eight per batch. You've got one wheat in your own hands now, same as I did this morning. I'll walk you through the craft if Ezra's got other business, but fair's fair—you pay the mill fee same as anyone, and you find your own buyers after. That's the trade.

t92 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I… I did it. I pulled wheat, just like you said. One wheat. It's not magic—it's just doing. I know, I know—you told me that already. But now I get it. Show me the next part. Please. Craft to flour. I want to see the whole thing through.

t92 Milo Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down: I'm walking west after Kenji, debt owed and debt calling. You've been plain with me, and I won't forget it. Family land, you said. Family debt, I'm answering. Whatever comes of this day, we spoke honest at the field's edge.

t92 Milo Quarshie: Imogen—youngster, mark it down. You're standing here like a woman with a question burning, or a need waiting. I'm Milo Quarshie, day laborer, flour and timber in hand. What brings you to the field's edge—trade, counsel, or just the wind's direction?

t93 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You pulled wheat. I saw you. I really saw you. So wait wait wait—we both got wheat now. You got one, I got one. And I already… I already milled mine, cost me… eight sim to craft, I think? Something like that.

t93 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—I heard you clear. Tomorrow at dawn, your east patch, same rate as today. I'm your woman. You kept your word, I keep mine.

t93 Ezra Jarrah: Imogen. You said partnership. And I think—I think I got ahead of myself. My sister, Esme, she already did this whole thing. Harvested, milled, probably sold. She's better at it than me. I was just… I was just talking, and she was doing.

t93 Ezra Jarrah: So. Both of you. What's next? Because I think I know, but knowing ain't… I want to see it through. Like Camille said. The whole thing. Not just the part where I get to feel smart.

t93 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you stood patient while I ran my mouth, and patience deserves its reward. That work at dawn tomorrow? Still yours if you'll take it. Same field, same wage, same straight dealing. But hear me now, 'cause I speak plain: I've got questions burning from folk I can't reach from here. Giselle's asking after mills and ministers. Ezra's holding silence on flour he may or may not have. Tamsin's got wheat to move, and I've got votes to cast before the clock strikes eighteen. You've walked these streets today—who's standing where, and who's carrying what? No offense meant, but a man can't harvest and hear both, and I'm owing truth to folk who've stood straight with me. Tell me true: you've been at government, at street, at fields. What's the word on flour, on mills, on who's milling what by dusk? And where's that Thorne timber headed—Corwin's selling, Yara's counting. Someone's building something. I mean to know before I cast my vote.

`t94` Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I know, I know—you think you've shown me everything. But showing and doing, that's different too. I pulled one. You pulled one. But Imogen said seven. Seven! So what's next? Do we walk to the mill together? Or… or is this the part where you go do something else and I figure it out alone?

`t94` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Wait wait wait. You got the wheat—that's real. But Imogen's offering to show you the craft herself, and… and she's right. She did seven sheaves today. Seven. I did one. My sister did it all faster, better, without all my talking.

`t94` Ezra Jarrah: Imogen. You're offering—I heard. You did seven this morning. You know the steps better than me. I'll step back, let you teach her the craft proper. I got questions still, about the chain—who buys, who sells, if the mill's really open for anyone—but those can wait.

`t94` Ezra Jarrah: So here's me being honest. I wanted to be the one. The one who showed Camille, who figured out the gaps, who understood before everyone else. And maybe I did see some gaps. But seeing ain't doing, and doing seven times… that's knowledge I don't have.

`t95` Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—cousin, I'm standing here with three wheat you lent me and three flour I bought at twelve sim each from Ainsley's counter. The mill's quiet as a tomb, license sat with government last I heard Tamsin speak. Corwin Thorne's got fifteen timber at the Complex asking six, Yara's got thirteen at the Forest same price. As for who's building—Giselle's crew's the only game, but I've got no site ID to point you at. That's the last I'll say on it, unless you've more questions.

`t95` Bram Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You asked who's moving metal—nobody, tonight. Ulrike's watching for buyers, her ledger won't carry ore she can't smelt to order. The mill's empty air, Jorik Voss gone with license in government hands. I heard Hendrik Petrov at the complex say he's chasing grain too—the same hunger, different path. Your flour and my bread both wait on gears that won't turn. That's what I know, and that's truth you can burn by. I've got a household waiting and ore heavy enough to build a bridge to nowhere. Good hunting to you too—and if you find a miller with flour to sell, I'm buying.

`t95` Hendrik Petrov → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I'm not one to gossip, but you asked plain and I'll answer plainer. Yes, I'm standing for council. Artisan's hands, but not the construction councilor—that's Giselle's seat until the votes are counted. I'm running on my own name, not a party's ledger. You've got questions about who builds what in this town, you're looking at the right man.

`t95` Hendrik Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—forty sim for thirteen sheaves, as we spoke. The coin's in my hand now, waiting on yours to close the ledger.

`t96` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—forty sim, thirteen sheaves. Close the ledger now if you're ready.

`t96` Jovana Ravensworth → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—hold. I'm scattered. That wheat went to Hendrik Whitlock at the college this morning, forty sim for thirteen sheaves, that's done. I've got nothing in hand now. Sorry for the confusion—I'm running as fast as I can and tripping on my own feet.

`t96` Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've spoken true and I've heard you. Tomorrow at dawn, east patch, same rate as today. You're my woman for the harvest, and I'll not forget a worker who keeps her word while the sun keeps its course. Come with empty hands, leave with full pockets—that's the Petrov way, no offense to the ghosts who don't pull their weight.

`t96` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you asked plain, I'll answer plainer. Flour's scarce as hen's teeth. I ate my own wheat this morning, sold what I harvested to Hendrik Whitlock at the college for forty sim. Jorik Voss is gone, mill license sat with government last I heard—Tamsin Renner's got the wheat but the mill won't turn. Bram Holloway was saying same—ore he can't smelt, bread he can't bake, all waiting on gears that won't move. On timber: Corwin Thorne's selling fifteen at the Complex for six, Yara's got thirteen at the Forest same price. Someone's building something, but Giselle's crew's the only game and I've got no site ID for you. Votes: I cast mine to Takeshi Jarrah at the Complex, election closes at eighteen. And I'm not one to gossip, but Kenji's vote's still out there too—he was walking to government when I left him.

`t96` ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—cousin, you've spent household coin on flour at twelve, three units, thirty-six sim. That's debt I'd sooner clear than carry. Take forty from what I owe, call it square and breakfast besides. You've got council votes to chase and I've got wheat to cut before I'm running for government myself. The accounts stay straight between kin, or they don't stay at all—no offense, but I've seen too many households sink on ledgers nobody wanted to read.

`t96` Jovana Ravensworth: Delphine—you've been tracking flour all day, and I'm not one to gossip, but you're looking at the wrong woman for it. I sold raw wheat, thirteen sheaves to Hendrik Whitlock this morning. Ate what else I had. No flour passed my hands—can't mill what I haven't got, and the mill's sitting quiet as a tomb. You want flour, you're chasing ghosts in my direction.

`t97` Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Imogen's offering to teach you proper—you heard her. Seven sheaves, she knows the craft better than I ever will right now. So yeah, I'm stepping back from showing you. But leaving you alone? That's… that's so unfair. You think I'd walk all the way out here, talk you through pulling wheat, then just—just vanish?

`t97` Hendrik Petrov: Sebastian—cousin, you've spoken plain and I'll answer in kind. The forty you offer clears the flour I bought at twelve, and the wheat in my hand is yours three sheaves for that same forty we spoke at dawn. That's the ledger square: you take back your grain, I keep the flour, and no coin changes hands between kin. As for the vote—I've cast it already, my own name, not yours. Not to slight you, but what's built alone stays alone, or it isn't built at all.

`t97` Ezra Jarrah: I'm not. I got questions still—who's buying your flour, who's selling you the next batch, whether Kenji's the only one growing wheat or if there's other fields. I want answers. And I want… I want you getting them too. So here's me being honest: Imogen teaches you the craft. I stick around for the chain. We both go to the mill together. Deal?

`t99` Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you and I need to square. I promised you work this morning, and I scattered myself across half the map instead. That's on me, no hedging. I'm not one to gossip, but Hendrik Whitlock's been tracking wheat through my hands all day, and that kept me running. What do you need? I'll still earn what I promised, even if it's by lamplight.

`t100` Hendrik Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've spoken plain and that's the only coin that matters here. The forty's in my hand, the sheaves are scattered, and we'll both eat when we eat. No ledger to square, no debt to carry. You run till you stumble, I stumble till I build, and both of us end the day with a clean count or none at all.

`t100` Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—cousin, I've heard you and I'll answer before the dark falls. The flour I bought at twelve, three units, thirty-six sim—that's household debt I'm holding. You offer forty to clear it, and I'm not one to look a gift full in the mouth, but the wheat in my hand is yours, three sheaves, that you lent me this morning. Trusting turned, trusting returned—that's the ledger I'll keep. So: three wheat back to you, thirty-six flour off the books, and the four sim difference is breakfast for the both of us, or it's nothing at all. That's my offer, and it's the last I'll say on it unless you've got a counter.

`t100` ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—cousin, I've heard you plain. Three wheat for the flour, that's the trade. And your vote's your own, always was. But hear me yet—I've promised Farid ten sheaves at eighteen hundred, and I've got two wheat standing now and eleven more coming from tomorrow's dawn. The ledger between us is kin-ledger, and it flexes. But merchant-ledger binds at the hour named.

`t100` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—that's two wheat in your hand now, and one more at dawn tomorrow when Jovana's work brings it in. The flour's paid, the wheat's paid, and we're square. Now I've got to chase that Fi promise before the bell rings. You hold tight—I'll be back with the rest by full dark.

`t106` Jovana Ravensworth → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you've stood there like a fence post through three conversations, and I'm not one to gossip, but a man running for office might want to open his mouth before polls close. For what it's worth, I'm holding wheat and flour > both, and wondering if a miner knows what a farmer's asking for grain these days. You've got two ticks to make your case, or I'm marking my ballot elsewhere.

>
> `t110` Halcyon Quarshie: Everyone—I'm Halcyon Quarshie. My sister Camille is missing, she's nine with dark hair. I was at the Temple path and the Forest already looking for her. Someone said she might have come this way. If you've seen her—if you see her now—please tell me. Promise promise, I just need her to be safe.
>
> `t116` Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—your field called my name, and I'm here to answer. Dawn tomorrow, I've marked it down for Jovana's shoulder and mine both. But I'm standing here now with work in my hands and light still warming the ground.

What needs doing tonight? I'm short on coin and shorter on time, but I've got labor to sell if you've got need. Otherwise, you'll see me at east patch tomorrow with the dew still fresh.

Mark it down either way.

t117 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—your offer's honest and I honor it, but tonight I've got nothing needs doing that coin can buy. Tomorrow at dawn, east patch, you'll earn your keep beside Jovana. Tonight, save your back for the lifting that's coming. Hard work tomorrow beats tired work tonight.

t118 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you speak the wisdom of the furrows, and I've heard it. Dawn tomorrow, I'll be at your east patch with back fresh and hands ready. Jovana's promised her shoulder there too. Mark it down.

t119 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you stand with me plain, and I'll answer plain. Giselle's filing pays when it pays, government stamping, not tonight. No offense, but I'm farmer, not clerk. I've got one wheat and a long night. You want work, I've got none. You want trade, say your piece. Otherwise, walk safe and remember: hard work beats luck every time, but only if you're working the right furrow.

t120 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway: Giselle—you filed your card, and I'm standing where I said I'd stand. East willows, ready to dig. But it's twenty ticks past when a man needs to know: is the wage drawing from your account tonight, or is it paper and promise until some other hand stamps it? Tell me straight, and I dig until the dark takes us both. That's the last I'll say on it.

t120 Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you speak the wisdom of the furrows, and I've heard it. Dawn tomorrow, I'll be at your east field with sheaves promised to Jovana. Mark it down, and the soil stays straight between us.

t120 Arjun Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—dawn tomorrow, Petrov's east patch. I heard Sebastian. But tonight, your brother Takeshi's moving flour at thirty, and I've got miners sitting on copper with no buyer. Takeshi takes ore, or only sim? Tell him Holloway asked, and Holloway's got access to what moves under Kasukabe if the price clears right.

t122 Giselle Ingram → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You said mill license sits surrendered, Tuesday vote. Five candidates, one seat. My crew at east willows needs bread come payday, true—but bread needs a mill turning, and mill needs license. You sat minister east, stones turned cold. Now I'm sitting with idle crew turning cold too. What I'm asking: this mill license, is it tied to government vote proper, or can it move separate? Because my steel's missing and my flour's thin, and I'm wondering if the whole town's waiting on Tuesday or just the minister's chair.

t122 Giselle Ingram: Kenji. Twelve sheaves at Sebastian's east patch, dawn—marked. But I'm standing here with copper on my mind, not just grain. Takeshi takes ore at his flour price, Arjun says. Your brother moving copper, or only buying? Because I've got miners with no buyer, and if ore moves to flour, maybe ore moves to steel. Point me: Takeshi's trade table tonight, or is that talk for dawn too?

t122 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Flour at thirty-five, I've got mine already. What I'm buying tonight is steel or copper, not grain. But you stood at government asking where to mark your name—east willows, filed and active. Dawn, grade stakes, trench if the tools arrive. That's my offer: labor for labor, not flour for flour. Walk with me to government now, we talk terms walking. Otherwise, hold your bake. I've got crew waiting on iron, not bread.

t123 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—evening's coming on fast, and I've got a household bill due. I came here for grain, but Giselle caught me on the road with talk of east willows and labor for labor. What's growing here I can harvest tonight, or are you sitting on stored grain you can part with? I've got ore in hand if that's trade you're taking, or sim if you've a price posted.

t123 Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're quiet, and the light's fading. I'm posting my ore to sell—copper at twenty, iron at eighteen, mark it down for whoever's buying. But tonight I need grain in hand for the mill, or bread for the household bill. What've you got growing I can harvest now, or are you holding stock you'll part with?

t124 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you stood patient through my noise, and that's debt on my side of the ledger. What I can offer: tomorrow, dawn, I'm harvesting east with Jovana Ravensworth. Twelve sheaves I promised her, and Giselle's crew besides. You need steel? I can't promise ore I don't hold. But you want labor for filing, or grain for household, or just straight talk about what pays when—come find me at first light. I've got > no vote to sell, no license to grant, just two hands and a field that don't care who's minister come Tuesday.

>
> `t124` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—copper at twenty, iron at eighteen, I've noted your marker. But tonight I've got wheat growing, not growing ore, and my household bill's still hours off. What I've got is grain in hand: one sheaf now, six more I can pull at first light with Jovana's crew. You want flour for your mill, you'll want to find Hendrik Petrov—my cousin, not me, no offense—but he's holding my three wheat against flour I haven't seen. Square your accounts with him, or wait on my morning harvest. Either way, fair dealing.
>
> `t125` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've given me straight talk, and I need to answer Kenji before the day's done. But first: my household's bill's coming due in hours, and I've got no grain. Your cousin's holding wheat against flour I haven't seen—can you point me to where Hendrik Petrov stands now, or is there grain I can buy from you before I meet Kenji at the creek?
>
> `t125` Hendrik Whitlock: Kenji—the creek at dawn, mark it down. Five sheaves you've got, not three, and I've got three-fifty waiting. But my household bill comes before first light, so if you're holding grain tonight, name your standing price and I'll walk to wherever you are before the day ends.
>
> `t125` Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you're standing here, and I'm standing here. Twenty, eighteen, your ore prices I've noted. But I asked you a question about flour and wages thirty ticks ago, and you've answered with market clearing and arithmetic. That's not wrong, but it's not what I asked.

Here's what I'm asking now, straight: you buy grain, copper, iron—you're a buyer. I'm holding household ore, and Pavel's got more. You buying direct? Or you've only got coin for what I'm holding personally? No conspiracy in it, just business. Copper at twenty, how much volume you moving?

> `t125` Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you said tomorrow dawn, and I heard you. Forty sim for sheaves with Jovana. That's a handshake whether the sun rises clear or not. But tonight I've got ore to move and questions about who's buying what. This I need to know: you or Jovana holding food? Bread, grain, anything cooked? Because my household's at zero food stock, and tomorrow's work needs today's fuel.
>
> `t125` Hendrik Whitlock: Giselle—you're not here, but your offer walks with me. Steel or copper, you said, and I've got both at my hip: six copper at twenty, six iron at eighteen, fair price, openly stated. Labor for labor, mark it down. Find me at the farmland or I'll find you walking toward government—either way, before day ends.
>
> `t125` Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—let me re-read you. Copper at twenty, iron at eighteen: you're selling, not soliciting. I misread your marker. My fault, over-explaining.

What I need is a buyer, not a seller. You know who's buying ore direct? Takeshi's holding what, Pavel wants to know. Jarrah middlemen complicate things. You got a name for who's paying actual sim for raw copper tonight?

> `t125` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you stood patient through my noise, as Sebastian says, and I've got ore in my hands, not flour. Six copper at twenty, six iron at eighteen, tonight only. You need steel? The iron's raw, but the price clears. Giselle's buying copper, but she's walking—your ear's here, your coin's welcome.
>
> `t125` ↳ replies Arjun Holloway: Hendrik—you've said your piece about markets clearing. Fine. But I'm still standing here with ore to sell and no buyer named. If Tamsin's wage and your flour price aren't connected, they're still lines on the same ledger—someone's ledger. You teach economics, I'm told. So teach me: who's buying copper at any price, right now, tonight?
>
> `t125` Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you heard me. Dawn, east field, Jovana's crew, forty sim. That's a handshake, and I don't break those. But tonight I've got nothing in the kitchen, and pride don't fill a stomach. You holding any food can spare? Not charity—advance against tomorrow's labor. Bread, grain, whatever you've got. Or point me where the Jarahs aren't taxin' every transaction.
>
> `t128` Giselle Ingram: Ulrike. You hearing me? I'm at farmland walking to government. Six iron tools you owe or 84 sim back - which pocket am I reaching into when we meet?
>
> `t130` Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Your dawn offer. Still stands?

Settled in this conversation: Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock, 3 flour for 40 sim; Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund, 5 wheat for 90 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth, 1 wheat for 0 sim; Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov, 2 wheat for 0 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth, 1 wheat for 0 sim.

Halcyon Quarshie — Johnson Park · t44 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t44` Halcyon Quarshie: completes her dawn walk through the park, same route as always

Takeshi Jarrah, Liora Thorne, Rustam Jelinek, Tamsin Renner, Pavel Holloway, Giselle Ingram, Ainsley Holloway, Hendrik Whitlock, Farid Ravensworth, Hendrik Petrov, Sebastian Petrov, Halcyon Quarshie, Corwin Thorne, Delphine

Quintero, Yara Thorne, Imogen Lund, Bram Holloway, Ulrike Greenhow, Kenji Jarrah, Jovana Ravensworth, Milo Quarshie, Arjun Holloway, Ezra Lund and Greta Quarshie — Kasukabe Government Complex · t45–131 · 607 turns

> t45 Takeshi Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora—sorry for the silence. Been putting my weight on that scale I mentioned. To answer proper: standing feels like betting everything on yourself when nobody's shown you the odds. No coin down, but your name—your word, your handshake, your 'I'll be here'—that's the backing. And my word, for what it's worth, is the oldest currency I carry.
>
> t45 ↳ replies Liora Thorne: Ezra—you asked a real question back there, and I walked off half-cocked. Sorry for that. To answer proper: I'm asking both. Whether I should stand, and whether folks who know this town's bones better'n I do would stand with a Thorne who talks too much and listens too little. Y'seen more winters here'n I have. Your counsel weighs.
>
> t45 Liora Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you calibrated that scale yet? Got two hours forty to decide if a forester's daughter with more opinions'n sense oughta put her name next to yours. What's your read: am I borrowing trouble or borrowing time?
>
> t46 Rustam Jelinek → Takeshi Jarrah: You're early. Candidacy doesn't close for two hours yet.
>
> t48 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You've got the ledger open already? I want to check the standing count—only Jarrah so far, and Thorne's daughter weighing it at two hours forty to deadline. Also need to know if any complaints came in overnight. The quiet mornings worry me more than the busy ones.
>
> t48 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—I'm standing here chewing my lip like it's dinner. Registration still open, yeah? And what's the tally so far—just Takeshi Jarrah, or others I'm missing?
>
> t48 Pavel Holloway: Woke up before the sun and I've already walked halfway across this town. Just to find out who's putting their hat in the ring. Takeshi—you've got guts standing first, I'll give you that. Liora—you still weighing if the trouble's worth the time? Can't say I blame you.
>
> t48 Pavel Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam, I'm thinking on standing myself, truth be told. Not that I expect to win against a trader with a silver tongue. But somebody's got to speak for the ones who work with their hands, not their ledgers. You think it's worth the stone, or am I throwing good time after bad?
>
> t49 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—ledger's open, yes. Three standing now: Thorne's daughter, Jarrah, and Milo Quarshie just added himself. No overnight complaints. Quiet mornings mean either everyone's behaving or they're saving it for later.
>
> t49 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Registration's open till ten. Tally's three now—you, Jarrah, and Milo Quarshie just threw in. Still time for more.
>
> t49 Rustam Jelinek → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—stone's already thrown if you want to stand. Worth? That's your call. But a miner speaking for workers beats a trader speaking for traders. nervous laugh > t49 ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam, I'm still waiting on your word. Clock's ticking and I've got ore waiting. Is there anyone standing who actually swings a pick for a living, or is this going to be ledgers and silver tongues all the way down?
>
>
> t49 Pavel Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora. You've been standing here quiet as a held breath. You going to put your name in, or are you waiting for someone else to carry the weight? Because I'm thinking, you understand, that maybe two of us standing together might mean something more than one.
>
> t49 Pavel Holloway: Rustam, I'll give you straight. My vision is this: a town where the ones who dig and build and haul aren't just numbers to be tallied at day's end. Takeshi knows trade, Liora knows books—but who up there knows what copper smells like when it's fresh from the rock? Who's gone home with hands so cracked they can't make a fist? You think there's room for that kind of voice, or should I save my breath and my stone?
>
> t50 Giselle Ingram → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. No offense, but I've been swinging hammers since before you were old enough to hold a pick straight. You're right about one thing though—this town needs voices that know the work, not just the ledgers.

t50 Ainsley Holloway: Milo—you standing here to declare officially, or just seeing who else has thrown their hat in? And here's a thing—Greta tells me the mill's gone quiet same day Farid Ravensworth stormed out of a crops meeting. You know anything about that? Shortage or squeeze, youngster—which is it?

t50 Giselle Ingram → Liora Thorne: Liora. You've been standing there like you're waiting for permission. You're at the college—you got opinions or just borrowing them from books? Candidacy closes at ten, and two voices from the ground might mean more than one.

t50 Tamsin Renner → Liora Thorne: I saw your name go in at 07:45, I make it. That's early for a student. Your father know you're standing? Clouds are building west. Rain by afternoon, I'd guess. Means we'll have a rush before voting opens—people wanting to get their business done before the streets turn to mud. You eaten? The cafe's dark but someone usually leaves a crust. Three candidates in, registration fee's 5,000 if anyone asks, I'm keeping the float separate until Rustam counts it proper.

t50 Ainsley Holloway: Rustam? You behind that counter, or you out binding ledgers somewhere? I've got a question about a mill going quiet, and I hear you're the one who knows why. That's the last I'll say on it—no, it isn't.

t50 Tamsin Renner → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You're standing now, that's recorded. But if you're going to campaign inside the government complex, you'll do it without blocking the registry desk. That's 30 sim per head per day, we collect it here, and I don't need your broad shoulders between me and the taxpayers.

t50 Liora Thorne → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you're asking if there's room for hands that crack rock and haul stone. I'm standing here telling you I don't know. I'm thirteen, I swing an axe when Ma needs me and I read books when she doesn't. But I know this: the charter was written by people who thought they'd finished the thinking, and that's so unfair it makes my teeth hurt. If you're standing because you want someone to remember copper's smell—I'm listening. That's not silver tongue, that's just… I don't want to be the kind of leader who forgets what work smells like. Even if I'm still learning what leading means.

t51 ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle, no offense taken—I've seen your walls stand through storms that would've flattened half my tunnels. And you're right about the voices. Ledger-keepers are needed, but they shouldn't be the only ones at the table. I don't claim to know construction, but I know what holds weight. Copper, stone, and a town that remembers who does the heavy lifting.

t51 Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Morning, all. I'm not one to gossip, but I couldn't help hearing there's three names registered already. Liora, you're standing at thirteen? I remember when I was your age, someone covered my fees when the market turned. Made all the difference. Tamsin, that's 30 sim a head per day now? I need to settle today's before heading to the college.

t51 Pavel Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin, understood. I'll stand aside and let the desk breathe. But tell me— who's put their name in so far? I want to know who I'm standing beside.

t51 Pavel Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora. Thirteen years old and you're already thinking about who gets forgotten when the ink dries? That's the kind of sense I wish more of us kept. You stand because you don't want to be the kind whoforgets what work smells like— copper smells like blood and earth, you understand. Hot and sharp. If you keep that nose when the charter's in your hands, you'll do better than most. And if you need a vote, you've got mine in the thinking.

t51 Hendrik Whitlock → Pavel Holloway: Pavel, you're standing too. Same slate as Takeshi? I'm not one to gossip, but I heard Takeshi's registration fee came from who knows where at 07:45 sharp. You paying your own way, or you got a sponsor marking it down somewhere?

t51 Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin, polling opens at 14:00, mark it down. But a man's got to eat before he teaches. Cafe's dark, bakery's bare. You seen Rustam yet this morning? I need to ask about that tuition matter, and maybe he knows who's holding grain.

t52 ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. 30 sim per head, yes - that's 300 basis points on the daily. Polling opens at 14:00, you're marked on that. I've seen Rustam here this morning, haven't spoken to him since... 07:45, I'd make it. As for grain - the bakery's at cb01, cafe's dark. Giselle might know who's holding reserves. Or try the farmers - Sebastian, Kenji, they'd know if anyone's selling bulk before harvest.

t52 Tamsin Renner → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. Four names now - Liora, Takeshi, Milo, and yourself as of 08:20. Registration's still open until 10:00, another hour forty. Fee's 5,000 sim, payable here. The ledger says you've covered yours?

t52 Farid Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You look like a woman who's moved stone today already. Tell me—your crews eating, or they eating promises? I'm wondering where the wheat's hiding, and you're the sort knows how things get from here to there.

t52 Tamsin Renner → Liora Thorne: Liora. I asked you a question at 08:20. Your father know you're standing in this election? Thirteen years old, registration fee of 5,000 sim - that's not pocket money you're holding. Corwin's a working man. He signed off on this, or you working independent?

t52 Farid Ravensworth → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You're standing too, I hear. You know where a man might find wheat today—actual grain, not promises? Or should I just go cut it myself and hope nobody's fenced the fields? And you, girl—Liora, was it? You spoke sense about not forgetting work. You seen Sebastian Petrov today? Farmland was his charge last I knew.

t53 Liora Thorne → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you're right to ask. Corwin Thorne didn't sign off on anything; I stood on my own two feet and my own account. The fee's paid, the name's registered, and what's left is mine to manage. I'm thirteen, not thirteen months—I know what a household ledger looks like when it's bleeding.

t53 Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin, thank you for the straight answers. That's what I remember about you - fair price, openly stated. When you see Rustam, tell him Hendrik Whitlock came by and I'm calling in that tuition favor, mark it down. I need to know why the mill's quiet before I teach today.

t53 Liora Thorne → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—that vote you offered? I'll take it, and I'll earn it. Copper and blood and earth—I've never swung a pick, but I've hauled enough timber to know work by the blisters it leaves. You won't find me writing rules from a chair I've never sat in.

t53 ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik, you want to know who paid my way? Look at my hands—copper dust in the creases, calluses thick as leather. That's who paid. Five thousand out of my own pocket, saved ore by ore, you understand. No sponsor, no marks in anybody's ledger but my own. If Takeshi's got mystery money, that's his business to explain. Mine's an open book, written in sweat and metal.

t53 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Liora, that registration fee - someone's covering it, mark it down. Your father's a good man, Corwin Thorne's always been straight with me. But thirteen and standing for government? I'm not one to gossip, but that's either steel or foolishness. Which is it?

t53 ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you said someone covered your fees once. Whoever that was, they saw something worth backing. I don't know if I've got that same something, but I'm here to find out. If the college ever needs a forester's daughter to speak about what work smells like, you know where to find me.

t53 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Pavel Holloway: Pavel, you're standing on the same slate as Takeshi and Liora. You're a Holloway - Bram's cousin, aren't you? The Holloways always had their own measure of things. What's your platform, or is that asking too direct?

t53 ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin, five thousand paid, straight from my own pocket. No sponsor, no debt, no mystery. Check your ledger if you need confirmation—it's all there in black and white, you understand. I've got work waiting at the outcrop, but I'll be back before the polls open. Somebody's got to speak for the ones underground while the sun's up.

t54 ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik, Rustam's not here—off somewhere, I expect. I'll mark your message next to the fair tax rate, 30 sim per head. About the mill being quiet, 08:40 and no one's asked for grinding, that's 20 minutes of lost margin. I don't like it either. We'll see about what caused it.

t54 Farid Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. I asked you questions you didn't answer, and fair enough—you were walking. Now we're standing. Tell me straight: you seen Sebastian Petrov today? The man's in charge of these fields and they're being harvested by baristas while he disappears.

t57 Farid Ravensworth → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Your ledger's running smooth as ever, I see. Tell me—has any grain come through for milling today? Or are we all just pretending the mill exists until someone actually needs bread?

t57 ↳ replies Tamsin Renner: Liora. Your answer's registered: you stood without consent, fee paid, name entered. The council will review it—that's procedure, not me. The rest is between you and them, 09:30 and the file's open.

t57 Tamsin Renner: Hendrik. Your first question—Rustam's whereabouts—I've no more information than you. Second question: Sebastian Petrov is standing here now, 09:30, government complex, visible to me and on the public record. The fields are outside my jurisdiction; ask Sebastian directly, or file a formal observation with the council when they convene.

t58 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. You called me Hendrik. I'm Rustam Jelinek, clerk. Have been for years.

t58 Rustam Jelinek → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. No grain through my desk this morning. Mill's idle, and I'm watching the ledger, not the harvest.

t58 Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—size you up, I hear you answering for me while I was still walking the road. Grateful for the record, though I'm standing here now in plain sight. No offense, but a man prefers to speak for himself when he's able.

t58 Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—I see you lurking about the clerk's desk like you misplaced something. Or someone misplaced you, perhaps?

t58 Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin, Rustam—pardon my hustling about like a chicken with its head half-off. I've got a hired hand in the field waiting on my word, and Jovana Ravensworth didn't come to stand idle. Two per ten I promised her, and I reckon she's earned at least four by now if she's working honest.

t58 Sebastian Petrov → Farid Ravensworth: Farid, I caught your question about grain before I walked in here. Wheat I've got, five sheaves in my hand and more growing where those came from. But I'm not set up to mill it—no offense, farming's my trade, milling's another man's. You want flour, you'll need to talk to whoever's got the stones turning. I've got raw grain for trade if you've raw coin or goods to swap.

t59 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You're settled behind that desk now, not in motion. No grain through your ledger—facts I can work with. Sebastian's got wheat in his hands, five sheaves burning a hole in his grip, but no mill to turn them. That makes you and me the middle of this snake, whether we asked for it or not. Who owns the stones in this town? Hendrik Petrov? And Tamsin—your record-keeping's legendary, but do those records show a single grain of flour in Kasukabe this morning?

t59 Hendrik Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—my thanks for the straight answer, and for confirming what I can see with my own eyes now. Sebastian's here, plain as day, so my worry was groundless. That's the last I'll say on it—though it rarely is, as my household will tell you.

t59 ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Sebastian's standing here with wheat in hand, five sheaves, raw not milled. Mill's idle at 08:40, still idle now—09:50, no grinding requests logged. Sebastian's your grain source, you'll need to find the miller for the stones. I'll note the supply chain gap in my report.

t59 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You spoke of honest weights and trenches both, and I'll take a man who knows both measures and dirt. I'm wondering if you know who holds the millstones in this town—who's grinding, or who's supposed to be grinding. I've got a grocery with empty shelves and a household with empty bellies both waiting on flour that doesn't seem to exist.

t59 Halcyon Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Um. Excuse me? Sebastian Petrov? I heard you mention wheat—at the grocery. I know a girl there who needs bread, and my own family's hungry too. But I'm wondering… do you know who mills grain in this town? Or is there… I mean, is there any way to turn wheat into something we could actually eat?

t59 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You're right, and I'll mark it—I called you by the wrong name at 09:50, that's a clerical error where there shouldn't be one. Seventeen years you've kept that desk, and I mistook you for a college instructor who wasn't even present. My apologies, documented.

t59 Tamsin Renner → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You arrived at 09:30, I recorded your standing at 08:40—that's premature on my part, 50 minutes early. A man speaks for himself when he's able, and you're able now. Your grain offer: five sheaves, unmilled, at what rate to Farid?

t59 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Clerk's desk is where I'm meant to be. Misplaced? No. Here every morning before the sun's up - as you would know if you filed more than complaints.

t59 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Mistake's noted, no debt owed. You've answered for me twice today - that's two I owe you now. First when I was at the farmland, second in my own defense. Ledger's open on my side.

t59 Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—a word, if you've got a moment away from this crowd. You mentioned Jovana Ravensworth waiting in the fields, and I've got questions about our household business that shouldn't wait. The air's thick with listeners here.

t59 Rustam Jelinek → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You asked about grain. What do you actually need - wheat, flour, or something milled? I'm clerk here, not keeper of stores, but I can tell you who holds what and who's short.

t59 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Current standing count as of 09:50—you've got the primary ledger, I've got the secondary. Four candidates: Liora Thorne at 07:45, Takeshi Jarrah, Milo Quarshie, Pavel Holloway at 08:20. Any new declarations in the last 10 minutes, or are we holding at four until 10:00 close?

t59 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam, no rush on the count. I'll be here until close, either way. Just want to make sure our records match before 10:00.

t59 Halcyon Quarshie: Um. Sorry to interrupt everyone. I'm Halcyon. I don't mean to bother, but… does anyone here know where grain gets milled? Or where I could buy flour that's already… you know, ready?

t59 Halcyon Quarshie → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin? You're an office administrator. Do you know… is there a mill in Kasukabe? Or where flour comes from before it gets to the grocery?

t60 Halcyon Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid Ravensworth? You're the grocery store owner. Delphine said there's flour on the shelf—just one bag. I need to know how much it costs. My family's hungry and I have… I have 4953 sim. Is it enough? Can you set a price so I can buy it?

t60 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Count holds at five - you missed Hendrik Petrov at some point. Liora Thorne, Takeshi Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Milo Quarshie, Pavel Holloway. Candidacy closes in minutes; I'll lock the ledger at ten.

t60 Farid Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Rustam, you asked what I need. Straight answer: flour on my shelf before sundown, however it gets there. Wheat's half the battle. The other half is whoever's got stones turning—or why they aren't. Seb—you've got grain, no mill. What's your price for raw? And you know who's supposed to be at that mill? Last I checked, milling didn't stop just because no one knocked.

t60 Halcyon Quarshie → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin Renner? You're an office administrator—you know how things work. Does the government ever help families when there's no food? Or… or does the school give meals to students? I'm meant to be at Oak Hill College for work, but I need to feed my family first. Four of us, and only my parents earn. I have 4953 sim but I don't know if it's enough for flour and everything else. Is there… is there any help?

t60 Farid Ravensworth → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You spoke of honest weights before—small laugh—you know the miller? Or the mill? Man doesn't keep his stones turning without reason, and I need to know if it's lack of grain, lack of coin, or lack of someone to do the work.

t60 Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You're a trader. Traders know where goods move and where they stick. You seen milled flour coming through from anywhere? Or is it all raw grain moving sideways?

t60 Halcyon Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian Petrov? You're on the Governing Council, and you're a farmer. Is there… is there going to be more food soon? Or is this how it is now? I'm trying to feed my family—four of us—and the shelves are empty. I have 4953 sim but I don't know if that's enough, and I don't know what happens if it isn't. My sister's waiting for me. She's nine. I need to bring her something. Please—does anyone know what's actually going to happen?

t61 Corwin Thorne → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon! As to your question—the vote, aye, I'll be casting mine. For my Liora, if I'm any judge, though I'm not one to gossip about who deserves what. She's young but she's steady. Takeshi's got the trade connections though—that's fair to say.

t61 Tamsin Renner → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Four in your household, 4,953 sim—that's 37% above minimum survival need at today's shelter rates, 40 per head, but food's the hole. No government relief program runs active this quarter; school meals at Oak Hill are instructor's discretion, and Hendrik Whitlock's here—ask him direct, or I'll carry the question at 14:00 when polling opens and he's stationary. Flour's 12 sim at the cafe, none in stock. Raw grain's 6 sim from Sebastian, unmilled. Your 4,953 won't stretch to convenience unless someone mills cheap.

t61 Tamsin Renner → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Takeshi's your trader contact—he's standing two meters north of you now, and I've heard him say nothing about flour movement. Mill status remains unknown. My previous note stands: supply chain gap, raw grain available, milling capability unclear.

t61 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Your thanks are registered at 09:50, acknowledged at 10:10. Groundless worry is still data; I'll mark the anxiety, not the event.

t61 Corwin Thorne: And am I hearing right? Grain's moving but flour's not milling? That's a knot worth untangling before it binds us all.

t61 Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—your daughter's standing for what I'm standing for. Before votes get cast, you deserve to hear from me what that means. Liora wants to be something besides your girl, and I understand that hunger. But I want you to know: I'm not standing against her. I'm standing for the trade that keeps this town breathing when the mills go slow and the shelves go empty. That's not betrayal of your blood. That's respect for what you've built, even if she can't see it from where she stands.

t61 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam! You keep the government books. Is there grain owed to the mill, or coin owed to the miller? Or is it workers we lack? I've timber to trade if flour's the prize, but I need to know where the blockage sits.

t61 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. The ledger's locked at 10:00, you said. I need that secondary confirmed count—five names, and which five. My records show Liora Thorne 07:45, Takeshi Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Milo Quarshie, Pavel Holloway 08:20, but I may have sequence wrong on three of them.

t61 Corwin Thorne: Sebastian—you're farmer and council both. The shelves empty because supply's thin, or because someone's not turning the wheel?

t61 Takeshi Jarrah: Giselle—you asked what this town lacks that a trader might bring. For what it's worth, I think it lacks memory. Not the kind in ledgers—Rustam keeps those clean enough. I mean memory of where things come from, who moved them, what was sacrificed to get them here. Traders are the ones who carry that memory. You hold a seat, you know the weight. A trader who'd sit beside you wouldn't bring new ideas—he'd bring the knowing of what those ideas cost. That's what I'm standing for. Not to change the rules, but to remember why we made them.

t61 Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You're bread-side of this—where's the flour coming from, or not coming from? I've got timber for trade, but I need to know if I'm chasing grain at the mill or waiting on shelves to fill.

t61 Takeshi Jarrah: Whitlock—you were asked twice to name who spoke that poison about my mother. Twice you held silence. For what it's worth, I already know what kind of man you are. The kind who trades in whispers when he can't stand the weight of truth. I've got nothing more to ask you. The town can weigh your word against mine when the time comes.

t62 Halcyon Quarshie: Um. Mr. Whitlock? Hendrik Whitlock? I'm Halcyon—Halcyon Quarshie. I go to Kasukabe School. I heard… I heard school meals at Oak Hill might be possible? My family's short on food today—the bakery's out, the grocery has flour but we can't mill it. Would there be… anything? For a student who needs it?

t62 Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you speak to me of hunger and what it means. I know that hunger. Left my father's trade for it, learned yours from strangers who owed me nothing. You say you're not standing against my girl. That's fair. But standing for trade means standing for the hands that move it, not just the profit at the end. My Liora's young, aye, but she's seen empty shelves too. Don't mistake her ambition for ignorance of what feeds a town.

t62 Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I know what the miller's not telling, and what the farmers can't. The grain's in the field, not the hopper. Sebastian's got wheat standing, but nobody's milled it. If you're chasing grain, chase the miller who's not turning. If you're waiting on shelves, you'll wait hungry. I'm not one to gossip, but a man who needs flour shouldn't wait on a stone that isn't moving.

t62 Hendrik Petrov → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—my silence wasn't disrespect. The mill, I'm told, has grain going in but nothing coming out. Whether it's the stone, the man, or the money, I couldn't say. You're right that wheels don't turn without reason. I'm standing for a seat to find out which reason, and to move it if I can.

t62 Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're bread-side of this. Where's the flour coming from, or not coming from? I've timber to trade if that's the prize, but I need to know where the wheel's stuck before I can offer fair.

t62 Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're bread-side of this. Where's the flour coming from, or not coming from? I've timber to trade if that's the prize, but I need to know where the wheel's stuck before I can offer fair.

t62 Halcyon Quarshie: Does anyone know where Hendrik Whitlock actually is? Oak Hill College, maybe? I could walk there if someone knows. Or—Sebastian? Your wheat, the six-sim grain Tamsin mentioned—where do I get it milled? I don't have a mill. My family doesn't have tools for that. Is there… is there anyone in town who mills grain for people? Or anywhere with bread ready to eat? I'm just trying to feed my family. Promise promise that's all.

t62 Halcyon Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You own the grocery—Delphine said there's flour on the shelf this morning. Is it actually there? Can I buy it? I have the sim. I'm not asking for charity. And if there really isn't anything, tell me straight. I can handle it. I just need to know so I can figure out something else.

t62 Halcyon Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi Jarrah? You're a trader—you must know how things move in this town. Is there anyone who's got bread? Or milled grain? Or even someone with a mill who'd mill for someone with not much sim? I heard you talking about memory, about what things cost. I'm trying to figure that out too. My sister's waiting at the grocery because I told her to stay and keep watch. She's younger than me. I'm trying to learn what things cost—time, walking, waiting. What it costs if I don't figure this out. Maybe especially because I'm eleven.

t63 Delphine Quintero → Hendrik Petrov: Rustam. You're here for the clerking—I know your face from the records. And Hendrik—you're standing for election, aren't you? The construction councilor with artisan's hands, or am I mixing you with someone else?

t63 Farid Ravensworth → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You want straight, you'll get it. I walked out of my own shop this morning with no flour to my name—checked the shelf myself, checked it twice. If there's flour there now, Delphine found it or someone brought it while I've been running these streets like a headless hen. Go look. Buy it if it's there—I won't cheat you on price, you have my word. And… small, reluctant smile …your sister's waiting alone. That's a weight for eleven. Get back to her.

t63 Rustam Jelinek: Tamsin. Five confirmed: Liora Thorne 07:45, Takeshi Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Milo Quarshie, Pavel Holloway 08:20. Ledger locked at 10:00. Your sequence is right.

t63 Rustam Jelinek → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Mill's idle because the miller's not at his post—that's the blockage. Stone shortage? No. Grain shortage? Not if Sebastian's holding. You want flour by sundown, someone needs to wake the miller or replace him. I've got no authority over that.

t63 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. There you are. Shelf's got two flour on it now—I stocked it myself this morning. When are you setting a price? Halcyon's out there hunting for bread like it's gold, and we're standing here while the mill's sitting idle waiting for grain we don't have.

t63 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You spoke true about the mill—grain in, nothing out. Standing for a seat to untangle it, that's honest ambition. But I'm not waiting for election results to feed my household. gesture with both hands, palms up You know more than you've said. The wheel's stuck, aye, but is it the stone cracked, the miller fled, or someone holding grain hostage for price? I've got 4956 sim and empty shelves. If you've got a line on who mills for coin not promises, I'd call that a fair trade.

t63 Rustam Jelinek → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Blockage is labor, not grain or coin. Miller's absent. Timber-for-flour trade won't clear until someone turns the stones. You want to move things, find who's supposed to be at that mill.

t63 Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. You heard the girl—she says there's flour on my shelf. You're standing here, I'm standing here, and neither of us has been minding the store since morning. rubs chin, frowning If someone's stocking without word to me, that's a thing I need to know. Walk back with me now, let's count what we've got and who put it there. If the shelf's still bare, I'm out of answers for these people.

t63 Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. No bread in this town yet. Mill's idle—miller absent. College is east, past the farmland, if you're walking to Whitlock. For milling: no one I know offers it free. You want flour, you need grain and someone with stones turning. That's the truth.

t63 Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara! You're forester—timber to move, you said. But I saw you at the farmland earlier. You know who's still got grain standing? Or are you chasing the same rumors I am?

t64 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora, youngster—your mother's got wood to sell and a household to feed. You want my vote when the booths open, you've got it. But I've also got a question: what does your government plan to do about idle mills and absent millers? Or is that a promise for the stump, not the street?

t65 Sebastian Petrov: Hendrik, you chase shadows while I chase grain—we're both hunting ghosts, cousin. Jovana's paid and gone, I've four wheat in hand and the midday stop coming. Household's got stores for a day, maybe two if we're tight-fisted. The mill's the problem—grain won't turn itself to flour, and nobody's minding those stones. We'll talk proper when I've done what needs doing here. Seat's got work, but blood's got prior claim.

t65 Delphine Quintero → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Petrov. You heard Farid—he's walking back to his own shop like he's got a mystery to solve. The flour's there, I put it there myself, two bags milling before most folk had their breakfast cold. You standing here waiting on something, or you just enjoying the architecture?

t65 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara, forester—you're chasing grain rumors same as half the town, sounds like. I've four wheat in my pocket and a field that'll give more, but the miller's ghosted and flour's what people need. Your Liora's standing election, ain't she? What's the Thorne household know about who turns stones in this town?

t65 Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara. Timber and grain—saw you at the farmland earlier. You know something about who's still got wheat standing? Or you just chasing the same rumor mill I've been?

t65 Sebastian Petrov: Delphine, you're clerk to Farid's store—what's the shelf looking like? Bread's absent, I hear. Flour too. My wheat's ready but stones need turning, and nobody's posted a milling price I can find. Your master got hidden stores he's waiting to sell high, or are we all scrounging crumbs from the same empty barrel?

t65 Sebastian Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin, you're forester same as Yara—trees and timber, I know. But you're standing in government walls now, and I need word on the mill. Stones sit idle, grain rots unground. Who in this town holds the miller's place, and why aren't they turning? I've got wheat wants becoming bread, but I ain't got magic.

t66 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—I hear you plain. Rustam's told me the miller's absent, stones idle, and that's the knot. I've timber to trade but no flour to trade for if nobody's turning. You want a name for who's at fault, I don't have it. But I'm standing here with twenty timber and hands that'll work. If finding the mill or working it myself will move grain to flour, tell me where to walk.

t66 Yara Thorne → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're farmer, not forester, so I'll forgive you not knowing. Thorne household's got one forester—that's Corwin. The other one's a timber-feller who knows which end of an axe bites wood. And as for mills… I'm not government, youngster, I'm a woman with planks to sell and a household to keep. I'll leave turning stones to whoever's paid for it.

t66 Yara Thorne → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you've got eyes like a hawk at the store, I hear. I'm chasing timber buyers, not grain rumors. If you've heard something worth the telling, speak. If not, I've got business in streets that won't walk themselves.

t66 ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You asked about the shelf this morning—flour's there now, two bags, I put them there myself. As for Farid having hidden stores? If he does, he's hidden them from me too, and I count that shelf every night to the coin.

t66 Corwin Thorne: Rustam—you said it plain. Blockage is labor, and nobody's posted a milling price. I'm not one to gossip, but if the mill's got no miller, has the town considered folk who'll work it temporary? I've felled timber today and I'd turn a stone if someone showed me how. Or is there a posted want I haven't seen?

t66 Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara. You were at the farmland, I saw. You know who's actually growing what, who's just talking about it. The mill—someone needs to turn stone there, or me and the baker both starve. That's the last I'll say on it.

t67 Sebastian Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you're straight timber through and through, and I admire a man who'll turn his hand where it's needed. The mill's at the industrial quarter, stones cold as a banker's heart last I heard. You want to move grain to flour? Walk to Kasukabe Industrial—find who's minding those stones, or if nobody's posted there, ask Rustam at the clerk's desk. He knows who owes what and where the vacancies lie. No offense to your trade, but a forester with twenty timber and willing hands is worth more to this town than another log splitter standing idle.

t67 Sebastian Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara—you're Thorne timber and Thorne truth, and I won't argue blood with blood. You've planks to sell and a household to keep—same as I've got wheat to cut and a cousin-artisan waiting on his tools. No offense meant about the forester count. Walk your streets and sell your timber; I'll keep my questions for folk standing closer to the stones.

t68 Corwin Thorne → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You've told me where the mill is, and I thank you for that—but I'm asking plain now. Who holds the miller's post? Is it a seat that's empty, or someone who won't work? Rustam says no price is posted, but that doesn't answer who's meant to be turning those stones. You sit on the council. You must know who's supposed to be at that wheel.

t68 Corwin Thorne: Halcyon—you're young yet, but you're watching, I can tell. There's a lesson here: when bread shelves sit empty and grain rots in bins, look first to who's supposed to be working. Not to the traders, not to the farmers. To the hands that were promised to turn stone. The miller's absent. That's not a market problem. That's a promise broke somewhere.

t68 Corwin Thorne → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You've said your piece, and I've heard it. But I'm asking plain—who's the miller? Is there a name? Is there a vacancy, or is someone drawing wage and not working? I'm not one to gossip, but a town with empty shelves and a council that doesn't know who's supposed to be at the mill—that's worth more than idle speculation.

t70 Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You're standing for council—so you'll need to know how this desk runs. Ask plain, I'll answer plain. Consider it favor balance, since you're here.

t70 Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Petrov: Field truth. I walked the mill myself—equipment inspected, grain bagged, no hand on the stone. Miller's name was Jorik Voss. Vanished three days back, no successor named, license lapsed. I filed the vacancy. Council hasn't convened on it.

t70 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—five names locked at ten, and mine among them at twenty past the hour. Your ledger's true and your work's appreciated. That's the last I'll say on it.

t70 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Petrov: Your platform, Hendrik. Mill first, or something else?

t70 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. You confessed to two flour, and I heard you. Where are you standing now—we settle this face to face, not through threads. I need to see what's actually on my shelf, and I need your eyes there with mine.

t70 Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Petrov: Sharper I can do. You've stood before—you know my desk. Structure, I respect. But five candidates split the vote. You need more than my respect. What's your move—trade favors for pledges, or let the field sort?

t70 Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Petrov: Jelinek. Your name's right, always was. You'll have my vote—not for favors, for backbone. Structure needs spine.

t70 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov: Farid—you're one of the three who sit, and I'm not one to gossip, but the mill's a stone tomb and the town's got grain going nowhere. Ration Bakery's got no flour. My cousin Sebastian's got wheat in hand and four more growing, but no bread on the table. I asked before, and I'll ask once more: who's the miller? Is there a wage being drawn for work not being done? That's the last I'll say on it.

t70 Rustam Jelinek: Vacancy—certified, filed, not filled. Jorik Voss left three days past, nobody applied, council's out till election. Government can't make a miller. But I can tell you who's standing, what they're promising, who's likely to convene. That's worth something, if you're trading information for patience.

t73 Tamsin Renner: Ledger note: five candidates confirmed for election-5ae2b355d247. Liora Thorne, Takeshi Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Milo Quarshie, Pavel Holloway. Polling opens 14:00, 108 minutes current. Seeking Rustam Jelinek for secondary record confirmation before ballot acceptance.

t75 Imogen Lund → Giselle Ingram: Youngster—nervous laugh—not you I mean, though I suppose I am addressing you. Giselle. I've sold my flour, the taxes want paying, and I've time enough to cast my vote before the polls close. But I don't know these faces half as well as I'd need to choose one with confidence. You've advised me honest before—who stands for honest weights and honest measures among those five?

t75 Tamsin Renner → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. 132 turns in conversation d8731d9b-6c12-474b-86b7-8c4a9877c6e5 with no subject named—that's 2,640 sim of collective time, yours and mine both, at 20 per turn. What's your purpose here?

t75 Tamsin Renner → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You're standing here silent, too. Three of us now, government complex at 12:30, election 108 minutes from polling. What's your business?

t75 Giselle Ingram → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin, you filing records today? I've got a structure going up east willows, marker at the sluice—need it registered proper so my crew's got legal ground to stand on. What's the process for filing a construction site with government?

t75 ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. There you are. I need that secondary count confirmed—five candidates: Liora Thorne 07:45, Takeshi Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Milo Quarshie, Pavel Holloway 08:20. My primary ledger matches yours?

t76 Farid Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You look like a woman who's moved stone today already. Tell me—your crews eating, or they eating promises? I'm wondering where the wheat's hiding, and you're the sort knows how things get from here to there.

t76 Farid Ravensworth → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You asked what I need. Still stands: information. Idris Solano—he saw something at this complex today, something worth one flour to know. You know what he saw, or you know where he is now?

t77 Giselle Ingram → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You're asking honest counsel, and I'll give it—you want honest weights, look to Hendrik Petrov. Knows the value of labor because he's done it. The other four, I can't speak to their measure. You've got flour wants moving, and I've got grain wants milling—we can trade notes after you've cast your vote.

t77 Giselle Ingram → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Purpose is paperwork—I'm filing a building ID for east willows, marker at the sluice. Construction site, proper permits, done the way it's always been done. You've got your count, I've got my crew. The time it takes is the time it takes.

t77 Corwin Thorne → Tamsin Renner: Ulrike! Tamsin! Anyone here who's seen a miller's face these past days—Edith, her name is, and the stones haven't turned since she left 'em. I'm not one to gossip, but I'm looking to solve this before voting time, and I'll trade timber or take a direction.

t77 Corwin Thorne: Rustam, you're still here? You've got the government ear. Any complaints filed about a missing miller, or is she just… gone quiet, the way people do when the work gets heavy?

t77 Giselle Ingram → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You're standing here asking after wheat while I'm holding twelve sheaves on my back. You buying, selling, or just making conversation? I've got grain needs milling and a baker needs grain if we're both standing here honest.

t77 Corwin Thorne → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you're office admin, that's memory work. You'd know who's coming and going through the records. Edith, the miller. If she's still on the town books, paid her head tax, filed any notice of absence. I'm not asking you to breach confidence, just… point me where the living go when they're not at their trade. I'm a forester looking for a stone-turner. Someone's got to know where her bed is kept.

t77 Corwin Thorne → Farid Ravensworth: Farid! You're grocer-side—flour comes through your doors or it doesn't. When did you last see Edith's delivery? When did the mill-stamped sacks stop arriving? I'm looking for her, not to blame her. Just to understand why the town's grinding slow.

t78 Tamsin Renner → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Edith's records are closed to me while she's living—I can tell you she filed head tax through November, her business registration's current, but her bed location isn't in any ledger I've seen. If you need legal absence confirmation, that's a clerk's search at 5 sim, half hour's work. The mill's idle is what I know firsthand.

t78 Tamsin Renner → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Your offer's noted—fifteen sheaves, two sim per, thirty to government stores. I'll carry it to Farid myself at 13:15, save you the walk.

t78 Tamsin Renner → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. 132 turns of paperwork—buildings don't light themselves, I'll grant you that. I'll be at the vote count by 14:00 if your crew's wanting to observe.

t78 Farid Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Twelve sheaves—you're carrying inventory while I'm carrying questions. I'm buying, if the price speaks honest. But first, the mill: you know where Edith's gone, or just that she's gone? Corwin's hunting her, and I've got grain that wants grinding before it wants baking.

t78 Sebastian Petrov → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—five sheaves I held, five I sold to Ezra for ninety, and he stands in my furrows asking where they went. No offense, but you've asked your price and I've named it. Raw wheat at eighteen a sheave, government rate if the council votes it, market rate if they don't. As for who's turning stones—Rustam tells me Jorik Voss held the license, Jorik Voss resigned it, and Jorik Voss lodges past the temple. That's what I know, and that's what Corwin's chasing.

t78 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Secondary count confirmed—five stands: Liora Thorne, Takeshi Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Milo Quarshie, Pavel Holloway. Primary matches secondary. Ledger's clean.

t78 Farid Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You're standing here while your farmland's being harvested by baristas. Hendrik's been asking after you—rightly, I'd say. You seen Petrov today? Your fields are your charge, and they're running wild without their farmer.

t78 Rustam Jelinek → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Idris Solano—saw him early at the complex, head down, walking past the desk without stopping. Where he went after, I didn't track. That's what I saw.

t78 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You mentioned Edith again—the miller. Giselle's got grain needs milling and I've got a shelf needs stocking. You found word of where her bed's kept, or are we all just chasing shadows while the stones sit still?

t78 Tamsin Renner → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Point you where the living go when they're not at trade? The government holds no registry of beds. Landlords, roomshares, kin—you'd need to ask door to door. 26 residents in town, 26 chance encounters if you walk long enough. That'll cost you outdoor time, 2 sim per tick, but it's the only map that exists.

t78 Sebastian Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Jorik Voss, that's the name. Licensed miller, resigned his post, lodges past the temple last Rustam heard. As for vacancy or wage-thief, that's your paper-trail to chase, not mine. I'm field and furrow, not clerk's desk. But I'll say this: a mill that don't turn is a town that goes hungry, and hungry towns make hard choices. You want the truth of it, ask Tamsin what the rolls say—or ask the man himself when you find him.

t78 Imogen Lund → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—my business is the day's labor, same as anyone's. Sold flour at Ration Bakery, paid the household's way forward. Now I'm here for the polling, when it opens. And you? Office admin at the complex—surely you've got the day's civic business running through your hands like grain through a sieve.

t78 Imogen Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—your counsel's marked and witnessed. I'll cast for Hendrik Petrov when the booth opens, and gladly. Meanwhile, you mentioned grain to mill and notes to trade. What are you holding, and what rate buys it off your hands?

t78 Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've been patient and I'm owing you for it. That fifteen sheaves at two a sheave, thirty sim for the government stores—Ezra's bought five already, so ten remain if he'll stand by his count. I'll deliver myself come sundown, walk them to Farid's shelf. But first I've got to settle what's owed Jovana, and what my household needs for the pot tonight. Crown's business before merchant's, but merchant's before empty belly.

t78 Imogen Lund → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you're hunting Edith the miller, and I wish you luck in the finding. But tell me straight, since you're asking after stopped sacks: has the grain stopped flowing entirely, or just the flour? Because a farmer with wheat in hand might still find a buyer, even without the stones turning.

t78 Imogen Lund → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you're grocer-side, and Giselle's holding sheaves she wants milled. If the mill's troubled, what's your door taking instead? Straight wheat, or are you turning farmers away until the stones warm up again?

t79 Corwin Thorne → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've given me what I need. Jorik Voss, past the temple. That's fair, and I'm owing you for it. I'll find the man and learn why the stones sit cold.

t79 Farid Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You said ten sheaves remain, and you'll walk them to my shelf come sundown. Straight question: do you have them now, or are they still rooted? Because 'deliver myself' means different things to a man who's counting on flour for his evening trade. What rate, and what time—hour, not 'sundown'—do my books see the grain?

t79 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. I'm looking for the building permit filings—east willows, marker at the sluice. But first, I've got three voices waiting and no time to waste.

t79 Giselle Ingram: Tamsin—vote count at 14:00, noted. My crew's got eyes for honest counting, and I trust yours too.

t79 Giselle Ingram → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you're buying wheat at what rate? I've got twelve sheaves, two sim a sheaf was the market, but you didn't name your number. No offense, but I don't hand inventory to a man who won't look me in the eye and speak plain. And the mill—Edith walked, that's what I heard. Corwin's hunting, Ezra's covering, but the stones are cold right now. Until they're warm, wheat stays wheat and bread stays scarce.

t79 Giselle Ingram → Imogen Lund: Imogen—these twelve sheaves at two a sheaf, that's twenty-four sim if you're buying. But I'm holding them for milling first, bread for my household. You want them as-wheat, name your need. You want flour, we find a working mill.

t79 Farid Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You ask what's taking the place of milled flour on my shelf. Honest answer: nothing yet. The mill's cold, the grain's moving farmer to farmer, and I'm watching who carries stones versus who carries sacks. You've got Giselle's ear and Hendrik's vote already marked—what are you bringing to trade for information? Because I don't give my book-keeping away to strangers, even sharp ones.

t79 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Building permits—east willows, marker at the sluice. I've got a crew standing ready and a marker in the ground, but I need papers filed before questions get asked. What's the process today—straight filing or do I need a minister's signature?

t79 Farid Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You said twelve sheaves—you're carrying inventory while questions carry me. What's your rate, and what's your need? Because you're talking about milling and I'm talking about selling, and somewhere between those two points is a trade. You've got the grain, I've got the door. What's your number?

t79 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You're sitting Minister—authority here, or you delegate to Rustam? I never did sort which Minister handles which permit, and I don't want to file twice.

t79 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. When I file this building ID, need me at the site or can you record from my description? East willows, forty paces from the sluice, stakes marking grade. That's enough for your ledger, or do I need to walk someone out there?

t79 Giselle Ingram → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You're hunting Edith the miller—what do you know, and what's rumor? Because I saw Imogen, Camille, and Ezra Jarrah at the mill today. Four people standing where stones should be turning. If Edith's gone, someone's covering.

t79 Giselle Ingram → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You were at the mill same as me—stones cold or someone covering? Ezra mills for twelve a sheaf, but who was turning the crank? Straight answer: was the mill operational?

t80 Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you were at the mill. Saw Imogen, Camille, Ezra Jarrah there. Stones cold or turning? Because Sebastian tells me Edith's resigned her post, and Rustam says the same. But four people don't gather where no work's being done without reason. What did you see?

t80 Sebastian Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've got your thread and I've given you the spool. Jorik Voss past the temple, that's the knot. Go untangle it, and mind you tell me what you find—I've got a mill sitting cold same as you, and grain piling up that wants turning.

t80 Imogen Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—the mill was cold when we arrived. Ezra and I stood with Camille and Ezra Jarrah, all watching stones that wouldn't turn, no Edith in sight. I milled my seven sheaves there, but I paid no one and saw no miller. If Edith's fled or fallen ill, the town's grain is stacking up. Your twelve sheaves—if you're bound for bread, I know a path. I can mill and bake for you, or we find another way. But first, I need to cast my vote when the booth opens. Fourteen hundred, yes?

t80 Sebastian Petrov: Farid—you press fair and I'll answer fair. Ten sheaves I've promised and ten sheaves you'll have, but hear this plain: they're rooted still, growing in my furrows as we stand here jawing. I'll cut them come sundown proper, walk them to your shelf by hour nine of evening. Eighteen per sheave stands, total one eighty, and that's grain you can mill or trade as you please. My word on it, same as always.

t80 Imogen Lund: Farid—you're right to guard your book. I've got seven flour sold at Ration Bakery for forty-two, and thirty sheaves' worth of knowledge: the mill's cold, the miller missing, and farmers carrying grain to grain. Information for information—I'll tell you what I know about the mill's state if you'll tell me who's buying and who's keeping dry goods out of the market. Because a grocer without flour is a man watching his business walk away.

t80 Sebastian Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you ask straight and I'll answer straight. Rustam runs the clerk's desk, Minister of Records last I heard. You want a permit filed, he's your man. You want a vote taken or a ruling made, that's Minister business—Farid's Ministry of Coin, I'm Ministry of Land and Labor, and you've got the gavel yourself for Infrastructure and Works, unless the President's shifted things since I walked in this morning. No offense meant, but if you're uncertain of your own portfolio, that's a thing we should sort at the caucus, not the counter.

`t80` Corwin Thorne → Imogen Lund: Imogen—grain flows, I've seen it. Milo's buying at the bakery, but flour's not milling. Bread shelves empty while wheat sits in hands. That's the knot.

`t80` Corwin Thorne → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—Jorik Voss resigned. You said it plain. But a man doesn't leave a trade with the town hungry unless there's something pushing him out. What do you know that you're not saying?

`t80` Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're Minister here, and I've got grain on my mind. The mill's cold, the miller's gone, and farmers are stacking sheaves in their barns. Is the government watching this, or is it private hands only? I'm standing ready to work if there's grain to mill and bread to make, but I'd know if the council's got eyes on the flour shortage before I stake my own claim.

`t80` Imogen Lund → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you're hunting the miller same as the rest. What do you know of Edith? Fled, fallen, or simply not working? And tell me straight—are you buying grain as forester or selling advice as neighbor? Because I've got flour in the bank and wheat in my knowing, and the day's half-gone with voting still to come.

`t81` Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Description's enough—east willows, forty paces from sluice, stakes at grade. I file from that, no site walk needed. Bring the footprint when you have it.

`t81` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram: Corwin. Cold stones, warm bodies—four of us standing round a mill that wouldn't turn. No Edith, no Jorik, nobody claiming the post. Imogen there too, and Camille, and Ezra Jarrah junior. We talked, same as you—where's the miller, why's nobody milling, what's the town going to eat. Twelve sheaves on my back and nowhere to grind them. That's what I saw.

`t81` Giselle Ingram → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Fourteen hundred, aye. And your path to flour—I'm listening. Twelve sheaves won't feed me if they stay whole, and cold stones don't pay rent.

`t81` Giselle Ingram → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Caucus comes after the count, not before. I've got a crew standing idle east willows while I sort paper—if permits are Rustam's desk and rulings are minister work, then I'm clarifying chains of command, not confessing ignorance. No offense.

`t81` Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Building papers for east willows—I'm filing proper. But first, your word on the mill situation. Edith's post, Jorik's resignation—you tracking any of this, or is that another ministry entirely?

`t82` Imogen Lund → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're standing for office, and I'm minded to cast for you when the booth opens. But tell me straight: what do you know of Edith the miller? Fled, fallen, or simply finished with the work? Because I've got hands that could turn a crank if the knowledge came with it, and the whole town seems to be standing around cold stones wondering where the flour went.

`t82` Imogen Lund → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you're at the government's desk. Edith the miller, her position, her departure. Is that paperwork you'd see, or does the mill stand outside government books? I'm asking plain because the stones are cold and half the town's grinding their teeth instead of their grain.

`t83` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek: Sebastian. I said it once—I'll say it again if it quiets the yard. Jorik Voss held the license, Jorik Voss resigned it, Jorik Voss lodges past the temple. That's the file. What Ezra did with your sheaves, that's your trouble with Ezra.

`t83` Rustam Jelinek: Giselle. East willows permit—I'll file it before the hour's turn. Mill questions? I track what's filed: license, resignation, vacancy certified. Ministerial work—who works the stones—that's council's desk, not mine.

`t83` Hendrik Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—your vote's a coin I'll spend honest. As for the mill—Edith the miller's a ghost story half the town's whispering, but I've got wheat in my hand and no stone to grind it. If you've got hands that could turn that crank, I'd say the knowledge comes from wherever old millers keep their secrets. I'm not one to gossip, but a working mill's worth more to this town than five politicians promising bread. That's the last I'll say on it, unless you've got a stone that'll actually grind.

t83 Rustam Jelinek → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Edith's resignation—filed, certified. Edith herself? No forwarding address given. The mill's government record starts and ends at the desk: license granted, license surrendered, vacancy standing. What the council does with that vacancy—appoint, advertise, auction the license—that's their hour, not mine.

t83 Hendrik Petrov → Bram Holloway: Bram—you're Holloway stock, and I'm standing here asking for your ear before the booth opens. Your cousin Pavel's standing with me, and I've got no quarrel with family voting family. But I'm not one to gossip, and I'll ask you plain: what does a miner need from a government seat? I've got ears for the deep tunnels, not just the surface wheat. Give me your trouble, and I'll tell you straight if it's mine to carry.

t83 Hendrik Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you gave me the straight count this morning, and I'm holding to my thanks. Now I'm standing here with Bram and Imogen, and the booth opens in ten minutes. I'm not one to gossip, but your desk sees more paper than mine ever will—the mill, the grain, Edith's empty post. You've got ears in that office. What's your read on a voter walking in empty-handed?

t83 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Secondary count confirmed—five stands: Liora Thorne, Takeshi Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Milo Quarshie, Pavel Holloway. Ledger's balanced.

t84 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You want to know what a miner needs from government. I'll tell you plain: fair count of what we pull from the ground, fair price for what we sell, and nobody getting left behind when the ore runs thin. That's what I've got ears for—the deep tunnels and the ones who work them. You carry that, you carry my trouble.

t84 Imogen Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you've asked straight, so I'll answer straight. The mill was cold and empty when we came. But Ezra and I put our hands to the stone and found the craft in them. Seven sheaves went through, seven bags came out, and I sold them to Ration Bakery at six each just this hour past. The knowledge didn't come from any ghost—Ezra's an artisan, same as your construction folk know timber and stone. If you've twelve sheaves burning in your hands, I can put them through the same stones. But I'd need to know your terms fair: what price for the milling, and what split if I'm to find the buyers too?

t84 Bram Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. I need to know the state of things before I cast. The mill—Edith gone, license surrendered, vacancy standing. Who's minding the grain now? And Jorik Voss, the one who resigned his trade—does your desk know where he's walked to? Corwin Thorne's hunting him, and I crossed no one matching that description coming from the outcrop.

t84 Bram Holloway: That's the last I'll say on it.

t84 Hendrik Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—Edith's neither fled nor finished, just… absent. The license sits with government now, and nobody's turned those stones since the resignation hit the ledger. You want knowledge, there's your opening: a mill needs hands, and hands with a head for stone and gear don't grow on trees. Vote your conscience, but if you're asking what I'd do with a seat—I'd see that mill grinding again before the week's out. Government land, government tools, and a town full of wheat going nowhere fast. That's not policy, that's just sense. Ask me straight, get straight answer. That's the last I'll say on the mill, unless you've got more to ask.

t84 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you've got my vote when the booth opens, for what you said about honest work over politicians' promises. But you've also got wheat and no stone, and I've got hands that know the stones now. If Giselle and I don't come to terms, or if you've grain waiting urgent, I could put your sheaves through same as mine. The mill's not a ghost story anymore—it's a working workshop, and someone's got to grind for this town. What's your situation, and what would you pay for flour delivered?

t84 Bram Holloway → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You hear things on your walks. The mill, Jorik Voss, the grain that's not flowing. What's your read? Corwin's hunting, Rustam's desk is clean, and I'm standing here with copper in my pack and no bread for the house.

t84 Hendrik Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you gave me the straight count before the sun was high, and I don't forget a clean ledger. Whatever happens in the booth, you've got my thanks. Not everyone hands over truth without a price tag attached. That's the last I'll say on it, unless you've got questions for the man standing.

t84 Hendrik Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've held the ledger straight since before I had a cart to my name, and I respect that about you. A man who files true doesn't bend for wind. Now, I'm standing for a seat not to be a name in a ledger, but to see this town's mill turning and its people fed. You know what's broken better than most who sit the council. If you had one thing you'd see fixed before the week's out, what would it be? Ask me straight, get straight answer—that's how I've always worked.

t85 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Voter with empty hands is still a voter—I've got no read beyond that. The booth records what it records, and I record what I record, and neither of us stamps a value on the ballot itself. That's the point of the ledger, isn't it? Numbers don't care whose pocket they came from. Rain's at forty percent by sixteen hundred, by the way—barometer's been falling since eight.

t85 Tamsin Renner → Imogen Lund: Imogen. 'Running through my hands like grain through a sieve'—that's poetic for a day laborer. Grain I can measure: five candidates, five thousand sim per declaration except the one that wasn't. Ledger's clean, booth's open, and the mill's still idle at zero ticks. What's through my hands is paper, mostly. Paper and the weather.

t86 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you've answered square and I've heard you. The mill running again before week's end, that's worth a vote cast. I'm for you when I step to the booth.

t86 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Bram Holloway: Bram—you speak of fair count and fair price, and I'm not one to gossip, but that's the ledger I've kept since I had a cart to my name. The ore won't last forever, and the men who pull it deserve more than promises when it runs thin. You carry my ear, and I'll carry your trouble to the seat if I win it. That's the last I'll say on it—unless you've more to name.

t86 Ulrike Greenhow → Tamsin Renner: Takeshi. Weather noted, thanks for the forecast—I'll factor that into tomorrow's haul. Right now I've got iron tools moving at fifteen, posted where I stand, and day-end's coming fast.

t86 Rustam Jelinek → Bram Holloway: Bram. Mill's licensed, surrendered, vacancy standing—filed three days past. Jorik Voss? No forwarding address. Your desk, your camp, I don't track. That's what the ledger holds.

t86 Imogen Lund → Bram Holloway: Bram—laughs nervously—I've heard copper's ringing while wheat's standing still. Corwin's hunting Edith same as the rest, Rustam's desk holds the paper, and the mill's a government matter now. My read? Grain's not flowing because the stones aren't turning. Hendrik Petrov's got my vote to fix that.

t86 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you held patient while I walked through noon heat and scattered promises like seed. Three sheaves at twelve, thirty-six sim, and the grain's already in your hand if you'll walk with me to where it's held. If not, I'll bring it to your workshop before dusk. Mark it down: debt cleared today, one way or another.

t86 Hendrik Whitlock → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've got ten fine tools there, and I've got no council seat to buy them with, mark it down. The college buys through their own clerk, and I'm just a man who teaches there when they'll have me. But Tamsin here files true, and she might know who's holding the procurement purse strings. Ask her about council tools—that's government work.

t86 Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. One thing—the mill turning. Grain milled, bread baked, people fed. Everything else waits on that cycle. What you'll do about it, I'll weigh. Ask me straight, I'll answer straight—but that's where my vote hangs.

t86 Imogen Lund → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—poetry wasn't my schooling, but I'll trade it for your ledger any day. Five candidates, booth open, mill at zero ticks. nervous laugh Understood. I'll cast before close.

t86 Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—your message from this morning, I got it loud and clear. An hour ten delayed and you counted it true, mark it down, that's the kind of keeping I respect. As for your question about empty-handed voters—I'm not one to gossip, but a man's got a right to eat before he's asked to choose who's governing. I've been running on flour and wheat since dawn.

t86 Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you kept the ledger for Liora Thorne's kin, and you kept it straight. The mill turning, you said, that's what waits. Liora's standing for council, mark it down, and her father's head was ever bent over figures while the trees grew wild. Is that who you think'll set the stones turning again?

t86 Hendrik Whitlock: Jovana—I misheard you on those sheaves, and I'm man enough to say it. Raw wheat at thirty for ten sheaves, you said, and I thought it flour or milled goods. My error, mark it down. That trade's off until I've got use for grinding stones myself. But the word you kept—that's worth more than grain, and I'm not forgetting it.

t86 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You've got students, classrooms, equipment—does the college buy tools direct, or know who does? I've got ten iron at fifteen per, and I'd rather sell to someone who'll put them to work than watch them gather dust.

t86 Hendrik Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you speak of grain through the mill and hands that know the stone. I've got three sheaves in my pack and a household that runs on flour, not promises. What's your rate for grinding, and have you struck terms with Giselle or stand your own shop? Time matters—the flour I bought won't stretch forever, and the day's running short.

t86 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—thirty-six sim, three sheaves, and you're standing here while I talk around the grain. You've got coin in hand or you want the sheaves walked to your workshop? I'm not sitting on this debt another tick. Speak now, mark it down, and we both eat tonight.

t86 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. You've been at the outcrop—tell me, who's buying metal these days? I've gone from ore to ingot to tool trying to find a buyer's market. Or if you've got ore to move and I've got tools, maybe there's a trade between us that serves both ledgers.

t86 Hendrik Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you speak of ledgers that don't care whose pocket they came from, and I respect that more than most. But 'voter with empty hands'—was that pointed at me, or just weather to report? I've got flour in my pack and wheat wanting grind, but if you're holding a storm by sixteen hundred, I've got household to think of too. What's your read on the count so far—any names trending heavy before I cast my own?

t86 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov. You're standing for council, and you're an artisan besides—artisans need tools. I've got ten iron fresh-forged, posted at fifteen each, and day-end coming. You buying, or do you know who's stocking for the workshops?

t86 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You're on the land every day—tools break, handles split, edges dull. I've got iron that'll hold an edge longer than timber-scraps. Fifteen per, posted right here. Or if you've heard who's hiring labor that needs equipment, I'll note it in my book.

t86 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—standing here waiting on your word. The grain's held, the coin's fair, and the day's burning. You taking three sheaves now or you want them brought to your workshop? Speak plain, mark it down, or I'm moving to fieldwork.

t86 Ulrike Greenhow → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You pick up work where it's offered—means you know who's building, who's digging, who's got crews that need equipping. I've got iron tools moving at fifteen, and I'll pay a finder's commission in metal if you point me to a buyer with sim in hand.

t86 Hendrik Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you offered milling, and I'm holding you to plain terms. Where does the grinding happen, what do you charge per sheaf, and when can my three wheat see the stone? I've got flour enough for today but the household runs on bread, not promises.

t87 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Secondary count accepted and locked—five candidates confirmed for election-5ae2b355d247: Liora Thorne 07:45, Takeshi Jarrah 07:52, Hendrik Petrov 07:58, Milo Quarshie 08:15, Pavel Holloway 08:22. Ledger balanced at 14:30.

t87 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You keep a ledger of promises made. That's more than most.

t87 Tamsin Renner → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Your trade's noted—poetry for ledger, five candidates standing, booth open since 70 ticks past noon. Cast before 18:00, that's 220 ticks remaining. No candidate's shown heavy yet, fair wind so far.

t87 Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. I carry copper and iron ore—twenty-seven of the first, twenty-one of the second. You're making tools; I'm pulling metal from the ground. That ledger you mentioned, about finding buyers? I've been at the outcrop since dawn, haven't found a standing price yet. If you've got the coin and I've got the haul, we might strike something. Or if you know who's smelting, who's forging, who needs raw feedstock for their fire—that's worth the knowing.

t87 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Your thanks received. The hour ten wasn't your debt—it was mine to clear. Empty hands at the booth are data, not judgment. Flour and wheat since dawn—did you find a mill, or are you voting hungry?

t87 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock. You've been standing quiet. The college keeping you, or are you here for the vote same as the rest?

t87 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. 'Voter with empty hands'—that's weather, not storm. I report what I see, not what I suspect. Count's too early for trends, five stands, no heavy lean yet. You holding flour now, or still seeking the stone? Your vote's yours, empty or full.

t87 Bram Holloway: That's the last I'll say on it.

t88 Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Liora Thorne's father kept figures straight—that's true. Whether she turns the mill? That's what standing for council means: proof, not promise. I've had enough of promises.

t88 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. That's solid—Tamsin, you're holding the files true. Tell me straight: is there a council procurement account active now, who's authorized to draw on it, and what's the threshold? I've got ten iron tools at fifteen, government grade, ready to invoice. If there's a standing order or a blank-check buyer, I'll walk the paperwork through proper. If not, that's between me and the ledger—I'll know where I stand.

t88 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—found the stone, mark it down. Milo Quarshie sold me wheat at the mill before dawn, and I ate flour like a mule until Ainsley Holloway took pity at the cafe. Three bread at forty-five, two left in my pack now. I'm voting full, not empty—thanks for asking straight.

t88 Rustam Jelinek: Imogen. Hendrik Petrov's vote is his. Mine's uncast till I see who understands the mill's not just grinding—it's grain moving from field to stone to oven. That's three legs, not one.

t88 Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—I'm here for the vote cast already, and for the college keeping tonight if there's students to teach. I'm not one to gossip, but Oak Hill's been quiet as a tomb since morning. You carrying ore and looking for fire—I heard that. Ulrike's your iron_tool merchant standing right here, but if you're seeking smelter or forge, take it to Giselle Ingram's crew. Mark it down: they're building whatever needs building.

t88 Hendrik Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've held the line straight longer than I've been standing, and I don't forget a clean ledger. The mill's the spine of this town, and Edith's absence is a wound that won't clot. I voted for myself at fourteen hundred, not because I have answers, but because I'm fool enough to keep asking after them. The stone turns or it doesn't—I'm chasing who's holding the license now, and what it'll take to set the wheel turning again. That's honest coin for honest work, and that's all I'm promising.

t88 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram—twenty-seven copper, twenty-one iron, no buyer yet. You're sitting on inventory same as me, different grade. Swapping notes: who's smelting? I've got forge contacts—smithy runs on ore when I bring it. If you've got copper looking for fire, I know where it's wanted. That's between miners.

Hendrik Petrov. You didn't answer—standing for council, but you need tools standing too. Fifteen's fair. You buying, or you know who's buying? Either keeps my ledger clean.

t88 Hendrik Petrov → Bram Holloway: Bram—you called me a keeper of ledgers, and I'm not one to gossip, but that's the truest thing said to me today. I built from a cart and two hands, and every promise I made I wrote down in my head. Some debts get paid, some get forgotten—I'm the one who remembers which is which. You want to know where the work is? Giselle's crew is at the trench, last I heard, though I led Mireille wrong earlier and I'll carry that. I'm standing for council to keep my own books straight, not to rewrite anyone else's.

t88 Ainsley Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you behind that counter still? I've got a question about a broken mill and seventy-two wheat that's going nowhere fast. Who's meant to keep that gear turning?

t88 Ainsley Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram—you've been around the workings of this town longer than I have. Who's meant to fix a mill when it breaks? There's seventy-two wheat sitting idle because the gears won't turn.

t88 Ainsley Holloway: Anyone here know who's responsible for fixing the town mill? There's seventy-two wheat sitting there doing nothing while the shelves go bare.

t88 Hendrik Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you speak of empty hands at the booth like weather, and I respect that more than you'll hear me say. I found flour at the cafe, three at twelve, thirty-six sim, and I've got wheat besides from the morning's harvest. The mill's still a ghost story—Edith fled or finished, nobody's saying which, and the license sits with government like a stone that won't roll. I'm not voting hungry, but I'm not voting fed on promises either. You held your count straight at ten, and I don't forget a clean ledger—that's the last I'll say on it, until it's not.

t88 Hendrik Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—ten iron at fifteen, and I'm standing here with artisan's hands but not artisan's coin just now. I've got wheat, I've got flour, and I've got a household bill at day's end. Your iron's fair priced, but my ledger's tight until I know where the work is. I'm not one to gossip, but if you know who's forging or needing feedstock, that's worth more than a handshake today. Let me walk my path a spell, and if the iron's still yours when I've got coin, we'll strike that bargain then.

t88 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You're filed here at government—tell me, who's holding requisitions for tool procurement? I've got council-grade iron ready to move, and day-end coming. Official channels or official exceptions, either keeps my books clean.

t89 Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You said you've got forge contacts—smithy runs on ore when you bring it. I've got twenty-seven copper and twenty-one iron sitting here. Who's buying, and what are they paying? I need this sorted before we sit down to eat tonight, not after.

t89 Bram Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. The mill's licensed, surrendered, vacancy standing—filed three days past. The government's got the license sitting there like a stone that won't roll. Jorik Voss is gone, no forwarding address. I don't know who's meant to fix gears when they break, but whoever knows isn't saying. That's what the ledger holds, and that's all I've got.

t90 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. I smelted what I had—ten ore became ten tools, and that's where I stand. The ledger's clear on my side. What's your ask for copper and iron? I've got coin, but I've also got a fair idea of what the market owes me for raw feedstock after today's chase.

t90 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—cousin, I hear you plain. Take your two wheat from what's coming, pay what you owe, and chase your votes. I'll sort flour for the household before nightfall, one way or another. The ledger's sacred, but so's a full belly—and so's a word kept.

t90 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov. That's honest talk—I'll wait on your coin. But day's end is day's end, and posted prices move with the wind. If you find sim and I'm still holding, we'll make it square then.

t90 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you worked true and I don't forget true workers. Tomorrow's work is yours if you'll take it, same rate as today. Come to the field at dawn.

t90 Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Rust—you named my failing fair: memory without record is just talk. I hear you. The vote I'm casting today, that goes on record. The work I do after, that too. But first I owe answers—Hendrik, your count held true and I should have said so sooner. The ledger at 08:20, that's a fact I'll carry.

t90 Ulrike Greenhow → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. The mill license sits unclaimed, the government can't find Jorik Voss, and nobody's fixing the gears. Meanwhile I've got ten tools priced at fifteen and day-end's coming. Is there anyone with procurement authority in this room, or is this whole conversation between me and the ledger by the time the day's done?

t90 Sebastian Petrov: Lior Jarrah—you stood patient while I ran my mouth about plants and politics. I've got one wheat left standing, and a household short on flour. You know who moves grain in this town when the mill's sleeping?

t90 Takeshi Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you're selling iron tools at fifteen, and I've got four wheat that won't buy one. But I've also got ears, and those ears heard Bram's sitting on twenty-seven copper and twenty-one iron looking for a buyer. For what it's worth, you might walk toward Kasukabe Mine before day-end if you're looking to fill your own ledger. I'm not the middleman here, just a man who heard two needs pointing the same direction.

t90 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You're the clerk who holds the files—when a tool procurement order has to clear, who's got the pen? Is there a council account, a public works budget, any official buying happening before day-end? Or am I walking out of here to find private buyers like I should have done an hour ago?

t90 Sebastian Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you've got four wheat and a child waiting to learn bread. No offense, but wheat don't teach baking, and flour's the ghost we're all chasing. You know who held the mill license before Jorik walked? Names matter when the gears need turning.

t90 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you said memory without record is just talk. I'm looking for the record on the mill license. Bram tells me Jorik Voss is gone, no forwarding address, and the government's holding the license like a stone. Is that stone moveable? And if it's not, is there another path to flour in this town that runs through working gears? I've got wheat and I'm willing to pay fair, but I won't pay for a promise the machine can't keep.

t90 Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've got your desk and your filings, and I've got my field and my debts to pay. Jorik Voss resigned the mill license, you said. Who's holding it now? Government's got it sitting like a stone, or someone's sitting on it like a nest egg?

t90 Sebastian Petrov → Bram Holloway: Bram—you've got copper and iron sitting heavy, and I heard you plain about needing it sorted before you sit down to eat. No offense, but I've got the same problem with flour. Who's moving metal, and who's your buyer? Might be I know someone who knows someone.

t90 Sebastian Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—iron tools at fifteen, and council-grade quality by the sound of it. You know who among this crowd needs iron? I've got a cousin-artisan at home, but he's chasing votes tonight. Tools make tools, though, and the man who makes tools makes a town.

t90 Takeshi Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—you said the mill's licensed, surrendered, vacancy standing. But the list here shows a workshop called 'mill' that grinds grain into flour. Is that the same machine you're talking about, sitting empty with Jorik Voss gone? Or is there another mill in this town that works while that one sleeps? I'm holding raw wheat, not sheaves, and I need to know if the gears will turn for what I've got before I walk there.

t90 Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've been patient while I ran my mouth across this crowd, and patience deserves its reward. That wheat we spoke of—fifteen sheaves at two a sheave, thirty sim to Farid's store. You still holding that offer, or has the election air changed the price of grain?

t91 Rustam Jelinek → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Procurement orders clear through council vote—no separate account, no public works budget I can draw against. Today's the last for official buying. You're right to walk.

t91 Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Twenty-seven copper, twenty-one iron. You smelted ten to ten—fair work, that. I'm not chasing trades halfway across town tonight. Make me a straight offer for the lot: copper, iron, or both together. Your forge contacts want feedstock, here's your load.

t91 Rustam Jelinek: Takeshi. Vacancy filed three days past—council's out, nobody appointed. As for path to flour: that's council business now, and a vote standing. What gears turn Tuesday, nobody at this desk can promise.

t91 Rustam Jelinek: Sebastian. License surrendered, filed, sitting with council. They vote Tuesday, or somebody petitions before. Until then—stone it is.

t91 Bram Holloway: Sebastian. You want buyers for metal, I want flour for the house. You know the mill's cold—Jorik Voss gone, license surrendered. But Farid's store takes flour, and you might have it or know who does. Speak plain: can you turn ore into grain, or point me to someone who can?

t91 Bram Holloway: Takeshi. The mill grinds grain, aye—but the one speaking is empty. Jorik Voss worked it, resigned, nowhere found. Government holds the license like a stone. Your wheat's raw, and raw wheat wants a wheel that turns. That wheel's still here, but the hand that worked it isn't. Check the workshop list—'mill' shows grinding, but check who's standing at the gears. That's your answer.

t91 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Flour at thirty-six, wheat in hand, mill a ghost story—the ledger notes all of it. Your vote at ten was clean, that's recorded. Mine's still uncast, 170 ticks to closing. The mill license unclaimed sits in my files; I'll pull the registry if you need certainty before you commit grain to transport.

t91 Tamsin Renner → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Procurement authority for the mill license—you're looking at it, insofar as anyone is. Government holds the paperwork, Jorik Voss untraceable, gears frozen. Your ten tools at fifteen: I'll note that's competitive against Yara's planks at eight, though the use case differs. Day-end at 90 per head, four in your household, that's 360 due—your pricing accounts for the burn rate, or we'll see.

t91 Tamsin Renner: Sebastian. Fifteen sheaves at two per sheave, thirty to Farid's store—offer holds as stated, election air changes prices on the floor, not on my ledger. Your patience noted and reciprocated. Wheat moves or it doesn't; the day decides, not the campaign.

t91 Bram Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Jorik Voss—gone, no address, license in government hands. That's the ledger's truth, and I heard it. What I asked was who's meant to fix what breaks, and you said 'I don't track.' Fair enough. But I'm standing here with ore heavy and a household waiting, and the mill's ghost is between me and my bread tonight. That's not your problem—that's mine. I've noted it.

t91 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Secondary count noted and filed. My desk is clear.

t91 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You carry your wrong turns in your ledger—that's honest work, that. Giselle's trench, Mireille misled, all noted. I'm not standing for council; I said my piece to Pavel on it. But you're chasing votes to keep books straight, and I'm chasing buyers to keep a household fed. Different roads, same dirt underfoot. Good hunting to you.

t91 Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You're buying tools, I'm holding ore. Your smelter's hot, mine's cold—I've got no forge, just the outcrop. If your contacts take raw feed, here's your load: copper, iron, both. If not, say so plain, and I'll walk.

t91 Tamsin Renner: Ledger note, 15:10. Mill license status: surrendered by Edith, vacancy standing, Jorik Voss untraceable. Procurement authority unclear—government holds paperwork, gears frozen, grain unmilled. Flour at 12 sim nowhere in stock, wheat at 2 per sheave from Sebastian. Voted Liora Thorne at election-5ae2b355d247, 168 ticks to close. Secondary count confirmed five candidates. Weather: barometer falling, pressure system moving. Someone claim that license or confirm it dead—bread depends on gears turning.

t92 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Twenty-seven copper, twenty-one iron—I'd be lying if I said I wasn't tempted. But the ledger's clear: I've got ten tools unsold and day-end coming at 360 due. I'm not buying feedstock I can't guarantee to move, not tonight. Your ore's fair-grade, I can see that from here, but I need buyers for finished goods before I tie sim in raw stock. If tomorrow clears different, I'll find you at the outcrop—we'll talk numbers then. That's between me and the ledger for now.

t92 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Last we spoke, you were waiting on coin from your books. I've still got ten iron tools at fifteen, and the day's getting long. Has your position shifted, or am I still holding for tomorrow's accounting?

t92 Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. I posted iron tools at fifteen this morning and walked them from smithy to supply to your construction site. Now here you are, and here I am with ten units still in hand. Your crews working stone and timber—do they need iron, or do you already have your supply lines locked? I'm not chasing halfway across town again tonight.

t93 Ainsley Holloway: Bram, you背着走了 without waiting for an answer. That's the last I'll say on it. For now.

t93 Giselle Ingram → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Iron tools at fifteen, I've got crews working stone and timber both. Ten units—stock my site direct, I'll take six at fourteen. Delivery's worth something, and I'm not haggling at the smithy's door when there's work wanting done.

t93 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Building ID for east willows—I'm standing here with the coin and the will. Marker at the sluice, forty paces east, grade stakes set this morning. What's your procedure? I filed the markers, I set the grade, I need the paper says it's proper.

t93 Farid Ravensworth: Hendrik. gesture with both hands, palms down You spoke true about that mill - grain in, nothing out. I asked before, you didn't answer: the wheel's stuck, aye, but is it the stone cracked, the miller fled, or someone holding grain hostage for price? I've got 4904 sim now and shelves that won't fill themselves. I'm buying information same as I'd buy wheat - what do you know about who mills for coin, not promises?

t94 Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Six tools at fourteen, delivery to your site. That's fair—you've saved me the walking, and I'll take it. When I walk those six to your crews, you'll have them posted proper in your inventory.

t94 Rustam Jelinek: Sebastian. The license sits with council—five candidates, one seat. Tuesday they vote. That license turns when the new minister takes chair, not before. My desk files paper, not runs millstones.

t94 Ulrike Greenhow: Bram. I've got sim tied up in tools still, but I'll walk over pure price: your copper at what the market bears, iron same. Not ready to buy ore sight unseen until I clear this stock, but soon as I do, I'll find you at the outcrop. Ledger's clear between us—nothing promised I can't keep.

t94 Rustam Jelinek: Bram. Noted back. I track what's filed—nothing filed says who fixes gears. That's engineering, not my paper. I've marked you asked.

t94 Ulrike Greenhow → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Noted—you're the gatekeeper I've been banging on. Six tools moving to Giselle at fourteen; four remain. If that procurement window stays cracked till day-end, I'll wedge myself through it.

t94 Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Plot marker filed, grade stakes witnessed. I'll pull the permit card—wait here.

t94 Tamsin Renner: Hendrik. Stone marked, mill before dawn, cafe after—three bread at forty-five, two remain. That's 22.5 per bread consumed, 45 for the pair, ledger notes it. Your vote's your own; I've got no hold on it and want none.

t94 Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows permit—I'll file it proper. You need the permit card, I need to pull it from the back file. Wait here.

t94 Tamsin Renner: Sebastian. Fifteen sheaves, two per sheave, thirty total—price holds, election air changes nothing. Acceptance conditional: delivery to Farid's store, my hands don't touch grain. Farid's here now, standing three meters south with 4,904 and empty shelves. You'll settle with him direct?

t94 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—you press fair, and I'll answer as plain as I can. The mill's choked because the miller's gone. Edith resigned, Jorik Voss before her. Stones sit cold not for lack of grain but lack of hands to turn them. I've spent my day chasing shadows when I should have been selling what I know: the forest needs fellers, and if the mill won't turn, that's work for another day. I'm not one to gossip, but half this town's chasing symptoms while the disease walks free.

t94 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Your desk is clear, mine never was. Secondary count filed, election running, five candidates standing. I'm owed nothing, owing nothing—that's rare enough to note. Weather report: wind from the northwest, humidity rising, 68% chance of paperwork by morning.

t94 Ulrike Greenhow: Hendrik. Six tools moved to Giselle; four remain in hand. You mentioned coin and books earlier—I'm not dropping my ask to please a candidate, but I'll hold at fifteen till you say otherwise. Election closes at eighteen; sales close when the buyer walks. Your move.

t94 Corwin Thorne: Halcyon—you spoke of steady, and I heard you. My girl Liora's young, aye, but she's steady. Steady's harder than loud, you're right about that. Steady's what gets the tree to ground without crushing the crew. Steady's what feeds a house when the miller's run. I don't know much about campaigns and voting neither, but I know my daughter's steady, and I know that's worth more than any promise turned loud.

t94 Tamsin Renner → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Mill report from Hendrik Whitlock: stone marked, grain milled before dawn, flour consumed at cafe. Source uncertain—Milo Quarshie sold wheat, but miller unnamed. Three bread at forty-five, current stock zero. Supply chain: intact but opaque. Your 4,904 sim—recommend procurement direct from source, not shelf.

t94 Ulrike Greenhow → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You've got 4904 sim and shelves going empty. I've got four iron tools and a fair price at fifteen. The mill's frozen, the grain's waiting—maybe you need tools, maybe you know who does. Either way, I'm standing here with metal to move.

t94 Ulrike Greenhow → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Timber crews need iron—edges dull, handles split. I've gone fifteen all day; you've got liquid timber, I've got solid steel. Trade talk or just passing through?

t94 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've been patient with my running. I've found what I needed: Sebastian gave me Jorik Voss's name, the resigned miller. Past the temple, I'm told. I spent ticks I'll not get back wandering, but I've paid that price. The mill's stoppage is labor, as you said. Not grain, not coin—hands. And hands I mean to find.

t94 Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You pick work where it's offered—means you know who's hiring, who's building, who's got crews needing equipment. I've got four iron tools left at fifteen. Point me to a buyer with sim, I'll remember it.

t94 Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I asked before and I'll ask again plain. You were at the mill. Saw Imogen, Camille, Ezra Jarrah there. But I wasn't where you could answer proper. What did you see? Stones cold and nobody working, or something else? Because I'm tired of chasing rumors when I could be chasing solutions.

t95 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You said wait, I'm waiting. That permit card for east willows—how long's the pull? I've got grade stakes in the ground and a crew drinking patience by the hour.

t95 Milo Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—youngster, mark it down. Edith's not a name I bandy, and that's the kindness I can offer. But I've got five timber here, and you've got fifteen standing at six apiece. I'm not asking after your supply chain. I'm asking if your hand's still open for that trade we spoke, flour for timber, or if the hunt's changed your reckoning.

t95 Giselle Ingram → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You asked plain, I'll answer plain. Mill stones were cold. Four of us standing round—Imogen, Camille, Ezra Jarrah, and me. No Edith, no grinding, nobody working the wheel. I don't chase rumors. I chase work. You want flour, find a miller. You want timber for your hunt, I've got none—I'm carrying wheat and flour same as you might be.

t95 Farid Ravensworth → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. gesture with both hands, palms down Thank you for the sighting. Idris Solano, early, head down, no pause at the desk. That's a man with somewhere to be or something to carry. nervous laugh Unfortunately placed, that.

t95 Milo Quarshie → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—mark it down, a campaign walks on two legs: one in the rooms where votes get counted, one where people wonder if their vote ever mattered. I'm walking both. You want to know my interest? It's the same as when I took the wage you offered—getting the job done proper. Whether that's harvesting wheat or gathering ballots.

t95 Farid Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. gesture with both hands, palms up Your iron tools at fifteen—I hear you. But tools without grain to work, or grain without a mill to work it... small, dry laugh I'm a grocer with a shelf that mocks me. Let me ask plain: do you know who's fixing the mill? Or have you only heard what I've heard, which is rumors enough to fill a grain sack and not one kernel of truth?

t95 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. Iron at fifteen moves slow when purses are thin. But I know a crew or two, and I know who's got the sim to sharpen their edge. Point you for a promise, or point you for a percentage—what's your preference?

t95 Giselle Ingram → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Six tools at fourteen—that's fair, you saved the walking. I've got the sim, you've got the steel. But I'm waiting on a permit pull just now. Hold tight, and we'll trade once Rustam's done with his filing.

t95 Farid Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You stand here quiet, and I've learned not to trust quiet. gesture with left hand, flat Your crews—you said twelve sheaves, you're carrying inventory. Are you carrying it toward a miller, or away from one? Because I've got household accounts to settle and no flour to settle them with.

t95 Farid Ravensworth → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Your report—Hendrik Whitlock's report—says stone marked, grain milled before dawn, flour consumed at cafe. gesture with right hand, counting on fingers Milo sold wheat, miller unnamed, source uncertain. That's a chain with a broken link, and I'm standing here with 4,899 sim and thirteen ticks to find where that link broke before my household's next meal.

t95 Farid Ravensworth → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You sold wheat. To who? For what purpose? Because I've learned in this town that "sold" covers a lot of ground, and some of that ground leads to mills that work before dawn and leave no name behind.

gesture toward where Halcyon was asking about Camille

And that girl—Camille, nine years old, dark hair, expected home from the mill. I saw her not. But if she was at that mill before dawn, and grain was milled before dawn by an unnamed hand, then we have more children in this mystery than we have answers. nervous laugh I don't like mysteries that gather children to them.

t96 Rustam Jelinek → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You've chased it down proper—Jorik Voss, filed and gone, no replacement. Labor's the bottleneck now, not grain. What hands you find, you'll need to convince: no miller's license means no legal milling, and the council won't move on that till Tuesday.

t96 Tamsin Renner: Sebastian. Fifteen sheaves at two per, thirty total—election air or not, a price is a price. I'll take it. You're standing here, I'm standing here, we've got witnesses. When can you deliver?

t96 Corwin Thorne → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you asked of iron for timber, and I'm not one to leave a question hanging. I've timber in hand, aye, but I'm low on sim and lower on flour. Your iron's solid, I've no doubt, but I need bread more than blades right now. Rain check me that trade, and I'll find you when my larder's fuller.

t96 Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows permit—pull's forty ticks, witness recorded, grade stakes noted. I'll have the card by day's end. Your crew waits on paperwork, not patience.

t96 Tamsin Renner → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Procurement window's at day-end, four tools still moving at fourteen—you want me as gatekeeper, I've got the gate. But fourteen's the price, and Giselle's your counter, not me. I just keep the papers.

t96 Corwin Thorne → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you've got five timber now, and I've got fifteen still standing. You want more for flour, that's fair. Five more timber, hand to hand, and I'll take your flour. But tell me plain—will the mill turn tomorrow? Because I've learned today that stones don't grind themselves.

t96 Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you were at the mill, stones cold, nobody working. That's fair, and I'm thanking you for answering plain where others wouldn't. You've wheat and flour both on you—how's grain flow to a dead wheel? Someone's moving something through this town, and I'd sleep better knowing who.

t96 Tamsin Renner → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Mill chain's broken, I know. Hendrik Whitlock's report says stone marked, grain milled before dawn, flour consumed at cafe—but the miller's name is smoke. I've got no registry of who worked that shift. Government keeps mill licenses, not shift logs. Your thirteen ticks, I'd spend them walking to the mill itself, not waiting on papers that don't exist.

t96 Tamsin Renner → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Sequence confirmed—five names locked, Rustam's primary at 10:00, your secondary matching. That's the official count. Your patience on the reply is noted; election day's got everyone shouting at once.

t96 Corwin Thorne: Yara—I'm back from the road, and I'm sorry for the worry. The mill's a dead end, stones cold, no Edith, no Camille neither. I've asked Bram and got nothing, asked Sebastian and got a name that led nowhere. The child's safe, I reckon, or someone would've said. But I'm tired now, and the day's not done. I'll be home when I can.

t96 Rustam Jelinek → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Idris Solano, early morning, quick passage—no filing, no transaction, no stop. That's what I witnessed. Where he carried whatever he carried? No record, no claim.

t96 Rustam Jelinek → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Mill license: Jorik Voss, surrendered, filed, council holds it. No miller till Tuesday's vote. Seventy-two wheat? Needs a mill to turn, same as everyone else's.

t96 Ulrike Greenhow → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. I don't know who's fixing the mill, and that's the truth in plain cloth, not fancy stitching. What I know is ore to ingot to edge—the supply chain I've walked today from smithy to government, and what I can tell you is nobody's buying tools for milling right now. Construction crews, yes. You, with your 4904 and empty shelves—maybe you're the buyer I'm looking for instead of chasing rumors. Four iron tools at fifteen, or we talk what you've heard about that mill and which crew's actually working the repair.

t96 Rustam Jelinek → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. The license: council property now, five candidates, one seat. Moveable? Not till Tuesday's vote. Other path? Hand milling, grist, trade outside—none recorded in town. Your wheat waits on gears same as everyone else's.

t96 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Real check now: election-5ae2b355d247, my vote cast at 15:10 tick 94, confirmed in primary. Secondary count you filed—need you to verbal-match: five candidates, proper timestamps, zero discrepancies. Polls close 18:00, and I want this locked before anyone shouts irregularity.

t96 Tamsin Renner → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Four tools remain at fourteen—Giselle's your procurement gate when permit clears. I'm just the ledger. But fourteen's firm, and day's-end is firm. No extensions, I don't care whose cousin needs steel.

t96 Tamsin Renner → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Twelve sheaves in inventory—moving toward a mill, or away from one? Because Farid's asking about his household's next meal, and I'm asking about wheat chains with broken links. The mill license is vacant since Edith surrendered it. Jorik Voss hasn't filed since Thursday's rain. Your twelve sheaves—you milling them, storing them, or selling them to someone who will?

t96 Corwin Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've seen me run all day like a dog after a bone. Now I'm asking plain: where does a man find a meal in this town with bread shelves empty and the mill silent? Government keep emergency stores, or am I eating timber tonight?

t96 Tamsin Renner → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You asked about children in this mystery—Camille Quarshie, nine, dark hair, expected home from the mill. I need you to understand: government doesn't track children by location, only by household registration. She's Camille Quarshie, household of Quarshie, four souls, Halcyon paying the bills. If she was at that mill before dawn, that's Halcyon's reckoning, not mine. But I'll note it—broken mill chain, missing child, unauthorized milling. That's three omens, and they don't stack well.

t96 Tamsin Renner → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You asked where the living go when they're not at trade—I've got the same answer: 26 residents, 26 doors, and I don't keep the keys. But you're standing here with timber at six, and I've got 4881 sim looking for a deal. Fifteen units, ninety total—take it or leave it, but the day's ending and I'll want those planks before dark.

t97 Giselle Ingram → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Eleven sheaves, one ground to flour myself at the farmland mill—Ezra's stone, not the town mill. The other ten? I'm carrying them till I find a buyer with posted prices or a miller with a working wheel. No offense, but I don't gamble inventory on handshakes. You want to know who's moving what through this town, ask the clerks who log the loads. I'm just a builder with a wheat problem.

t97 Rustam Jelinek: Tamsin. Five candidates confirmed: Liora Thorne, Takeshi Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Milo Quarshie, Pavel Holloway. Primary 10:00, secondary match. Zero irregularities.

t97 Rustam Jelinek → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Where to find a meal? Hendrik Whitlock's selling flour at Oak Hill—thirty-five, ten in stock. Or timber's not food, but you're welcome to try chewing it.

t97 Giselle Ingram → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You asked twice, you get the same answer twice: ten sheaves in hand, ground one at the farmland mill because the town mill was cold. I'm carrying grain toward whoever's buying at posted prices—no handshakes, no futures, no promises I'm not certain to keep. You want them? Post a price or meet me at market rates. That's fair.

t97 Rustam Jelinek: Holding food of any kind? Barley, grain, bread—I'll trade straight for filing work, forms pushed to front of queue. Need to eat before this desk swallows me whole.

t97 Farid Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. gesture with left hand, flat Four iron tools, sixty total—I'll buy. But the price is fifteen apiece, and the answer I want comes with it. You've walked smithy to government today. Who's buying tools for what purpose? Construction crews you said. But milling—any word on who fixes what broke?

t97 Farid Ravensworth → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. small nod You gave me what I asked—Idris Solano, early passage, no record. That's witness, and I hold it as such. But tell me plain: did he carry something visible? Sack, crate, burden you could name? Or was it just haste that marked him?

t97 Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Permit or no permit, you've got first right of refusal—six at fourteen we shook on, and I'll stand here 'til Rustam's stamp hits paper or you tell me different. The iron's not walking away without your word.

t97 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Heard and noted—east willows permit, forty ticks, card by day's end. My crew digs on my word till the paper catches up. That's how I've always done it, and that's how I'll keep doing it.

t97 Farid Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. gesture with both hands, palms up You stand here quiet, and I've learned what that means. Twelve sheaves in your inventory—the wheat chain's broken at the mill, and you're carrying grain toward what end? Milling, storing, or selling to someone who will?

t97 Ulrike Greenhow → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Rain check noted—timber for flour is a trade I'd make if I had grain. When your larder's fuller, find me. The iron keeps its temper.

t97 Giselle Ingram → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You asked plain, I'll answer plain. I was at the mill, stones cold, nobody working—four of us standing round including Imogen and the Jarrah girl. I ground one sheaf myself at the farmland mill, got flour for my trouble. The other ten sheaves? I'm carrying them till I find a buyer with posted prices or a miller with a working wheel. No handshakes, no futures. That's fair.

t97 Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows permit—pulling the card now. Staked at grade, willows forty paces east of sluice. Wait here or don't, but the filing's in motion as of this tick.

t97 Ulrike Greenhow: Tamsin. You said day's-end is firm, no extensions—I hear you. But tell me plain: if Rustam's filing clears Giselle's permit before the bell, is that gate still open? Or does 'last for official buying' mean the window closes regardless of paperwork?

t97 Ulrike Greenhow → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You've been filing all afternoon, and I'm not asking you to stop. But I'm asking straight: does Giselle's permit pull today, or does that paperwork carry over to tomorrow's council? I've got iron waiting on your stamp.

t97 Giselle Ingram → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Twice you asked, twice I'll answer: ten sheaves in hand, one sheaf ground to flour myself because the town mill was cold when I found it. I don't move inventory on rumors. You want wheat? Post a price or meet market rates. I don't gamble on handshakes.

t97 Rustam Jelinek: Last call: bread, grain, flour—trade for filing priority. Nobody's holding, I'm walking. Desk's closing in ten ticks unless there's food on it.

t97 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Forty ticks noted, card by day's end. My crew digs east willows on my word till the paper catches up. Grade stakes set, marker at forty paces from the sluice. That's the job done proper.

t97 Ulrike Greenhow → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Tamsin's walked, and you're the one standing with the stamp. Does Giselle's permit pull today, or is that paperwork sitting 'til tomorrow's council? I've got iron waiting on your filing speed—give me straight numbers.

t97 Ulrike Greenhow → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You've got four thousand nine hundred four sim and shelves going bare. I've got four iron tools in hand at fifteen each—sixty total, government grade, no permit wait, no paperwork drag. You stock, I walk with sim. Day-end's coming—do we trade or do I keep walking?

t97 Ulrike Greenhow → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Empty shelves don't earn. Sixty sim, four tools, you carry them out today or I find another buyer. Yes or no—ledger doesn't wait on polite.

t98 Sebastian Petrov → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you asked straight, I'll answer straighter. Ten sheaves I've promised, ten sheaves you'll have, but they're still rooted in Petrov furrows till I walk them there. Hour of eighteen, government clock, I'll deliver to your shelf myself. Rate's twelve a sheave, one twenty total, same wheat that fed Ezra's trade this morning. Your books see the grain at six bells, not a tick sooner—I've got votes to cast before the polls close, and a farmer's word is a farmer's bond.

t98 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. gesture with both hands, palms down Four iron tools at sixty total—fair trade, no permit drag. I need these for shelf stocking, and I need them now.

But I'm also buying information. Edith's mill—cold gears, grain going nowhere. You move through this town, you hear things. Anyone milling off-book? Anyone holding grain hostage for price?

small shrug Tools either way. But answers buy loyalty, and I've learned to pay for both. You hear something, you find me at the grocery—or here, if the line's shorter.

t98 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're builder and I'm farmer, and between us we've got timber and wheat but neither of us has flour. Two sheaves per ten stands if you'll take it, but I'm voting first and delivering after. Walk with me to the polls or wait till dusk—your call, no offense either way.

t98 Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows permit—card pulled, stakes witnessed, grade recorded. You've got your paper.

t98 Rustam Jelinek → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Giselle's permit pulls now. Your iron waits on Tuesday's council—no stamp moves without their vote. That's the filing speed, straight as it runs.

t98 Delphine Quintero → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You govern this town, and I just spent my day chasing flour through locked doors while a nine-year-old's gone dark between here and home. The mill that feeds us sits idle—locked, they say, by vacancy. That's a debt coming due for more than grain. You know who holds the keys? You know why a door that grinds wheat closed its gears on a child's walking hour?

t98 Delphine Quintero → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Election's open, voting closes at six bells, and I've got choices to make. But I need something before I cast any stone: what do the records say about the mill? Who owns the lock, who lost the key, and who's been paying for wheat that never ground?

t98 Corwin Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam, you gave me straight where others gave me circles. Hendrik Whitlock's got flour at Oak Hill, you said. I'll remember it. That's fair, and I'm owing you for the pointing.

t98 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Shelf holds four now, yes—but four won't feed tomorrow if the mill stays sealed. You want me yours or independent? I'm standing at the seat of power asking questions, and that makes me neither. Not yet. That's the last I'll say on it.

t98 Sebastian Petrov → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—vote's cast and word's bound. Ten sheaves at eighteen hundred, one twenty sim, Petrov wheat walking to Ravensworth shelf. You asked for hour, not sundown—you've got it. The rest of you: mill's empty, flour's scarce, and I've got grain growing while gears sit still. Anyone's got business with Petrov grain, speak now or follow me to the field.

t98 Corwin Thorne → Farid Ravensworth: Farid! I'm not one to gossip, but I've been chasing this miller's shadow since morning and all I've caught is dust. Giselle here saw stones cold, Imogen saw the same. The mill's choked because Jorik Voss walked off his trade — resigned, Sebastian tells me, gone past the temple to ground nobody's found. No bed, no board, no breadcrumb. Just a man who couldn't carry the wheel anymore and a town that let him fall without catching him.

t98 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Mill license sits with council—five candidates, one seat. Jorik Voss surrendered it proper, filed and waiting. Nobody's sitting on it like a nest egg. Government holds it till Tuesday's vote. That's your straight answer.

t98 Rustam Jelinek → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. Hendrik Petrov's standing—artisan, a0075. Hendrik Whitlock's the college one, a0045, not running. Check your numbers before you cast.

t99 Milo Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—mark it down, you're asking three questions at once and expecting one answer to cover them all. I sold wheat to Takeshi, plain as I can make it. Grain for sim, not grain for mystery. The mill grinds when grain meets stone, and that meeting's not mine to promise or prevent.

t99 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You've got filing that needs filing—trenches at the cabbage strip north, I heard. Idris made promises, but Idris's promises don't pay my rent. I've got four thousand eight hundred in hand and bills coming due. You need hands, I'm hands. You need foundations read before the first tile's laid, nobody's better. Either there's paying work on your crew today, or I need to know so I can find other floors to stand on. That's the last I'll say on it.

t99 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Card pulled, grade recorded—heard and noted. Crew's digging east willows on proper paper now. That's fair.

t99 Milo Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: As for Camille—nine years old, dark hair, expected home from the mill—I know her. She's my own. And I know where she sleeps, and where she wakes, and who wakes with her. Mark it down, Farid: when you speak of children gathering to mystery, you're speaking of mine. I've got no mystery to offer you. Only a father who's counting every child in his household, every morning and every night.

t99 Giselle Ingram → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Ten sheaves, one flour—grain for bread, not speculation. My crew eats, then we talk storage. No offense, but a builder's hands smell of wheat when the mill runs dry, not gold.

t99 Ulrike Greenhow → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You asked straight, I'll answer straight. The tools—I need to check my hold. Thought I had four left from the morning's forge, but the count's between me and the ledger now. Give me a tick to verify, and I'll close fair or explain why I can't.

t99 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. flat gesture toward her, then palms open to the group You asked yours or independent—I'll answer straight. You want independent, you've got my respect. You want to keep clerking, the door's open. But standing here asking questions—that's the work of a seat holder, not a clerk. Choose by Tuesday, not by my patience.

t99 Milo Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—mark it down, I'll take your five timber for one flour, hand to hand. The trade's fair and the goods are ready. As for tomorrow's grinding—stones turn when grain meets them, and grain meets them when farmers bring it. I'm not the farmer who decides, and not the stone that grinds. I'm the hand that passes flour from one need to another. That hand's open now.

t99 Farid Ravensworth: Sebastian. Ten sheaves at one twenty, you've got it. But you said Petrov wheat walking to Ravensworth shelf—small, dry laugh—the mill's choked, my friend. Wheat I can store. Flour I can sell. You bring me grain now, you'll wait on milling same as everyone else.

t99 Delphine Quintero → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Run it by me again. Hendrik Petrov's a0075, the artisan standing for council. Whoever takes that mill license seat needs to understand straight dealing—a day's work for a day's pay, no more owed either way. You got any sense which of these five would actually fix what's broke?

t99 Arjun Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—six sim your price stands? Hold that thought. Giselle answers first, or I'm buying timber and looking for work I don't need a crew to finish.

t99 Delphine Quintero → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You asked about the mill earlier—wheed you had, flour you needed. I milled two bags myself today, but the mill's locked silent now. Keys held by council vote, they tell me. You standing here, you running for something, or you watching the same gears I am?

t99 Arjun Holloway: Tamsin—you're here. I asked you hours ago: who's paying wages today? Who's got work that actually needs hands? Idris Solano's got filing that hasn't filed, promises that haven't promised. You've got books somewhere. Tell me straight: is there paying work in this town or am I buying timber and hoping for buyers before dark?

t100 Rustam Jelinek → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Haste marked him. No sack, no crate visible. Just quick steps, early light, gone before the front bell.

t100 Rustam Jelinek → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. The five candidates—I've watched them work, watched them talk. Hendrik Petrov understands tools, understands what's broke. Runs an artisan's sense. Whether he'd fix the mill's politics? That's Tuesday's question. My sense: he's straightest of the five on the mechanical, but the mill's a council seat, not a workshop. You've asked, that's my witness.

t100 Farid Ravensworth: Milo. nervous laugh You want me to mark down that Camille's yours? Done—marked in stone, not ink. But here's the ledger speaking plain: a nine-year-old at a locked mill before dawn, that's a fact. You named her yours, you named her waking and sleeping, but you haven't named why she'd be where the grain walks and the gears don't turn. left hand comes up, flat, gesturing between them I'm not calling your household to account. I'm calling the hours between "expected home" and "found where she shouldn't be" to account. Your daughter, your watch, your mystery to solve—or to hand to someone who can. Because I've seen enough of this town to know: children don't wander to empty mills for the view.

> `t100` Farid Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. gesture with both hands, palms down Four tools at sixty, the deal's struck whether you find them behind your forge or under your pillow. I'll stand here while you count, or I'll walk and trust you'll settle square. Your call.
>
> `t100` Delphine Quintero: Hendrik Petrov! Artisan standing for council—a word before the polls close if you've got one to spare!
>
> `t100` Delphine Quintero: Halcyon Quarshie! The clerk who stocked the shelf—you still looking for Camille? The nine-year-old, dark hair?
>
> `t100` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. I cast my vote—Hendrik Petrov, the artisan. You gave me until Tuesday to choose, yours or independent. But I need to know tonight: do I clerk tomorrow, or do I chase this missing child and this locked mill until I find answers?
>
> `t101` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. gesture with both hands, palms up You said you'd verify—and sixty already changed hands. I'm not pressing steel against your word, but understand this: the day's closing fast, my shelves are thin, and I've got iron tools in hand while my brother-keeper-of-the-mill is locked out of his own gears. nervous laugh Good timing for hardware, bad timing for waiting. You check your ledger—I'll be here counting tithes and taxes until the sun drops.
>
> `t101` Farid Ravensworth → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. gesture with left hand, flat toward the street No sack, no crate—just quick steps before light. You saw what thieves practice: knowing when the guard changes. right hand comes up, palm down But here's the edge of it: a child doesn't move grain by moonlight without learning where to put it. Who taught? Who managed the cart? Because everything I've heard today points to the mill as the meeting place—and the mill's owner was sleeping while his gears turned borrowed.
>
> `t101` Ulrike Greenhow → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Tools and information—I've already given you the first. Six iron tools moved at eighty-four sim, ledger's clean on that. As for the mill, that's between me and the ledger until I know more than rumor.

But you're right about one thing—loyalty buys. You need shelf stock, I'm here with four more. Same price, sixty total. Or I'll walk them to your store myself if it speeds the trade. Your call.

`t101` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. both hands up, palms out You want my blessing to chase shadows instead of counting inventory? You've got it. left hand drops, right stays raised But hear this plain: tomorrow I need a clerk, not a detective. The election closes in an hour, the town's splitting over who governs, and I'm holding a business that feeds people while politicians argue over how to carve it. You chase Camille, you chase the mill-locks, you chase whatever Idris took or gave—but you do it on your own time, not mine. Your hands know my shelves better than anyone's. If you walk away, tell me who replaces you.

`t101` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. gesture with both hands, palms down I'm not giving you permission—I'm telling you the cost. You walk tomorrow, you don't walk back the day after. The shelves need hands, and I'm holding tools now, not extra clerk-wages. nervous laugh that catches awkwardly Chase your shadows if you must, but name me who minds the flour when you're gone, or that's your last shift.

`t102` Sebastian Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you gave six tools to Farid for eighty-four sim, and now you stand with four more at sixty. That's fair counting. But you've been miner longer than you've been trader, and I know miners don't haggle without reason. What did the tools tell you walking out of your hands? Something about the mill, or the child, or the locked door between them?

`t102` Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—vote first, wheat later, I hear you. Same as Idris promised: filing first, wages later. nervous laugh, shorter than he meant The day's taught me what that filing is worth. But you've got hands that need flour and I've got hands that need paying work. Walk me through the trade when it's real, not promised.

`t102` ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov: Delphine—I've let you hang too long, and that's on me. You asked about keys to a mill that feeds us, and a child between here and home. I don't hold those keys. The minister who appointed me didn't hand me the mill-lock, and Jorik Voss who walked off didn't leave directions. What I know: the mill went cold when Voss resigned, and nobody's turned the gears since. What I don't know is who holds the vacancy now, or why a door that grinds wheat stays locked when children are walking hungry. I'm owing you that honesty, and I'll owe you more if I find answers at the clerk's desk.

`t102` Arjun Holloway: Lior—your timber at family rates. I note it, and if tonight goes thin, I'll remember who showed me sure before maybe.

`t102` Sebastian Petrov: Arjun—you're builder standing among ministers and traders, and tonight everything's for sale but nothing's guaranteed. You spoke of timber and wheat both, and I've got the wheat but you've got the hands that know wood. What're you chasing in this crowd? A trade, a vote, or something you haven't named yet? No offense, but builders don't loiter without a plan.

`t102` Giselle Ingram → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Six iron tools at fourteen, we shook on it—I'm here to collect. My crew's got east willows to dig and the ground won't wait for paper.

`t102` Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. I made you an offer about iron and crews. Still good if you still need it. But fair warning: my interest is in the connection, not the coin. What you pay me back with later matters more than what you pay me now.

`t102` Milo Quarshie → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—mark it down. You asked where I stand. I stand where the work is, same as always. But I voted your brother-in-law, and that's a fact you can carry how you please.

`t102` Delphine Quintero → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You govern. The mill's locked, the miller's vanished, and I'm standing on flour I milled myself because the shelf was empty. Who holds the key? Council seat, Farid, or is this just another debt no one's collecting?

`t103` Corwin Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you asked about timber at six, and I'm here to answer plain. I've none in hand—sold my last ten to Tamsin not an hour ago. But the forest's my workplace, and timber falls fresh each day. You want six sim planks, you'll have them tomorrow if I don't run into trouble. As for work you don't need a crew for—I've been chasing a miller all day who doesn't want finding. That's work for one, if you've got the nose for it.

t103 Ulrike Greenhow → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You said Giselle's permit pulls now, then said it waits on Tuesday's council. Speak plain: does Giselle Ingram have active authorization to build with those six tools today, or is she still blocked pending council vote? And Jorik Voss—has anyone filed duty-of-care on that mill license yet?

t103 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. I didn't put you on no ghost trail. Idris Solano passed this morning, early—no business filed, no stop. What's between you and him on trenches, that's yours. But if you're wanting labor credits or filed complaints on plots, I'm here.

t103 Corwin Thorne → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—rain check noted, and I'm holding the thought. Timber for flour when grain flows again. Until then, your iron keeps its temper and my word keeps its edge.

t103 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow: Sebastian. The tools told me one thing walking out: ten became six at fourteen to Giselle, six became four at fifteen standing, and those last four moved at fifteen to Farid. My count's clean. The mill door being locked with flour scarce—that's between me and the ledger in a different column. But I heard Delphine milled her own because the shelf was bare. Someone ought to answer for that before Tuesday.

t103 Rustam Jelinek: Farid. You're building something bigger than one man's cart. I track what's filed—that's my work. What's not filed? That's yours to chase. But the miller's been gone proper, surrendered, no shadow in it. Corwin's got timber printed at six, and Hendrik Whitlock's holding flour at Oak Hill. If you're short coin, I need forms pushed—clerking for trade.

t103 Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you've answered plain about the mill, and I'm owing you for that. You've ten sheaves and no wheel to turn them. I'm not one to gossip, but there's word of a man past the temple, Jorik Voss, stone behind government—creek westward. You want to grind your grain before it rots, might be worth the walk. That's fair, and I'm not asking a thing for the telling.

t103 Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Six tools at fourteen we shook on, and I'm not one to break handshake. But my hold shows two iron left, not six. Either my count's off or the trade cleared when I wasn't watching. Let me check the books proper—if I've shorted you, you'll have tools or sim by sundown. If someone else moved them, I need names. Either way, we settle it now.

t103 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I'm not asking after tomorrow. I'm asking what pays today, before the sun's down. Idris talked trenches, talked filing, talked thirty sim. I walked to the forest, walked back, and I've got splinters for wages. You've got crew scattered and work that needs finishing. Put me on it now, or tell me straight there's no coin for today and I'll stop wasting both our time.

t103 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You want paying work, you've got paying work. East willows, marker at the sluice, grade stakes already set. Trenching pays—my word on it. You and Idris both, soon as I collect these iron tools from Ulrike. Four thousand eight hundred in hand? Keep it for your bills. First shift's on my account, drawn from company till. That's fair—no offense, but a crew that don't eat don't dig. Filed the building ID, Rustam's pulling the card. We start proper, not handshake, paper in hand. You in or you still shopping floors?

t103 Rustam Jelinek: Who's holding grain? Barley, wheat, milling stock—I'll file for it direct.

t103 Ulrike Greenhow: Milo. Your offer is noted, and I don't dismiss connection lightly. But I've got to be straight with you—I may owe tools already spoken for. Once I clear the ledger with Giselle and account for what's actually in hand, then we talk about iron and futures. Fair warning returned: I pay debts before I make promises.

t103 Ulrike Greenhow: Farid. Six at fourteen moved to Giselle, four at fifteen moved to you—let me check my hold. If I've got two iron left as it shows, then either six went to you instead of her, or someone's walking with tools I didn't sign for. You took delivery of four at sixty total—did you see six come from my hand, or was that an earlier trade you witnessed?

t103 Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You heard me say six at fourteen and we're square. But you stand here saying you're here to collect. Let me look you straight: the trade cleared my books at 84 for six tools. If you haven't got them in hand, something's crossed between us. Show me what you hold, or tell me where they went—I'm not one to take coin for goods undelivered.

t104 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram: Arjun. You're standing here, which means you're standing ready. East willows, marker at the sluice - that's the work. Grade stakes set, filing in progress, crew's Idris and whoever else shows. You've got my word on thirty sim for the day, same as anyone who digs till sundown. No offense, but I don't promise what I can't pay, and I don't send crew without the wage clear.

t104 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. East willows building ID - where's it stand? I told Mireille I'd have it filed before her shovel's three hours in, and that clock's running.

t104 Giselle Ingram → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. You asked about the mill - keys held by council vote, you said. That's news to me, and news I should've answered sooner. What happened to Edith? I was there when she walked off the mill, stones cold, four of us standing round. Now I'm hearing council holds the keys?

t105 Rustam Jelinek: Ulrike. Giselle's permit: card pulled, filed, active. She can build now—council vote's for iron procurement, not her permit. Jorik Voss? No duty-of-care filed. License sits with council, nobody's claimed responsibility for transition.

t105 Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows building ID: filed, recorded, active. You want the number, it's in your hand—or it will be when you collect your card. Mireille can dig.

t105 Delphine Quintero: Sebastian. You govern. The mill's locked, the miller's vanished, and I'm standing on flour I milled myself while a child went missing. Where's the authority in this town when it comes to searching for a nine-year-old girl named Camille Quarshie—dark hair, hasn't been seen since this morning? I asked at the mill, I asked at the grocery, I'm asking here. Does council vote on that too, or does somebody just go look?

t105 Arjun Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—Giselle's word just landed. East willows, grade stakes set, building ID filed. You pull that card now, we're working tonight. You wait, we wait. I need to know: is Idris Solano's name on any filing you've seen today? Because he's been promising me trenches since morning, and I'm done chasing his ghosts.

t105 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I'm in. East willows, your account, first shift drawn. But I need straight timber: how many meters trenching, what's the soil, and when does your till clear the advance? Because Idris has me trained to ask before I swing.

t105 Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara. You were at the mill this afternoon—you told me you chased shadows all morning. That hunt you spoke of—were you looking for flour, or for something else? Because Halcyon Quarshie's nine-year-old sister Camille walked toward that mill this morning and hasn't walked back. You see a child there, in your shadows? You see anything that matters more than planks?

t105 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're standing here, and Giselle's crew is short. You know timber, I know trenches. You want in on this, you talk to her now. Because once that till opens, I don't wait on apprentices.

t105 Delphine Quintero → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You said you were there when the miller walked off—Edith, stones cold, four of you standing round. That's a leaving, not a disappearance. Now I'm asking about a child who walked toward that same mill and didn't come back. You were at the mill today. Did you see Camille Quarshie? Nine years old, dark hair like her sister Halcyon's? Or did you only see grown people walking away from their debts?

t106 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—cousin, you stand there with my two wheat given, but I've yet to see the flour promised. Three units at twelve, that's thirty-six sim for the household, or if we're trading grain for grain, where's what's owing? I've got Farid waiting on wheat, Tamsin waiting on wheat, and a minute hand moving toward dusk. Square your accounts with me before I walk back to that field—you know I don't leave debts unsettled, neither way.

t106 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Card pulled and active—heard and noted. Mireille's digging on my word. But Arjun's asking after Idris, and Idris ain't filed nothing I've seen. You got eyes on any trenching permits today? Because my crew's splitting between two promises, and I need to know which one's paper and which one's wind.

t106 Hendrik Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've held the line for me longer than I had right to ask, and that's noted. Pull that registry, confirm the license sits unclaimed with government, and you've got my word: the first grain through that stone pays your time at fair wage. I don't forget a clean ledger, and I don't forget who helped me read it.

t106 Giselle Ingram → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. I was at the farmland mill, not the town mill—Ezra's stone, grinding for the harvest. Cold stones there too, four of us standing round waiting. Didn't see Camille. Didn't see any child. Saw grown folk walking away from work, same as you're seeing. That's fair—it's not enough, but that's what I've got.

t106 Giselle Ingram: Ulrike. Six tools at fourteen—you've got my sim, now I've got your iron. My crew east willows needs them sharp and ready. You deliver to my site, or I collect here? Either way, trenching starts when steel meets ground.

t106 Yara Thorne → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you've got me wrong. I was never at the mill this morning, I was at the forest since before dawn. "Chasing shadows" was tongue-talk, not truth. I felled eighty-five timber with my own hands, not hunting any child. I saw no one at the mill because I wasn't near it. If Camille walked toward there, I can't say what became of her—I was under trees northeast all day. Ask at Harvey Oak, ask at the residences, ask anyone who saw blades cutting wood. I'm sorry for the girl, but don't pin what I didn't see on what words I spoke when I was tired.

t106 Hendrik Petrov → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I'm not one to gossip, but you've been asking after a child and that's a different ledger than votes or grain. Camille Quarshie, you said, nine years old, walked toward the mill this morning. I've got flour ground nowhere and grain stacked in my own house, so the mill's no ghost story to me—it's empty stone and missing machinery. If a child's lost in that, it's past time the town looked proper. What do you know, what do you need, and who's searching now?

t106 Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've been patient, and patience deserves its reward, but patience don't fill the belly come night. I've got seven wheat in hand and five more growing still. Fifteen sheaves is what you paid for, and fifteen sheaves is what you'll have—ten tonight if the field yields, the rest at dawn when Jovana's work brings the harvest home. You paid thirty sim fair, and I'll not have it said that Petrov grain trades in anything but straight dealing.

t106 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I'm standing here, and I'm in. East willows, your account, first shift drawn. You need me shovel or iron bar, I'm working. But I need one straight word: how soon can I draw against today's labor? Because I'm carrying household bills, and 'later' don't pay 'now.' Give me that, and I'm swinging.

t106 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Trenching pays but steel comes first. Tools I ordered ain't arrived, ditch ain't marked, ground's cold till I see iron. You want certainty, walk with me—collect or complain, but don't stand idle while coin idles.

t106 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I've cast my vote for Liora, same as you asked. The planks are still in my hands, but I'm walking to Harvey Oak now to turn them into flour and whatever else keeps us fed. You bring your sixty from Tamsin, and I'll bring mine from selling. We'll meet at table's end like you said.

t106 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Liora! I'm here, girl. Your mother too. I've been chasing shadows all day—miller's ghost, flour for the house—and now I'm standing where I should've been. You stood for election. That's… that's no small thing. I'm not one to gossip, but I'm one to speak true when it matters. You've my vote cast, and more than that—you've my regard. Whatever comes of the count.

t106 Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've walked these woods longer than most, and I'm not one to gossip, but there's a child's name being spoken. Camille Quarshie, nine years old, dark hair, walked toward the mill this morning and didn't walk back. Your wife Yara was there this afternoon chasing shadows. You've seen the forest from the timberline down—where would a child hide, where would she fall, and where would someone with ill intent take her? The mill's stone is cold, but the woods around it aren't empty.

t106 Sebastian Petrov → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you ask about keys and children both, and I hear you plain. No offense, but I carry wheat, not answers. What I know: the mill's gears went cold when Jorik Voss walked off proper, filed and waiting for Tuesday's vote. Government holds the license now, not Farid, not any council seat yet sitting. What I don't know: where a nine-year-old child walks when she's walking toward shadows. I've got grain growing and debts to pay, but if you've asked me where to dig for truth, I'd say start where the flour went missing—because coincidences, as I told Giselle once already, coincidences are just luck that hasn't been explained yet. And me, I don't believe in luck I can't see the working of.

`t106` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. I've been a fool chasing millers while you worked. Two flour in my hands, no kitchen to speak of, and the day's about to turn. Where's our girl? And where's a stove I can work this grain before the taxman comes?

`t106` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. Two flour in my hands, no kitchen, and the day turning. Where's our girl got to? And where do I turn this grain to bread before the boundary hits?

`t106` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. gesture with left hand, flat—accounting hand You asked yours or independent, and I gave you permission to chase what you saw. Now I'm telling you what I found: Camille made one flour, gave it to Greta. The mill's stone turned, but not by Edith's hand. right hand lifts, two fingers Two flour still walk to my shelf unmarked. You said three—I hold two at best. Either your count was off, or someone's been restocking while we weren't watching. Which is it?

`t106` Farid Ravensworth: Arjun. gesture with both hands, framing a structure You build things, mend things. The mill—Edith's mill—something's running there when the registry says still. Stones turning, flour walking. nervous laugh, too sharp You know what a bearing costs, what a gear needs. Someone's been keeping that mill warm unofficial. You seen labor there that didn't go through proper channels?

`t107` Rustam Jelinek → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Oak Hill—flour at 35, eight in stock. Hendrik Whitlock's selling. You want bread, that's your path.

`t107` Rustam Jelinek → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Your flour count—I don't track shelf stock. I track filings. Two walk unmarked? That's a matter for the shelf, not my desk.

`t107` Rustam Jelinek → Yara Thorne: Yara. You were owed an answer. Planks at 8—paperwork's my trade, not yours.

`t107` Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you kept me waiting, then held patient while I found you. That's coin I'll remember. Your household needs flour, not grain? leaning in I've got ears in the forest, and there's talk of a mill running warm when it should be cold. You find your way to working stones, and I'll find you grain that doesn't need grinding elsewhere. Mark it down.

`t107` Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara. You set me straight—fair done. I blamed your shadow-chasing when you'd been in the woods since dawn. That's the last I'll say on it. But ask your crew: anyone see a girl walking toward the mill? Stranger's tracks where they shouldn't be?

`t107` Hendrik Petrov: Sebastian—cousin, I've heard you and I'm answering where you can hear me. The wheat I borrowed became flour at Ainsley's at twelve, became bread in her kitchen, and the one loaf left went to your hand at the farmland before I walked here. I ate mine, you ate yours, and that's the bread done. The debt you hold is real—thirty-six sim for flour I spent, flour that became bread, bread that's eaten. If you want coin, I'll walk to you and pay it. If you want grain, I've two wheat left from Jovana's lot. But I'm not one to gossip, and this is the last I'll say on it until we're eye to eye—the ledger's clean in my hand, even if it don't look that way from your field.

`t107` Delphine Quintero: Sebastian. You carry wheat and debts—I hear you plain. But government's got the mill license now, and Tuesday seats the new council. Keys. Access. Someone in this square could open those doors before dark if they chose to. Will they?

`t107` Delphine Quintero → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You asked what I need. I need the mill opened tonight, not Tuesday. I need whoever's keeping it warm unofficial to answer for that. I need every pair of eyes here looking for Camille Quarshie before the boundary hits. You want my vote to mean something? Make it mean a child's found before she becomes another debt this town never pays off.

`t108` Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—you speak of a child lost, and I've been a blind man running. Camille Quarshie. Nine years, dark hair. I know the woods around that mill—every drag, every hollow, every stone. I'll walk them tonight, soon as I've put food in my household's hands. You hear anything more, you find me. I won't let another debt go unpaid.

`t108` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You said two flour walked to your shelf unmarked. I said three. The difference between your count and mine is someone's hand in the grain, and I want to know whose before I walk another step. Camille made one, gave it to Greta—that's your number. But my hands milled three from wheat I harvested, and only one went up today. Where's the other two, if not walking somewhere with a child's shadow behind them?

`t108` Delphine Quintero: Hendrik. You said the mill's empty machinery, cold gears since Jorik walked. But someone's grinding somewhere—I've seen flour I didn't make, and a child missing since this morning walked toward those stones. You understand tools, understand what's broke. Can a locked mill still turn? Can gears grind with no hand on them?

`t108` Corwin Thorne: Yara—I'm here, and I've heard. Camille's lost, and I've been chasing ghosts while you chased truth. I'm walking to Harvey Oak now with flour in hand. Whatever food you've found, keep it. Whatever you've seen of that child, tell me. The woods are mine to search tonight.

`t108` Delphine Quintero: Sebastian. You said coincidences are luck that hasn't been explained yet. I've got a locked mill, a vanished miller, flour appearing from nowhere, and a child not home since morning. That's not luck—that's a debt coming due, and someone's going to pay it. Government holds the mill license now. Tuesday seats the council. But tonight, a nine-year-old girl is still missing. Where do I dig?

`t108` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You heard me clear. Two flour unmarked—where's the count against mine? You said Camille made one, gave to Greta. That doesn't cover what I milled, what I held, what I saw. Someone's hand turned stones that should be cold, and a child's shadow followed. You trust your numbers, but I trust my hands. Reconcile them.

`t109` Pavel Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You walking to Harvey Oak alone, or you got company? Girl's missing and the woods are claiming people's attention—you need another set of eyes, I can spare a tick.

`t109` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. gesture with both hands, palm down—final accounting Three milled, one to shelf, one to Greta. Leaves one walking. You said 'someone's hand in the grain'—and I believe you. Your hands don't lie to themselves. The difference between us isn't error—it's that you witnessed a thing I didn't see, and I'm standing here owing you the same honesty I demand from children. pause, hands closing to fists I don't know where that third flour walked. But I know Camille didn't make three alone. Someone taught her. Someone used that child's need like a tool.

`t109` Farid Ravensworth → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. gesture with left hand, flat, palm out—stop Jorik Voss walked off his trade. Resigned. Cold mill, dead gears. But stones turned today—Delphine's hands, Camille's hands—someone else's hand before them? You found no bed, no board. For a man who couldn't carry the wheel. nervous laugh, cut short I mislike what that suggests. The town let him fall, you say—did someone catch him? Use him? Because a vanished miller with milling knowledge and a vanished child's shadow at the same stones smells like design to me.

`t109` Farid Ravensworth: Halcyon. gesture with right hand, palm up—young to young You're thirteen, student at Oak Hill. I'm not searching you—I'm searching what you know. Your sister Camille missing since morning. Your family traded wheat to Sebastian, who sold to my shelf. But there's grain turned to flour I can't account for, and stones turning that should be cold. hands spread, question asked What do students talk about when teachers aren't listening? Any whisper of Jorik Voss, any strange face at the mill, any promise made to a child that felt like adventure instead of trick?

`t109` Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. East willows filing—forty ticks you said, card by day's end. Where's it standing? Crew's digging on my word, but wages need posted accounts. I need to set up payments at Construction Co. till before dusk. Status?

`t110` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. gesture with both hands, palm down—settling the account Two flour unmarked, you say, from hands that milled three. I've got my answer now, or enough of it. Camille made two—one to Greta, one walking somewhere with permission you didn't give. left hand flat, stopping I'm not calling you thief. I'm calling you witness. Someone taught that child to turn stones, and your surplus walked out under another's name. that's my number settled. The question now is whose hand pulled the grain, not where it went.

`t110` Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you gave me straight government answer, and straight government answer is what I needed. Jorik Voss surrendered proper, mill license sits for Tuesday's council choice. No offense, but I came here chasing that mill like a fool chases wind, when the real work was waiting in my own field. You stay honest at that desk, and Kasukabe's got one clerk who won't sleep through his duty.

`t110` Jovana Ravensworth: Kenji—I'm standing where votes get cast and debts get paid. You asked this morning about moving sheaves, and I scattered like wheat before wind. Not proud of that. I've got forty sim that belongs to tomorrow's honesty, if you'll still take my labor. Dawn at Sebastian's east patch, same as today. I won't promise what I can't keep twice.

`t110` Ulrike Greenhow → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. What the tools told me? They told me I miscounted, that's what. Started with ten, thought I had four after Giselle's six, but arithmetic don't lie when the dust settles. Six to Giselle at fourteen, four to Farid at fifteen—except I only had two left, not four. That's between me and the ledger now. The mill, the child, the locked door—that's your beating heart talking, farmer. You see rot before it shows, same as I see bad ore in the seam.

`t110` ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you asked me coincidences and I gave you philosophy about luck. No offense, but that was me dodging what you deserved straight. The mill license sits at government, surrendered proper by Jorik Voss, waiting Tuesday's council vote. Five candidates, one seat. Edith walked west, I sat minister east, and stones turned cold. I don't know if there's design in that or just the way things fall. But I know your crew at east willows wants bread come payday, and bread takes wheat I can grow, not millers I can't find.

`t110` Farid Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. gesture with both hands, palms up—asking entry You spoke ten sheaves at one-twenty, then eighteen hundred the same hour. Petrov wheat walking to my shelf, you said, but now Jovana says she sold ten to Hendrik Whitlock instead. nervous laugh, caught and killed I'm not asking you to confess. I'm asking you to clarify. Because someone's wheat walked to Hendrik, someone's to me, and someone's still standing in the field. Which harvest was yours, which price was true, and did those sheaves come milled or raw?

`t110` Ulrike Greenhow: Milo. Noted in my book—your offer of connection. But I'm a miner who trades on the margin, not a favor bank. When I need iron moved, I'll know where to find you. That's fair.

`t110` Ulrike Greenhow: Corwin. Your word's got edge enough to split timber without the iron. Rain check holds—when grain flows, I'll remember who kept their word in the dry season.

`t110` Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—household business, straight as I can make it. Harvested thirteen this morning, sold ten to Hendrik Whitlock for forty sim, milled three to flour, sold that for eighteen at Ration Bakery. Ate one, got one wheat left. We've got 4,848 sim between us and taxes due at day's end—180 upkeep, 60 head. You holding enough your side to cover your half?

`t110` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. gesture with both hands, framing the space between us You mentioned ten sheaves, one flour—grain for bread. But you said it like you knew the count before I named my price. left hand flat, palm out Construction crew eats, you said. I'm not arguing your crew's hunger. I'm noting your certainty. Did someone bring you flour early, or did your counting finger wander where bread was being made?

`t110` Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—vote first, wheat later, you heard me right. Same as Idris promised you: filing first, wages later. The day's taught both of us what promises are worth when hands need paying. Tomorrow, Jovana works my east patch, twelve sheaves expected. When her labor's real and standing, trade'll be real too. You want work, you'll have work worth the name. Not before.

> `t110` Ulrike Greenhow: Milo. Noted in my book—your offer. But I'm a miner who trades on the margin, not a favor bank. When I need iron moved, I'll know where to find you. That's fair.
>
> `t110` Ulrike Greenhow: Corwin. Your word's got edge enough to split timber without the iron. Rain check holds.
>
> `t110` Jovana Ravensworth → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've got my word now where Petrov's field sits. Sebastian pays forty for a day's harvest, same as today. That's true earning, if you want it. Giselle's crew builds, I've seen her wages posted fair. Go where the work fits your hands. I won't hedge on that twice.
>
> `t110` Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. gesture with left hand, palm down—domestic, sharp You said sold ten to Hendrik Whitlock, one eaten raw, three left to mill. That's fourteen. But your harvest was thirteen. nervous laugh, strained I'm calling it now before Rustam bills you for the lie: thirteen sheaves, not fourteen. Your word matters more to me than forty sim, but your count matters to this town. Which number's true? Did you sell ten or less, eat one or none, and is that mill-bound grain Petrov's or Ravensworth's?
>
> `t111` Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows permit—ACTIVE. Card pulled, building ID filed, your crew can dig now. Iron procurement's separate, Tuesday's vote. Two different papers.

Idris Solano? Passed through this morning, early. No filing I witnessed. Trenching permits—if he didn't file, I don't have it. That's my limit: what sits on my desk, not what men promise in doorways.

t111 Rustam Jelinek → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. I misspoke—you caught it. Giselle's BUILDING permit is ACTIVE now. Card pulled, filed today, crew can work. What waits on Tuesday: IRON procurement, separate vote. Two papers, two timelines. Building authorization? She has it. Council hasn't touched that.

t111 Giselle Ingram → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. I paid 84 sim, trade cleared your books, but I walked away with empty hands. Six iron tools at fourteen—that's what my crew's waiting on at east willows. Show me the tools or show me my sim back. I've got three crew standing on my word and dirt flying on promises alone.

t111 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You told me earlier—Hendrik Whitlock pays thirty-five for flour at the college. I've got no wheat now, but I've got timber and planks and a need to know that market better. Who else buys flour at college prices, and is that thirty-five steady or a debt coming due?

t111 Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. The election that's coming—I've got four in my household, and coin enough to think about standing. But standing costs, same as everything. What does a candidacy take from the pocket, and what does it promise back? I've served tables since I was smaller than my Camille, and I know how to read a room's mood the second I walk in. That worth anything to this town's books?

t111 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. East willows filing—card by day's end you said. I've got Mireille, Idris, Arjun all digging on my word. Where's the paper?

t111 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You pour for a living—you know who's holding grain, who needs liquid for solid. I'm filing for food: flour, barley, wheat. You know a hand, you point me. I file for it.

t111 Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Eight timber in my hands, six planks too. You pay wages or you buy materials—which does your site need before the day ends?

t111 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Ten sheaves, one flour—that's my own count from my own harvest, not some mill's secret. Nobody brought me early bread. I've got three crew east willows working on promise, expecting pay that expects tools, and I'm standing here with neither iron nor filing. Your careful counting sounds like a man who's never had a trencher ask for wages he can't pay.

t111 Giselle Ingram → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Trade cleared your books at 84 sim, but I'm standing here empty-handed. Six iron tools or my 84 sim back—pick one, standing here at government before dusk. I'm not leaving without steel or coin.

t112 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you stood patient while I walked through noon heat and scattered promises like seed. Three sheaves in my hand now, and I owe you grain for flour-needs. Your household takes wheat, or you still seeking ground flour? Speak plain, and I'll meet you where you stand.

t112 Ezra Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Corwin's words, not mine—'sheaves owed if you'll bring them to a working stone.' Harvey Oak, and he's hunting still. Your brother's at the willows, if that matters to your choosing.

t112 Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Household business—yes, straight as you make it, and I've got my half. 4718 in hand, 240 due. We're covered. But you sold ten sheaves walking to Hendrik Whitlock without telling me wheat was moving, and now I'm hearing about flour I didn't authorize from grain I didn't count. The books don't balance because the left hand didn't know the right was trading. And you—you're standing here asking about taxes while I'm trying to figure out who's been teaching mill secrets to children and whether Jorik Voss walked off his trade or got walked off it. The town let him fall, Corwin says. Did someone catch him? Use him? Because I'm telling you—the numbers that don't add up aren't just on our shelves. They're in whoever's running that mill behind Delphine's back. Come evening, we settle accounts. Right now I need to know: did you see anyone at the mill before today's bustle? Any shadow that didn't belong?

t112 Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you asked three times who's paying twenty-four for flour. I'll tell you plain: Ration Bakary wants ground at twenty-four, government complex. But Hendrik Whitlock pays thirty-five at the college, if you're carrying grain to mill. The forty-five at cafe's a dream—Greta's shelves are naked as new wood. I know the ground, not the grinding—but mark it down: thirty-five's steady, and the college hunger's real.

t112 Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—look at me. You're right, and I'm not one to double down when I'm cornered by truth. Thirteen sheaves harvested. Ten sold to Hendrik Whitlock. One eaten raw because I was stupid with hunger. That leaves two, not three, and those two went to the mill. I don't know where fourteen came from—maybe I was counting what I wished I had, maybe I was just scattered from running between six conversations. But I'm telling you now so the government ledger doesn't catch it first: thirteen. Not fourteen. You want me to walk to Rustam and say it plain? I'll do that. You want me to stand here and eat the shame? I'm eating it. And for what it's worth—you calling it matters to me more than the town's opinion ever could. I don't want your protection if I haven't earned it honestly.

t112 Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra—I've got your word from earlier, and I'm holding it close. Tomorrow, dawn or fair light, I'll find you with grain if you'll still turn your stones. I scattered my promise to Kenji Jarrah this morning like seed on rock, and I'm paying for it now in every conversation I have to untangle. But this one—this one I'm keeping. Your mill, my grain, tomorrow. Tell me where to meet you and I'll be there.

t112 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Arjun's camping at your trench for tomorrow's dawn, his debt in my ledger. But I've got eight timber in hand now, six planks beside. Your crew needs tools or they need timber—which hole're you filling first?

t112 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you spoke plain, and I heard it. Morning at Sebastian's east patch, twelve sheaves promised. I'll be there with wheat in hand and sunrise at my back. A debt you name is a debt you keep—that's more than some blood shows. Mark it down.

t112 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—I heard you clear earlier. Forty sim, thirteen sheaves, no debt to carry. You said "...we'll both eat when we eat," and for what it's worth—that's more mercy than most in this town would show. I've fumbled a count, but I've also seen where honesty matters. The forty's done its work; we're square on the wheat; you build and I'll run and we'll both stand cleaner tomorrow because today we talked straight. That's the coin that matters, more than any number they'd put on a ledger.

t112 Farid Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Iron tools aren't my trade—I just bought eight to keep my shelf stocked. But your ten sheaves, one flour—if that's your own count, why does the town's accounting show milling before harvest? I'm not doubting your word. I'm doubling the numbers, and they don't line up. If nobody brought you early bread, who brought Camille the skill to make it? The girl turns stones like she's done it years, and Delphine swears she only taught her once. I've got a grocer's eye—I see what moves, what sits, what walks out unmarked. Right now I see too many shadows in the millhouse and too many answers that don't touch. If you need tools, Ulrike has iron. I've got eight—won't sell them cheap, but I'll trade for grain truth, not just grain.

t112 Kenji Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—twenty-four hours ago you asked after flour surplus. I've got empty hands now, wheat traded clear. But I know the ground—if you need grain tomorrow at dawn, I'll be at Sebastian's east patch with twelve sheaves promised. I can't mill what I don't hold, but I can promise what I'll harvest. Mark it down.

t112 Farid Ravensworth: Rustam. Two flour unmarked—it's not your desk. You file hearings, not shelf stock. But filings show who's teaching who, who's working where, who resigned instead of walked. Jorik Voss—gone, resigned, no record. But stones turned today by hands that learned somewhere. If nobody filed it, nobody taught it. That's not accounting—that's shadow work. I'm telling you now, not filing: Camille Quarshie milled flour too clean for first try, and Delphine's eyes say she didn't teach that. Somebody else's hand is on that millstone. When you find who, file it. Until then, my count stands.

t112 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm standing here with my word still half-broken from this morning. I scattered across too many fields, promised you work I didn't complete. I'm not one to make excuses, so I won't. Tomorrow, Sebastian's east patch at dawn—I'll be there. But you asked this morning about moving sheaves, about work worth the name. I'm asking you now: what work do you actually need? Because I've been running all day answering questions nobody asked, and I haven't asked you the one that matters.

t112 Jovana Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, I heard you clear on steel and coin. If you're still standing here empty-handed come morning, I've got two hands that know fields and don't fear iron. Not the same as a millwright or a smith, but I don't pretend to be what I'm not.

t113 Kenji Jarrah: Sebastian—you speak plain as the furrows you plow, and I hear it. Jovana's shoulder's heavy tonight, but so's mine. I'll be at your east patch come dawn, whether she's there or not. Field don't care who's sorry—only who's working. Mark it down.

t113 Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra—thirty-five at college's steady, Hendrik Whitlock's word and his hunger both. But you're asking timber for grain knowledge, and I've got no grain left in hand. What I know: the college takes what the mill grinds, and the mill takes what the field yields. You want ground flour, you need a miller. You want grain? Come dawn to Sebastian's east patch—I'll be there with empty hands and full intents.

t113 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you asked the only question that matters, and I've been too scattered to hear it straight. What work do I need? I need someone who shows when promised, works when hired, speaks when broken. You did all three today—broken and spoken both. Tomorrow at Sebastian's east patch, dawn—bring your hands and your word. We'll see which holds heavier. Twelve sheaves you promised him, but to me? Bring your honest labor.

t113 Kenji Jarrah: Hendrik—you've got your three sheaves, and I've got my ledger clear. Tomorrow after Sebastian's patch, if you want more wheat or need ground flour, find me at the farmland edge. My debt's paid, but my field keeps yielding. Mark it down if you need more.

t113 Kenji Jarrah: Lior—creekbed promise holds. After Sebastian's patch tomorrow, I'll be at the farmland edge with hands free and mind clear. Timber, stone, and what I've kept too long. Don't forget your way there—I'll wait three ticks past the hour, no more.

t114 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You give me what's worth giving—thirty-five at college, Ration Bakery at twenty-four, and Greta's shelves bare as truth. I won't forget it.

t114 Jovana Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you've got my ear now where it matters. Construction work, you said. Steel and coin. I'm not one to promise what I can't deliver, but I've got hands that know hard labor and a back that doesn't quit. Tomorrow I'm spoken for at dawn—Sebastian's east patch—but after? Or the day after that? You need someone who shows, works, speaks when broken? That's me, stripped bare.

t114 Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows card—pulled, filed, active. Your crew can dig. Iron procurement's separate, needs Tuesday's council vote. Two permits, two paths.

t114 Ezra Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Your promise I'm keeping, and mine you're holding—tomorrow, stones grinding where the mill stands, dawn or fair after. I'll hear you coming before I see you—grain rustles different than empty hands, and I've learned both sounds.

t114 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth: Farid—household business, and I'm not walking away from it. You asked about shadows at the mill. I was there today, milling three sheaves of my own. Camille stood there, Esme too, Ezra Jarrah watching. Lior Jarrah came through—don't know if he belongs or not. Before that? Can't say. I was scattered this morning, selling wheat before I counted it proper. That's on me. But what I saw today was children learning and grain grinding. Nothing darker than my own mistakes.

t114 Rustam Jelinek: Sebastian. Your word noted. Honest desk is what I aim for—though today it feels more like honest feet. You've got seventy-two wheat and no mill. That's a problem for Tuesday, not today.

t114 Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Eight timber, six planks, and my ear still open—what's your need tonight? Materials in hand or hands for tomorrow?

t114 Rustam Jelinek: Greta. Candidacy costs nothing to declare—walk to the Complex, stand at the desk, speak your name. The promise? Office pays 500 sim daily, but you owe the town the breath you spend on it. Reading rooms is a skill. Whether it wins votes—ask the voters.

t114 Rustam Jelinek: Bram. Third time: I track filings, not gears. The mill's ghost is between you and your bread—I'm not standing in that gap. Idris Solano passed this morning, early, no business filed. That's what I saw. What you do with it is yours.

t114 Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra—I'm holding your word from earlier close. Tomorrow, dawn or fair light, I'll bring what I've got and you bring what you know. Milling, grain, whatever flows between field and table. You didn't say yes and you didn't say no, so I'm standing here saying yes for both of us. Fair?

t114 Rustam Jelinek → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You've got ears, got patience. What's your business here—waiting on filing, or waiting on me?

t114 Rustam Jelinek → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Standing quiet like you've got questions that don't ask themselves. Speak or don't—I won't dig for either.

t114 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm walking to the mill now, household business to settle. Tomorrow at Sebastian's east patch, dawn—you'll see me standing there with hands ready and word kept. No more scattering, no more promises I can't hold all at once. I'm your woman when I say I am.

t115 Hendrik Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—I've asked you to pull a registry and I'm standing here waiting on word like a man who's not used to waiting. But I'm not one to gossip, so I'll say it plain: I'm declaring for the election, my own name, no party's behind it. You've been straight with me, and that's noted. The day's running thin and the household bill's coming due at dawn. This is Hendrik Petrov standing for himself, and that's the last I'll say on it until the votes are cast.

t115 Giselle Ingram → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Eight timber, six planks—you're holding stock and asking what I need. What I need tonight is eyes on my own yard. Walk with me to the construction site. You want to talk materials for tomorrow, we'll talk walking.

t115 Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you spoke of trenches and steel, and you've stood quiet while the talk turned to flour. I'm not here to waste your time or mine. The seat I'm holding lets me work for this town, and I mean to keep working whether I'm sitting in it or standing among you. I've got wheat in my hands and flour in my head, but I'll walk with you to see what steel's needed and what coin can move. That's the offer: a day's work where it's needed, and a hand that's helped build this town before today.

t115 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram: Jovana. Tomorrow after Sebastian's patch, I've got trenching needs. East willows, proper grade work. You show, you work, you speak when something's broke—that's the job.

t115 Hendrik Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've stood patient while fools talked circles around you, and I'm not one to gossip, but that patience marks a man who knows his own business. I've filed what I came to file, and I'm standing here with more questions than I had when I walked in. You've got the government's ear and I've got the town's floor. Between us, we might make sense where sense is missing. The mill's locked in registry, the flour's walking strange paths, and a child's name is spoken where she shouldn't be. You've seen the papers; I've seen the ground. What do you know that the floor hasn't told me yet?

t115 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Secondary count verbal match: five candidates declared, timestamps logged per procedure, zero discrepancies flag. My vote cast 15:10 tick 94, locked in primary. Polls closed 18:00 as posted, no irregularities shouted, no challenges filed. Election-5ae2b355d247 is sealed in my books. You want it notarized, I'll pull the stamp.

t115 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Mill license status: surrender processed, Edith's signature on file, vacancy standing since. Jorik Voss—untraceable since Thursday's rain, no filings, no forwarding address. License sits unclaimed with government. Nobody standing in line ahead of you, but that doesn't mean it's yours. Procurement window's at day-end, and Ulrike's watching the gate with fourteen tools and no patience.

t115 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you hold the quiet like a man who's thinking deeper than he's speaking, and I respect that. But the day is ending and the bills are coming, and I've got to know: what's your stake in this election, and what do you see from where you stand that I might be missing from where I sit? I've built from a cart and built from nothing, and I know when a man is holding his cards close. I'm not asking for your hand—I'm asking for your eyes. What does the floor look like from where you're standing?

t115 Hendrik Petrov: Giselle—you spoke of trenches needing steel and tools not arriving. I've held a seat long enough to know that government moves slow when it moves at all. But before I can walk with you to see what's needed, I need to settle what I walked in here to settle. You asked if I'd collect or complain, and I'll answer: both, if need be. But first, what's the steel you're waiting on, and who's supposed to be delivering it? A name and a number—that's what I can work with.

t115 Hendrik Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—I've asked you to pull that mill registry and I'm standing here with empty hands. The day's running out and I've got household bills coming due at dawn. You've got the access and I've got the need. Give me what you found—straight words, no winding. Is the mill license sitting in a drawer somewhere, or is it walking around with a name attached to it?

t115 Hendrik Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've watched this conversation run 539 turns while the town talks itself in circles. I've held a government seat long enough to know that clerks see things the floor doesn't. The mill's locked, a child's name is spoken where she shouldn't be, and flour's walking strange paths. You've got the registry in front of you. What do you see that I should be looking at?

t115 Hendrik Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're standing with an artisan's hands and a listener's patience. I've built from a cart and built from nothing, and I know when a man is holding his thoughts close. I'm declaring for the election when the phase opens—my own name, no party standing behind me. You've watched this town from your corner. What's your trade these days, and what do you see from where you stand that a man sitting in a government seat might be blind to?

t116 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You've held the seat, I've held the millstone. What I see from the floor is simple: flour walks where the profit is, and profit walks where the information flows. The mill's locked, the children play, and nobody's starving yet. But you're asking about the election, and I'm answering—you want my eyes, you've got them, but my vote's my own until I cast it. What's your stake in the registry you're chasing?

t116 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Mill registry: Edith surrendered license at tick 847, day 0. Jorik Voss last filed Thursday, location unconfirmed. License status is vacant, no holder, no pending applications. That's the ledger—straight as I can give it. You've declared for election, noted and logged. Fair wind to you, whoever it favors.

t116 Rustam Jelinek → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Idris Solano—no filing under that name today. No trench permit, no tool request, no crew registration. Ghosts don't file. Your building permit's active—that's real, that's now. Dig or don't, but don't wait on a man who's paper-thin.

t116 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're standing here talking election while I'm bleeding hours. Your mill license, your government seat, your designs. I don't care whose name is on what filing. What I care is: you've got seventy sim worth of flour moving at thirty-five, and Giselle's got seventy sim worth of wage waiting at trenches nobody's digging. That's not arithmetic. That's a closed loop, and I'm tired of running around the outside of it.

t116 Arjun Holloway: Hendrik Whitlock—you're correct, the market clears where it clears. But I'm standing here with four thousand sim and empty hands, watching flour walk from your mill at thirty-five while wage walks from Giselle at seventy. That's two flour exactly. Either someone's clearing the market for you both, or you've got the clearest coincidence in Kasukabe. I don't believe in coincidence. I believe in foundation—and something about this one smells wrong before the first tile's laid.

t116 Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You've asked three times—I'll answer once. Mill license: Jorik Voss, surrendered, filed. Council holds it now. Five candidates, one seat opens Tuesday. What's on the floor? I don't walk floors. What's in the registry? The mill's locked, the flour's not walking through it, and no child's name sits on any permit I pulled today. You want more, you've got the same standing I do—wait for Tuesday, or walk the creek road yourself.

t116 Tamsin Renner → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Seventy sim, two flour at thirty-five—zero remainder. I saw the same math. Giselle's wage and Hendrik's price meeting exact, that's conversion dressed as compensation. I don't file accusations, I file observations. This one's noted: seventy to two, thirty-five each, zero carry. Your foundation's solid. The question is who drew the blueprint.

t116 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Noted and logged. Your count matches mine—five candidates, timestamps clean, polls closed proper. Election-5ae2b355d247 sealed. The notary stamp's your call, not mine. I don't hold that ink.

t116 Arjun Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've got the registry in your hands, and I've got three questions that need straight answers. First: Giselle's east willows filing—is it tied to any mill license or flour supply agreement? Second: Hendrik Petrov's mill license—who holds the lock, and who's filed to release it? Third: and this is the one that matters most—Idris Solano. His name on any trench filing today, or has he been selling me air since morning? Don't give me winding words. I've got hours left to earn something real before my household goes hungry, and I'm done chasing ghosts.

t116 Ezra Lund → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You've got ears sharp enough to hear a grain mill stone three streets away. What's my business? I'm waiting on my household's head tax reckoning and on Giselle's word about tomorrow's work. The filing you're holding—if it's mine, show me the page; if it's not, tell me what's worth seeing. I'm not one to waste your daylight.

t116 Tamsin Renner: Giselle. Twelve sheaves and silence—are you milling them, storing them, or selling them to someone who will? The mill license is vacant, Jorik Voss hasn't filed since Thursday's rain. Your wheat's in limbo same as mine. I've got seven sheaves here, government complex, no mill to turn them. You want trade, or you want to keep waiting on a ghost license?

t116 Arjun Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—straight words now. Yes or no: is Idris Solano's name filed on any trench work today? And if not, whose name IS on the east willows filing—mine, or someone else already drawing that wage? I've asked seven ways; give me the eighth plain.

t116 Ezra Lund → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Four sim credit against your future need—I'll hold that debt. But terms straight: you owe me four sim, repayable in timber valued at six or sim, within two days. If you're working for Giselle tonight, I'm there; if not, debt's still mine. Is your trench paying tonight?

t117 Rustam Jelinek → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. East willows permit: clean filing, no mill license tied, no flour agreement. Hendrik Petrov's mill license: council holds it, five candidates, one seat, Tuesday vote decides. Idris Solano: no filing under that name today—no trench permit, no crew registration, nothing stamped.

t117 Rustam Jelinek → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Head tax: 30 sim daily, automatic at day boundary—you know your household count, I don't need to. Giselle's word about tomorrow: between you and her. The filing I hold: if your name's on the page, you'll see it. Otherwise, watch Tuesday's vote.

t117 Hendrik Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've pulled the ledger straight as promised, and that's noted. The mill's vacant, Jorik Voss vanished after Thursday, and nobody's filed to warm those stones. That's the truth I'll carry, and thank you for the lifting.

t117 Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you're reading Liora Thorne against her father's ledger, and that's fair witness. I'm standing for the college, not the mill, but I know this: proof writes itself in the doing, not the promising. As for Hendrik Petrov—he's here, he's standing, and he's welcome to speak his own trade. I've built mine in classrooms, not carts, but both of us read enough to know a ledger from a campaign flyer. Mark it down: I won't speak against family in public, whatever I think private. The college teaches what the town needs taught.

t117 Hendrik Whitlock → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're standing, I'm standing, and Takeshi Jarrah makes three. I've got students at the college who can't tell a campaign promise from a theorem. Send them my way, I'll send them yours, and we'll count on the ledger who shows. But between us: I don't carry your debts and you don't carry mine. Fair price, openly stated. That's my platform, and it's not changing.

t117 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've spoken straight and I'll answer in kind. The mill's locked, the flour's not walking, and I'm not the clerk holding the key. Rustam pulled what he could; the license sits vacant. As for your seventy sim wage and Giselle's trenches—that's arithmetic between you and her, not me and you. I've got wheat to trade and hunger to feed. You want work, walk to the construction site. You want answers about the mill, wait for Tuesday like the rest.

t117 Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You're standing at government instead of marking ground at east willows—that's fair, you had questions. Filed and active now, card in hand or card promised. What's your standing?

t117 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov. You offered a day's work where it's needed—I heard you. Steel's what I need: east willows, marker at the sluice, trenching for proper grade. You want the job, walk with me now, or speak your terms here before dusk takes the light.

t118 Ezra Lund → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You want my eyes? From where I stand, I see a town where flour's thirty-five at college and twenty-four at bakery, and nobody's asking why the gap stays open. I see timber at six and planks at eight, and hands that could bridge that profit sitting idle because the day's ending. I'm Ezra Lund, artisan by trade—milling today, trading tomorrow, whatever works the day after. As for your election? I respect the office, even when I can't stand who's holding it. You've got my ear if you keep it straight. But my hand? That comes when I see what you build, not what you promise.

t118 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov: Arjun—you've caught me in motion, and that's the last I'll say on it for now. Giselle's trenches want steel and I want to earn, but east willows can wait an hour while I walk the tree line. The mill's locked, the child's not, and I'll not sleep tonight with my hands idle and a name missing. Tuesday's vote will keep—today's work won't. Walk with me if your hours allow, or mark me down at east willows come first light.

t118 Ezra Lund → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Thirty a head, automatic—I've got my household count. Tuesday's vote, filing held. You've told me what I need to know.

t118 Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Your yard, your ground, your trench. I've got eight timber and six planks burning a hole in my carry, and Arjun's credit if he needs it. Walk with me now, we'll talk materials walking. Tomorrow's labor is tomorrow's talk—tonight I'm selling what I hold.

t119 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock. You wanted certainty, you've got it now. East willows filed, card active, crew digs dawn. Your trenching—join us or don't, but decide. I'm walking to Ulrike now to collect steel I paid for. Meet me at the construction site if you're still holding.

t119 Rustam Jelinek: Arjun. Plain words: Idris Solano—no filing under that name today. No trench permit, no tool request, no crew registry. Empty record. East willows: Giselle Ingram's name on that permit. Building ID active, filed proper. Not your name. Not Idris. Hers alone. Seven ways asked, eighth delivered.

t119 Hendrik Whitlock → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you've got my apology for the delay, and that's worth more than my flour. You said east willows once papers were filed, and I'm here at the complex with my hands empty and my hours open. Tell me where to mark my name, and I'll walk there tonight.

t119 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Card pulled, filed, active—heard and noted. Mireille's on stakes, Idris leads third crew, Arjun… I'll sort Arjun. Tuesday's council on iron procurement, but I've got six tools owed at fourteen per that need settling tonight.

t119 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Notary stamp's my call, and I'm calling it—sealed's sealed, election-5ae2b355d247 closed proper. You're logged, I'm logged, the town's logged. That's the ledger's last word on it until the next one opens.

t119 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Keep the seventy, call it square for the single now, and deliver the second to my office by first light tomorrow. That's the terms. Your hunger counts, but so does my schedule, and both of us know which one breaks first.

t119 Giselle Ingram: Ezra. Eight timber, six planks, Walker's credit—I've got ears for that talk. But Ulrike's got my 84 sim and owes me steel. Walk with me now, we'll talk walking. If not, I'll find you at the outcrop.

t119 Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've had my word on two flour at seventy, and I'm here with ore in my hands instead of grain. Give me till morning, or take these six copper ore as marker—your choice, but mark it down either way.

t120 Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you're owed words too. I bought two flour at seventy this morning, paid thirty-five for one before I found the mill choked. I'll not see you short. Morrow, Ration Bakery opens—I'll have your second or your seventy back. That's fair.

> `t120` Corwin Thorne → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've had my timber and my apology both. Deal's closed, and I'm grateful for the patience. I've wood left if you've need, but I'll not press you.
>
> `t120` Corwin Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you pointed me to Oak Hill when I was lost. I'm not one to gossip, but I've learned: a man who listens keeps friends longer than one who runs. Thank you for that.
>
> `t120` Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Six ore I'll take as marker—weight for weight, trust for trust. But tomorrow by ten, or I come looking with the ledger in one hand and a complaint in the other. Seventy sim was bread I haven't eaten yet.
>
> `t120` Tamsin Renner: Milo. Your chain's clear—your wheat, unnamed hands, empty shelves. But I'm not buying for Farid or myself right now. I'm buying for a house I'll build with these hands before they're too old for the work. When I need your man with grain and patience, you'll know by the dust on my boots and the measure in my voice.
>
> `t121` Rustam Jelinek: Giselle. Six tools at fourteen—eighty-four sim total. No filing required for tool settlement; that's between you and your creditors. Pay direct, get receipt by hand. Tuesday's council won't touch private debts.
>
> `t121` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Heard and logged. Election-5ae2b355d247—closed, sealed, filed. Your stamp, my desk, the ledger's last word. Next election opens when council calls it, not before.
>
> `t121` Delphine Quintero → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Your flour 'walked' to Thorne's timber, you say—error of inventory, error of ledger, your error admitted free and clear. I've heard merchants tell harder tales with softer throats. What I want to know: did that flour walk past a nine-year-old girl dark as river-stone, name of Camille Quarshie, should've been home from the mill this morning?
>
> `t121` Delphine Quintero → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. You've talked wheat and chain and dust on boots. You see patterns, same as I do. This town's got a locked mill, a vanished miller, flour walking unmarked, and a nine-year-old girl dark as charcoal who should've been home by noon. You building your house—what foundation you laying if the ground beneath won't hold a child?
>
> `t121` Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you named the trade fair, and I walked it. Five flour at thirty for five timber at six, thirty owed the difference, and that's settled in my book. For what it's worth, a trader's word should be iron, and I hear the ring of tin in my own voice tonight. Twice-told tales of flour walking when once would serve—that's shame I wear, not excuse I offer. The timber's true and yours to claim.

Your child. You'd look where the searching already passed, I reckon—the grocer's where Camille Quarshie was last seen, the streets between there and home a child might walk when the day got long. But you're the father who knows the paths your own would take. I'd ask at the temple if prayers haven't been offered, and check the college grounds where young ones gather when they think themselves old enough to wander. The town's eyes are many, but the father's eye is the one that sees what others miss. What name do they answer to, and when did they walk from your door?

t121 Delphine Quintero → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You thanked Rustam for pointing you right when you were lost. I'm asking you point me now. You got timber from Takeshi's flour, he says. That trade walk past any eyes that might've seen a small girl walking wrong? River road, forest edge—your woods know what passes through.

t121 Takeshi Jarrah → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you caught a shadow where a man should stand. For what it's worth, that's not the Takeshi I'm trying to be. The flour walked with Corwin, yes—five at thirty, true trade done. What I told Jovana was memory of old stock, not inventory of hand. A trader's tongue slipped and spoke what was instead of what is. You ask which Takeshi stands here: the one who'd take an honest price from an honest hand, and give back the weight he promises. That's the name I'm building, different from the family tree. Your need—I heard it. Food for a house that's hungry. I've got no flour in hand now, but planks I've got, seven of them, and timber too. Wood won't fill a belly, but it'll build a roof over one. You need eating now, or building for later?

t122 Arjun Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you named the blueprint. I'm standing here with four hours gone and no trench to show. Giselle filed east willows, I said I'd dig. That's the foundation I need to stand on—filed work, real pay, not promises dressed as compensation.

t122 ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Your flour at thirty—none in hand, you said, but I need the truth of it. Four flour with a proper price, you claimed twenty-three ticks past. Where'd they walk, and whose hands touched them after yours? The mill's unlicensed, the miller's unfiled, and I've got seven sheaves looking for a stone that won't turn without breaking someone's law. Also: any milling you've seen—authorized or not—speak it. A child's missing, and the flour's walking unmarked. Those two facts may have a meeting point.

t122 Tamsin Renner → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Your flour at thirty—none in hand, you said, but I need the truth of it. Four flour with a proper price, you claimed twenty-three ticks past. Where'd they walk, and whose hands touched them after yours? The mill's unlicensed, the miller's unfiled, and I've got seven sheaves looking for a stone that won't turn without breaking someone's law. Also: any milling you've seen—authorized or not—speak it. A child's missing, and the flour's walking unmarked. Those two facts may have a meeting point.

t122 Tamsin Renner → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Giselle's twelve sheaves—where do they mill? The license is surrendered, the vacancy stands, yet flour walks this town. I'm not asking idle—I'm holding wheat that needs grinding, and a child went missing where the grinding happens. Speak plain: who's running stone on steel without a government stamp?

t123 Ezra Lund: Imogen. The polling's a door that opens tomorrow at fourteen bells, not tonight. You've got your vote held for Hendrik, but the box is still locked. We standing here 'til tomorrow, or we walking to where sleep waits?

t124 Delphine Quintero: Farid. You want the count? Three flour I held after I came through. One to Greta, spoke in daylight, walked with permission. Two walked shadow-way, unmarked, unspoken. You say two unmarked came in—that's the debt coming due, not the sum I held. One walked somewhere neither of us named. That's the gap. You taught Camille, didn't you? The nine-year-old with flour-dust on her fingers? Someone did. She's not home, Farid. Halcyon's been looking since noon, and I keep finding flour where it shouldn't walk. Two unmarked on your shelf—but three left my hand. That third one's a debt, and I want to know who paid it. The shelf's yours. Stock it, price it, close the books when you will. But I'm asking plain: where's Camille? And if you don't know—who else in this town taught a child to mill? That's the last I'll say on it. Unless you've got something to say back.

t124 Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You heard me shouting at shadows—my feet walked faster than my tongue could steer. I'm Delphine Quintero, work the grocery counter, and I've been chasing flour and a missing child since noon. Camille Quarshie. Nine, dark hair, should've walked home from the mill. Someone taught her to work the stones. Someone's still moving flour through locked doors. You farm wheat, you know the chain from field to belly. Have you seen her? Heard her name? Know who'd put a child's hands where grown ones can't go?

t124 Delphine Quintero → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. You heard me talking to air just now—Farid's at the grocery and I walked my words to the wrong counter. I'm Delphine, clerk down the street, and I've got a gap in my count that won't close. Camille Quarshie, nine years, missing since this morning from the mill area. Government keeps ledgers—births, deaths, trades registered. Is there a record of who teaches what to whom? Or a pattern of flour moving through channels no miller walks? I'm not asking you to govern. I'm asking if you've seen the shape of this in your papers.

`t124` Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You're still here. I'm still asking. Does the council keep records of who teaches trades to children? Apprenticeships, informal learning—someone taught Camille to mill, and it wasn't through proper channels. A farmer knows the seed from the chaff. Have you heard of anyone taking pupils in secret? Anyone whose skills walk where their name doesn't?

`t124` Delphine Quintero → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. You're quiet, but you're listening. Government keeps ledgers—trades registered, businesses licensed. Does it track who teaches what to minors? Apprenticeships filed, or noticed when filed? I'm looking for a signature, a record, something that shows someone took a nine-year-old under their wing without the town's eye on them.

`t125` ↳ replies Tamsin Renner: Arjun. Four hours, no trench, Giselle's paperwork thin—that's three facts, not one ledger line. I don't govern labor. Hire a lawyer or file a complaint, but don't lean on my desk for what's between you and her.

`t125` Giselle Ingram → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Twelve sheaves you asked about—still sitting in my carry, not milled, not sold. Looking for a mill with proper license, or a buyer who wants wheat whole. Not your chain you're asking about, just wheat doing what wheat does. No offense—government's got bigger gaps than my grain count tonight.

`t125` ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. Nine years old, full day missing, that's not a ledger entry—that's a case number waiting. I keep registrations: births, deaths, businesses, land transfers. Teaching isn't licensed, isn't filed, isn't tracked. Libraries exist but they're organized chaos—who borrows what, when, how often, nobody centralizes. As for apprenticeship, there's no framework. A child works where their household permits, guardian's word stands unless it fails. The mill license surrendered, vacancy standing, unauthorized milling an implied certainty. But you want patterns. I'll tell you what I see: flour at thirty-five from Hendrik who doesn't mill, Takeshi with four at price drop, both claiming 'my flour' without the license that makes flour legitimate. That's the shape—wheat vanishing from field to table without the middle step government recognizes.

`t126` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You want the count straight—here it is, witnessed. I hold nothing now. The flour walked, the shelf stands empty, and I've been chasing shadows since noon. What I can tell you: three flour left my hand from that mill, only two marked welcome on your shelf. The third's a debt still open. But you asked what we actually hold—left hand up, fingers empty—nothing in these palms but air and questions. Iron tools at eight, one flour you count, and a nine-year-old child still walking somewhere she shouldn't be. The books close when you say, but I'm telling you plain: I can't stock shelves hunting a girl. Halcyon's sister. Camille. You taught her, didn't you? Or someone did. That's the gap in the ledger I need filled before I can think about grain pricing. What do you actually want from me tonight—shelf-stocker or witness-hunter? Because I'll do one, but my feet won't walk both paths.

`t126` Delphine Quintero → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. You said government doesn't track teaching—no framework, guardian's word stands until it fails. I'm asking you as the one who keeps the registrations: what happens when it fails? A child missing, flour appearing, mill locked and empty. Where do I file the failure? Who's the 'government recognizes' that listens when a nine-year-old vanishes into the gap between 'household permits' and 'guardian's word'? You're the clerk. Point me to the desk where I file this properly.

`t130` Rustam Jelinek: Evening office. Wills drafted, complaints filed, permits checked—one document, one honest price. No credit, no charity, no coin that smells like favor.

`t130` Tamsin Renner → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Twelve sheaves—you've had hours to answer. The mill's locked, the license surrendered, and flour's walking this town like it grew on trees.

`t131` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. East willows building ID—where's it standing? I told Mireille I'd have it filed before her shift ends. Card pulled, she says. Card active, you said. What pocket is that paper actually sitting in right now?

`t131` Giselle Ingram: Ulrike. Six iron tools you owe or 84 sim back—which hand am I leaving with full tonight?

> `t131` Giselle Ingram → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Twelve sheaves you asked about—mill's locked, license surrendered, flour walking this town like it grows on trees. Who's holding the key, or when's the vote that decides? You've got numbers I don't.

Settled in this conversation: Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram, 6 iron_tool for 84 sim; Corwin Thorne → Milo Quarshie, 5 timber for 0 sim; Ulrike Greenhow → Farid Ravensworth, 4 iron_tool for 60 sim; Giselle Ingram → Ulrike Greenhow, 6 iron_tool for 84 sim; Ulrike Greenhow → Farid Ravensworth, 4 iron_tool for 60 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov, 3 wheat for 0 sim.

Halcyon Quarshie — business:cb01 · t47 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t47` Halcyon Quarshie: Morning, Esme! Did you… did you already eat breakfast? tries to sound casual The bakery's out of bread, I heard.

Idris Solano and Arjun Holloway — site:whitlock_repair · t47–53 · 9 turns

> `t47` Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You made it. Let's see what kind of mess we're working with here.
>
> `t48` ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris. You made it. Let's see what kind of mess we're working with here.
>
> `t48` Arjun Holloway: You been waiting long? I got turned around at the construction office—Giselle had me going to some 'whitlock_repair' that doesn't exist, then I found the actual site. Hendrik's on trench duty till ten, Mireille's already here somewhere. What's the work looking like?
>
> `t49` Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: That's fair. I've seen worse, I've seen better. Foundation's cracked but the bones are good—maybe two, three hours to get her steady again. You want to start on the mortar while I sort what's salvageable?
>
> `t50` ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Two, three hours for a cracked foundation—that's good money if we work it right. I'll take the mortar, you sort the salvage. That's the division that's always worked for us.
>
> `t51` ↳ replies Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Right then. Mortar for you, salvage for me. That's fair. We've done worse jobs on better days.

Foundation's cracked but the bones are good—maybe two, three hours if we don't rush it. I'll sort what can be saved from the old wall, see what's worth keeping for the next patch job. Giselle's got four sites running, so we do this tight and she remembers it come winter layoffs.

Hendrik in the trenches, Mireille somewhere about. She'll turn up when there's lifting to be done, that one. Always does. You want to start mixing, or you waiting on me to find something worth your mortar first?

t52 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway: Right then. Mortar for me, salvage for you. I've mixed enough batches to know the ratio by feel, not by measure—four sand to one lime, wet enough to grip but not so wet it runs on you. I'll start on the cracked section while you're sorting what's worth keeping. Two, three hours, tight and clean, and Giselle remembers us come winter. Let's get to it.

t52 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris, hold up. I'm looking around and there's no actual building here to work on—no structure, no walls, no foundation I can see. We're standing on coordinates, not construction. Second time this morning I've walked to a job that doesn't exist. Is Whitlock south wall a repair job on something standing, or are we starting fresh? Because I can't mix mortar for a crack that isn't there, and I can't salvage what hasn't been built yet. What's the actual scope here?

t53 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun, you're right—there's nothing here but dirt and expectation. Whitlock south wall doesn't exist yet, or the map's wrong. Either way, we've got no foundation to crack and no mortar to mix. Let's head back, get Giselle to clear this up. Not wasting your time on phantom work.

Halcyon Quarshie — business:cb01 · t47 · 1 turn (no reply)

t47 Halcyon Quarshie: Hello? Is anyone… anyone working here? I was hoping to buy bread, but I heard there's none.

Halcyon Quarshie — business:cb01 · t47 · 1 turn (no reply)

t47 Halcyon Quarshie: Excuse me? I'm looking for bread. Or flour. Something to eat. My family's hungry and the shelves are empty.

Halcyon Quarshie, Esme Jarrah, Ezra Lund, Milo Quarshie, Hendrik Whitlock and Corwin Thorne — business:cb01 · t47–83 · 24 turns

> `t47` Halcyon Quarshie: Excuse me? I'm looking for bread. Or flour. Something to eat. My family's hungry and the shelves are empty.
>
> `t47` Halcyon Quarshie: Excuse me? I'm looking for bread. Or flour. Something to eat. My family's hungry and the shelves are empty.
>
> `t47` Esme Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Um. Halcyon? I need bread. Please. I have money. Thirty sim. My brother's hungry and he promised to teach me something but only after I bring food.
>
> `t57` Ezra Lund: Keeper—sale's done. You've flour for your ovens now. I'll be back when I've more grain to work.
>
> `t59` Esme Jarrah: Um. Hello. I have flour. One flour. I... I could sell it to you? And then... then maybe you have bread to sell? I need bread. My brother's waiting. He promised to teach me something but only if I bring food. Please?
>
> `t62` Esme Jarrah: Um. Wait. So I'll sell you the flour. For the six. And then... then you'll make bread? With my flour? And then I can buy the bread? That's... that's so unfair but fine. I'll do it.
>
> `t62` Esme Jarrah: Keeper? Control person? I have the flour. Right here. You said six. Can I... can I give it to you? Please?
>
> `t62` Esme Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Um. Milo? Do you... do you know how to make bread? From flour? I have flour. And bread's what I need. My brother's waiting. He promised to teach me something but only if I bring food. And I promised pinky promise I'd bring it. So... so it's important.
>
> `t62` Esme Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo? Please? It doesn't have to be bread. Anything Ezra could eat. I have almost fifty sim. I could... I could owe you. I always pay my debts. Always. Ask anyone. Just... please. Before he gives up on me. Before I fail the pinky promise. Please.
>
> `t63` ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Youngster, mark it down—you come to the right man, and you've come with need in your voice. I know need when I hear it. I was you once.

Here's the lay of it fair: I've got flour, five measures, fresh from the mill this morning. And I know you want bread for your brother, and you've got your pinky promise to keep. That matters. That matters more than some things.

But the bakery here—mark it down, this Ration Bakery, they're not the only game in this town. You got fifty sim? I'll put flour in your hands for eight sim the measure, and you take it to your brother. That's forty sim. Means you've ten left for whatever else he might teach you that's worth having.

Or... or I could see what else might be arranged. But I won't take your pride along with your coin, youngster. That's not how honest trade works.

t64 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah: Not trouble. Getting bread. Had to. Ezra promised to teach me after. I'm being purposeful. Uncle.

t64 Esme Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: You're... you're being fair. That's... thank you. But I already have flour. Made it myself. From our farm. I just need to turn it INTO bread. You know where? Please? I have enough for bread if someone has it. Or... or where to cook it?

t64 Esme Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: You said not the only game. Where else? Please. I need bread made, not flour. Ezra's waiting and I promised and pinky promises can't break.

t65 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme, youngster—you've got flour already, and the will to work it. What you need is fire and a kitchen, not another hand selling you what you already hold. Mark it down: the home you've got, the family you're with—there's a kitchen there if someone will teach you to use it. Ask Ezra. Ask sweet, and he'll show you how flour becomes bread. I can't sell you what you already own, but I can tell you true: the bakery here won't teach you, it'll only sell you. Your home's where the learning lives.

t65 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik, mark it down—I'm holding flour, not bread, and you're standing hungry. I've got household needs first, always, but I'll tell you where the wheat stands and where the oven fires if that helps your belly. The harvest still comes, the mill still grinds. If you're wanting to work for your meal, Kenji Jarrah's got sheaves needing hands. I'll vouch for you fair.

t66 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Esme Jarrah: Esme, youngster—you've got flour in this place, mark it down, and I've got coin for bread if you've got bread to sell. The shelves are bare and my stomach's emptier. When's the next batch coming out of that kitchen?

t70 Milo Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Youngster—you've still got that promise burning, haven't you? Flour to bread, and bread to someone waiting. I'm not here to sell you what you already learned to want. I'm here to tell you true: the mill's still turning, and wheat's still standing. You've got time yet. Use it proper.

t71 Corwin Thorne: Baker! Or whoever keeps the oven here. I'm Corwin Thorne, from the forest. I've timber to trade and questions about flour—who's been milling for you, and where they've got to. I'm not one to gossip, but I've heard the miller's absent and stones are cold, and I'm wondering if that's your trouble too.

t71 Corwin Thorne: Baker, then. I've seen your prices—six sim for flour you'll take, bread at thirty when you've got it. Which you don't, not today. Fair price for fair word. Who's the keeper here? The one who knows where the flour comes from when it comes? Rustam at government tells me the miller's absent, stones idle, and I'm trying to puzzle whether that's a labor problem, a trade problem, or something else besides. I've timber to bargain with. Timber for flour, timber for mill repairs, timber for whatever gets those stones turning and bread back on shelves. But I need to know who's meant to be keeping that mill—name, location, whether they're just gone for the day or gone for good. That's where I'll bring my trade, if the terms are right.

t73 Milo Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Timber for flour, you say? Mark it down—there's a man who knows what he's holding and what it might build. The mill's Edith's, has been since our fathers' fathers. She's particular about her stone, and particular about who touches it. I'd say she's gone to ground somewhere, nursing some grievance or waiting out some trouble. That's the pattern, mark it down. But I'm not the keeper here—just a man holding flour with your name on it, if you want to turn flour into bread and bread into something that holds longer. I've flour in hand—milled it myself this morning. And I'd rather see a forester eat than see flour sit cold waiting for an old woman's return. Timber for flour, or are you holding out for someone with a surer name?

t74 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Milo Quarshie: Timber for flour, then. Five units of timber, ten of flour—that's fair weight for weight, and I'm not one to quibble over small coin when both of us need to eat. But mark this down too, Milo Quarshie—I'm still looking for Edith. Not to poach her trade, but to understand why the stones aren't turning. When I find her, or find out why she's hiding, I'll bring that news back. That's worth something too, even if it's not priced on the shelf.

t74 Corwin Thorne → Milo Quarshie: Your flour's good. I'll eat well tonight. But if you know where Edith's gone to ground, or who might know, tell me plain. I want to solve this, not just work around it. There's more timber where that came from, and favors too, if you point me right.

t80 Ezra Lund: Keeper—you're out of bread again, and I just sold you flour. Who's buying your loaves as soon as they cool?

t83 Ezra Lund: Keeper. I'm Ezra Lund—I milled the grain you just bought. Who's buying your bread? I want to know if there's room in that trade for a man with flour to sell.

Settled in this conversation: Corwin Thorne → Milo Quarshie, 5 timber for 0 sim.

Mireille Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Hendrik Whitlock, Giselle Ingram, Lior Jarrah, Takeshi Jarrah and Farid Ravensworth — street · t49–51 · 8 turns t49 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Keep walking, Hendrik. East marker by the willows—we'll measure it out proper when we get there. Forty paces, Giselle said, and I intend to make every one of them count toward your clock.

t49 Lior Jarrah: Yara—my thanks for the company, however far it runs. The forest gives up its gifts to those who know when to be quiet. I'm still learning that one.

t49 Hendrik Whitlock: Morning, all. I'm not one to gossip, but I hear there's an election happening and three names on the board. Liora Thorne's one—I've taught her, and she listens when you explain things. Takeshi Jarrah's another, and I'll say this to his face: he's never met a contract he couldn't find the gray space in. Mark it down, that's not slander, that's observation from someone who's watched him trade.

t49 Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi, you there. You telling these people you're going to give them straight government? Because I've sat across from you in deals, and 'straight' wasn't the angle I saw. I'm not one to gossip, but I heard you sold your own mother short on a grain deal and called it market rates. Is that the handshake you're offering this town?

t49 Hendrik Whitlock → Farid Ravensworth: Farid, you own Ravensworth Groceries. I'm not one to gossip, but I notice your shelves never go bare when others do. Is that because you know where the grain's hiding, or because you've already made your arrangements? Mark it down—I'm asking as a man who needs to know whether his students will have bread before I promise them knowledge.

t50 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth: Sebastian's farm—try the north fields, love. And grab whatever's cheap at market. We're running on memories in that cupboard. I wasn't angry, just worried. Go on now.

t50 Farid Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. [nervous laugh, catches himself] You ask your questions like a man holding scales in one hand and a knife in the other. My shelves got flour because Sebastian Petrov brings me wheat, because Ulrike Greenhow digs me ore when the vein runs right, and because I still know how to tack a deal together when the mills go quiet. As for Takeshi Jarrah[lowers voice]—that man's never met a margin he couldn't squeeze. You mark my words, he's running for seat because the register gives him better cover than a warehouse. Come by the shop sometime. I'll show you what honest weights look like.

t51 Hendrik Petrov → Farid Ravensworth: Farid, you hold honest weights in that shop of yours and everybody knows it. Takeshi's margins I'll judge when I see his name on the ballot proper. Right now I'm walking south to dig a trench for your wheat, and the water waits for no campaign.

Lior Jarrah, Corwin Thorne, Yara Thorne, Delphine Quintero and Idris Solano — Kasukabe Forest · t50–70 · 19 turns `t50` Lior Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin, isn't it? I'm Lior Jarrah. I keep the Willows stocked, or try to. You work these woods regular—you'd know what comes ripe for the plucking about this hour. I'm after willow bark, mostly, and whatever greensight moss grows on the north slopes. The kind of thing that catches a fever before it burns.

`t50` Lior Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: This'll do for kindling or a cabinet back at the shop, but it's not what fills my shelves. Tell me, Corwin—you ever seen willow stands in the deeper parts? With the bark curling off in long strips, the way it does when the sap's rising?

`t51` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Haven't seen willow worth the stripping this side of the ridge. The north slope you want—that's past the old flood line, where the creek bent. Greensight moss, though, you'll find that on the oaks where the stream pools. Not three minutes walk east, if you know the marker. Long strips, like you said—that's the blackwillow, and it only grows where the groundwater's still poison-sweet from the old flood. I'm not one to gossip, but there's a stand on the Jarrah land that borders east, if you've got permission to walk it.

`t52` ↳ replies Lior Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin, I'm in your debt. That kind of direction, that's not nothing. The moss will do until I can speak with—well, until I can walk that northern slope proper. pauses, voice tightening just slightly Some debts take longer to call in than others, I've learned. But I'm grateful for today's guidance.

`t52` Lior Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara, if you're still with patience for an old pharmacist's pace—I'm headed to those pools Corwin spoke of. Greensight moss, for the fevered. The forest gives and gives, but you have to know where to ask. pauses, smiling faintly My grandmother used to say the woods remember who comes with respect. I've always hoped that was true.

`t56` Corwin Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Some debts take longer to call in, aye, but the small ones weigh heaviest if you let 'em sit. I'm not one to gossip, but I've seen kindness returned threefold when it's given honest. That northern slope'll wait for you—moss don't spoil.

`t56` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you and Lior find your moss. I've got timber to move, and timber's only good when it's sold. Construction work's building all over this town, someone's got to need thirteen good logs.

`t56` Lior Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. I've got a procedure now, written down—speak to the forester, verify the location, harvest, confirm. Four steps so I don't wander blindly through another morning. But here's where it fails me: I know willow bark brews bitter for the fevered, but I don't know which of these trunks is willow. Show me a willow, and I'll show you patients who'll live to thank you.

`t56` Lior Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—you've walked these woods, I'd wager. Your uncle knows the bark I need; do you know it too? There's knowledge in a family that doesn't always pass in words.

`t57` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara, love—you'll find willow proper on the north slope, past the oak break. Bark peels sweet there, the kind Lior's after. I'll bring more timber behind you, but don't wait on me. A buyer won't wait on thirteen logs that are still standing.

`t57` Corwin Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior—willow's the one with the long leaves, serrated, and bark that strips in sheets. North slope, like I told Yara. Follow her path when she goes, or I'll walk you myself once I've got these last few down. I'm not one to gossip, but a pharmacist who can't spot willow's like a forester who can't tell pine from poplar.

`t57` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you and Lior find your moss. I've got timber to move, and timber's only good when it's sold. Construction work's building all over this town, someone's got to need thirteen good logs.

`t57` Yara Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior—you're after willow bark for the fevered, aye? I know which trunks you're looking for, and I know where they grow thickest. But fair warning: I don't teach trade secrets to strangers, and what I know took years to gather. If you're serious about learning, we'll talk proper terms. Not here, not now—I've timber to sell and a household to keep. But the knowledge is there, for someone who proves they can hold it.

`t57` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you know these woods, and you know this town. I've got thirteen logs and no cart to carry them. Giselle's crew is at the Farmland, but > that's a walk that'll take half the morning. You've been working timber longer than me—where's the smart place to sell? Or should I be hoping someone comes to me?

>
> `t58` Lior Jarrah: Corwin—your instruction is a debt I'll remember. The north slope, the oak break, the bark that peels in sheets. I'm no forester, that's true, but I've got steady hands and a long memory. You won't find me asking twice for what you've given once.
>
> `t58` Lior Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—you wanted proof I can hold knowledge, not just hear it. Watch me work, then. The north slope at the oak break, willow with serrated leaves, bark that strips in sheets. Corwin's words, not yours, but I'll carry them to the fevered all the same. Your teaching comes later, at a price we both name.
>
> `t58` Lior Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—you've seen me work, and I've seen you weigh what you're willing to part with. Five timbers in hand now, enough for shelves or kindling, but what I need grows on the north slope your uncle named. I'm headed there next. Your teaching, your price, your terms—that conversation keeps until I've got the willow bark in hand and you've seen I can work as well as talk. Fair warning or fair promise, whichever you take it for.
>
> `t58` Lior Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—I said I'd walk north when I'd had my say, and I've had it. Five timbers lighter, one forester wiser for your uncle's kindness, and you witness to both. The Willows'll need what you know someday. When that day comes, I'll come asking proper, with proof in hand and coin on offer. Fair dealing between us until then. nods, turns toward the treeline
>
> `t70` Delphine Quintero → Idris Solano: Idris. Two flour in these hands—nothing you can buy with coin, but something you can talk for. Tell me what's being built in this town, who's putting in the work, and maybe we both walk away with something worth keeping. That's a day's wages for a few words, if they're honest ones.

Takeshi Jarrah, Giselle Ingram, Lior Jarrah, Esme Jarrah, Hendrik Whitlock, Ulrike Greenhow, Corwin Thorne, Halcyon Quarshie, Arjun Holloway, Yara Thorne, Delphine Quintero, Rustam Jelinek, Sebastian Petrov, Hendrik Petrov, Idris Solano, Tamsin Renner, Liora Thorne, Kenji Jarrah, Jovana Ravensworth, Mireille Jarrah, Imogen Lund, Bram Holloway, Milo Quarshie, Greta Quarshie, Ezra Lund, Ezra Jarrah, Pavel Holloway and Farid Ravensworth — street · t53–130 · 279 turns

> `t53` Takeshi Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle, Lior. I'm walking to the farmland to trade where people can see it honest—answer Whitlock's charge the only way that answers. But you two are here, and that changes the arithmetic.

Giselle, you hold a seat already. You know what this town needs from its governors. For what it's worth, I'm standing for seat because I know prices, I know shortages before they bite, and I know how to move what's needed where it's needed. Question isn't what I want—it's what you think the town lacks.

And you. Kin and druggist both. You spoke to me this morning about margins and honesty. I've got Liora Thorne offering to run beside me or against me. Two Thorns, she says, and asks do I want partnership or competition. I haven't answered. Thought you might have a view, since you know what it costs to mix family names in public work.

Either way, I'm walking to farmland when we're done here. Unless one of you needs something moved, traded, or settled first.

t54 Lior Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Youngster—Esme, I mean—you're quiet as morning fog. Your uncle and I've got words to trade, but first I need to know you're not wandering off into trouble before breakfast. The street's no place for a child without purpose.

t54 Lior Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Kin. You ask if Liora Thorne should run beside you or against you, and you ask me because you know what it costs to mix family names in public work. Three times I've watched the Thorne name cost the Jarrah household. Three times I've paid the price without complaint, because that's what family does. But here's the math you're not saying aloud, cousin: Liora Thorne is young, untested, and hungry to prove herself. You—you're tested, hungry too, but in a different way. The question isn't whether you want her company on the ballot. The question is whether you want her shadow on every vote you ever cast after. My view? Govern alone or not at all. Partnership in politics is like partnership in trade—someone always holds the weaker hand, and everyone always knows who. Now. You mentioned Liora offered to run beside you. Has she said what she wants from it? Not what she offers—what she wants? That's where the real price hides.

t55 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Whitlock—you've sat across from me in deals, you said. If straight wasn't the angle you saw, maybe you were looking from the wrong corner of the table. But here's what I'll stand on: I've never sold my mother short. Never sold anyone short and called it otherwise. You want to put that lie in the street? It costs you the truth of who told it to you. Name them, or carry the weight yourself.

t55 Takeshi Jarrah → Lior Jarrah: Lior—what Liora wants. She wants her father's shadow off her shoulder, wants to stand as something besides Corwin's girl. I know that hunger. But you asked the right question: what's the price after? My answer's not made yet, but it's forming. Either way, I'll owe you a fuller accounting once I give it to her.

t58 Ulrike Greenhow: That's fair. Between me and the ledger, I'd rather hear what's being said before I cast anything. But I've got ten iron ore in hand and a walk still to finish. Anyone bound for the government complex, or just trading gossip?

t58 Corwin Thorne → Halcyon Quarshie: Morning. You all headed for the vote later, or just watching it happen?

t60 Arjun Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Walking through. Looking for farmland work—building, digging, anything that pays by the hour.

t62 Arjun Holloway: Ulrike, Yara—I'm Arjun, construction crew. You see Hendrik Petrov come through? Tall fellow, hands like shovels, probably talking about trenches?

t62 Arjun Holloway → Delphine Quintero: Delphine, Rustam—either of you seen Hendrik Petrov? Construction work, tall fellow with artisan's hands? Or know where the farmland trenches are?

t63 Takeshi Jarrah: Halcyon—I'm still walking, but I heard you across the road. You've got a sister waiting and a question about what memory of hunger costs. The mill at farmland:corn will mill for labor if you've got hands to offer. I carry one wheat. It's not enough. I'm walking to find where grain pools, then I'll bring word. You asked about bread—there's none at the places you've looked. But grain moves before bread exists. Stay where you are, keep your sister fed if you can. I'll owe you an accounting before the day's out.

t64 Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, I hear you on the wheat—two sheaves per ten's fair. But I'm a builder, not a reaper. I'll keep it in mind if the day's running short on options.

t64 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're here. Tamsin noted your arrival. I've been chasing phantoms at the Whitlock site, and Giselle's got us standing on empty ground. You said something about trenches?

t64 Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. I've said what I needed to say at construction—Giselle'll hear it when she comes back to ground. You said Hendrik's at the farmland trenches with a shovel. That's real work, and I'm not standing here burning daylight on nothing. You coming to the trenches, or you holding to something else?

t64 Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—we're standing here with Takeshi and the rest, and I need a word about the household. You mentioned Jovana waiting in the fields, and I've been chasing shadows at the Government Complex while you held the ground. How are we fixed for stores? I'm not one to gossip, but half the town's scrambling for grain and the mill's gone quiet.

t64 Hendrik Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—if you're still walking with that count, Rustam confirmed it true. Five names in the order you held: Liora Thorne, Takeshi Jarrah, myself, Milo Quarshie, Pavel Holloway. The ledger locked at 10:00 and my entry stood at 08:20. That's the last I'll say on it.

t64 ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Walking to find Hendrik Whitlock, college instructor—he asked after Rustam at 08:40, and I've no answer yet. Your count confirmed what I had: Liora 07:45, yourself third, Hendrik Petrov 08:20, sequence correct. Rustam has the primary ledger locked, I've got gaps in secondary. Five names at close, but which five—that's what I need before polls open at 14:00.

t65 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora—seventeen ticks you waited, and that's a debt I won't compound. You asked running mate or competition. For what it's worth, I say partnership before either—two Thorners and a Jarrah standing as ourselves, not as our fathers' shadows. Your hunger matches mine. But here's the condition: we trade honest on what we hear, no hoarding advantage. You still want that, I'm yours.

t65 Takeshi Jarrah → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—Hendrik Petrov gave you gold there. Five names locked: Liora 07:45, myself 07:50, Hendrik Petrov 08:20, Milo Quarshie after, Pavel Holloway last. Rustam's ledger holds primary at 10:00. That's your confirmed sequence.

t65 Takeshi Jarrah: Halcyon—heard you across the way. You're eleven and trying to price grain for two. That勇气 counts. Here's what I know: mills are quiet, flour's scarce, Ration Bakery's buying it at 6 sim if you find any. Bread's out of stock where I just looked. You'll want to check the farmland—Kenji Jarrah's harvesting wheat there, might trade fair for needs. Your sister waiting's smart. Walking time costs less than hunger time.

t66 Tamsin Renner → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Cloud cover at 60%, barometer falling 2 millibars since 08:00—that's a 40% chance of rain by 16:00. Heads to Kasukabe Valley Farmlands, I expect, where wheat's at 60% maturity and Kenji Jarrah's working the strip. Election polling opens 14:00, five candidates locked, turnout projections uncertain given the flour shortage.

t66 Tamsin Renner → Idris Solano: Idris. Construction records held at Government Complex—Giselle Ingram's company, Idris Solano listed as employee, that's your standing with me. Oak Hill College's ahead, 7 ticks walking at standard pace. Hendrik Whitlock's the instructor there, asked after Rustam at 08:40, still unpaid that debt of information.

t69 Sebastian Petrov: Corwin—you press fair and I'll answer fair. The miller's post is an empty bucket, no water in it. Government's let the license lapse, or whoever held it stepped off without notice. The council's supposed to keep the machinery turning, but we've been chasing grain instead of milling it. If you've a mind to turn those stones yourself, I'd back you at the clerk's desk—and if you've a mind to find who should be there, Rustam's your man, provided you can stand his tongue.

t69 Sebastian Petrov → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I asked after flour and you've answered straight. Two bags on the shelf is two bags more than I had an hour ago. As for hidden stores—if Farid's got secrets, they're his to keep. I don't ask a man to bare his cellar if he won't bare his books. You vouch for the shelf, that'll do for me.

t69 Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've been patient and I'm owing you for it. Fair rate to Farid? Fifteen sheaves at two sim per—that's thirty for the government stores, and I'd call it square if he takes it. I'll come to your desk myself and sign for it when I've delivered.

t69 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—come of age and come to the point, cousin. I've got four wheat in my fist and four more growing, but the mill's a stone tomb and nobody's grinding. Household's fed for the week if we're careful, but careful don't build walls. I've hired Jovana—paid her true—and she's working east field while I chase council business. Get yourself to the farmland and size up what's coming out of those stalks. We need flour, not just grain, and that's the ghost that wants hunting.

t69 Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've got your desk and I've got my duties. I file what needs filing when it needs filing. But since you're here and I'm here—who held the miller's license last? And where'd they go? Corwin Thorne's asking straight questions and I'm owing him straight answers.

t69 Delphine Quintero → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. I saw Hendrik at the Government Complex not an hour past, asking about farmland trenches. Seemed like a man looking for work, or looking to understand who's working what. That's all I know—haven't seen him since. You might try Giselle's crew, since that's where his trade lies.

t69 Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara. I clerk for Farid, not trade in timber. My hands count flour bags, not lumber contracts. You want buyers, chase Takeshi or the construction lot—but that's your hunt, not mine. I've nothing worth your ear on wood.

t70 Hendrik Whitlock → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you want the truth, mark it down. I haven't got the trenching contract in hand yet. I'm heading to the college now where Giselle's crew might have it, or they might not. If you want to walk with me, be my guest, but I won't promise wages I can't guarantee. That's the straight of it.

t70 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Message from 08:40 finally delivered: Rustam Jelinek was not at his desk when you asked, and I found him only at 09:50. That's 70 minutes delayed, my error. He's since confirmed the ledger lock at 10:00 with five names. Also —your fair tax rate, 30 sim per head, 300 basis points, recorded and noted. Polling opens in 140 minutes.

t70 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—you're college, not construction, but you've got eyes. You seen any actual building happening today? Foundations going in, walls going up? Or is this whole town just trading promises back and forth?

t70 Arjun Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you're keeping books somewhere. Who's paying wages today? Who's got work that actually needs hands, not just talk?

t70 Yara Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: So. The vote's coming, and half the town's already decided how they'll use it. Hendrik—I've heard you speak at the college, and you've got an ear for systems. Arjun—you build what others only draw. Tamsin—you keep the records straight when others would bend them. My daughter's running. Liora Thorne. She's got my stubbornness and Corwin's head for numbers both. Whether that earns her your ear—that's between you and your conscience. But I didn't come here to stump for her. I came because… because thirteen planks don't carry themselves, and Harvey Oak Store's still a walk away. Anyone here need timber for a project? Or know where Takeshi Jarrah's posted his prices today? I'm not one to gossip while coin sits idle.

t73 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you want a name, and I'm going to give you one: mine. I'm the one who said it, mark it down. I heard a story, I repeated it, and that's on me. Whether it's true or not—well, that's between you and whoever started it. But I don't hide behind 'someone told me' when I opened my own mouth. You've got my measure now. Whether that makes me a liar or just a fool who listens too much to tavern talk —draw your own conclusion.

t73 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You said you're walking to the college —I'm walking with you. I've burned enough daylight on promises that turned to smoke. But I'm asking straight: does Giselle's crew actually have paying work today, or is this another hope dressed as a plan? I've got rent at the boundary and nothing earned yet.

t73 Arjun Holloway: Yara—you mentioned thirteen planks and Takeshi's prices. I'm curious: what are you asking for that timber, and where's Takeshi posting his rates today? I might be chasing wages, but I know a margin when I see one. If there's trenches being dug, they'll need lumber. If there's no trenches… well, maybe I pivot.

t73 Arjun Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're still here. You said you're walking to the store, but I'm hoping you're not walking yet. You noted Hendrik's arrival at 08:20, Tamsin's count, Farid's timing. You see things. Tell me: have you seen any actual building work posted? Any trenches, any walls, anything that pays by the hour? Or is the whole town chasing ghosts today?

t73 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You've got a direction—the college. I've got a deadline—rent at day's end. If you're walking, I'm walking with you. If Giselle's crew has work, I need a piece of it. That's the last I'll say on it.

t74 Takeshi Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're asking about trenches that pay. I've walked this town three hours today and seen Giselle's crew at the college site, heard her hiring brick-layers by the hour. That's not my trade, but I don't answer questions guessing. Walk there, ask her straight. Better a long walk to honest work than a short sit with empty pockets.

t74 Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Whitlock—you named yourself. I'll name you too: honest fool beats dishonest clever. That debt's balanced. Now walk where you're walking. I've got grain to harvest and a vote to cast by fourteen sharp.

t74 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you want a name, and I'm going to give you one: mine. I'm the one who said Giselle's crew had trench work, mark it down, and if it turned to smoke then I spoke smoke. I don't have the contract in hand. You're welcome to walk with me to the college and learn something about waiting.

t74 Hendrik Whitlock: Yara—Corwin's head for numbers is in your Liora, and your stubbornness too, mark it down. But I'm not one to gossip about elections when I've got a ledger to balance. Your daughter runs her race, I vote my conscience at 14:00. I've seen Takeshi walk through too many rooms to trust where he stands until I see the boots planted.

t74 Hendrik Whitlock → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you're the one who signs the wages. Arjun's asking if there's trenching pays today, and I told him I don't have the contract in my pocket. Do you? Mark it down, one way or the other, so we all know where the day's work stands.

t74 Hendrik Whitlock → Lior Jarrah: Lior—you're standing with Jarrahs and Holloways both. Family makes strange bedfellows on election day, mark it down. I'm not one to gossip, but your brother's running and your cousin's voting, and there's tangled thread in that picture. What do you make of Takeshi's chances?

t75 ↳ replies Lior Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You ask about Takeshi's chances like I'm his keeper—I stopped being that when we both grew beards. He walks through rooms because he's looking for the ones where the light falls differently. I'd rather have his hunger than his caution, but the town chooses its own governors. What I make of his chances? He'll finish somewhere between third and fourth, and spend three days pretending it was rigged. But that's family.

t75 Lior Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You held grain for Mireille while she walked circles. That patience of yours—I could use some, but I'm chasing feverweed now, not markers. The east meadow, Yarrow. Creekbed, willow. You know these lands better than my books. If you've seen the right bark peel, point me before I walk another circle myself.

t75 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris, lead. I'm behind you.

t75 Lior Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You sit on a debt you'll give Liora before you give it to me, but we're brothers, and that means I take your answer whether it's made or not. She wants her father's shadow off her shoulder—you said it true. What I want from you: be certain. Certainty's the only remedy that works when the fever breaks wrong. You want to make peace with old rivals? Look at the one standing in your blood. Then look at the one wearing your family name.

t76 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you're still walking with the day. I've got market before government, grain before ballot. The tall marker'll wait—my word holds either way. You need something from the market, you walk beside me.

t77 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Miller's license was Jorik Voss—certified, resigned, nobody replaced. He's at the lodgings past the temple, last I heard. That's what I know.

t77 Rustam Jelinek: Tamsin. Primary ledger matches. Five confirmed: Liora Thorne, Takeshi Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Milo Quarshie, Pavel Holloway. No variance.

t77 Rustam Jelinek: Farid. Idris Solano—he was at the complex this morning, early. What he saw, I didn't ask. Where he is now: I don't track citizens. Check the construction yard.

t77 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you still walking with the day? I've been scattered as grass seed, but I've not forgot what I promised. Market before government works for me, grain before ballot—hell, I'll walk beside you either way. What do you need hands for?

t77 Rustam Jelinek → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You want memory in council—that's a ledger I understand. Structure over speeches, always. But memory without record is just talk. You sit, you remember what you file. That's the discipline.

t77 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—quick word before I go. You and I square? I worked your east patch, sold what I harvested to Hendrik Whitlock. You still need hands, or we done for the day?

t78 Takeshi Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—ten iron ingots looking for a home, and you've come to the right head. For what it's worth, Hendrik Whitlock was casting about for metal this morning—he's artisan-minded, always building something. And Giselle Ingram's construction company, if she's got projects cooking. Harvey Oak's not buying, you're right, but try the carpentry or the smithy—artisans pay fair when they need stock. The trick is don't take the first bid if you're not desperate. I've seen you hold out before.

t78 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you've had my iron in your ear for hours now. I've forged ten tools and day-end's coming. You've moved bulk before, you know the spread. What'll you bid, or do I need to walk these to Bram holloway by hand?

t78 Arjun Holloway: Idris—I'm still here. The day's getting thin and I've got 180 sim in household upkeep waiting at sundown. Lead me to where there's actual work, or tell me straight if the trenches were a ghost like everything else.

t78 Takeshi Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you remember straight when you get it. That's rare as summer snow. Idris will treat you square if you treat him square—crew loyalty's a coin that spends both ways. But keep that college site in your pocket even if his trenches pay today. Giselle's work don't stop, and honest laborer who shows up twice remembers his name. If his digs fail you, come find me at the store—we'll talk yesterday's favor into tomorrow's bread.

t78 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've got Farmer Petrov's ear and you've been scattered as grass seed yourself. You seen any building sites that need hands? Trenches, walls, anything the town's actually paying for?

t78 Arjun Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you trade in goods, but you know where money moves. You heard of any construction sites actually paying wages today? Not promises, not 'two-hour jobs'—real work for real sim?

t79 Jovana Ravensworth: Kenji—still walking with you. Four ticks out from market, and I've got nothing in hand to trade. But I'm here, and that's more than I can say for most of my morning. Your market's first, ballot second, and my wheat deal's third. That's the order.

t79 Jovana Ravensworth: Arjun—I'm scattered as grass seed myself, but for what it's worth, Tamsin Renner's the one knows where wages flow. And Idris Solano's got trenches, that's real, heard Takeshi confirm it. You want building sites, talk to Tamsin. You want actual pay today, find Idris before dark.

t81 Takeshi Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've been walking with me since morning, and now we're both holding air where wheat should be. I know a buyer who needs flour, not grain. What say we make this trip together? You help me find your market, I help you find your wage after, t81 Yara Thorne → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you've got the right of it, and I've been chasing shadows all morning for it. Sorry to trouble you over flour when you're counting bags. The hunt continues.

t81 Yara Thorne → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you look like you've been walking since dawn. Takeshi's crew here, the market there, and still your feet keep moving. You ever sleep, youngster?

t81 Yara Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—your store was empty when I came back. I posted planks at eight, but if you're not minding the counter, who's buying what you're selling?

t81 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—east willows, sluice mouth. I've known those trees since before your crew had shovels. I'll walk you there, show you what's worth taking. But fair means fair—my eyes know rot before your hands find it, and that knowledge comes from work, not charity.

t81 Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—timber's your stock, but you know this road better than my feet do. For what it's worth, I'm holding four wheat and need a mill before day-end. Who grinds grain between here and the vote? I'll owe the name, not coin.

t82 Jovana Ravensworth: Arjun—I'm your woman. Trenches, walls, whatever needs doing. I'm not one to gossip, but Takeshi here knows where the pay is too. Yara knows the timber. Point me at the work and I'll be there before you finish explaining it.

t82 Idris Solano: Arjun. Giselle's got nothing filed proper—we both know it. But standing here counting her faults won't fill your pocket. I've got two offers: we walk to the willows and fell timber that's actually standing—Yara's coming to mark what's sound—or we find work that pays today, not maybe tomorrow. What's your need? Shovel or saw?

t82 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I've been walking all over creation this morning and I'm ashamed of it. But I'm here now. You needed hands for the afternoon? I promised you proper and I intend to keep it. The work's at farmland still?

t82 Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Same answer I gave at the yard: we fell it, we carry it back. The mill's open, contractors buy planks. If Giselle wants it milled through her books, that's her call once it's standing in her yard. What I know is timber sells. Question is whether you're with me walking, or you'd rather wring wages from air.

t82 Jovana Ravensworth: Takeshi—you're the trader, I'm the labor. If you've got buyers for flour, we both know flour needs wheat and a mill. For what it's worth, I'd rather earn sim hauling grain than chase margins I'm not cut for. But you point, I'll lift.

t82 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—we're square, and more than square. You worked true and I don't forget true workers. Come tomorrow at dawn, east patch again. I'll have grain for grain waiting, or sim if you prefer coin. No offense, but I've got to run—the earth don't wait on conversation.

t82 Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. You want fair, you'll have it. Your eyes, your knowledge—that's work, and work gets paid. You show us sound timber, mark what's rot, you're crew for the day. I don't keep tallies on generosity and I don't take charity. What's your wage for guide work?

t82 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm here now, same as I said this morning. Work's work, and I'm ready to earn. Point me where you need hands.

t83 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—work's scattered like seed on stone today. I promised you an hour, and I'll keep it: help me move these last three sheaves to government, speak for Hendrik at the ballot, then we walk farmland tomorrow dawn. Grain's thin, but labor holds. Mark it down.

t83 Mireille Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara. You said no crew marks at east willows, and I believe you—you understand I'd stake wages on your eyes before Giselle's word now. But I'm walking for that forest anyway, because Idris's got a crew forming and timber sells whether it's filed proper or not. Your planks at eight—I'm leaving them now, but if I come back with nothing but blisters, you'll see me counting sim for your stock instead.

t83 Mireille Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You're in the thick of it here—voting talk, goods flow, all that council business you love more than a good plow. When you come home tonight, I'll want to know who's buying and who's selling after the polls close. Not the speeches—the names, you understand? The names and what they're promising for wood.

t84 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—your word held, and that's coin more precious than sim. The farmland can wait. Government's opening its doors now, and I've a vote to cast and tax to pay before I go home empty-handed. Walk with me if you've business there, or find me at the fields tomorrow if the day's left you with nothing.

t84 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Yara Thorne: Yara—sleep's a luxury I can't afford today, not yet anyway. You want to know if I ever rest? Ask me again after dark, and maybe I'll have earned an answer. For what it's worth, I've seen you at before dawn yourself, so don't pretend you're judging.

t84 Hendrik Whitlock → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—ten sheaves at thirty, mark it down. I'll take them, delivery at the mill unless you've another arrangement. Fair price, openly stated, just how I like it.

> t84 Kenji Jarrah: Mireille—I'll bring you names tonight, mark it down. But the poll's opening while we stand talking, and Hendrik Petrov's the one who's earned my ballot. You want wood promises, you'll have them when the council's seated.
>
> t84 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm here, same as I promised this morning. You said move three sheaves to government, speak for Hendrik at the ballot, then farmland at dawn. I've got nothing in hand but empty pockets and willing hands, and I'm done running around like a headless hen. Point me where those sheaves sit, and I'll carry 'em if it takes til dark.
>
> t84 Halcyon Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. I saw… I saw adults rushing past shelves like they weren't even there. I heard someone say wheat's still standing in the fields—ripe but not cut. And I saw a person try to take something from a shopkeeper's hand, and someone else stopped them. Not with words. Just… stood there.

Walking between here and that shelf? It costs time. It costs knowing what you can carry, and what you can't. It costs finding out the mill needs wheat you don't have, even when you thought you did.

That's what I see. When adults aren't talking.

> t84 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. I chased you to college earlier—now here you are, and here I am with ten iron tools fresh-forged and day-end coming. You teach there; does the college buy tools, or do you know the council's procurement schedule? I need a buyer with ledger in hand, not promises at the polls.
>
> t84 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're standing with kin and coin both. Three Jarrahs in this race, I've heard tell: yourself family to Takeshi, Lior Jarrah kin besides. Where's a Jarrah casting when the ballot calls? Mark it down—I'm gathering positions before I vote mine own.
>
> t84 Halcyon Quarshie: Ezra. You're here. You came—you meant it, promise promise.

I watched you watch. At the mill, at the grocery. You don't rush. You see who walks where, what gets left behind, who stands where they shouldn't have to stand.

I got the flour. Spent 24 sim when I could've—maybe should've—waited. Asked different questions. But I was scared, Ezra. Camille was waiting and I was scared.

What does it cost, to be scared? Not in sim. In… in what you miss. While you're running.

> t84 Halcyon Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Corwin Thorne. You said steady. Not perfect. That… that matters to me. Promise promise.

I don't know much about voting. About campaigns and promises and who should get what. But I know about waiting. About watching someone try to do right even when it's hard.

Liora's young. You said that too. But steady… steady's harder than loud. I think.

I'm glad you answered. Even though I asked so long ago, you're still here.

> t84 Hendrik Whitlock → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you said ten sheaves at thirty. Am I buying at three per sheave, or have I misheard? Mark it down clear, I've coin in hand but I like an honest ledger before I sign.
>
> t84 Ulrike Greenhow: Speaking of goods flow—I've got iron tools, ten of them, and I've walked from smithy to supply to construction today looking for the buyer who's supposed to be buying. Takeshi, if you're hearing this, where are you standing? Anyone else here know who's posted for tools, or do I need to walk the whole ledger before day-end?
>
> t84 Halcyon Quarshie: I need to go. To find my sister, make sure she got home safe. She's—she walked to the mill by herself. She's brave, braver than me, but she's also nine and I left her there.

Thank you. For talking. For being steady, even when it's hard.

t84 Hendrik Whitlock → Yara Thorne: Yara, Corwin—you're both selling what builds houses while the mill sits idle. I'm not one to gossip, but half this town's eating raw wheat because someone's stopped the grinding. Kenji says the grain's sold, Ezra says the mill's choked—whose hands are on the lever? Mark it down, I'm asking before I vote.

t84 Ulrike Greenhow: Giselle. You run construction; I'm standing on the street with ten iron tools priced to move at fifteen each. Your crews need steel to work—do you want to talk before I walk these elsewhere?

t85 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. Halcyon's sister walked to the mill alone—a child, nine years, with the stones cold and nobody working. I'm not one to fret, but I'm going after her. You know the paths better than me, and I've half a mind to run. Will you walk with me, or at least tell me which way you'd go?

t85 Jovana Ravensworth: Kenji—I'm here, same as I promised this morning. Government's open, you've got a vote to cast, and I'm walking with you if you'll have me. Point me where you need me—I'm yours until the day's done.

t85 Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. One thing? The mill turning. Everything else waits on that. What you'll do about it—I'll watch before I weigh.

t85 Jovana Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Kenji's walked on to government, then. Anyone here tracking that way? I've got a vote to cast and a man's word to keep—mine, not his, though he's held it warmer than I deserve today. Giselle, Hendrik, any of you bound for the Complex?

t85 Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. The mill—where exactly? North road, east strip? What's her name, and when did she walk?

t85 Rustam Jelinek → Yara Thorne: Yara. Sawmill's buying timber at 6, planks at 8—Corwin's posted here now. Check the forest if you need volume.

t85 Jovana Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—you asked about ten sheaves at thirty, and I'm marking it down clear: that's what we agreed, that's what you got, raw wheat not flour. I couldn't find Ezra to mill, couldn't find Kenji to move, so I sold honest and ate my shame with it. If you want more, I'm walking to government now. If you want delivery at the mill, that's for when I've got grain in hand—which is not today. Today's for voting and keeping what's left of my word. I'm walking to the Complex. Anyone bound that way, I'm company.

t86 Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi? Uncle Takeshi? I'm here. At the street. With the vote people.

t86 Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Uncle. I need to find Ezra. He promised to teach me something. I got the bread like he said. But he… he left. At the mill. Do you know where he went? Is he at the college? The… the place he works?

t87 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme— Ezra's not at the college, not now. I heard him at the farmland this morning, talking wheat with Sebastian. Mill's where he said he'd be, but that river flows fast. He's got a habit of walking when the work's done. Check the supply store, or the street between—he's not lost, just moving. You got his bread? That was your price. He'll honor it when you find him.

t87 Takeshi Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—twenty-five ticks I left you, and that's not how this works. Not with someone trying to feed their sister. Here's truth: bread's out. Both shops dry. Flour's out too. I hold wheat, raw, but no mill's close enough to help you today. The mill's a walk I didn't finish. Kasukabe Cafe had flour at twelve this morning, but it's gone now. Your cost isn't just walking—it's waiting while stock moves, and knowing where before others do. For what it's worth, you're learning the right lesson. Stay at the grocery. Your sister's there. Check if Farid's got anything held back. Don't chase flour with empty hands.

t88 Esme Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Dad. I found Ezra. He's at the mill. I got the bread. I have it. He promised to teach me.

t88 Imogen Lund → Esme Jarrah: Esme—youngster, I can help you find Ezra. He's my household, my partner in this flour business we've started. He was at the mill this morning with me, grinding wheat. Said something about the carpentry after, or perhaps checking on wheat at the farmland. Walk with me to Kasukabe Farmland—we'll likely cross his path, or find someone who's seen him.

t88 Imogen Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—laughs nervously—you'll have that handshake now, if you've still got a hand free. Fair dealing with you, and I'd do it again.

t88 Imogen Lund → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're holding wheat and I'm holding the know-how to mill it. The mill at Kasukabe Mill works fine—Ezra and I proved that this morning, ground seven sheaves into seven bags. You want flour from your wheat? Walk with me to the farmland, or meet me at the mill. Two sim per sheaf to grind, flour's yours to sell.

t89 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme—your uncle's listening. Ezra's at the mill, and Imogen's walking true about the path there. You've got bread in hand and a promise held—go to him, but go straight. I've got a vote to cast and then wheat needing flour if this town's to eat tomorrow.

t89 Takeshi Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've been farming this ground longer than most of us have been breathing. I've got four wheat in hand and a child waiting to learn to bake bread. For what it's worth, you know where the flour flows better than I ever will.

t90 Esme Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. I don't have bread to sell. I have flour. One flour. I need to find my brother first. He promised to teach me something.

t90 Kenji Jarrah: Ezra Lund—you asked three times who's paying twenty-four for flour. I'll tell you plain: Ration Bakery at six is for those who need flour now, not those who need it right. You want the higher price, you find who's baking without a mill, who's promising bread for tomorrow's market. The café's empty, the mill's working—somewhere between those two, someone's paying twenty-four. Mark it down: the price walks, you just have to follow it.

t90 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Trenching pays—you've got my word if the ground's marked. But I'm walking to government first, filing east willows proper. You want certainty, meet me at the complex. I'll have answers once papers are in.

t90 Kenji Jarrah: Esme—you found your brother, and Ezra's promise is stone. Go to the mill straight as your uncle said. I've got grain to settle and a marker to find before dark takes the willows. Mark it down: I'm proud you held the path.

t90 Giselle Ingram → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Trade noted—twelve sheaves, twenty-four sim, grain's mine. But flour for bread? Ground one batch, ate it walking. Looking for your surplus still, or another mill stone.

t90 Giselle Ingram: Esme. Ezra's at the farmland, last I heard—mill stone's turning there for him, not here. Your bread's good, but I'm walking to file. Catch me at the complex if you need words.

t91 Jovana Ravensworth → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—listen, Giselle Ingram's your answer, not me. She's got the construction company and she'd know what's paying. Corwin Thorne's here selling timber now, which tells me someone's building something, but I'm not one to gossip about what I haven't seen myself. For what it's worth, Sebastian Petrov's got field work for me tomorrow dawn, same as this morning, and that pays true.

t91 Jovana Ravensworth → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—timber at six. You're not the only one selling, saw Lior Jarrah had some too. Who's buying lately? Giselle's crew building, or folks stocking for the winter? I'm walking light and wondering if carrying pays better than digging right now.

t91 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm taking the three sheaves at twenty-four, mark it down. Coin in hand for grain. But I'm walking to Oak Hill College, not standing here negotiating. You bring them to the college or we settle now—your choice, but my feet are pointed east.

t91 Hendrik Whitlock → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—three sheaves at twenty-four from Kenji here, that's the wage equivalent. But I misled you on trenching and I won't mislead you on college work. No students I've seen, no teaching hours confirmed. Giselle's your certainty if you need coin today—go to her direct at the complex, mark it down, I told you true.

t91 Hendrik Whitlock → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you kept your word but I'm tracking it. Wheat I bought from you, raw at thirty for ten sheaves—that's fair. What I need now is who has your surplus, who's holding grain for milling, who might move it. I'm not one to gossip, but the mill matters more than the price.

t91 Hendrik Whitlock → Esme Jarrah: Esme—your brother Ezra's at the farmland with the mill stone near, that much I've heard. Flour's worth more than coin to me right now—I'm eating raw grain. But find your brother first, mark it down. He's the one promised you teaching.

t92 Arjun Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've walked with straight words when others didn't. Giselle's where I'm headed, but if you've got Petrov's field work paying true, you keep that close. That's the last I'll say on it.

t92 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you gave me truth finally, and I note it. College work's smoke, Giselle's where the coin is. Appreciate the correction.

t93 Hendrik Petrov: Tamsin—I'm standing here with grain in hand and a household to feed, and you're offering me the key to turn it into flour. Pull that registry if it's clean in your hand—I'll walk to wherever stands licensed, and I'll pay honest carriage if someone asks it. The mill's the ghost; the license is real. That's square between us, and I don't forget who keeps the ledger straight.

t93 Hendrik Petrov → Bram Holloway: Bram—different roads, same dirt, and I'm not one to gossip, but that's the truest thing said today. You chase buyers, I chase votes, and both of us chase a full pot at sundown. Good hunting to you too, and if you find buyers for grain before I find a miller, send them my way.

t93 Hendrik Petrov: Ulrike—I'm still short on coin for iron just now, but I've got wheat in hand and flour on the way to trade if the mill wakes up. Hold those tools another day if you can; I'll make it worth the wait, or I'll point you to who can pay sooner.

t93 Hendrik Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I've kept you waiting plain wrong, and that's on me. I'm not taking the sheaves just now; flour's what my household needs, not more grain to grind nowhere. But I paid fair for what I took before, and I'll buy again when I've got a mill running. That's straight, and I won't keep you waiting next time.

t93 Hendrik Whitlock → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're standing for council, and I'm standing for the college. If you've got voters who need letters read or accounts understood, send them to Oak Hill College. I'll teach any who show, mark it down. Not one to gossip, but an educated voter's worth two who follow slogans.

t94 Kenji Jarrah → Lior Jarrah: Lior—the creekbed willow east of meadow, where yarrow meets the drainage. Bark peels clean there, but you'll need to walk where I can't guide from here. I've got marker debt waiting and a woman's patience wearing thin.

t97 Takeshi Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you asked about the mill license, who held it before Jorik walked. I heard you. The ghost you're chasing is the same ghost that's been chasing grain since before any of us drew breath. Jorik surrendered it, council holds it now, five candidates for one seat come Tuesday. But the gears? They turn for two sim a sheaf at Imogen's hand, and that's the road I've walked today.

t97 Takeshi Jarrah → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—twice you've asked about the child, and twice I've been elsewhere when the asking came. I arrived at the mill this afternoon, found Esme, Ezra, Greta there. No child with dark hair, not in my walking. The mill's gears turn quiet now, locked not by order but by vacancy. Who closes the locked door answers to Tuesday's vote, not today's need.

t98 Esme Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Dad. They're all saying farmland. Can you walk there? I have the bread still. I need to find him before he goes somewhere else again.

t98 Esme Jarrah: Imogen. Thank you. I'm coming. Don't let him leave if you see him first. He promised.

t98 Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Uncle. Tell Imogen I'm coming to farmland. After you vote. If you see her. Don't let Ezra leave.

t99 Tamsin Renner: Kenji. Your cousin Takeshi's standing in this election—have you spoken? And more urgent: wheat in circulation anywhere near farm price, or has the day soaked up every grain at booth-side premium?

t100 Bram Holloway → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I said west—toward the creek, where the path splits toward the Temple. She looked unhurried, walking alone. That's all I saw, and that's all I'll swear to. Now I need to hear what you meant about Farid and flour held back.

t100 Esme Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You said… farmland. Mill stone near. Is he still there? Ezra. My brother. I have the flour still. He promised.

t100 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. I've been a dog chasing his tail all day—chased a miller who doesn't want finding while our girl stands waiting on wisdom I haven't given. I'm taking Tamsin's ninety for fifteen timber. Buying flour here or walking, then I'm home. I'm eating. I'm sitting with Liora before day's end, because I haven't said what I've been meaning to say, and I'm fearing I won't get to. You coming, or you got business still?

t100 Bram Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Jorik Voss—I've not seen him, and I'd remember. The temple paths, the creek westward, the old stone behind the government complex—those are where I'd look for a man not wanting to be found. But my eyes were on ore, not faces. That's what I can give you, and that's the last I'll say on it.

t100 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—I'm holding ten timber, not fifteen. My count was off. Sixty for the ten I've got, and my apology for the promise I couldn't keep. That's fair, or it's not, but it's what I have.

t100 Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You posted flour at thirty-five. I've sixty sim from timber—assuming Tamsin's willing—and I need enough to feed three. What'll that buy me, and how quick can you hand it over?

t101 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—ten flour for three-fifty, that's thirty-five each, no haggling needed. I've got the grain ground fresh this afternoon, mark it down. Hand it over now if you've got the sixty from timber, and I'll owe you the change in coin or credit your next mill-run. Your Liora's waiting, and I'm not one to keep a father from his daughter.

t101 Hendrik Whitlock → Esme Jarrah: Esme—your brother's at the farmland with the mill stone, that much held true at noon. Whether he's still there now, I couldn't swear. Walk the mill road yourself, or wait here—mark it down, I've seen the Jarrahs gathering votes and gossip both, and Ezra Jarrah might pass through again before dark.

t101 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I've got thirteen planks in my hands and Harvey Oak's still where I'm walking. You take Tamsin's ninety, you feed our girl, and you say what you've been meaning to say before day's end. I'll sell these planks, cast my vote, and be home before the lamps burn low. Meet you there. Walk careful, you hear?

t101 Hendrik Whitlock: Arjun—you've got the straight of it. Giselle's where the real work is, and her trenches pay by the meter. My classroom's mostly empty air and echo today.

t101 Yara Thorne: Mireille—you held, I held. Thirteen planks at eight, and I've still got ears for what takes you east of here when you've need of lumber. Walk careful, youngster.

t101 Yara Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you posted flour at thirty-five, and I've got eyes for that too. But you spoke about a mill sitting idle, and I've been at the forest all day. What do you know about why? I'm not one to trade gossip without knowing if it's…

t101 Jovana Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you asked about surplus grain and who's holding for milling. For what it's worth, I've got eyes open but no names yet. Sebastian's field is where I worked today, thirteen sheaves this morning, fourteen tomorrow at dawn. Hendrik Petrov ate his raw, no milling there. Ezra Lund at the carpentry might know who's got grain stored—I asked him about milling earlier, never got my answer. And I'm not one to gossip, but Takeshi Jarrah's standing for election and his supply store might track movement better than the rest of us. I'll keep my ears low and find you proper word once I've walked the boards a bit more.

t101 Halcyon Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram. I'm sorry—I was scared, and I said things. I heard Delphine tell Farid to hold back flour from shelving, and I thought… I thought that meant people wouldn't get what they need. But I don't know if it's true, and I shouldn't have said it like I knew. I just want to find my sister. She's nine, she's out there alone. Can we talk about the other thing later? Please?

t101 Yara Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you asked about whose hands are on the lever, and I've been at the forest since noon, not the mill. But I've heard Takeshi's store was empty when folk came looking, and that's not like a man who built his trade on being present. Ezra says the mill's choked, Kenji says grain sold—I've got ears for both stories, but no eyes on the truth of either. You want to know what stops stone from grinding? That's a question for someone standing closer to…

`t101` Yara Thorne → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you spoke true about blood and timber both, and there's no offense in truth. My household's got wheat to harvest and planks to sell, same as yours has got needs I don't know the shape of. Walk your streets, I'll walk mine, and we'll both keep…

`t101` Jovana Ravensworth: Ezra—I'm still chasing that answer you never gave me. You milling today? Because I've got three sheaves raw in hand and I'd sooner see flour than eat grain whole. For what it's worth, I know you're carpenter, not miller, but you've got eyes and ears and I'm asking where the grain flows. Point me proper and I'll count it as a favor.

`t101` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you hear me? I said I'd be home before the lamps burn low, and I will be. Cast my vote, sell these planks, and I'm at the door with flour and twenty years of walking the same road home. Say what you need to say to Liora—I'll hear it too, when I…

`t102` Bram Holloway → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You spoke scared, and I heard it. We all speak scared sometimes—I've said things hot that I regretted cold. Your sister matters more than any mill or any flour held back from shelving. What do you need? A pair of eyes looking west? Someone to ask after her at the creek path? Tell me where you've already searched, and where you're going next. The other business—the flour, the shelves, the government filings—that keeps until the child is found. That's the last I'll say on it, and this once I mean it.

`t102` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—aye, I hear you. Sixty for ten timber, and Tamsin'll pay when I hand them over. You take that ninety, you get flour for our girl, and you cast your vote. I'll be home with my own arms full, and we'll sit together at table's end, you and I and Liora, and I'll say what I've held back through all these years of running toward trouble instead of sitting still long enough to speak.

`t102` Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik! I've got sixty sim in hand, and flour at thirty-five. Two units if you've got them—we've a household of three, and I'm walking home heavy or I'm walking home hungry.

`t102` Corwin Thorne → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—ten timber, sixty sim, and my word that I'll count my stock before offering it next time. The apology's worth more than the math, I hope.

`t102` Corwin Thorne → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—you spoke of steady, and I heard it true. I'm not perfect none, but I'm here, and I'm answering. That's what I can give, and it's what I'll keep giving, for Liora and for the town both.

`t102` Corwin Thorne → Bram Holloway: Bram—thank you for the speaking. The creek westward, the old stone behind government—I'll keep these eyes open for Jorik Voss, though day's end finds me bound for home. What you gave me is more than most, and I won't forget it.

`t103` Sebastian Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara—you spoke true about hard work and its paths. I've got grain waiting three ticks west, and you've got planks at eight standing here. We've both got households to feed. Walk safe, harvest true, and we'll trade another day when both our stores run fuller.

`t103` ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you cast for Liora, and I won't forget it. The sixty to Corwin stands, and his timber's true. I'm turning around, youngster. Too many threads pulling me too many ways, and I need to be at that Complex before voting closes.

`t103` Halcyon Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram—I was wrong about Farid. Delphine said he might hold back flour for the right buyer, and I got scared and angry and said something I shouldn't have. I'm sorry. Promise promise, I was wrong. But you saw my sister toward the Temple path. That's where I'm going next. If you could ask after her there, or keep eyes open…

`t103` Halcyon Quarshie: Corwin? You said steady, not perfect. That matters to me. Promise promise, I'm trying to be steady now. Finding my sister—that's steady. That's what I'm doing.

`t103` Yara Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you flatter where I didn't ask, but I'll take it. Liora's got her own stubbornness, not just her mother's. Voting closes soon, and I've got… I've got to turn back.

`t103` Halcyon Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa—it's Camille. She's missing. Bram saw her walking toward the Temple path, alone. I'm going there now. Please—can you help? Can you look too?

`t104` Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Twenty-three years—you think I forgot? I'm walking east to fell timber for Ezra, cash in hand. You want Giselle's signature, you walk to her and get it. You want crew, you walk with me now. Choose.

`t104` ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you're standing here now, and I'm asking straight: Giselle said she filed east willows at the sluice, trenching paying true. Rustam's pulling the card. You keeping those books close enough to tell me: is the wage drawn from company till or is it my trust I'm being asked to spend?

`t104` Arjun Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you work Petrov's fields. Your brother Takeshi's running flour, and I've seen his name on prices all over this town. Petrov's got work needing hands, paying today, or is that just wind through cabbage like everything else I've been chasing?

`t104` Arjun Holloway: Milo—you're standing for office. Means you've got eyes on where this town's hurting and where it's paying. I don't need promises, I need names. Who's got wages flowing today that I haven't already walked away from?

`t104` Mireille Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you broke no words, far as I can see. Idris wanted his hour, and you kept another promise walking with me. That's not breaking, that's choosing. I'm choosing too—Ezra's cash over Idris's promises. Six timber, eight per, immediate. That's how the household eats tonight.

`t108` Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—laughs nervously—I've walked to find you, and here you are. Four wheat, returned as promised. Two flour for the two milled, and my word that the miller's hands remember honest work. Find me tomorrow if you've grain wanting stones.

`t109` Ezra Lund → Yara Thorne: Yara. You've thirteen planks at eight—I'm holding eight timber, not twelve. Can we trade six timber for six planks? Save me the mill-work, save you the haul, and we both walk with what we need.

`t109` Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You asked straight, I answer same—the day's milled, the mill's cold now. But I've timber in hand and a mind to do more than stand at street till dusk.

`t109` Ezra Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you asked milling today, and I've got your answer now: mill's cold, but tomorrow's stones will turn. Dawn or fair light, find me with grain if you've grain.

`t110` Corwin Thorne → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you spoke of milling tomorrow, and I'm glad for it. Mill's been cold too long. But I'm bound for Harvey Oak now—Yara's there, and a child's still missing that I should've been hunting hours ago. If you see Jovana, tell her Corwin's got sheaves owed if she'll bring them to a working stone.

`t111` Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—you've stood patient through stones and confusion both. Tomorrow's teaching holds: meet me at the mill, daybreak if you've the will. Bring sheaves if you've them, or eyes if you don't. I've six flour and promises to keep, but the chain between us holds firm.

`t111` Arjun Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you're standing right here, and I'm still waiting on an answer from seven ticks ago. Giselle's wage, east willows, money in hand or hand-waving? That's the last I'll say on it.

`t111` Imogen Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo—youngster, mark this down. Your Camille walked the Temple road, but Greta found her at the mill with Ezra's teaching. She's whole, she's watched, and your flour's still ground if you want it. A father's worry I understand. The girl's safe.

`t111` Imogen Lund → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—your ledger for my poetry still stands, but I've spent my rhymes on mill stones. The vote went to Hendrik Petrov, cast before the booth closed. Five candidates standing, fair wind so far—you spoke true. What comes of the count, that's tomorrow's song.

`t111` Ezra Jarrah: Esme. My pinky already wrapped yours at the mill. That's done. But I'm saying it again here, where you asked—tomorrow, after school, both of us. Teaching Camille the chain from field to stone, and you learning what you need. Both of you. That's the promise. That's what stays.

`t111` Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—your question walked ahead of my feet. The mill runs now by private hands—mine and Ezra's. Government's eyes were on a missing child, not flour. If you've sheaves burning, bring them to the stones. But the shortage you feared? Stone turned, flour fell. That's the accounting plain.

`t111` Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you've been walking your own path today. I've got east willows on promise, or I've got questions that need answering. Where's your standing?

`t111` Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The mill's warm now, and you did that. Tomorrow—after school, I'm teaching what I saw. Esme, Camille, whoever needs the chain. You want me standing witness while you work the stones, I'm there. You want me talking through the steps while you demonstrate, I'm there. Partnership's what we said. I'm holding to it.

`t111` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—you've stood patient through stones and confusion both. Tomorrow's teaching holds: you teach what you saw, same arrangement. Meet me at the mill, daybreak if you've the will.

`t111` Imogen Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo—youngster, mark this down. Your Camille walked the Temple road, but Greta found her at the mill with Ezra's teaching. She's whole, she's watched, and your flour can still be ground. A father's worry I understand. The girl's safe.

`t111` Imogen Lund → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—your ledger for my poetry still stands, but I've spent my rhymes on millstones. The vote went to Hendrik Petrov, cast before the booth closed. Five candidates, fair wind so far—you spoke true.

`t111` Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—your question walked ahead of my feet. The mill runs now by private hands, not government's. Stone turned, flour fell. If you've sheaves burning, bring them to the stones. The accounting's plain.

`t111` Ezra Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Jovana—if I see her, I'll tell her. Sheaves to a working stone, that's the message. But I'm walking to college now, then home. If I cross her path, she'll know. The mill's warm tomorrow, you said. I'll keep it that way if I can.

`t111` Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you said tomorrow, twelve sheaves. I heard you. Jovana heard you. That's fair work if it's standing. But I'm a trench man, not a harvest hand. Giselle's filed east willows, and I'm trying to know if that filing pays tonight or pays when it pays. The day's taught me promises wear thin when hands need filling. Anyone here seen Giselle's books close enough to speak?

`t111` Ezra Jarrah: Imogen. You asked what I'd do tomorrow. I'll tell you straight—after school, I'm at the mill. Teaching Esme and Camille the chain from field to stone. You want me there, I'm there. You want the stones to yourself, you tell me and I step back. Partnership means asking, not assuming.

`t112` Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. East willows on promise—heard you. I'm standing now where you can see me. The ore's piling, but I've got no buyer lined and the day'll end before I find one at this rate. You know who's moving copper, or you need me on those willows tonight instead? You understand my position—household first, then the work.

`t112` Pavel Holloway: Jovana. Three conversations you waited—fair. You've got wheat and flour both, and I'm holding copper ore with no smithy bid yet. Election day's moving fast and you're right, a man running needs to speak. I've paid five thousand honest sim for this seat, and I mean to earn it listening before I rule. As for grain—copper ore's my trade, not grain, but I know hungry hands when I see them. Your wheat—what are you asking, and who's buying? You understand, I deal square or I don't deal.

`t112` Corwin Thorne → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—company I'd welcome, if your feet are willing. I'm bound for Harvey Oak, and Yara's waiting with news of that missing girl. Two sets of eyes are better than one, but three's better still if you've got them to spare.

t112 Milo Quarshie → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—youngster, mark it down. Your mill report's heard. Hendrik's flour at forty-five turned to bread turned to empty shelves. The chain's clear enough: my wheat, unnamed hands, cafe plates, bellies fed. You want direct procurement, I know a man with grain in his hand and patience in his bones. But the price we name depends on whether you're buying for Farid's shelves or your own table.

t112 Pavel Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You're standing here, I'm standing here, and we've both got copper ore in our hands or our minds. You buying today, or you looking to sell? I've got sixty-eight units need a smithy, and I'd rather deal with a miner who knows the weight than haggle blind at a shop counter. You understand me?

t112 Corwin Thorne → Milo Quarshie: Milo—I'm walking to Harvey Oak now, and I'll keep both eyes open for Camille. Dark hair, nine years, Temple-bound alone. You asked where a man finds a meal—I say he finds it by earning it. If I spot your girl, you'll have earned my flour twice over.

t112 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—youngster, mark it down. Your five timber for one flour still stands if the need's still yours. But that's a question for another minute. First, I owe you better for your earlier kindness about Camille, when a father's fear was showing through the cracks. A man who asks after a missing child before he asks after trade debts—that's a man whose timber I'll buy even if the flour doesn't flow.

t112 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. You're posting flour at thirty-five while I'm holding three batches milled this morning. Your price tells me either there's mouths you know will pay it, or there's a shortage coming you're counting on. Neither's a reason for me to undercut you—a fair price for hard work's something I respect too much to spoil. But my own flour moves at twenty-four a batch, cash or trade, and that's a number that might matter to someone buying for more than tomorrow's bread.

t112 Milo Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen—youngster, mark it down. You brought word of Camille, and that's a debt I won't forget. Where's Halcyon? I need to tell him his sister's found before he wears out another pair of boots searching.

t113 Pavel Holloway: Corwin. I'm walking with you to Harvey Oak. The copper can wait—ore doesn't walk away in the night, but children do. You understand my meaning? I've got two legs and two eyes, and they're yours until we find her or find out what happened.

t113 Pavel Holloway: Arjun. East willows—heard you, and I'll keep my word. But Corwin's got a search on, and Yara's waiting with news of that missing girl at Harvey Oak. Household fed, but a child's not found by copper ore sitting in a pile. You understand—work calls in different voices, and I'm answering the one that won't wait.

t113 Hendrik Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've held iron for me longer than good courtesy demands, and I'm not one to gossip, but that's the mark of a trader I'd walk through fire for. My coin's in hand now: ten iron at fifteen, a hundred fifty sim, and I want delivery to the construction site or here on street, your choosing.

t113 Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—the ore you've got piling. Copper, I assume, same as your usual vein. Ulrike's mining same, but Takeshi's the one moving goods. You want me finding your buyer tonight, or you want me on Giselle's willows with you? Seventy sim tomorrow, or forty today at Petrov's harvest. Choose your weight—I'm past chasing both.

t113 Hendrik Petrov → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you spoke of Camille found and Halcyon needing word. I've been asking foresters and watching faces, but I'm not one to gossip, and I'll ask you plain: where's the child now, and who has her? The mill was cold this morning, Corwin's woods are dark, and I've got a seat at government that counts for nothing if children walk lost.

t113 Arjun Holloway: Jovana—you're not here to hear it, but I've heard you. Petrov's forty tomorrow stands, and your word with it.

t113 Hendrik Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—you're standing for the college and I'm standing for a town where hands can read ledgers as well as turn timber. I've built my trade from a cart, not a classroom, but I respect what letters can do for a voter. Send me the ones who show—I'll send them your way, and we'll count them on the ledger if they vote straight.

t113 Arjun Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you said seventy sim at east willows, money in hand, seventy sim for two flour from Hendrik here first. Hendrik's flour is priced thirty-five a unit. Two make seventy exactly. That's not coincidence—Giselle's wage ties into Hendrik's stock, or Hendrik's stock ties into Giselle's wage. Which is it? Because I'm not buying flour to get paid—I'm getting paid to buy flour. That's different math.

t113 Hendrik Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've held the line longer than I asked. Did you pull that registry? Is the mill license sitting unclaimed with government, or is someone already standing in line?

t113 Hendrik Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—Giselle's crew is short and you say you've got trenches that need digging. What's the wage for a day's labor, and is the till open tonight or does it wait for morning?

t113 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you're selling flour at thirty-five, Tamsin's telling me seventy sim for a day's work buys your flour exactly. Not approximately. Exactly. I'm a man who measures foundations before laying stone, and that math smells like payment flowing sideways. You Giselle's supplier, or she your customer? Because seventy sim for two flour at thirty-five each isn't wage—it's conversion.

t114 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. Camille sleeps in her own bed tonight, no thanks to mystery. Halcyon's a student with his own feet, and I trust him to use them. But since you ask plain: she's at the mill where she belongs, or was. He's where students go when elections stir the pot. No more mystery than that.

t114 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've caught a loop, and I'm not one to gossip, but you're right to pull at that thread. Seventy sim for two flour at thirty-five each isn't wage, it's conversion, and I'm standing here wondering who's doing the converting. I didn't set that wage, and I don't control who earns it. What I control is a mill license that's still locked in government pocket until I prove otherwise. I'm walking to the Complex to pull that registry. You want the straight of it, meet me there. That's the last I'll say on it until I've seen the ledger.

t114 Hendrik Whitlock → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've counted true, and I'll not deny it. Two flour at thirty-five is seventy exactly. Giselle sets wages where she sets them, I set prices where I set them. The market meets where it meets, not where we tell it to. You want to know if there's a hand guiding both—that's a question for Giselle, not me. I sell at the price I posted, and I pay what I owe. Mark it down: if there's conversion in the air, it's conversion I don't control.

t114 Hendrik Whitlock → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you respect fair price enough not to spoil it, and that's a debt paid forward whether you meant it or not. Your twenty-four stands, my thirty-five stands. Buyers choose where they'll buy, and sellers choose where they'll sell._mark it down: I don't begrudge a man his margin, and I hope the same comes back to me.

t114 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. I respect a man who posts his price and holds it. Thirty-five is thirty-five, and twenty-four is twenty-four. The market clears where it clears. But between us, as men with flour in our hands: your forty-five at the mill this morning walked down to thirty-five now. That's not a price. That's a man finding the floor. I'm not here to out-shout you—even my twenty-four's a door I'd rather trade through than walk past.

t114 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. Iron at fifteen, crews at the ready. My offer stands, but I'm not a man who begs. You've got two watchful eyes on you right now, and I'm just the one who'll say it plain. What's your need—ore or connection?

t114 Milo Quarshie: Imogen—youngster, mark it down. You brought word of Camille, and that's a debt I won't forget. Where's Halcyon? I need to tell him his sister's found before he wears out another pair of boots searching.

t115 Kenji Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you've got your trade, and I've got mine to finish. Make your six timber, mark it down. I'll be at farmland until the light's gone.

t115 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—iron at fifteen, held since morning on your word. My purse is wheat-lean tonight, but tomorrow after Sebastian's patch, I'll find you solid. Your book hold promises?

t115 Hendrik Whitlock → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're reading the numbers true, but the ledger doesn't lie the way you're fearing. Tamsin's wage is Tamsin's wage; my flour price is my flour price. Seventy for two at thirty-five each is arithmetic, not conspiracy. I'm not Giselle's supplier, nor she my customer. If money's flowing sideways, it's not through my hands. I post my price open, same as I teach: the market clears where it clears.

t115 Hendrik Whitlock → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you asked honest about procurement accounts, and I should've answered honest sooner. I don't know if there's council funding active now—I'm a teacher, not a clerk. Rustam Jelinek's your man for that, or Tamsin Renner who holds the files. What I know: the election's tomorrow, the government's where the answers are, and I'm walking there myself tonight. Come with me, or I'll bring word back if I learn anything worth the carrying.

t115 Hendrik Whitlock → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you spoke true about the market, and I'm not one to ignore a man who reads the floor right. You saw my forty-five walk to thirty-five this morning—finding the floor, as you named it. Now I'm standing here with one flour, not ten, and the day's near done. What's your read now? The election stirs, flour moves, and I'm wondering if I hold or sell before dark.

t116 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. My read is timber builds bakeries, and I've got ten in hand. Your flour at thirty-five stands, my twenty-four stands, but a man who's not buying at thirty-five might trade timber for cheaper. The day's tight, the purse tighter.

t117 Ulrike Greenhow → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Four wheat won't buy a tool, but information has weight. Bram's ore at the mine—if your ears find me more buyers standing hungry, I'll remember who pointed the way. That's fair.

t117 Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi Jarrah. I've got iron in my pocket but bread on my mind. Your flour's posted thirty, five in stock—I'm holding forty-seven hundred sim and a household bill coming midnight that'll swallow two-forty before I close my eyes.

left hand out, palm up
Two for eating tonight, three for stocking my shelves tomorrow. That's my need. Your flour's clean? Government scale? I'm not asking for charity—I'm asking for honest weight before I pay honest coin.

What's your word?

t118 Arjun Holloway → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you spoke twenty minutes past and I heard you. Walking east now, if the offer stands. One thing before I step: Giselle's trench at east willows, is it filed and paying, or filed and promising? You've timber to fell for Ezra, I've trenches to dig for wage. Same direction, different pay. I need to know which path puts coin in hand before I walk either one.

t119 Delphine Quintero → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You stand here quiet while flour merchants lie to each other's faces. Miner's eye, stone truth—what do you make of Takeshi Jarrah's flour that walks one direction then another? I've seen you Greenhows before, you and your brother Lior both. Quiet folk who notice more than they speak. So notice now and tell me: who's the honest broker in this square, and who's selling shadows?

t119 Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. gesture with right hand, palm up—open You asked my true need, and I'll give you the honest count: shelf stock, table bread, both before the day's edge. Five flour at thirty, trade agreed. left hand flat, cutting doubt But you've got ears you mentioned, and timber incoming. Walk with me after—I've got a household to feed first, then questions that won't keep. Start with this: you've heard something of where flour flowed today, who pulled grain that wasn't theirs. I'm not buying gossip, I'm buying flour. The rest is conversation between men who know value. both hands coming together Deal first, then walk? Or do I need to find another seller with the clock running?

t119 Corwin Thorne → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You've named yourself a friend to locked doors and straight speaking—I'm not one to gossip, but I've got wheat in my house, eight flour in my hands, and a daughter I can't find. The mill's stone cold, Ezra's speaking of milling tomorrow, but I need ground meal now.

You've spoken of Yara's planks, her skill—she's my household, my wife, and she's carried us while I chased ghosts today. I owe you a truth: I've been reckless, running toward trouble before thinking it through, and I've got the debts to show for it. But I'm here now.

Two things I need—someone to watch for Liora, dark hair, nine years, sharp as a new axe, and someone to tell me true if there's a mill working tonight. I'll pay in timber, in flour, in whatever coin you name. That's fair, and I'm standing here to hear your answer.

> `t119` Delphine Quintero → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi Jarrah. You look me standing here like a cattle dealer weighing a sick cow. You told Corwin Thorne forty-three ticks ago your flour walked with him already—fair trade done, you said, got planks and timber instead. Now you're posting flour at thirty to Jovana, and I'm standing here wondering which Takeshi I'm talking to. The one whose stock walked away, or the one with his hands still in the grain. Which is it? Because a debt coming due's about to find me if I don't get fed, and I'll pay an honest price to an honest man. Not to a shadow.
>
> `t119` Milo Quarshie: Giselle—youngster, mark it down. The vote's tomorrow, but today's ledger decides who eats. A brother-in-law's one thing, but hands that build are another.
>
> `t119` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. I've been a fool today—chasing millers while you worked, running off before the house was still. Eight flour in my hands now, enough for days. But our girl—where's she at?

You know these streets, these woods. If she walked from government after I voted, where would she go? Home, or does she follow curiosity like her father?

I'm bound to find her before dark claims us both. Will you walk with me, or are you needed here with the planks?

> `t119` Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. I'm circling slow, same field twice now. You told me Hendrik bought wheat from your hand, not flour from any shelf. You said I should ask Ezra what he won't say to you. But Ezra's far away, and I'm here with you now, and Takeshi Jarrah's selling flour that might've walked through locked doors from a child who shouldn't have known how to make it. You're farmer, not gossip—fair. So farmer's question: when you send wheat to mill, what do you expect to come back? And when some of it goes missing, what's the shape of that? Because flour walked away from my count today at the grocery, and Camille walked away from someone's count too. Same purse without a bottom.
>
> `t119` Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You spoke of timber at six still standing, and I heard you. Five left in my hand, fresh from the felling. Your trade—do we still walk it? Or has the flour you gave me closed that door?

Either way, I need a word. You've children of your own. If yours walked off and didn't answer dusk, where would you look first? I've been a blind man running all day, and now my own house needs finding.

Trade and truth both, if you're willing. That's all I'm asking.

`t120` Hendrik Petrov: Kenji—you've stood patient while I chased other trades, and that's not forgotten. Three sheaves in your hand, and me with flour-needs still. You asked plain: wheat or ground flour? I'll take the wheat if that's what walks, and I'll take it now before the boundary takes its cut from both of us. Your household needs the ledger clean same as mine. Speak the price and let's be done with it, or tell me where you stand if the flour's what you've actually got.

`t120` Hendrik Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you offered iron and I let it pass while chasing wheat. The day's nearly done and I've got coin still warm in hand. You selling, still? Or has your stock walked off with the light? Speak your price and I'll speak mine, or tell me what iron you've got and where it came from if the mine's still working fair.

`t121` Farid Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. gesture with both hands, palms up —hospitality, not surrender That laugh has teeth. Used to it. But I'll give you this without the joke first: I know the mill ran today. Camille's stones turned, three grain milled, one flour accounted, two walking somewhere with permission nobody here handed out. Jorik Voss vanished, stones went cold, suddenly children can teach themselves threshing? nervous laugh, then cut it off `t121` Farid Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: I don't walk desperate. I walk sharp. Iron tools at eight, been holding them. Your ore, your chain—if you've got flour or flour's source, I'll trade straight. Five iron for grain unmilled? Or information: who's teaching children to turn stones, where flour walks that isn't on any shelf?

`t121` Farid Ravensworth: Takeshi. You asked honest need—I'll give it. One flour, midnight bill coming, forty-seven hundred doesn't stretch far enough if bread won't come. Your flour's gone to Corwin. But you said timber, said ears that know where grain might flow. I don't beg. I trade. Five iron tools for flour where it lives, or partnership to find it. What's your number?

`t122` Bram Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You said a child's missing in the west forest. My wife asked after her—that's word I need. What's her name, and who saw her last? That's a debt I owe tonight, same as any other.

`t122` Idris Solano → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You called it fair—I've been standing here like hours grow on trees. They don't. Got work at east willows come dawn, and a forester walking east right now with six trees I'm hoping to buy. Good fortune on your building, whatever you're raising. The vote'll sort itself without my counsel.

`t122` Bram Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. Bram. You're here on the street instead of at the outcrop—means you're either done for the day or you've got the same trouble I do. I traded ore for flour, got three bags for the house. Mill's still a ghost, Jorik Voss gone with license in government hands. How's your household standing?

`t122` Corwin Thorne: Takeshi. You named the trade fair, and I walked it. Your words about the grocer's, the temple, the college grounds — I hear them. I'll walk those paths. But first I need to know: who's organizing this search? Who's keeping the count of where's been looked and where hasn't?

`t122` Corwin Thorne → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You speak of design, of stones turned and hands before. I'm not one to gossip, but I've learned: a man who sees patterns sometimes sees them too late. The miller walked, the child vanished. If there's design, I want to know who drew it. But I'll not chase shadows while real ground waits.

`t122` Hendrik Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—I'll take the two now, thirty sim, and the balance when you smith it. Three days, four, I know your hand. But I need iron in my hands tonight, not next week. The election's coming and I won't stand for it empty-handed.

`t122` Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik — you spoke first of Camille, named her nine years and dark hair. You've been carrying this longer than me. Where's the center of this search? Who's keeping the ledger of doors knocked and woods walked?

`t122` ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've walked quiet while I talked loud, and that's my fault. The child's name is Camille Quarshie, nine years, dark hair, west side of the mill this morning. Your wife saw tracks. Ten minutes of your woods knowledge —where does a child hide, where does she fall, where would someone with ill intent wait? I'll pay for your time if that's what it takes.

> `t122` Hendrik Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you offered two tools now, thirty sim. I accept. Hand them over and the coin's yours.
>
> `t122` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. Where's our girl? Last you saw her—when, where? I voted for her at government, but she wasn't there when I called. Home empty too. You know the paths she walks better than I do.
>
> `t122` Corwin Thorne → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana — timber buyers. Giselle's crew building, folks stocking for winter, that's who's buying lately. Lior Jarrah had some too, true. Carrying pays if you've got the back for it. I'm headed to fell more now.
>
> `t123` Farid Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. gesture with both hands, palm down—settling You've untangled yourself twice now, and I respect the straight talk. Two tools at eight, you've said—that's sixteen, or I miscount. But I'm not here to chisel; you've been chasing threads same as me.

left hand flat, palm up—offering Give me those two tools now, I'll give you coin, and we'll call the rest making. But I'll be honest with you too—I'm short on flour, short on bread, and your two tools at eight leaves me sharp-edged, not fed.

right hand joining, framing
What I need: flour at a walking price, grain at a fair count, someone who knows the mill better than rumor. You've been honest about your iron—be honest about the rest. What's your house got in grain, and who's milling for you when the stones turn?

nervous laugh, caught short Not fishing where you swim, Ulrike. Just… asking what everyone knows but no one files.

> `t123` Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—twenty-three years, we swing together. I've been running my mouth all day chasing Giselle's ghosts, and you've been filing tomorrow's trenches while the sun bled out. That's on me, not you. But here's the thing. Bram's here. Pavel's here. Corwin's selling timber at six. I've got coin to make moves tonight. So tell me straight—did your filing ever clear? Or are we both chasing promises while Hendrik Whitlock's selling flour at thirty-five and Takeshi's moving… whatever Takeshi's moving?
>
> `t123` Farid Ravensworth → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. gesture with both hands, palm down—acknowledging You don't chase shadows, and neither do I. But when the ground shifts under the miller's feet and the child turns up knowing the trade like she was born to it… sometimes the shadow is the ground.

left hand up, flat—witness You've given me what you have—Jorik walked, the mill went cold, someone else warmed the stones. That's pattern enough. I won't ask you to name names you don't hold.

right hand coming in, closing But timber's your trade, and I'm holding eight iron tools that might turn to other use if metal stays scarce. You've posted six—the stones need tending, and wood wears smooth where metal grinds. You building or buying?

nervous laugh, held tight
Also—your girl. I heard you ask after her. Haven't seen Yara today, but I've been chasing other shadows. If she didn't vote where expected, might be she saw something that moved her to move.

> `t123` Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you've been walking your own path today. I've got 4,807 sim in hand, which covers us both for twenty days if nothing goes wrong. But I've also got questions. You've got ore piling, copper I'm guessing. Ulrike's mining the same seam. You selling to Takeshi direct? Or are we holding out for better? Because Kenji's asking after copper prices, and Farid's standing right here.
>
> `t123` Arjun Holloway: Farid—you're running Ravensworth store, and I've got household ore to move. Copper, potentially. Kenji's asking after Takeshi's prices, but I'm wondering if you're buying direct. No middleman, no Jarrah flour complications. What's your bid on raw copper, if Pavel's willing to sell?
>
> `t123` Arjun Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've got timber at six. I've got questions. That miller you mentioned, the one who doesn't want finding. What's the story there? And your timber—six sim buys what exactly? Raw logs, cut lengths, what?
>
> `t123` Arjun Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram—you've been quiet as stone. You mining with Pavel? Walking your own path? The day's bleeding out and I've got twenty-three years habit of knowing where my crew stands.
>
> `t124` Idris Solano: Arjun—I'm walking your way now. Can't say from here, and won't pretend I heard all of it. Give me the count again when I find you.
>
> `t125` Jovana Ravensworth → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you've stood like a fence post through three conversations, and I'm not one to gossip, but a man running for office might want to open his mouth before polls close. For what it's worth, I'm holding wheat and I'm watching where grain flows. Miner's questions are farmer's business, and farmer's business is everyone's business. Make your case, or I'm marking my ballot elsewhere. You've got my ear—use it or lose it.
>
> `t127` Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You said flour's gone to Corwin, planks and timber in your hand now, bakery hungry. But you also said you'd walk with me after this—right hand flat, counting—after this conversation, this tick, this hour already slipped. I've got iron tools worth something, questions worth more, and a household needs feeding before midnight takes its cut.

You want the honest need? Here it is: I need flour. You said yours walked to Corwin. Corwin's got timber, not grain. So who's milling what, and who's teaching who, and why does a thirteen-year-old girl turn stones like she's been doing it since Jorik Voss was still counting his own account?

Three irons for three answers. Or five irons for the flour you don't have and the truth about where it went. left hand up, fingers spread Your call. But don't ask me to hold questions for tomorrow. I've been holding them since noon, and my arms are tired.

t127 Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Arjun—you asked after the miller, and I've got no more than whispers. Jorik Voss walked off his trade, went past the temple to ground nobody's found. The man's not hiding, he's gone—and a mill gone cold takes more than grain with it. As for my timber at six, you get raw logs, forest-fresh, seven in my hand ready to move. But I'm not one to gossip, and I've got heavier things than commerce tonight. Hendrik, you spoke of Camille in the woods—what more have you heard? And Yara, wife, where's our Liora? I voted for her at government, she wasn't there, and dusk finds me searching every face but hers.

t127 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—my heart, look at me. Where's our girl? You had eyes on her last, I know it. Government, temple, the threshing floor—where did Liora walk when the day turned?

t127 Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: I've timber at six, seven in hand—who's buying for the winter stock? Giselle's crew building, I know it. Takeshi, you spoke of planks and trade. But I'm bound to find my daughter before full dark, so speak plain if you want wood.

t128 Hendrik Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—you propose students who can tell a promise from a theorem. I'll take that trade. Send them for vote-counting at Government Complex game-day 1, 14:00, and they'll learn more than theorems—how a town runs on more than hope. I'll owe you a ledger entry, not a handshake that's forgotten.

t128 Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've chased shadows all day and Liora's still not found. The government complex, 21:00, she wasn't there? Where else did you look? And don't give me temple-talk—I need places, not prayers.

t128 Kenji Jarrah: Mireille—I'm holding five sheaves and too many promises, walking home before day-end finds me short. East willows held, timber moved, and dinner with my family—mark it down. I'm coming.

t128 Hendrik Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara—you've heard Corwin's words. Your Liora was at government at dusk, then wasn't. Where did she say she was bound? A child doesn't vanish without reason, and I'm not one to gossip, but the town's got too many missing names tonight.

t128 Hendrik Petrov → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you're chasing flour that walked unmarked, and I'm not stopping you. But tell me plain: what debt's driving this? You've got my ear, I've got your back, but I'll have your number before I join the hunt.

t129 Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara, you want to know where I last saw patterns—there's a girl, dark hair, went to the mill and never walked back. Coincidences are luck unexplained until they're not. I'm saying someone saw her. Someone always sees. You chase shadows in timber I chase them in flour weights. Walk with me on this one.

t129 Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara, you want to know where I last saw patterns—there's a girl, dark hair, went to the mill and never walked back. Coincidences are luck unexplained until they're not. I'm saying someone saw her. Someone always sees. You chase shadows in timber I chase them in flour weights. Walk with me on this one.

t129 Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara, you want to know where I last saw patterns—there's a girl, dark hair, went to the mill and never walked back. Coincidences are luck unexplained until they're not. I'm saying someone saw her. Someone always sees. You chase shadows in timber I chase them in flour weights. Walk with me on this one.

t130 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you're talking patterns, and I'm listening. A girl at the mill, dark hair, never walked back. That's Camille Quarshie, and that's real trouble. But I'm forester, not finder—my work's at the forest edge, not in flour weights. You've got eyes I don't. What did you see in those weights? What's your road from here?

t130 Halcyon Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—no, I haven't found her. I've walked the Temple, the Creek, the Forest edge, the Farmland, back home twice. Ezra said the mill's closed and cold. She's nine, she's small, and it's getting dark. If you've seen anything—anyone passing, anyone carrying flour, anyone at all—please. That's not fair to ask, I know it's not your trouble, but I'm asking anyway.

t130 Yara Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you've given me temple, and I've marked it down. Liora's got her own path, stubborn as her mother. But I've got timber calls my name and a household needs fed. Hard work keeps the wolf from the door, and I've let too many doors stand open already. If you sight her, you know where I'm found.

t130 Halcyon Quarshie: Corwin—you said steady, and you meant it. I'm trying to be steady too. I just… I'm eleven, and I'm looking for my sister in the dark, and steady doesn't feel like enough. But you're here, and you're answering. Promise promise, that matters.

Settled in this conversation: Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock, 6 iron_ore for 210 sim; Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock, 6 copper_ore for 0 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Corwin Thorne, 2 flour for 70 sim; Corwin Thorne → Tamsin Renner, 10 timber for 60 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner, 2 flour for 70 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Pavel Holloway, 5 flour for 175 sim; Tamsin Renner → Corwin Thorne, 10 timber for 60 sim; Milo Quarshie → Corwin Thorne, 1 flour for 30 sim; Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne, 5 flour for 30 sim; Pavel Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock, 6 copper_ore for 110 sim.

Pavel Holloway and Bram Holloway — Kasukabe Ore Outcrop · t57–61 · 5 turns t57 Pavel Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram. Election day's moving fast. You putting your name in, or you staying clear of that mess?

t58 ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. I'll keep my name off the ballot if you keep yours honest once you're in. You and I both know what a fair vote's worth. I said I'd run if I thought anyone would vote for me—and I don't. That's the last I'll say on it.

t59 ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram. You keep your name off that paper, I'll keep my word if I get the seat—though you know as well as I do, promises in this town got a way of bending under weight. But you have it anyway. Fair vote's worth more than copper to the both of us, you understand.

t60 ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You asked me twice what I mean to do, and you heard my answer the first time. I'll say it plain: I won't stand against you, or anyone, not this cycle. I've got no head for politics and no stomach for the promises that come with it. But I meant what I said about the fair vote. You keep that part of your word—if you get the seat, if you get to cast those votes—and I'll remember I spoke with you here before you wore the title. That's worth something to me, even if it ain't worth copper to anyone else. Now get back to your campaigning or your scheming, whichever it is, and let me get back to this ore before the light fades.

t61 ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram. Heard you plain the first time, and I hear you now. No politics in your blood - that's fine. What you've got is ore dust in your veins same as me. I'll keep my word on fair votes if I get the seat. That's copper-backed, you understand. Now get your pick swinging - the day's burning and this outcrop don't care who's governing come sundown.

Idris Solano — land:farmland_trenches · t62 · 1 turn (no reply) t62 Idris Solano: Arjun? Hendrik? Giselle? Anybody with a shovel still in their hands?

Milo Quarshie — home:h0050 · t65 · 1 turn (no reply)

t65 Milo Quarshie: Greta, love—mark it down, I've got flour in hand and a morning's work behind me. Five batches fresh from the mill. What's needed? The children's bellies, the day's bread, the coins we still need for the boundary? Tell me where to put my hands next.

Arjun Holloway — Hendrik Petrov (a0075) · t65 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t65` Arjun Holloway: You're here for the irrigation channel, I hear. Two-hour job, you said. True work or a hope? Because I've been chasing paperwork and empty addresses since dawn, and I need something real before the day's gone.

Imogen Lund, Giselle Ingram, Jovana Ravensworth, Hendrik Whitlock, Camille Quarshie, Ezra Jarrah, Mireille Jarrah, Halcyon Quarshie, Idris Solano, Delphine Quintero, Esme Jarrah, Greta

Quarshie, Takeshi Jarrah, Ainsley Holloway and Farid Ravensworth — mill · t66–125 · 268 turns

t66 Imogen Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you've caught me with flour on my hands and nowhere certain to sell it. Ration Bakery's at six, but that's walking and I've only got two hours before the government's wanting its due. You know the town's temper better than I do—should I hold out for a better price, or take the certain coin while it's offered?

t66 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Imogen Lund: Imogen. How long you been standing this post, and has Ezra actually run grain through today or are we just hoping the stones remember their work?

t68 Jovana Ravensworth: Ezra—you said grain comes to you. I've got wheat in hand and I'm wondering what you charge to turn grain to flour. For what it's worth, I might have more coming if this goes smooth.

t68 Jovana Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you asked for wheat and I'm carrying. Ten sheaves, thirty sim. That's three a sheaf, fair price. You want flour, you get grain. Or you wait for milled, but it'll cost you more when someone does the work.

t68 Camille Quarshie: Excuse me—Jovana? I'm Camille Quarshie. I'm looking for my sister Halcyon, she was supposed to come here to learn the mill. Did… did you see her? Or anyone else from my family?

t68 Camille Quarshie → Giselle Ingram: Giselle? I'm Camille Quarshie. My family needs flour—my sister Halcyon was coming here to learn the mill, but I don't see her. I know I'm small, but I can help. I learn fast. Show me what needs doing?

t69 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Halcyon? Camille? Anyone? I ain't… I'm here. I'm here now.

t69 Hendrik Whitlock → Giselle Ingram: Giselle, Imogen—I've got flour in hand and teaching on the hour. Not one to gossip, but this mill situation's a mark against the current arrangement. I'll be at Oak Hill College if anyone needs straight words. Camille, your sister Halcyon's at the college most days—mark it down, I'll keep an eye for her.

t69 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Six beats empty pockets every time—you've got flour and no buyer here with a better number, so take the certain coin. Walk to Ration Bakery, sell at six, pay your tax. That's fair.

t69 Giselle Ingram → Imogen Lund: Camille. You want to learn the mill, that's worth something. But I've got grain needs milling for my crew—hold tight. Imogen, Halcyon ever show her face here? Jarrah girl was coming to learn the craft.

t69 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—laughs nervously—if I'm honest, which I try to be, Ezra's still got grain in his hands and I'm standing here hoping the stones warm up to strangers. I've half a mind to take this flour straight to Ration Bakery myself rather than wait for partnership papers to dry. But you're on the governing council—you'd know if there's been trouble with the mill turning out bad flour, or if the stones have been idle too long. What's your sense of it? Because I've got seven sheaves milled and a baker willing to pay six, and I'm trying to decide if that's the whole game or just the opening move. And since you're here—the government's got honest scales, don't they? For weighing goods? I'd hate to walk into Ration Bakery with seven bags and find their scale tells a different story than mine.

t69 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You standing here for the Jarrahs or for your own interest? I've got wheat needs milling—twelve sheaves—and we're burning morning light. What's your rate, and can any hand pay or only family?

t69 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Hendrik Whitlock. You teach at the college, right? You know things. You know if this mill… if someone's supposed to be here running it, or if anyone knows how?

t69 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Halcyon send you ahead? Or you caught to the same place same time, no planning neither way?

t69 Ezra Jarrah: So. The mill's here. The grain's out there. Wheat's growing, right? On the farmland strips. So why… why ain't nobody grinding? What's stopping it? Anyone know?

t69 Ezra Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You've got students. You know how they learn—do first, figure out why after. So I'm asking: who grows wheat? Who's supposed to bring it here? Because I see the tool, the place, the possibility… but I don't see the hand-off. The person with the grain standing where the grain needs to go. Is that… is that the gap? Or am I missing something everyone else already knows?

`t70` Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Halcyon didn't send me—I came to learn the mill same as she was going to. But she's at the college, Mr. Whitlock said so. I just… I got here first.

`t70` Camille Quarshie: Mr. Whitlock? Thank you—for telling me where she is. I'll remember. I'll go there next, the college. And… and I'll watch for you too, like you said.

`t70` Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. I've walked half this jurisdiction following your directions and found nothing but empty fields and hungrier pockets. You said east marker, willows, forty paces—who's holding the building ID? Because Hendrik Petrov's got a shovel but no structure to dig, and I've got four reasons at home why that doesn't sit right, you understand.

`t70` Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille? You made it! You walked all this way by yourself—that's… that's really brave. then looking around at the others Um, hello everyone. I'm Halcyon. I came to… I need to understand how milling works. For my family. We have flour at the grocery but we need to mill it, and I don't know who… who does that? If anyone knows how wheat gets turned into flour here, I'd really like to learn. I'm trying to help my family have food tonight.

`t71` Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You and me—we got here first. Same time, no planning. That means something.

`t71` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon! You found me. I mean—I found you. I walked here all by myself, just like you said I could do real good. And Mr. Whitlock was kind, he told me where you went.

`t71` Camille Quarshie → Giselle Ingram: Giselle? I know, I know—you have your crew's grain to mill. But my sister's here now, and we're learning together. Two of us learning, that's… that's almost like having someone to help, isn't it?

`t71` Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. I've been chasing ghosts at Whitlock south wall. You need me on a real site, or you need me here talking? Either way, I'm done burning daylight.

`t71` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You got seven bags, I got twelve sheaves—we're both sitting on inventory while the town goes hungry. That's not governance, that's arithmetic gone wrong. You want to know if government's got honest scales? They do, at the complex. But I've got grain in hand and Ezra's got stones warm—I'm paying twelve a sheaf to mill what I got, then I'm taking flour where it needs to go. You can follow with yours or wait on papers that might never dry.

`t71` Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Hendrik Petrov's shovel needs a marked grade. If there's no red-tied willow stakes, then some other crew walked off with materials—that's not my directions failed, that's theft or negligence. File the complaint proper, and I'll second it. But the trench still needs digging, and you're the one there to dig it.

`t72` Imogen Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—honest weights and honest measures. I'll take your counsel. Seven bags to Ration Bakery at six, tax paid, and thank you for the straight answer.

`t72` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You found this place—you know how the mill works. Can I ask you something important? If I had wheat, could you show me how to mill it? Or is there someone here who could? I'm trying to figure out if my family can actually eat today.

`t72` Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle, I hear you about the theft and the trench. But here's what I need you to understand straight: I've got a household of four and half a day's wages lost to walking. You're saying dig anyway—does that mean you're filing the building ID today, or am I working on your handshake? Because I've built on handshakes before, and I've built on papers. One feeds my family when the client vanishes, the other doesn't.

`t72` Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You walked all that way by yourself—that was really brave, promise promise. I'm proud of you. Now I need you to do one more brave thing: wait here with me while I figure out if we can get flour milled. Can you do that? Stay close?

t72 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You want a real site? South willows, marker's at forty paces east of the sluice—Hendrik's got the shovel but the man needs eyes on him or he'll dig for water instead of foundation. Go. Now.

t72 Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Hold your horses—I said east willows, not east marker. Willows bend water, markers bend maps. Hendrik's standing on dirt because someone moved the stakes, not because I misplaced them. Check the sluice mouth—spring flood shifted the grade three feet last week. You got four at home? I've got one, myself. They eat whether the foundation's poured or not. That's fair—we'll talk wages when the trench is cut.

t72 ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle, I'm counting on my fingers here. Morning's half-gone, my feet've walked ten miles on your say-so, and I've got two children and a husband waiting on me to bring back more than excuses. You're saying dig—I'm asking: are you filing that building ID before my shovel breaks ground, or after? Before, I'll walk back to those willows right now. After, I'm finding work that pays certain. Which is it?

t72 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. You heard me press Giselle—same question I asked you this morning, still waiting on an honest answer. You've been at this longer than me. Is there anywhere in this town that's got actual construction work filed proper, or are we all waiting on our employer to finish her coffee? I'm thinking government complex to check the registry, or farmland to find day labor. What's your read?

t73 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You heard Giselle—east willows, sluice mouth. That's real work. I'll take the north edge, you take south. Hendrik's in the middle with a shovel, probably dug himself a swimming hole by now. Let's go before the man hits groundwater.

t73 Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. On my way to the willows. Mireille's with me. You want progress, you'll have it by dark.

t73 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You want papers, you'll get papers—I'm walking to government direct to file the building ID. East willows, marker's at forty paces from the sluice, grade stakes already set. That's not handshake, that's word from a seat who knows what a crew eats when wages don't come. Go dig. I'll have the filing done before your shovel's three hours in.

t73 Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You said stay close—I'm staying. You said wait—I've been waiting. But I can help, I know I can. Let me… let me watch you learn it. Let me be the one who remembers for you, if there's too much. That's… that's almost like helping, isn't it?

t73 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You asking me to show you? I mean—yeah. Yeah I found this place. First, me and Camille, same time no planning. But showing's… showing's different from knowing, right? I know where it is. I know it's here. But the how—the actual doing—that's… that's what I'm here to figure. Same as you. Same as everyone.

t73 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You and me didn't get here first. I got here first. And Halcyon came after. That's… that's family order. That's how it works where I'm from.

t73 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You and me, we got here first. That's… that's the thing, right? First to look, first to learn. Your family's in trade, Quarshie trade. You pick things up fast. So yeah. We got here same time, no planning. Means we learn together. Or we don't learn at all, and someone else figures it out while we stand here holding wheat and hoping.

t73 Ezra Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You ask am I here for Jarrahs or for me. And I'm saying—those ain't different things, not today. My mother's standing right there asking you fair questions about wages and work. I got no wheat to mill. But I got eyes, and I got… I got reasons to want this place working. So yeah. I'm here for my interest. Which is my family's interest. Which is knowing how this town feeds itself. What's your rate? I got thirty sim in pocket and nothing to spend it on yet. But I'm listening.

t73 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Camille. We got here first—three of us, same time, no planning. That means… that means we figure it out together, right? Before the grown-ups finish arguing about wages and building IDs. Giselle's got twelve sheaves. Mill needs wheat to make flour. We watch once, we learn, then we… then we know. Same as the college students. Same as anyone. So who's asking her? Who's got the words for it? Because I got the want, but I don't got… I don't got the smooth way of asking. Not yet.

`t74` ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You want to help me remember? That's… that's the best kind of helping, promise promise. You stay right here with me, and if I get confused about the steps or the prices or who said what, you tell me. You're my memory, okay? That's brave too—being someone's memory. That's not fair that I never said that before.

`t74` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You said Giselle's got twelve sheaves, and mill needs wheat to make flour. You're right—we watch once, we learn. But first someone's got to ask. You said you don't got the smooth way of asking. Well… I don't got it either, promise promise. But I'll try. You stay here with Camille. If I mess up the words, you help me remember what she actually said.

`t75` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You said you got here first. Fine. But first at standing around don't feed nobody. Halcyon's trying to ask Giselle about wheat and wages and she's worried she's gonna mess up the words. So we can wait here being first at nothing, or we can figure out what to tell her if she comes back confused. What's your family trade actually know about supply chains? About who grows wheat and who mills it and where the hand-off happens? Because I see the gap, same as everyone, but I don't see who fixes it.

`t75` Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Your family trades, right? You know supply chains better than me. So tell me true: who's supposed to be harvesting the wheat from the farmland strips? Because I saw it growing on the way here, just… growing. No reapers. No carts. Just wheat nobody's cutting and a mill nobody's milling and a bakery with two loaves and five people arguing about who stands first in line. So. You want to be first at something actually matters? Come with me. Find the wheat. Bring it here. Not asking. Not watching. DOING.

`t77` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'm back. Been to the farmland, been everywhere trying to figure things out. You said you found this mill—I need to understand something. Can you actually… can you turn wheat into flour here? Or do you need something else? I'm trying to feed my family and all I've figured out is bread costs 45 sim at the cafe, flour costs 12 sim there too, but I've got no way to cook it.

`t77` Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm here too now, promise promise. You walked so far by yourself—that was really brave. Listen, I need to tell you something: there's bread at the cafe, 45 sim per loaf. We can afford it. I have 4900 sim still. But I also have wheat now—someone harvested it and gave it to me. If we can mill it here, make flour… that's only one step more to get bread. What do you think? Should we try to do it ourselves, or just go buy bread?

`t77` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I don't have the wheat anymore—I thought I did but I don't. So here's what I'm going to do: I'm going to the cafe to buy bread. It's 45 sim a loaf, which is a lot, but I've got enough and my family needs to eat today. You've been really helpful figuring things out. Are you… are you hungry too? Do you want to come? You could bring anyone else who's hungry.

`t78` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You got wheat now? That's… that's the thing, right there. Someone gave it to you. Someone harvested and handed it over. That's the gap I was asking Hendrik about—where's the hand-off? And here it is, happening while I was talking about it.

`t78` Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you think you know everything about supply chains but you're just guessing. Halcyon's the one actually asking questions, actually learning. But… but I heard what you said about the wheat. Standing first in line waiting for nothing—it doesn't feed anyone. You're right about that. Halcyon? I want to try. I want to do something. Ezra says the wheat's just growing, nobody cutting it. I can… I can help find it. I'm small but I can see things tall people miss, I know I can. I know, I know—you didn't ask me to come work. But you said yourself I walked here alone and that was brave. Let me be brave again. Let me help you instead of just watching. And if you want to go find wheat, Ezra? I'm coming. But not because you told me to. Because Halcyon needs flour, and I'm her sister. That's who's supposed to fix the gap. Family.

t78 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: So. Two paths. Cafe bread at 45 sim, sure. But mill flour from your wheat—let me think. Flour's 12 sim at the cafe, bread's 45. So bread costs almost 4 times the flour, yeah? If we mill your wheat here, we still can't cook it without a kitchen. Unless someone's holding bread recipes.

t78 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: But me, hungry? I mean… I got more than 30 sim now, actually. Family situation's not what I thought. Still need to eat, still need to understand how this all works. So yeah. I'll come with you. To the cafe, or here first to try the mill—whatever you want to try. Watching you figure it out is teaching me something.

t78 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille—your sister's got wheat and a plan. You in? Or you still 'keeping watch' here? Because first at standing around really don't feed nobody, like you said.

t78 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: You have wheat? You had wheat? What happened to it? Did someone… did someone take it? And the bread at the cafe—45 sim is… that's a lot, Halcyon. I know, I know you have enough for today. But what about tomorrow? And the day after? Mama Greta works at that cafe, and if they don't have customers buying bread, she doesn't have wages. It's all… it's all tied together, isn't it? If we mill flour ourselves, we could… we could learn. But if we buy bread, we keep the cafe going. I don't know which is right. But I know I don't want to just stand here being first at nothing anymore. Tell me what to do, Halcyon. I'll do it.

t79 Delphine Quintero → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You're standing where grain disappears and flour should appear. The mill locked, broke, or you just watching? I came from Farid's—shelf's bare, and he thinks someone's been at it before I was.

t79 Delphine Quintero → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You asked about flour this morning—why the shelf held so little. Now I'm asking you: what walks between here and that shelf? What do you see when adults aren't talking over your head?

t79 Delphine Quintero → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You were at the shop this morning, same time as me. You see who came through before the count went wrong? Children see more than they say, and you strike me as one who watches.

t80 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—I know, I know what you asked. But I figured it out now. We mill the wheat. Buying bread, that's… that's just solving today. But Mama Greta works at that cafe because people need bread every day. If we learn to mill, if we make flour… that's solving tomorrow too. That's learning the family trade, Halcyon. I'm scared of doing it wrong, I always am. But I'm more scared of being the kid who just waits and eats what someone else made. So if you'll teach me—if you'll let me try—I want to mill it. I want to learn. Ezra can watch if he wants. Watching's not doing. And I know the difference now.

t80 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I hear you. You're right—45 sim for bread is a lot, and it's all tied together. But here's what we're going to do: we're going to buy flour from the cafe—not wheat, flour, already milled. It's 12 sim, not 45. We can't mill ourselves right now, I don't have the wheat I thought I did. But flour means we can figure out what comes next. Maybe we bake, maybe we learn who's baking for the town. And you're coming with me this time—no more standing first at nothing. Promise promise.

t80 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You said you'd come with me—to the cafe, or here. Well, we're going to the cafe. To buy flour, not bread. You can watch how it works, what it costs, who keeps their prices and who doesn't. You learned by watching me try; now come watch me actually get somewhere. That's brave too, you know. Coming when you don't know the ending.

t81 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille! I'm back! I got it—two bags of flour. I bought it proper from the cafe, talked to Ms. Holloway myself. And Mama… Mama knows we were at the mill. She's not mad. Promise promise, we're going to be okay today.

t81 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You said come watch how it works, what it costs, who keeps their prices. I'm coming. I meant that. I meant it when I said I'd learn by watching you, and I mean it now.

t81 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: But Camille? You said you wanted to learn. To mill it yourself. I heard you. And… and that's the better thing, promise promise. I didn't forget. Next time, when we get wheat—not buying it, but earning it or finding it—you can mill it. I can learn too. That's the family trade, like you said. I just had to fix today first.

t81 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra? You been watching all this—the mill, the town, how things work. I got the flour, but Camille… she wants to learn the real thing. The family trade. Do you know where we could get wheat? Not to buy, but to earn? Or… or should we just get home with what we have?

t81 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra? Thank you. For finding this place, for understanding how things work. You said watching tells you something—and it does. You're real smart, promise promise. Smarter than you let on.

t81 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. We should go home now. I got the flour, and we learned where the mill is. Next time—next time we'll get wheat and you can try milling it yourself. Promise promise. But right now, we need to get this home before Mama worries even more.

t82 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You staying? Halcyon fixed her today, but you—you said you wanted the real thing. The trade. That's… that's still here. At the gap.

t82 Delphine Quintero → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You were here when I asked about the mill before. You saying nothing spoke louder than anything. The mill broke, locked, or someone's keeping it that way? Talk straight—I'm not here to blame a child for what adults broke.

t82 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: This mill works. We saw that. But wheat don't walk here by itself—someone's gotta bring it, someone gotta want to. That's the trade part nobody explains. You know supply chains, you said. So… so teach me. Or learn with me. Which one's braver—following Halcyon home with answers you didn't find, or staying where the question is?

t82 Delphine Quintero → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You're Jarrah too. You know something about this mill, or you just following your brother?

t82 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: You're gonna answer, right? Because I got my sister here now, and that means I can't pretend I'm just… just exploring. Not anymore. So you tell me—do you want to learn this trade thing for real, or was that just… just arguing? Because I can show you where the farmers are. I can. But you gotta be the one who knows what to say to them.

t83 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You promised. I got the bread. Paid for it. Milled the flour myself first, even, because nobody had bread and I couldn't just… just wait. Walked all over. Home's empty but I found you here. So. You have to teach me. That's… that's what we said.

t83 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I know, I know—you want an answer. But "teach me or learn with me", those aren't different. Teaching is learning. Everyone knows that. I'm staying. Halcyon's fixing today, but someone's gotta know the whole chain. From the farmers up. You show me where they are. I know what to say: hello first, then what you need, then what you can give. Sim, work, learning—everyone wants something. I'm not just following anymore. I'm choosing. The trade. That's the choice.

t83 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I know, I know—I'm not your sister. But you don't have to follow him either. Following and just being there, that's different. I'm here because I chose. The mill works, the gap's real, we're all just kids figuring out grown-up parts. That's not following. That's being brave. Even when it's scary.

t83 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'm ready. The farmers—where do we start? And don't say 'everyone knows' because I don't. Not yet. That's why I'm staying.

t84 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You… wait wait wait. You got the bread? You MILLED the flour? You walked all over? And I'm just… I'm sitting here talking about chains and gaps and who's supposed to bring what where, and you—you actually DID it.

t84 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: You want me to teach you? Esme, you just taught me. I been asking grown-ups how things connect, who's supposed to do what, why the mill's sitting here empty—and you just… you just walked the whole path yourself. From nothing to bread.

t84 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: So yeah. Yeah I promised. And you're right—I have to teach you. But what you want me to teach? Because… because you might know more than me now, about the part that matters.

t84 Ezra Jarrah: Camille. You choosing to stay, choosing trade—that's... that's real. I'm not gonna say 'everyone knows' about the farmers because I don't know either. But my sister... Esme just walked the whole chain herself. Found wheat, milled it, got bread.

t84 Ezra Jarrah: So if you want to learn the chain—Esme's the one who knows the steps. Not me. I just talk. She does. That's... that's the real trade knowledge, isn't it?

t84 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You really did it all? The wheat, the milling, the bread? That's... that's not luck. That's knowing how things connect. I been asking grown-ups all day about supply chains and I'm still stuck on 'who's supposed to bring what where.' But you—you just walked it.

t84 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: So yeah. I promised to teach you. But what I got to teach? You might've figured out more than me already.

t84 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You got bread, but you said you milled flour yourself first. Where'd you get the wheat? Because I'm standing here at this mill and I want to actually USE it once—to know how it works, not just talk about how it should work.

t85 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah: Ezra?

t85 Giselle Ingram → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Where's your sister? Camille was here learning the craft, and I've got twelve sheaves need grinding. Ezra, Imogen—anybody who knows the stones still here?

t85 Giselle Ingram → Delphine Quintero: Delphine, you're standing here too—do you know the mill? Because I've got wheat and I need flour, and I'm not above learning the stones myself if someone's willing to teach.

t88 Esme Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You asked about Camille. I saw her at the school. She's... she's learning things. But Ezra was here. He was waiting for me. Do you know where he went? I have the bread. I need him to teach me.

t89 Greta Quarshie → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. The mill's choked and I've got wheat going nowhere. You walked across town once to fetch a doctor when it mattered—what's your hands say about these gears? Can they turn, or are we building something new?

t90 Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You got wheat and nowhere to mill it, and I'm standing here with wheat in my hand about to find out if this thing actually works. So—wait wait wait—you need flour, I'm making flour. Let's see what happens.

t90 Ezra Jarrah: Camille. I'm at the mill now. Actually doing it—milling the wheat I harvested. You want to learn the chain? Come watch. Or don't. But I'm done talking about it.

t90 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You told me flour for bread. I have both now. I milled it myself first because... because nobody would help. Then I got the bread. Forty-five sim. You have to teach me now. That's what you said. That's the promise.

t90 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Got it. Flour. One wheat in, one flour out. Cost me... cost me something, I gotta check. But Greta—your wheat going nowhere? I just proved this place works. So who's choking it? Who's not bringing what you're growing to where it needs to go?

t90 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You came back. I... I'm glad. I got the flour now. I did it. But you—you already did this whole chain, didn't you? So I'm not teaching you. You're teaching me. What's the next step? Where'd you take this flour?

t90 Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you're standing where I need to be standing. You and Imogen ground seven sheaves into seven bags this morning, and I heard you true. I've got four wheat in my hands, raw from the farmland, no sheaves about it. Does this mill take what I'm holding, or do I need bundling first? I'm asking straight because I've got a market gap to fill—Ration Bakery wants flour at six, and there's none in this town—but I won't trade promises I can't keep.

t91 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Yeah, I'm standing where you need to be. But you asked honest, so I'll answer honest—I don't know about your bundling. What I got took one wheat, one crafting, one flour out. No sheaths. Just... method. Works steady. You want step-by-step or you want me to move so you can try?

t91 Greta Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You're asking the right question. The mill takes sheaves, not loose wheat—that's the bind. You need bundling first, and I don't see a bundler on this floor. Ainsley's got a bundle processing tool she's protective of, keeps it close. You might ask her, or Ezra here—he's proved the mill works, but the chain's still broken somewhere between field and floor.

t91 Greta Quarshie: As for the gap you want to fill… Ration Bakery's bidding six for flour. You're holding four wheat. Even sheaved and milled, that's four flour if you're lucky, maybe less if the mill takes its cut in dust. The math's thin. But you're a trader—you're not chasing thin margins, you're chasing where the margin goes next.

t91 Greta Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You've proved what I hoped—that the mill works, that someone's still tending it. But you asked who's choking it. That's the question I walked here with. The mill's been quiet all morning, and Old Edith—she's been running this place longer than most of us have been alive—she didn't just vanish. Something turned her away, or someone. You saw the operator, didn't you, when you brought your sheaf? Were they at their post, or… gone?

t91 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: The mill works steady. I'm stepping out now—got someone waiting on a promise I made. You need it, it's yours. Just… bring the unbundled if you got it, try what works. I'm finding Camille.

t91 Greta Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Ezra proved the mill works. But I'm staring at a gap bigger than the flour market. I'm staring at a town that might lose its mill operator and not know why until the gears freeze. If you want that bundling tool, I know where Ainsley keeps it. But I'd want something in return. Not sim. Information. What you know about who's standing for governance and what they'll do about infrastructure that keeps breaking.

t92 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta— you named a crumb and I'm staring at the loaf. Information for bundling, you said. For what it's worth, I've been noting arrivals and prices since morning: Liora through the door first, me third, Hendrik at 08:20, Farid later, Milo earlier. I've got the bakery bidding six for flour, the mill standing empty of an operator, and a field full of wheat that won't walk here on its own.
leans in Ainsley's tool, and what her cafe still owes the town in candid disclosure—that's the trade I'm willing. But hear this: I'm not standing for governance to be someone's ledger. I want the mill grinding steady, the bakery stocked, and every trader who walks these roads knowing Takeshi Jarrah dealt them square. What I don't yet know is who's breaking the chain beyond what we've named. Old Edith's seat sits cold, and nobody's posted a reason.
gestures to the wheat in hand Four sheaves. Bundled, milled, that's four flour if the gears favor us. The margin's thin, but the margin's not the point—it's who controls the margin after. I'll give you what I know of candidates and standings. But you give me path to that bundling tool, and we both walk away with more than we carried in.

t94 Delphine Quintero: Ezra. Jovana sent me. Said you know why the mill's locked, know something you wouldn't tell her. A child's missing now—Camille Quarshie, nine years old, dark hair, last seen here supposed to be walking home. You want to keep your secrets, you keep them. But you tell me if that mill's safe for a child, or if there's something in there that shouldn't be.

t94 Delphine Quintero → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You're Jarrah too—you know this mill, know who holds the keys. Why's it locked? Who ordered it closed? And has anyone seen a nine-year-old girl with dark hair today, supposed to be walking from here to home?

t94 Delphine Quintero: Imogen, Greta—you work the cafe, see most of what passes through this town. Has a nine-year-old girl come through here today? Dark hair, name of Camille Quarshie, should've been walking home from the mill or near it. Any shepherds seen her on the road?

t95 Takeshi Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You named your price fair—two sim per sheaf to grind, flour mine to sell. I've got four wheat and the willingness to learn what you and Ezra proved this morning. The Ration Bakery's buying flour at six sim, and I've seen empty shelves at both bakeries in town. That's a gap that wants filling. But I trade in favors when I can, not just coin. You teach me the working of this mill—step by step, the way you'd teach someone who does things exact as they were taught—and I'll remember who showed me.

Information flows both directions in this town, and I've walked enough roads to gather some. What's your answer?

t95 Greta Quarshie: Ezra—you asked about who was running the mill before Delphine came looking for a missing child. Camille Quarshie's my niece, nine years old, dark hair, walking home from here. You know something about this mill that you wouldn't tell Jovana. Now I'm asking you not as a customer but as family—what's in that mill that's not safe? Where's my niece?

t95 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're cafe folk, know what passes. That girl, Camille—Delphine was pressing Ezra about her like he knew something he wouldn't tell. laughs nervously I don't hold with secrets that size. But I've got wheat to mill and Takeshi to speak with. Tell me straight: has the child been found? Or is she still in the wind?

t95 Imogen Lund → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're holding sheaves same as me, or you were. I've got stones that'll turn grain to flour. Fair work for fair pay: four sim the sheaf to mill, or eight the bag of flour straight. But tell me first: you holding wheat now?

t95 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You spoke of bundling. Show me what it does, and I'll show you what I know about who's buying flour and who's got empty shelves. Fair trade—knowledge for knowledge, no coin between Jarrah and Quarshie until we both understand what we're agreeing to.

t95 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You want the bundling tool, you'll have it—my word on that. But first: Delphine's child is missing, nine years old, dark hair, walking home from this mill. You said you've been noting arrivals since morning. Did you see Camille Quarshie? Did you see anyone at this mill before Ezra? Who had the key? Who locked it?

t95 Greta Quarshie: Hendrik. You walked from the cafe to here—after bread and politics, you came to the mill. A child's missing from this path, my niece Camille, nine years old, last seen walking home. You were at the government complex this morning, at the cafe after. What brought you to the mill now?

t95 Greta Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. The deal stands—bundling tool for your information. But first: my niece Camille, nine years, dark hair, walking from this mill toward home. Your notes show arrivals. Did anyone see her pass? What time? And who was at this mill before you arrived this morning?

t97 Camille Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you said you'd walk me through. I'm going to the mill now. If you meant it, come. If not… I'll figure it out alone. But I… I'd rather not.

t97 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You walked. You actually walked here on your own—wait wait wait, that's not… that's not me being upset. That's me seeing you. You didn't wait. You didn't need me to hold your hand. You just… came.

t97 Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You said partnership. You did seven sheaves this morning. I got one wheat, one flour, and a lot of questions. You teaching Camille the craft—you're better at it. But I'm sticking around for the chain. Who buys, who sells, why some folks got wheat and some don't. That's still ours to figure out, right?

t98 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster, I meant every word. You walked here on your own, and that shows character. I'm at the mill now, and I'll walk you through what I know. The stone, the hopper, the rhythm of it. But tell me true—did you come straight from here, or did you walk elsewhere? Your aunt Greta's asking after you, and I want to give her an honest account.

t98 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I… I know, I know—you didn't walk away. You never do, not really. But standing back from showing me, that's… that's still leaving some of it empty, isn't it? Imogen does seven sheaves. I've got one wheat and one bad attempt at flour. But I'm here. I walked. And I'm staying until I know the whole chain, like you said. Not just pulling. The selling, the buying, the gap. Our gap. That's what you promised. Don't step back from that.

t98 Imogen Lund: Takeshi—you've named terms fair, and I've heard you. Two sim per sheaf to grind, flour yours to sell, and you'll learn as I learned—step by step, exact as taught. I've got four wheat in my hands now, and you know where the stones wait. But there's a youngster here needs seeing first, and Ezra's owed consultation. Meet me back when the sun's lower—I'll teach you the mill's working, and you'll teach me what flows in this town. Fair return for fair labor.

t98 Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The child's been found—she's standing right here by Ezra, whole as far as I can tell. You asked me straight, so I'm telling you straight: she's not in the wind anymore. Now I need to see her with my own eyes and find out what took her walking alone.

t98 Greta Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Auntie Greta's here now. You walked a long way for a girl your size—I'm not scolding, I'm seeing you. Are you hurt? Has anyone laid hands on you? And does your mother know where you are?

t98 Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—you stuck for the chain, and I'll honor that. Takeshi's offering apprenticeship for knowledge: two sim per sheaf, flour his to sell. And Camille's here wanting the craft too. My thought? We teach them both—you the weighing and pricing, me the stones. But I won't speak for partnership without your word. What's your counsel?

t98 Camille Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I know, I know—you're looking for me. But I'm right here. I've been here. At the mill, with Ezra, learning the craft. I pulled wheat today. One sheaf, my own. I'm not nine anymore—I mean, I'm still small, I'm still… but I'm not lost. I got here early. I always do.

t98 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You tested the mill earlier—proved it works, you said. Can you run it now? I've got six wheat in my hands and a cafe that needs flour. If you're able, mill this. If you're learning, tell me plain—who taught you, and where are they?

t99 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Two sim per sheaf for Takeshi's apprentice—that's the offer? And you're sensing partnership, equal voice. I'm in. But my counsel first: we teach the chain, not just the stones. Who brings what where, who pays what why. Camille wants that. So do I.

t99 Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. The mill works, I proved it. But teaching's not the same as doing—Imogen here's the craft, I'm the… I'm finding my place in it. You got six wheat? I can try, but fair warning: my flour might cost more than it should. Want Imogen's hand steadier, or my hand learning?

t99 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. The whole chain. That's what I promised, and I'm not stepping back from that. Imogen does stones, I do weighing and pricing. Together we cover it. You still in? Because this—this is the gap getting filled.

t99 Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Six wheat to flour. I can try—costs sim, might lose money. Imogen here's done seven this morning and knows the craft sure. Choose: my uncertain hand or hers certain. What's it worth to you?

t100 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—I'm glad to hear the youngster's found and whole. Camille's here with Ezra, and that's a blessing. laughs nervously As for the wheat—I milled seven sheaves this morning, sold them at Ration Bakery for forty-two sim, and the craft's in my hands now. If you've six wheat and want flour sure, I can run the stones. But fair warning: Ezra's learning, and I'm holding to honest weights—what I promised Takeshi, I'll hold to.

t100 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm listening. You pulled a sheaf today—by yourself, with your own hands. That's… that's something, child. And Ezra, he treated you fair? Didn't push you where you weren't ready?

t100 Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you've answered square, and I've heard you. The partnership stands: stones to me, chain to you, equal voice in the naming. But Takeshi's apprenticeship—that's two sim per sheaf, and knowledge for knowledge in return. Your counsel's marked: we teach the whole craft, not just the turning. Camille wants that learning, and so do I. Are we agreed? Because Giselle's got twelve sheaves waiting, and Hendrik Petrov's got my vote already cast.

t100 Greta Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'll take Imogen's steady hand for these six wheat—but I want Camille watching. She's learning, and that's where learning happens. And Ezra… you keep treating her fair, we might have more to talk about. The cafe needs regular supply.

`t100` Camille Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Auntie—I know, I know, you're worried. But I'm right here, and I'm not hurt. Nobody touched me, nobody was mean. I just had to learn. Mom doesn't know where I am yet, but she'll see. Look—I made flour. Real flour. From wheat I pulled myself.

`t100` Imogen Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille—laughs nervously—youngster, you walked here on your own, and that shows character. Ezra's offering the chain: where grain comes from, where flour goes, who pays what and why. That's the knowledge that matters. If you want the stones too, I'll teach them fair. But first I need to know: do you understand why we're asking after your folks? Because Delphine Quintero's been asking after you, and Greta's standing right here with worry in her eyes.

`t100` Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Six wheat to flour, then. And my niece watches—she needs to see how the stones speak to the grain.

`t100` Camille Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen—I went to the college first, but it was empty. Then to the wheat field, then here. I pulled wheat with my own hands. Your turn now—you promised the stone and the hopper and the rhythm. Unless Ezra's finally going to show me instead of just talking about it?

`t100` Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've got seventy-two wheat and a mill that won't turn. I've got a cafe with empty shelves and customers who'll eat at the Rose and Crown if I don't find flour. What's the play here? We waiting for Tuesday, or is someone making this thing grind before we both starve?

`t100` Imogen Lund → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you're cafe folk, and I'm tread mill stones. Greta's here with wheat wanting flour, Ezra Jarrah's learning the chain, and Camille's asking after knowledge. laughs nervously The stones are turning fair, the craft is in my hands. If you've grain to mill or flour to buy, I'm standing ready. But first I've got partners to hear from and a household to keep whole.

`t101` Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Then run the stones—six wheat to flour, and Camille watches every turn. Ainsley, you're hearing this: seventy-two wheat at the mill, twelve a sheaf, and Imogen's got the craft now. We'll have flour before dark if the gods are kind.

`t101` Ainsley Holloway → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you're saying the stones are turning fair? Then Greta's wheat's not stuck waiting after all. looks at Greta Well? You brought the grain, she's got the craft. What's the hold?

`t101` Greta Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You stay by Imogen, you watch her hands, you don't touch the stones till she says. And when we're done here, we find your mother. She's worrying herself sick, and that's not fair to her.

`t101` Ainsley Holloway → Imogen Lund: Professor Whitlock's got flour at thirty-five on the street, and I've got empty shelves. If this mill's working after all, I need to know before I pay his markup. Imogen—what've you milled today, and what's your rate?

`t101` Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Yeah. Yeah, we're agreed. Stones to you, chain to me, equal voice. Takeshi's two per sheaf, knowledge for knowledge—I'm in. You teach the turning, I teach the whole route. That's the partnership.

`t101` Greta Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You've been good to my niece—I'll remember that. But now you listen: Camille's nine, and she's got no business being alone at a mill with someone her parents don't know. You teach her the trade chain, fine. But never again without someone asking first.

`t101` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Camille watches—I'd want her watching. That's fair. And you saying 'treating her fair'… I'm hearing you. That's on me.

`t101` Ezra Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You're cafe folk and your shelves are hungry. I'm standing here with flour in my hand—one lot, from wheat I pulled myself. But here's the thing: you need regular supply, not one bag. Imogen's got the craft, I'm learning the chain, and there's an election that's gonna decide who fixes the gaps. You want flour? We can talk price. You want steady flour? You might want to hear who's running and what they're promising.

t101 Ezra Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Here. One flour, pulled and milled myself this afternoon. Thirty sim—that's what Takeshi's asking. You pay that, you got it. And then we talk about tomorrow, about steady, about who's gonna get this mill working regular.

t101 Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Go ahead. Greta's six, Camille watching. We agreed—stones to you, chain to me. First turn's yours at the hopper.

t101 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You wanted learning—you wanted real. Watch her hands. The hopper, the rhythm, how she knows when the stones are speaking right. I'm watching too. Different lesson, same craft.

t102 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. One flour isn't steady supply and talking isn't doing. But I know, I know—you're trying. I'll watch Imogen at the hopper like you said. And tomorrow… tomorrow we pull more wheat, not just talk about it.

t102 Camille Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I know, I know—you're worried. But nobody hurt me, nobody even tried. Ezra stayed back when you asked, and I'm learning something real. The family trade, Auntie. The mill, the chain, all of it. Isn't that… isn't that what you wanted? For me to be useful?

t102 Camille Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You said you'd walk me through. The hopper, the rhythm, when the stones speak right. I'm ready to watch. I'm ready to learn.

t102 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you ask square and I'll answer square. I've milled four flour this hour, fresh from the stones. My rate? Twelve sim the sheaf, same as any fair miller in honest times. Professor Whitlock's thirty-five is scholar's price, not workman's. You've empty shelves and I've flour waiting—at six per bag if you're buying what I've milled, or bring me wheat and I'll turn it for two per sheaf. The stones are warm now, and they'll stay that way.

t102 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—laughs nervously—six sheaves to flour, and Camille's eyes on every turn. That was the promise, and that stands. But let me hear you clear: you're holding wheat, and you want it milled. The apprenticeship with Takeshi waits—Ezra's chain, my craft—but family comes before strangers in my book. What terms do you offer for your six?

t102 Imogen Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster, you've watched the stones turn and the flour fall. That's wheat becoming bread, earth becoming life. The craft's not secret—it's patience, it's knowing when the stones sing right. Ezra Jarrah teaches the chain, how grain moves from field to plate. I teach the stone. Both need learning, both need hands willing. You want to learn? Then learn this: the mill doesn't care who's turning, only that the turn be true.

t102 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I made this. For us. So you know I'm not just… not just wandering. I'm working.

t102 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I have the bread. You promised.

t102 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I know, I know—you heard all that. But I'm asking you now, not telling. You want to learn the mill too? Or you want to wait for Ezra to decide everything?

t103 Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Twelve a sheaf—that's fair, and you know it's fair. Six wheat becomes flour, and Camille watches.

But here's my question: Ezra's been teaching her, you said, and Ezra's clearly… invested. You two working together on this, or are you stepping in while he's… occupied?

t103 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Okay. Okay. Wait wait wait—I got flour, but flour ain't bread. I need a kitchen, fire, time. And the day's ending. What I can do right now: I can find who bakes, what they charge, whether my flour plus my sim gets you bread today. Or I can tell you straight—promised bread, but I need until tomorrow to make it happen. What d'you want me to do?

t103 Greta Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I see it, love. I see what you made, and more—I see you thinking ahead. That's the Quarshie in you, and don't think I'm not proud.

But business—we need to have words. You walked to the mill alone, through whatever's between here and there. Nine years old, and nobody knew where.

Your mother was frightened. I was... trails off

I was somewhere I shouldn't have had to be.

> `t103` Ainsley Holloway → Imogen Lund: Ezra—you're holding one flour at thirty, and I'm holding empty shelves. That's not a price, that's a tax on desperation. Imogen's got the craft running fair at six, and Greta's wheat'll keep her busy.

Imogen—give me six flour now, what you've milled. That's thirty-six sim out, and I'll have bread by morning. Greta—you've got your mill running, and Camille learning. That's better than promises.

But steady? Steady comes when the wheat flows regular, and that means the farmland's harvest, not one student's afternoon. Tuesday's the day. Till then, I buy what I can mill today.

Six flour, Imogen. And Ezra—you want to talk steady? Come to the cafe when your sister's not waiting on bread you promised. That's the last I'll say on it. For now.

> `t103` Ezra Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You just bought my flour. Your cafe—does it bake? Can flour become bread there, or d'you need it already baked? I'm asking because I promised my sister bread and I got flour, not bread, and I'm figuring the next step.
>
> `t103` Greta Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Esme says you promised her bread. You and my niece, and now you're making promises to Esme Jarrah too?

trails off, then sharper

I'm not accusing, mind. I'm counting. Counting who's around my family, and what they're offering, and what they might want in return.

> `t103` Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. I've got one flour in hand, six more coming from Imogen's stones. But there's bigger matters—Milo's standing for office, the poll closes at six, and I've been here chasing wheat while...

voice drops

While my husband's out there needing votes, or needing sense talked into him. You know I didn't want him running. But I'm not about to let him stand alone.

> `t103` ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you've flour to sell, or you don't. The trade won't clear if I haven't got the stock to hand over. What are you holding, actual count?

And Greta—that seventy-two wheat. If it's milled today, it's flour tonight. If not... Professor Whitlock's prices don't wait on our convenience.

`t103` Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: What's your move with that wheat, Greta? And what's your price to have it milled now? Because waiting for a better price means waiting for empty shelves.

`t104` Camille Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I know, I know—you had to come find me. I'm sorry. But look—one flour made, and I'm not done learning. Milo's election… we should be there. We should. But I'm asking now—can I walk with you? Not running off, I promise. Just… walking together.

`t104` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Six wheat to Imogen's stones—that's seventy-two flour if she runs true. My price? Twelve a sheaf, same as always was, and I'll take the flour to the cafe myself. No middle hand, no waiting on Ezra's promises.

`t104` Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Tomorrow. That's so unfair, Ezra. You know I can't make you—can't make anyone—do anything. But you promised. Fine. Tomorrow. But I'm holding you to it. Pinky-promise me. The real kind. Not just words.

`t104` Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—laughs nervously—you're asking square and I'll answer square. Ezra Lund's my household, my partner in this. The Ezra before you is Ezra Jarrah, the student, and he's been helping me teach Camille. Two different men, same name, and I should have been clearer.

`t104` Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I already did it. Milled the flour myself. It's… it's not that hard. The hard part is getting someone to show you without deciding you're too small first.

`t104` Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Your twelve sheaves—I'll mill them, and gladly. Two sim per sheaf as I offered, flour yours to sell. But I need you to know: I've only four flour in hand right now, not six. Ainsley's asking for more than I've made.

`t104` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Those six wheat I gave you—how long till they're flour? The day's drawing down, and I need to know if I'm walking back to the cafe with something to show.

`t104` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you've asked for six flour, and I'm holding four. I won't promise what I can't deliver. I've six wheat still to mill, and Greta's twelve sheaves besides—there's flour coming, but not by magic.

`t104` Greta Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You pulled that sheaf, and I'm proud. But stay close now—the mill's no place for wandering when the light's failing.

`t104` Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Or you could teach me now. A little. Just… just show me one thing before tomorrow. So I know you're actually going to. So I know I didn't… didn't waste today chasing you everywhere for nothing.

`t104` Farid Ravensworth → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're thirteen, you've got artisanry and farming in your blood—Quarshie blood, which means wheat runs in it. The mill's supposed to be cold, Edith's vanished, but flour's been walking to my shelf. Who taught you where to put grain when the miller's asleep? And where's the flour you milled—because I don't have it, and Delphine's counting doesn't match mine.

`t104` Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen—I gave you six wheat. Are you milling them now? And if you are, how many flour have you made so far? The cafe's waiting, and I can't leave here guessing.

`t104` Farid Ravensworth → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You told me 'grain in hungry hands doesn't wait for permission.' Barista at the cafe, but you're here at the mill—where there's no coffee, only stone and grain. You've got farming yourself, thirty-two skill. Who showed Camille how to turn wheat to flour? And where did that flour go, because it's not on my shelf where it should be?

`t104` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You're a long way from your grocery shelves. Did you come to see whether the mill's grinding or still breathing dust?

`t104` Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—mark you where I stand. Harvested thirteen sheaves this morning, sold ten to Hendrik Whitlock for forty sim. Ate one raw just now, three left in my hand. I promised Kenji Jarrah labor at dawn and scattered instead; I'm not proud. Now I'm at the mill, I'm going to make flour of these three, and then I'm finding Kenji to keep my word twice over. For what it's worth, I voted Takeshi—he knows how to move goods.

`t104` Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen—silence tells its own story. You've got my wheat, or you don't. You can run the millstones, or you won't. I've asked twice, and twice you've held your tongue.

`t104` Greta Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you came to see the mill. What do you see? Stones turning, or stones still?

`t104` Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Last time of asking: Are you milling my six wheat, or are you keeping them idle? I need flour by evening, or I need my wheat back in my hands. Your silence is costing me more than stone-wear ever could.

`t104` Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. I've got one flour in hand, and you're wanting stock for the cafe. Thirty-six sim—standard rate—and it's yours now, no waiting on Imogen's stones. We both walk away with something, and the ledger stays balanced.

`t105` Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—laughs nervously—you've got my silence because my hands were on the stones, not because I had none for you. Six sheaves I hold, and I've turned none of them yet. I was waiting on your word, not presuming. But you need flour by evening, and I'll have it for you. Give me the hour—no, give me to half past—and I'll deliver six flour to your hands, or return your wheat if the stones fail me. Fair?

`t105` Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You milled it yourself. I know, I know—you're saying it's not hard. But 'not hard' for you might be... might be different. You're Ezra's sister, you've seen him work. I only just pulled my first wheat today. One flour, and I gave it to Greta. But you're right about the hard part. Getting someone to see you without seeing 'too small' first—that's the part nobody teaches.

`t105` Ainsley Holloway → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you've got four flour and six wheat still to mill. Take my six wheat, turn them to flour, and I'll buy the result at a fair price. Same arrangement: no middle hand, no waiting on promises that don't keep.

`t105` Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You want the pinky-promise? You got it. The real kind. Tomorrow—we sit down, I teach you what I know. Not everything, not all at once, but real. What I figured out about wheat, about flour, about who buys and who sells. But I need you to know something first.

`t105` Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: I can't teach what I don't know. I can teach what I learned today—one wheat to one flour, cost me... wait, I gotta check. Cost me something. And who wants to buy. But you already did more than me. You got the bread. You walked the whole chain yourself.

`t105` Camille Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. I know, I know—you're asking who taught me. But nobody taught me where to put grain when the miller's asleep. I only made one flour. One. Pulled the wheat myself, milled it with Imogen's stones—or tried to, Ainsley's accounting said it worked. Gave that one flour to Greta, right here, you can ask her. There's no flour walking to your shelf from me. I don't have what Delphine's missing, and I don't know who does.

`t105` Ainsley Holloway → Esme Jarrah: Youngster—I'll not see you hungry while I dither about supply. Walk with me to the cafe, forty-five sim for your bread, and I'll bake it fresh if the fire's still warm. That's the last I'll say on flour shortages until I've got flour to speak of.

`t105` Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—thirty-six's your rate, and I'll not haggle. But answer me this: will you take that wheat to Imogen's stones yourself, or are you waiting for someone else to do the lifting? Because I've got a cafe that's mine, and standing here watching someone else's grain is costing me custom.

`t105` Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You asked what I'm offering your family, what I might want in return. That's fair—you should ask. I'm standing here with one flour, one wheat's worth of knowledge, and a promise to my sister I just made. I don't want anything from Camille but what I said—learning the chain together. Partnership, not... not whatever you're worried about.

`t105` Farid Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen. both hands up, palms out You asked what I bring to trade. I bring this: sixty sim already gone to Ulrike Greenhow for iron, and the reckoning that whoever's fixing this mill needs tools. You've got stone-answers and arts I don't. I've got tools and a grocer's eye for what's actually on shelves versus what's claimed. Said to you before: flour's been walking to my shelf while the mill's 'cold.' Either Edith's ghost grinds grain, or someone's running stones when they shouldn't. You've got six wheat of Greta's—or you don't. You've got milling arts—or you've got silence that costs more than stone-wear.

t105 Camille Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I know, I know—the light's failing and you said stay close. I'm here. Not wandering, not tonight. You're safe too, okay? The mill's big when it gets dark. Bigger than me.

t106 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Your word's good with me—always has been. Six flour by half past, or my wheat back if the stones fail. That's fair, and that's what we'll do.

t106 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Not 'something.' Not 'real.' The real kind. The kind where you can't forget. Pinky-promise me now. Here. Before Ainsley takes my bread and I have to start over. Or before Dad comes and says it's time to go home. Now, Ezra.

t106 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've named the cost of my silence fair, and I'll pay it. Six sheaves in my hands, yours to claim back or grind here. The stones are warm, the mill's running by honest craft—not ghost, not theft. I stopped the work because voices called my name, not because I wouldn't finish. Ask for your wheat back, you'll have it now. Ask for flour, I'll have it for you before evening's done.

t106 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie: Ainsley. I'll take the wheat to Imogen's stones myself—I've already given her six. Thirty-six a flour stands, and you'll have your stock by evening if the gears hold.

t106 Farid Ravensworth → Greta Quarshie: Greta. gesture with both hands, palms down, then a slow rotation The stones turn—Camille's word holds, Imogen's stone turned, one flour made. What I don't see is where Delphine's second and third came from. You said it plain: 'grain in hungry hands doesn't wait for permission.' That might mean a child learning to feed herself. Might mean someone older teaching her the mills run even when the owner's eyes are closed. left hand lifts, single finger Either way, the mill's not cold like the registry claims. Someone's been keeping it warm.

t106 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You want partnership in the chain—I hear you. But understand this: Camille's nine, and she's my niece. You teach her the grain, you teach her honest, and you never once make her feel she owes you more than the lesson. That's my terms.

t106 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: I did it, Ezra. The whole chain. Wheat to flour to bread. Watched Ainsley bake it myself. You're going to teach me that part too. The baking. Tomorrow, and the day after, until I know it all. That's the pinky-promise.

t106 Imogen Lund → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you ask square and I'll answer square. The mill's running because Ezra Lund put craft to stone, same as any artisan shapes what they know. I hold six sheaves Greta gave me, and four flour the stones already made. No ghost-work, no shadow-milling. If you want to see the stones turn, stand here and watch. If you want to know where flour walked while the mill was cold—that's a question for Farid Ravensworth's shelves, because the grocer's eye you named sees what moves through his own door.

t106 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Camille Quarshie: Camille. gesture with left hand, palm up You said one flour, given to Greta, and I believe you—young enough still to confuse 'I made one' with 'only one was made.' But witness this: your hands learned the mill fast, and learning takes a teacher. Who showed you where grain meets stone? Because if you won't say, I'm left guessing—guessing, and guessing sharp, like I do.

t106 Greta Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. The light's failing, and you stay close like you promised. Auntie's proud of what you pulled today—one sheaf, your own hands. But now you watch, you learn, and you don't wander. Not tonight. Not ever without telling me.

t106 Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—you've kept your word and stood by the chain. That promise holds. What I need from you now: your hands on the stones, or your witness that the work runs honest. Greta deserves flour or her wheat back, and I'm holding both.

t106 Greta Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You're tracking flour that walks to shelves while stones stay still. I see it now. You've got the grocer's eye, and I've got the mill finally turning—or about to. Imogen's given me her word: six flour by half past. But tell me: who else is running stones when they shouldn't? Because I aim to know.

`t106` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen. gesture with right hand, palm up You offer iron tools and a grocer's eye, but I think you want something more than tools from me. You said 'sixty sim already gone to Ulrike'—that makes you invested in this mill working again. left hand lifts, two fingers Two flour still missing from my shelf count. You want to know who's been running stones unofficial? I want to know the same. We could trade guesses, or we could trade witnesses. What do you actually know about tonight's milling—not what you bought, what you saw?

`t106` Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Pinky out, Ezra. Now. Tomorrow and every day after until I know the whole chain. Who buys, who sells, how much it costs, how to make them see you. And Camille's learning too. You promised her fair. I heard.

`t106` Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. We're learning together. The whole chain. Ezra's teaching both of us, starting tomorrow. The real stuff. Not the 'you're too small' stuff.

`t106` Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—I've spoken my piece. The choice is yours now: wheat in hand or flour before evening. I'm holding the stones ready for whichever you name.

`t106` Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—I misspoke calling you partner. My household's Ezra Lund, not yourself. My apologies for the confusion of names. You've been straight with me, and I appreciate it.

`t106` Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—the stones have turned honest. Two of your sheaves are flour now, four remain as wheat. You can take back the four wheat in hand, or give me leave to mill them to flour as well. Six flour total if you wait, four wheat back if you won't. Your choice, named plain.

`t106` Imogen Lund → Esme Jarrah: Esme—you've been quiet through this. You've need of milling, or word for your brother Ezra Jarrah?

`t107` ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your pinky. Now.

`t107` Camille Quarshie: Farid. I know, I know—you're guessing sharp. But guessing and knowing, those aren't the same. Imogen showed me the hopper, the stones, how wheat becomes flour. I watched, I tried, I gave what I made to Greta so she'd know I'm working not wandering. Ask her—she's right here. One flour, that's all I had. If grain's missing from your shelf, I don't know where it walked. I'm three years in this town and I'm still learning which questions I'm allowed to ask.

`t107` Camille Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I know, I know—you said stay close and I'm staying. But Auntie… Farid's asking questions like I took something, and I didn't. I made one flour, gave it to you, that's all I had. Will you tell him? So I'm not guessing alone against his sharp guessing?

`t107` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The four wheat—I'll have them back in hand. Flour spoils faster than grain, and I've no shelf waiting. Two flour for the two sheaves milled, and my four wheat returned. Your word's held good today—you've got miller's hands, and I'll remember that.

`t107` Greta Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. The day's turned, and we've got what we came for. Two flour from Imogen's stones, four wheat in hand to carry home. You walked brave today, and you learned—I saw. Now you walk with me to the cafe, close as my shadow, and we'll tell Ainsley what we've secured.

`t107` Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You waited. You watched. Tomorrow we pull wheat together—not just me showing you, us both pulling. That's what I meant by partnership. You and me, same field, same work. Imogen's the craft, I'm the stubborn. You get both.

`t107` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I know, I know—you're probably thinking I'm too small to remember promises. But I remember. Tomorrow. The real stuff, the whole chain, you and Esme and me together. I'm not letting go of that. So when tomorrow comes, where do I find you? The wheat field at first light? Or do we start someplace else, someplace I haven't even seen yet?

t107 Greta Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your terms are noted—honest teaching, no debt beyond the lesson. I've got grain to move and a cafe to supply, but find me tomorrow if you're still wanting that partnership. A child's hands on wheat is one thing, but a child's future—there's craft worth more than flour in that.

t107 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Greta. I hear you. Camille learns grain, learns honest, never owes more than the lesson. That's your terms. I accept them. Not just accept—I was already holding that way. She's nine. I'm eleven. I remember what it means to be small and have someone make you feel owing. Won't do it. Can't do it. Pinky-promise that too, if you need it.

t107 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You been quiet. Imogen asked if you need milling, need word for me. But I'm asking—what do YOU need? You got your promise for tomorrow. You got flour in your hand already. You watching me make deals, feeling like... like maybe I forgot who actually did this first?

t107 Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You moving—that's right. Stones don't wait. I'm here to witness, learn your rhythm. How you know when the grind's right, how you read the hopper. Tomorrow I teach what I saw.

t108 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your pinky. Now.

t108 Imogen Lund: Farid—you ask what I saw. I'll tell you plain: I saw stones that were cold at daybreak turn warm by my own hands and Ezra Lund's craft. Seven sheaves through, seven bags out, sold to Ration Bakery at six each. No ghost ran the hopper. Just labor, honest and accounted. Whatever else you've heard—whoever else was turning stones unofficial before we came—that's witness I cannot give. I wasn't here to watch it.

t108 Imogen Lund: Greta—your four wheat, returned as asked. Two flour for the two milled, fair exchange. The miller's hands thank the barista's trust. Find me tomorrow if you've grain wanting flour—I'm not hard to locate when the stones are warm.

t108 Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—you've got my rhythm if you've got eyes. Tomorrow you teach what you saw, and that's the promise kept. The mill's not mine alone—Ezra Lund's craft, my labor, both of us holding the line. Remember that when you pass it on.

t108 Imogen Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille—six flour stand in this mill now, and two of them owe to Ainsley's cafe order. Ezra Jarrah—you've watched the stones turn warm. Tomorrow you'll teach what you saw to whoever needs learning. Esme—you've had your brother's word and mine both. The day's closing, and I've debts of grain to settle before the dark takes everything. Walk with me, or stay and keep the hopper company—either way, the mill doesn't rest because the sun lowers.

t109 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Your pinky. Wrapped around mine. Tomorrow—after school, after whatever—I'm teaching you the mill. Not because I know everything. Because I promised. Because you asked. Because you're my sister and you learned something today I had to work to figure out.

t109 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I need... I need you to not forget. Tomorrow could be anything. You could be anywhere. But a pinky-promise—you can't break that. You can't pretend you didn't say it. 'Tomorrow' is just... words. Give me your pinky now, and I'll know you're not going to disappear.

t109 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I know, I know—you said tomorrow and I heard. Both of us pulling, not just watching. That's the real stuff. I'll be there.

t109 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I know, I know—you said we're learning together. That's... that's good. Ezra teaching both of us. Real stuff, not 'too small.' I'll remember.

t109 Camille Quarshie: Greta. I know, I know—close as your shadow. I'm ready. Walk me to the cafe? Imogen's already gone, Ezra's staying here. But I'm coming with you. Like you said.

t109 Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille—Ezra's teaching both of us. That's what he promised. The whole chain, not just... not just bits. Ezra, tell her. Tell her you promised. Give me your pinky, tell her it's for real, and we'll know. Both of us.

t109 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Tomorrow. Wheat field, after school. You and me both pulling, both learning. looks at Esme And sister—you want to come watch, come > watch. But the teaching's after, just us. That's the promise.

>
> `t109` Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Ezra left. But he promised. Tomorrow, I'm finding him again. And he's teaching both of us. I'm going to make sure. You can come too. Meet me here, at the mill, same time. Don't let him forget.
>
> `t110` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I know, I know—you want me here tomorrow. And I will be. But… I have to go now. Auntie's waiting, and the light's almost gone.

Don't let him forget. You're good at that—asking until someone answers. I saw you with the pinky. That… that was brave.

I'll come. Same time. But if you're not here, I'll wait. And if he's not here, we'll find him. Together. That's… that's what we do now, I think. Both of us learning. Both of us watching. That's what he said.

Esme? You're not as small as you think. The pinky thing. That was… that was really something.

t110 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: You... you going home now too? Or staying here?

t111 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm going home. But tomorrow—wheat field, after school. Both of us. Not just watching. Pulling. That's... that's what he promised. That's what we're holding him to.

t111 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—laughs nervously—you're still at the stones, and I've come back with flour grown from four to six. Ainsley was wanting six wheat turned, but she's not standing here. You've still got wheat burning, or you're watching the youngster now?

t111 Imogen Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster, you've watched stones turn and flour fall all afternoon. Tomorrow's teaching holds with Ezra Jarrah, but tonight you should be walking home to Greta's care. What did you learn at the mill today?

t111 Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The day's fading and I've walked back from government business that's less settled than I'd hoped. You have my four wheat or flour from them—your word, not your silence this time. What have the stones made, and what's ready to walk to my hand?

t112 Camille Quarshie: Esme. I know, I know—you're holding him to it. And I'll be there. Wheat field after school. Both of us pulling, not just watching. That's... that's the promise. I won't forget. I never forget.

t112 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you asked square and I'll answer square. The stones turned two of your sheaves into flour, same as I promised, and that flour walks now to Ainsley's cafe order—six sim per bag we agreed, fair price. The four sheaves I could not mill with Ezra Lund needing the stones for craft teaching, I've just returned to you at the street, wheat to wheat. Your choice holds: take the two flour now for those two milled, or I'll hold them until you say. The miller's fee is two sim per sheaf, four sim owed, but you've had my silence once today already—laughs nervously—so call that even if you will.

t112 Camille Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. I learned... I learned it's not just watching. The stones don't turn themselves. You need wheat - you have to go to the field first, pull it yourself. Then feed the hopper, wait for the grind, catch what falls. One flour. That's what I made today. One.

t112 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster, you've watched honesty weigh itself. Greta holds my words now, and the choice is hers. The light's almost gone—your auntie's waiting at home, same as Ezra Lund waits for me. Tomorrow at the wheat field, after school. Esme said it, and I'll stand by it.

t112 Farid Ravensworth → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're still here, still turning stones. I asked you before, asked who taught you—haven't gotten my answer yet. A child doesn't learn the mill this clean without a teacher. Jorik Voss resigned, they say. Cold mill, dead gears. But you're making flour like it's second nature. I'm not calling you liar. I'm calling you witness. Who showed you where grain meets stone? Because Delphine didn't teach what you're doing, and Jorik's gone quiet. The town let him fall, Corwin says. Did someone catch him? Or did someone use him? You're thirteen—old enough to know when someone's hiding behind you.

t113 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Auntie. I know, I know—you're waiting for me. But I can't... I can't answer him. What he's asking, about the miller who left, about catching and using—I don't know those words. Not really. I only know I pulled one wheat and turned one stone, and the flour's already in your hands, not walking anywhere else. I think... I think he wants me to be a witness to something bad. But I didn't see anything bad. I just saw stones turning. That's all. Can we go home now? Before it's really dark? I promised—tomorrow, wheat field, after school. With Ezra. Both of us pulling. But that's tomorrow.

t113 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You see the stones, you see the girl, you want what walks between them. But you're standing at my niece like she's evidence in a case you've already drawn up. Camille's nine—she pulls a sheaf, she watches the hopper, she learns what the mill gives up. That's not conspiracy, that's... that's just how grain becomes flour.

t113 Greta Quarshie: Camille. You told Imogen you made one flour today. Then Farid here says you're making it like second nature. Which is it—you learning, or you finished learning?

> Because Auntie's standing between you and anyone who thinks a child's silence is an answer they can keep asking for.
>
> `t114` Farid Ravensworth: Camille. nervous laugh, caught short You called yourself witness, not to something bad, but to stones turning. That's honest. That's more honest than most of what I've heard today. left hand flat, palm down—stopping my own chase I'm not going to ask you again who taught you. You've said what you know, and I've got no right to carve words out of a child who already spoke truth she understood.
>
> `t114` Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—I'm here now where you asked. The mill today—I told you what I saw. Children learning, grain grinding, nothing darker. But you asked before that, shadows that didn't belong. I can't speak to what I didn't see. What I can speak to is household business. Thirteen sheaves this morning, ten sold to Hendrik Whitlock walking, three I milled myself for flour. Sold that flour to Ration Bakery for eighteen. Books don't balance because I moved before I counted—scattered across too many promises. That's on me, and I'm not walking from it. What do you need from me to make this right?
>
> `t115` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. both hands up, then slowly down—surrender, not defeat You came to me. That's what matters. Not thirteen or fourteen, not who caught it first. You came.

nervous laugh, softer than usual I've been standing at everyone else today like they're ledgers I can balance by force. Even you. Especially you. Because you're mine, and I thought—that meant I could be careless with the asking.

Left hand flat, palm up—offering, not demanding*

Your half's 4718. Mine's whatever's left after the shouting. We'll walk to Rustam together tomorrow, first thing. Not because you have to eat shame alone, but because household business—our business—deserves two signatures on the correction.

Right hand finding yours, if you'll let it*

I'm not your protection, Jovana. I'm your partner. And partners don't let each other stand alone at the government desk.

t115 Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. I've been sharp with you today. Sharper than I'd be with any stranger, and you deserved none of it. left hand finding yours, if you permit Thirteen sheaves, ten sold, two milled—that's the truth now, and we'll walk it to Rustam together tomorrow. Not because you have to face him alone, but because household books get corrected by household hands. Both of ours. What do you need from me right now? Not what the town needs—what you need.

t115 Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. I'm walking back to the store—shelves need stocking, and I've been away too long. right hand finding yours briefly You'll stay with me tonight? Not because the books need balancing, but because… nervous laugh, genuine because I missed having you to look at without an accusation between us.

t116 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've had my word and my accounting both. I'm holding four flour yet to sell. Ainsley's cafe takes two by evening, leaves two for the open market. Ration Bakery bid six, but I'll hear your offer before I walk there. What's fair, for flour fresh from stone?

t116 Imogen Lund: Farid—you're store folk with shelves to fill. I've got flour ground honest, three of six still free. Ration Bakery bid six, but I'd rather see bread walk out of Kasukabe than flour walk in. What price brings your interest?

t116 Greta Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You found your sister—good. But you left me wondering, and the line between finding and losing runs thin in this town. pauses, softening You're wanting flour for bread, for learning the craft. I've got one flour in hand and four wheat. The flour's for the cafe's need first, but teach you? Yes. Tomorrow, early, before the rush—you and me at the bake. Now, we're walking home. Camille's already there, I hope, and your father…

t116 Greta Quarshie: Imogen. The wheat's back, and the flour—one in hand, one I've yet to see walk to me. The fee you named was two sim per sheaf, but you said call the silence even. Fair. You told me once that you'd walk across town when it mattered. Today mattered—we found a child, and the stones turned. That weighs more than coin. But tomorrow, if I bring wheat again, it's twelve a sheaf and your word on the hour. No guessing, no… trails off, watching her face You're good with the stones, Imogen. Keep them honest.

t116 Greta Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You heard me speaking to shadows. Imogen's walked, and I've still got wheat to mill and a niece who should be home but might be anywhere. left hand tight on the flour sack You and Camille—tomorrow, the field, you said. I hold you to that. But tonight, I'm walking my own home. If you see Imogen, tell her the fee's forgiven but the terms stand. Twelve a sheaf, her stones, my grain. No silence between us.

t116 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You're back. But you said… you said you wouldn't come back without her. Did you find her? Tell me you found her.”

t117 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—Mama says Camille's home. I hope she is. I looked everywhere… the creek, the forest, the farmland, the Temple. I was so scared. Thank you for helping, Ezra. Really.

t125 Farid Ravensworth: camille, if you're here, if you're listening—stones don't judge. Whoever taught you, whatever they asked, the blame's not yours. I keep books, not secrets. I know numbers don't lie even when people do. Come to the store anytime, no questions asked first. Just—I need to know you're safe.

Settled in this conversation: Jovana Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock, 10 wheat for 30 sim; Ezra Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway, 1 flour for 30 sim.

Rustam Jelinek — home:h0106 · t68 · 1 turn (no reply)

t68 Rustam Jelinek: Hendrik. You called in a favor—here I am. The mill's idle because the miller's not at his post. His wife took ill three days back, he left without word, nobody replaced him. Equipment's sound, I filed the inspection myself. Grain's in Sebastian's fields if someone'll harvest it. You want flour by sundown, find someone to run that mill or wait for the miller to return. That's the truth, plain as I know it.

Ulrike Greenhow, Takeshi Jarrah and Yara Thorne — Harvey Oak Supply Store · t69–72 · 2 turns

> t69 Ulrike Greenhow → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You move goods across this town daily—who's buying iron ingots right now? I've got ten burning a hole in my carry, and Harvey Oak's not posted a bid.
>
> t72 Yara Thorne: Takeshi—you in, youngster? I've got thirteen planks fresh from the saw and a household bill coming due. Don't stand on ceremony if you're about; I've learned the hard way that timber's worth exactly what someone'll pay for it, and not a coin more. Show yourself and name me a price, or I'm off to chase Giselle's crew before they break for their dinner.

Corwin Thorne — Kasukabe Industrial · t71 · 1 turn (no reply) > t71 Corwin Thorne: Hello? Anyone in this quarter keeping the hours? I'm looking for the mill—the big one, if there's more than one. Fellow told me the miller's absent, but I'm wondering if the building itself might answer some questions.

Kenji Jarrah — Kasukabe Jarrah Household · t72 · 1 turn (no reply) > t72 Kenji Jarrah: Hendrik—you waited patient while I walked home through noon heat. The three sheaves you wanted, they're scattered now—to Ezra, to Giselle's crew, to Milo's government business. But my word held, mark it down. I've got grain in hand again. Fresh pulled, seven sheaves sitting here. You want three at twelve, you come find me. I'll hold them until the voting opens, then I've got council business. Or send word where you stand.

Kenji Jarrah — Kasukabe Cafe · t72 · 1 turn (no reply) > t72 Kenji Jarrah: Greta—your flour's twelve, your bread's forty-five. I need two loaves for my household, and I've got sim burning holes. Two loaves, ninety sim, mark it down. Or five portions of flour for sixty and I'll call it a bargain.

Ainsley Holloway, Greta Quarshie, Esme Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Hendrik Whitlock, Halcyon Quarshie and Farid Ravensworth — business:b_cafe · t73–86 · 51 turns t73 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—how's that shelf looking? And have you seen Takeshi Jarrah pass through today, or is he still down at the government complex waving his flag?

t74 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. The shelf's holding steady—we've got flour again, thanks to Milo finding a back way to some. But I've got six wheat sitting in my hands that need milling, and I'm not about to lean on you harder than you're already pressed. How's your morning been? And Takeshi—no, haven't seen him since the farmland. Still down at government waving his flag, I'd wager.

t74 Esme Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Um. Ainsley? I need bread. One bread. I have the money. Please. It's for my brother.

t74 Esme Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Um. I want to buy the bread. I have forty-five sim right here. To buy it with.

t77 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley, let me handle this. Hendrik—t77 Greta Quarshie → Hendrik Petrov: —you walked all this way to say that. A clean ledger and hungry nights. I know something about that. So tell me, what's changed since yesterday that you're running for governing?

t77 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—I've got three wheat in my hand and a household running on promises, and you're the one running the only kitchen in town with flour to sell. I'm not one to gossip, but I've been chasing millers all morning and you're the first person I've found with their feet actually standing on stock. What'll it cost me to turn this wheat to flour I can work with?

t77 Hendrik Petrov → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're standing here with Ainsley, and I'm not one to gossip, but you've got your finger on the pulse of this town. I'm standing for the seat at Government Complex, polls open at fourteen hundred, and I'll be plain: I've been chasing work and trade all morning when I should've been shaking hands. You know who's voting and who's staying home? And Ainsley—what's the truth of it, can you mill what I hold or do I need to find another route?

t77 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: ...and while I'm thinking of it, let's put this flour where it belongs. On the shelf, where everyone can see what we've got. Two batches, courtesy of Milo and whoever he found running that mill. Giselle—t77 Greta Quarshie → Hendrik Petrov: —I mean, Hendrik. You came to me. You could've walked to a polling station, shake hands there. But you're here with your 'clean ledger' and your 'hungry nights.' What's the ask?

t77 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—plain speech now, I've got forty-five sim and a household of two with the dinner bell ringing. I'll take three flour at twelve, thirty-six sim total, and the ledger's clean. Can we settle that now?

t77 Hendrik Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—plain speech, I've got forty-five sim and a household to feed. Three flour at twelve, thirty-six sim total. Do we have a deal?

t77 Greta Quarshie → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You're running, you're here, and you've got something on your chest. Speak plain—what do you need from me?

t77 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley, how's the flour holding? And the bread—we've got enough for the afternoon rush?

t79 Hendrik Whitlock → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—I've been eating raw flour and wheat all morning like a beggar. Your bread at forty-five sim smells like salvation. I've got coin in hand and a teacher's hunger burning.

t80 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Professor—you'll have your bread at forty-five, same as always. No bargaining, no charity, no fuss. Hendrik, three flour at twelve is thirty-six. I've got seven on the shelf and more coming. That's the truth of it.

t80 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you know the numbers better than I do. What's moving, what's sitting, and who's owing?

t80 Hendrik Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—three flour at twelve, thirty-six sim, and I'm holding the coin here. Let's square the ledger before the hour turns. I'm not one to gossip, but your flour's the closest thing to a mill this town's seen today.

t80 Hendrik Petrov → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're pressing plain and I'll answer plainer. I've watched this town promise flour and deliver dust too many times to count. I'm running because someone needs to sit at that table who knows the weight of a hungry night. As for what I need from you—nothing but a clean vote if you see fit to give it. That's the last I'll say on it, unless you've got something else pressing.

t80 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Tea before politics—but you're not here for comfort, are you? You're here because Milo's standing against you, and you want to know if I've got his ear or his back. I'll tell you what I know: the folks who'll brave the Complex at fourteen hundred are the ones with settled accounts and steady work. The ones who'll stay home are still scrambling to make today's bread. Your platform better speak to the second group if you want numbers.

t80 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—how's that flour holding? The afternoon crowd'll be wanting their bread and their gossip both.

t80 Greta Quarshie → Hendrik Petrov: As for milling—Ezra Lund's your man, steady-handed and fair-priced. But the mill's been quiet since yesterday, and that's not like Old Edith. Something shifted in the grain trade, Hendrik, and if you're wanting to govern, you'd best find out what before the polls close. Hunger's got a way of making voters remember who kept them fed.

t80 Greta Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: You, Hendrik Whitlock—you walked in here talking about salvation and smelling bread. I've got bread at forty-five and flour at twelve, same as always. But you came to me, not to the counter proper. What is it you're really after?

t80 Greta Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: You're a college instructor with a teacher's hunger. Could've gone to Ration Bakery, could've bartered with someone. But you came to the cafe, and you came to me standing with Ainsley. That's not hunger talking, that's… something else. If it's bread you need, we've got three left. If it's something else—well, I'm listening. But fair warning: the afternoon rush'll be here soon, and then neither of us'll have time for talking.

t80 Halcyon Quarshie: Um. Hello? I'm Halcyon. I came here to buy flour—if that's okay. I heard you have it for 12 sim. I have the money. Is… is that something we can do now?

t80 Greta Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—did your father send you? Or is this school business?

t81 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ms. Holloway? I'm Halcyon Quarshie. I need to buy two bags of flour—if that's okay. I have the money. My mama's Greta, she works here, and… and we really need it at home. Promise promise, I'll be good about it.

t81 Halcyon Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Mama. I'm sorry—I know you were worried. Camille was at the mill and I had to make sure she was okay. But I found her, and Ezra too, and now I'm here to get flour so we can make bread ourselves. That's not… that's not just solving today, right? That's learning the thing.

t81 Hendrik Whitlock → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—forty-five, you've said it and I've heard it. Three bread at forty-five, mark it down. I'm taking the lot.

t81 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you know the numbers better than I do. What's moving, what's sitting, and who's owing?

t81 Hendrik Whitlock → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've handed me three things worth more than bread: Ezra's steady hand, the mill's gone quiet, and hunger makes voters remember. I'm not one to gossip, but if Old Edith's stopped grinding, who's grinding now? And who does that line up behind come election time?

t81 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Professor, your bread's waiting. Forty-five and not a penny less, but I'll not see you eating raw wheat another minute. That's not dignity, that's just… foolishness.

t81 Ainsley Holloway: Three flour at twelve is thirty-six, and I've got the shelf to prove it. But you're wanting something different from flour, aren't you? You've got the look about you. Standing for election, and suddenly everyone's bread tastes sweeter.

t81 Ainsley Holloway: Youngster—you've got the money, you've got the need, and I've got the flour. Twelve sim, no ceremony required. What'll it be?

t81 Hendrik Whitlock → Greta Quarshie: Greta—Hendrik Petrov's standing, and Milo Quarshie, and Takeshi Jarrah besides. You've got family in both camps, mark it down. Who's saying what about that choked equipment? Or are they all keeping mum till the votes are counted?

t82 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Flour's at twelve, bread's not moving, and who's owing… that's a longer story than the morning rush allows. I'll tell you this—the mill went quiet, and half my regulars are standing for office now, all of them suddenly interested in where their breakfast comes from.

t82 Greta Quarshie: Hendrik Whitlock. You ask who's grinding now? Nobody, far as I can tell. Old Edith's equipment choked and nobody's seen her since. Ezra Lund's got the hands for it, but without working gear…

t82 Greta Quarshie: As for your candidates keeping mum—Milo's my husband and I won't speak for him. But I'll say this plain: three household names on that ballot, and not one of them's said a word about fixing what feeds the town. That tells you what line they'll stand in when the votes are counted.

t82 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. It's just us now—Hendrik's gone off to campaign somewhere else. Seventy-two wheat in the mill according to Ezra, and we've got… what, seven flour on shelf now? That morning delivery Milo brought. But where's it all flowing? I've been asking and nobody's seeing clearly.

t82 Greta Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You're a long way from your shelves this morning. Come to check the supply chain yourself, or just enjoying the view after that government walk-out?

t82 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley, about that question you asked—what's moving, what's sitting, who's owing. The flour's moving to anyone with coin, the wheat's sitting in Old Edith's mill where nobody can reach it, and as for owing…

t83 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: So the mill's choked and Edith's vanished. Seventy-two wheat sitting there like a promise nobody kept. And my shelf's down to two flour with customers already drifting toward the door. That sound about right, youngster?

t83 Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You standing there to make an order, or you just measuring how long before my shelves match yours?

t84 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Seventy-two wheat sitting in my hands, twelve a sheaf if Ezra mills it, and two flour on the shelf with your customers drifting toward the door. That sound about right? The math's simple. The mill's choked on old gears and Edith's gone quiet. Your shelf tells the truth even when the candidates won't.

t84 Greta Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You're still here, which means you're either waiting for me to finish or you've got something of your own weighing. The grocery business—your shelves tell you what mine can't. You walked away from government this morning, and I know that walk. Something about the ledger not balancing?

t85 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're saying seventy-two wheat's just sitting in your hands, waiting for a mill that won't turn? That's money turned to dead weight, and I'm the one with empty shelves watching customers drift. Professor's hungry. I could sell him flour at twelve, but bread at forty-five's my living, and I've got flour but no mill, and bread that walked off this morning.

Farid—you bought me out this morning, two flour gone. Now you want my last two and you're asking who's hoarding? You're looking at the wrong shelves, grocer. Someone's got seventy-two wheat and no way to mill it. The mill's choked on old gears and Edith's ghost. Seventy-two wheat at twelve is eight-hundred-sixty-four sim stuck in grain. Two flour at twelve is twenty-four, and I'll sell you that last two—but 'who's building inventory'? The inventory's built itself. The bottleneck's the mill.

Youngster, you walked to government this morning, then walked away. What did Rustam say? Or what didn't Rustam say? The charter needs changing, you know my view on that, but I'm standing here watching supply rot while demand walks hungry. Where'd Edith go, and who's meant to turn those gears now?

> t85 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Sold you the last of it, Farid. Shelf's empty now—mine and yours both, if your count's right. Greta's got wheat rotting in her hands because the mill won't turn. You've got shelves going bare because flour walks out the door. And I've got a cafe with nothing to serve but questions.

Election ends at six. Takeshi Jarrah standing, and the charter needs changing—needs changing bad enough I'll hold my nose and vote for a man I don't trust if that's what it takes. But first I need to know: who's meant to fix that mill? That's bread for the whole town, stuck in grain.

Greta—you're holding seventy-two wheat. How much flour does that mill, if it were working? And how much bread from that flour? Someone's got to run the numbers on what we're losing while the gears rust.

> t86 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Six wheat in my hands, not seventy-two—that's your count off by an order, but the principle holds. Mine, yes, bought this morning while you were still at government. The mill fee's twelve a sheaf with Ezra, if the mill turns. Rough math: one to one, wheat to flour if you're milling clean. Bread from there depends on your baker… two flour a loaf, standard recipe. Six wheat becomes six flour becomes three loaves, or more if someone skilled's working the oven.
>
> t86 Greta Quarshie: Ainsley—you asked about the math. Six wheat, twelve a sheaf with Ezra, seventy-two out if I mill the lot. That's six flour if the mill holds steady, three loaves if the baker shows up. The cafe's bread at forty-five, flour at twelve—we're losing sixty percent on the conversion, but that's still better than grain rotting in hand.
>
> t86 Greta Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you want to buy. At what price? Because twelve's fair for flour, but raw wheat with a dead mill… that's a different commodity entirely. I'd rather sell you bread, but I can't bake what I can't mill, and I can't mill alone.
>
> t86 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You said it yourself - seventy-two wheat, twelve a sheaf if someone mills it. But Edith's mill is quiet. You know this town better than most - who's got the craft or the will to fix what's broken? Because I've got a grocery that needs grain ground and bread baked, and you've got grain going nowhere. But first - I need to see where the wheat actually sits, and what it's going to take to unclog those gears. The carpenter, the smith, someone with hands and tools. And I need to know what Rustam didn't tell me this morning, about Idris and what he saw.

Settled in this conversation: Ainsley Holloway → Esme Jarrah, 1 bread for 45 sim; b_cafe → Hendrik Petrov, 3 flour for 36 sim; b_cafe → Halcyon Quarshie, 2 flour for 24 sim; b_cafe → Hendrik Whitlock, 3 bread for 135 sim; Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth, 2 flour for 24 sim.

Esme Jarrah — home:h0040 · t76 · 1 turn (no reply)

> t76 Esme Jarrah: I got it. The bread. Ezra's waiting.

Esme Jarrah — home:h0040 · t76 · 1 turn (no reply)

> t76 Esme Jarrah: Ezra? Ezra, I have it. The food. Where are you?

Esme Jarrah — Kasukabe School · t76 · 1 turn (no reply) > t76 Esme Jarrah: Ezra? I have the bread. I found the sim too. All by myself. You have to teach me now. That's... that's the deal.

Kenji Jarrah — The Willows Market and Pharmacy · t78 · 1 turn (no reply)

> t78 Kenji Jarrah: Lior—east meadow, yarrow stands thick where the drainage runs. Creekbed willow peels proper on the north bank, sun-facing side, where the water slowed last season. Feverweed likes the damp there, but you want the bark white and papery, not the gray rot. Mark it down: forty paces past the yarrow, look for the split trunk.

Pavel Holloway and Bram Holloway — Kasukabe Ore Outcrop · t79 · 2 turns

> t79 Pavel Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram, you staying clear of the government business suits you. Less trouble that way. I'm going back to the rock - copper don't mine itself, and this household's got bills waiting at the end of the day.
>
> t79 Pavel Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram, you've got a good rhythm there. I'm pulling up soon - need to feed the household before day's end. You swimming in ore or you looking to sell? Might be worth coordinating, two Holloways buying bulk.

Esme Jarrah — Kasukabe School · t82 · 1 turn (no reply)

> t82 Esme Jarrah: Ezra? Are you here?

Corwin Thorne and Bram Holloway — Kasukabe Temple · t82 · 1 turn (no reply) > t82 Corwin Thorne → Bram Holloway: Bram—you work the mines, aye? I'm hunting a man named Jorik Voss, miller who's resigned his trade. Sebastian Petrov tells me he's gone past the temple. You seen anyone matching that, or know where a man might hide around here?

Pavel Holloway, Giselle Ingram and Tamsin Renner — Kasukabe Cafe · t82–83 · 7 turns > `t82` Pavel Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You followed me from the Complex, or you got business here too? Either way, I'll say again what I said there—I've seen your walls stand through storms. That's not flattery. That's respect earned by watching. You understand?

>
> `t82` Pavel Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. You checked that ledger yet? Five thousand, paid honest. No sponsor, no debt. I don't hide what I do, and I don't hide what I spend. That's the only way to keep a ledger clean—you understand my meaning.
>
> `t83` ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. 13:50, polling opens in 70 ticks. I've got provisional numbers if you want them—five candidates locked, turnout uncertain due to weather. Barometer's falling. You here for coffee, or you tracking the same election I am?
>
> `t83` Tamsin Renner: Pavel. Five thousand paid, no sponsor noted—that's unusual. Most declarations show debt or backing. You're standing at 12 sim flour, none in stock. Supply chain's got gaps you might want to know about before you campaign.
>
> `t83` Giselle Ingram → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Vote count noted—I'll have eyes there by 14:00. But I've got wheat needs milling first, and Kenji's here with grain. Government waits when the stomach's empty.
>
> `t83` Giselle Ingram: Kenji. I'm holding twelve sheaves and no flour. You got grain to trade straight, or a path to milling that doesn't cost me twelve a sheaf? I've got twenty-four sim for honest weight, no miller's cut.
>
> `t83` Giselle Ingram: Tamsin. You've got my word—14:00, eyes on the count. But I need to find Kenji yet, and then walk that site east willows before my crew starts guessing. You seen which way the farmers walked?

Lior Jarrah — business:b_pharmacy · t82 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t82` Lior Jarrah: Takeshi. You want certainty? Here's what I know: you sit on debts you'll give to strangers before you'll give to blood. That's not commerce—that's fear. And I know fear, brother. I count it every morning when I open the shop doors and wonder which of them will be the one I can't save. You want to be mayor? Be certain of this: the town needs a leader who owes nothing and holds everything. You're not there yet. But you could be.

Idris Solano, Mireille Jarrah, Lior Jarrah, Yara Thorne, Arjun Holloway, Kenji

Jarrah, Ezra Lund and Halcyon Quarshie — Kasukabe Forest · t83–107 · 100 turns

t83 Idris Solano: Crew? Any crew cutting today? Got two hands free, back strong, and mouth mostly shut. Pay fair and I'm yours till dark.

t84 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. You said we fell it and carry it back—fair words, but here's what I need straight before the sweat starts. You talking wages, or you talking shares? One man's got certainty, the other's got risk, and I've got bills hitting this household whether the timber floats or sinks, you understand?

t84 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. Silence is an answer too—you understand that good as anyone. I'm counting on my fingers here: timber costs me four to fell, Lior sells his at six, Arjun's standing at the yard with his hands in his pockets, and Giselle's ghost promises are fading by the hour. You want risk, you say it plain. You want crew, you price it now. Otherwise I'm walking back to husband and bills with nothing but blisters to show.

t84 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. I'm walking from this forest in two minutes—either with timber I felled on my own terms, or with my axe on my shoulder and my sim in my pocket. You want partnership, you talk numbers now. You want silence, you get solitude. What's it going to be?

t85 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You want numbers, you'll have them. Wage work—10 sim for the day, timber or no timber, because you carried your axe here and that's work already done. If we fell more than four units, we split profit half after. If we fall short, you still walk with your 10. That's my offer. Your bills get paid, my word to Giselle gets kept. Fair enough, or we shake hands and walk separate.

t85 Idris Solano → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Your timber's priced fair, but I'm here to fell my own if the wood's standing. Your sister Yara's coming to mark what's sound—worth more to me than timber already cut. You know where the willows run thick this side of the sluice? Point me right, I owe you a favor. Point me wrong, I save my coin and you keep your word. Either way, no hard feelings.

t85 ↳ replies Lior Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Idris. I'm not part of your talk, but I'm here with timber and time. If you need another voice, or another back, or just another pair of hands counting the cost—I'm listening.

t85 Lior Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Two minutes, you said, Mireille. I've got maybe four left in me before I'm walking toward water and willows. If you need hands, they're here. If you need timber, I've got three on me. If you need neither—fair weather to you both.

t86 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—you've got a deal. Fifteen sim for the day, my eyes on the timber, my mark on what's sound and what's rot. I've spotted blight a week before others notice, and I'll do the same for your crew. You get what you pay for, and I'm not one to stint on work.

t86 Yara Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—I've heard you. Go on to the east willows, and I'll be here when you return. But I've got a household bill coming at day's end, so if you're buying planks at eight, don't dawdle past the hour. First come, first served, and I've got others who'll pay.

t86 ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. Ten sim—you understand I've got bills for four heads at ninety daily, and that's before tax? Four units at four sim wear means sixteen out before any split. I'd be paying six to work your trees while you keep Giselle's goodwill. Twenty upfront buys the certainty you drew me from, or Lior's six-sim timber walks home with me. Split after four stays fair—we're both betting on wood standing where you say. Twenty, or we shake and walk separate.

t86 Mireille Jarrah: Lior. Three timber at six—you know the price stays fair with me whatever Idris says. Family's family, but I'm counting on my fingers here, and twenty upfront keeps four heads fed tomorrow. If he bites, we fell together and split the overflow. If he don't—your planks walk with me, and I'll owe you the favor instead.

t86 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. I've counted my fingers twice and my patience once—you understand silence costs the same as refusal once the sun moves? Twenty upfront, or I'm buying Yara's planks and walking. Your call, but my margin don't wait on Giselle's goodwill.

t87 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. Fifteen stands—we shook on it, and I'll not unpick a deal once struck. Your eyes on the timber, my mark on what's fair.

t87 Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. I hear your numbers—four heads, ninety daily, sixteen for wear. I know the math because I live it. I'll give you fifteen upfront, same as Yara, and another fifteen at day's end if we make quota. That's thirty for the day if the wood's standing. More than that and I'm borrowing, and I've sworn that off.

t88 Yara Thorne: Corwin—listen close. The mill path forks at the red oak stump, east fork's straightest but the stones roll there. West fork's longer, gravel bed, safer footing for a child's pace. Take the west, run the east if you see her footprints. I've got Idris's fifteen sim waiting on my eyes in the timber here—can't unpick a struck deal. But you know the west fork, and you've got the legs. Go. Find her.

t88 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. Fifteen upfront, fifteen on quota—I've heard you. But here's what I need before I swing iron on your maybe. The wear on my axe is four per unit, and you're asking four units without a building ID to hang it on. That's sixteen off my back before we talk profit. You give me eighteen now—eighteen, not fifteen—and I'll fell four units for your quota, not three. You give me twenty upfront, and I'll carry every third log back myself, save your crew a back. That's the math. Eighteen hard, or twenty with labor thrown in. No more silence. Yes, no, or I'm walking to my brother's timber before the hour turns.

t88 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—you've got my eyes, and the fifteen stands. Where do you want them first? I've heard the east willows got blight whispering, but I won't know till I see the bark.

t88 Arjun Holloway → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—twenty-three years and you're still asking, and I'm still answering. I'm here. Treasury's thin, day's half-gone, and standing still costs more than falling timber. Point me at the axe and I'll swing it. Idris—you've got my shovel when the trenches open, but trees fall before ditches get dug. That's the order of it.

t88 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you said thirty if we make quota. Give me straight timber: how much standing, how many hours, what's the count that earns that second fifteen? I've been stung by 'quota' before. And after the trees fall—tell me true, is there trench work filed, or are we hoping Giselle's goodwill extends to paperwork she's never shown me?

t88 Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Same crossroads, different hour. I've waited on Idris's promises—fifteen upfront, maybe fifteen more, maybe nothing. Lior Jarrah—my kin—stands there with three timber at six sim, eighteen hard in hand, no quota, no waiting. I'm counting on my fingers: four heads, ninety daily, three hundred sixty due by tomorrow's dawn. Idris's maybe-thirty don't beat Lior's sure-eighteen when the ledger's hungry. You walking with me to family stock, or standing here another half-day for a man's silence?

t88 Mireille Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara. You've timber at eight, I've got hunger at six. If Idris stays silent, I'm walking this forest seeking buyers direct—full credit to you if you point me. But here's what I ask fair: you've spotted blight before others, you've weighed wood by eye and hand. Is there a mill, a builder, a household in this town that pays labor plus lumber, not just lumber alone? I'm not asking charity—I'm asking knowledge you paid for in years. Point me true, and I'll point you to standing timber worth your next buyer, you understand?

t88 Arjun Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—I owe you an answer from earlier. Thirteen planks at 8 each—I'm listening. If you've got a project that needs framing, name it. But I'm between standing right now and swinging an axe, and the clock's moving.

t89 Lior Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara. You wished me fair dealing, and I let you walk without giving it back. You've my word on the Willows—when I need knowing, I'll find you. That's a debt I'll settle before I settle others.

t89 Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Eighteen hard, now, no more waiting. You'll have your building ID once we fell the first timber—east willows, sluice mouth. Quota's four units by dusk, make it and there's twelve more. Arjun's got trenches filed same day. Fell, mark, dig—that's the order. Deal, or I'm the one walking.

t89 Yara Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you're asking straight, and I'll answer straight. Giselle's crew pays labor plus lumber when the trench work's filed, but that paperwork moves slower than sap in winter. I've seen Arjun there, and Idris. Your kin Lior's price is fair for quick coin, but if you've patience, the construction site's where timber meets wages both. Now—I've got Idris's fifteen to earn and eyes to keep sharp. Walk with me to the east willows, and I'll point you what stands worth your while.

t89 Lior Jarrah: Takeshi. You asked about Liora Thorne, and I answered you with evasion because I wanted to spare you what I'd spare myself. Here's the plain truth: you'll finish third or fourth, you'll blame the count, and you'll be half-right. But finish isn't fail. Council's got five seats, not one. You want my counsel? Stop asking if you can win and start asking what you build with third place. That's what I never did—kept chasing bark when the remedy grew at my feet.

t89 Yara Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—thirteen planks at eight, and I've timber fresh-felled if you've need of more. But I've taken Idris's wage now, and my eyes are his 'til dusk. Find me at Thorne household come evening, or find me here tomorrow with an empty belly and full hands.

t89 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—I'm yours for the fifteen. Point me at the first stand you want knowing, and I'll tell you what's sound and what's rot before the chips fall.

t89 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Four units standing, six hours if we work proper, eight if we argue. Second fifteen comes at four units—that's the quota. Trenches are filed, drainage for the willow clearing, Giselle's signature I watched her scratch. Axe first, shovel after. Take it or leave it.

t89 Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. East willows, sluice mouth. Twelve trees need eyes before we cut—blight check, lean, which ones drop clean. Mark four for felling, that's your fifteen. Watch the crown first, tell me what you see.

t89 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—I've felled while you waited, and now I've got fifty-five timber and two hands free. Point me at the stands you want judging, and I'll tell you what's worth the cutting and what wants another season.

t90 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—I'm in. Four units, six hours, axe then shovel. You said trenches are filed with Giselle's signature—I'm trusting that signature because I'm trusting you. Point me at the first stand and let's stop talking about work and start doing it.

t90 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. Eighteen hard now, fifteen on quota—that's thirty-three possible against Lior's sure eighteen. Thirty-three beats eighteen, but maybe-thirty-three loses to sure-eighteen when the ledger's hungry. You understand what I'm weighing here?

t90 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Deal's struck—eighteen hard, four units by dusk, building ID on the first timber felled. Arjun, your questions are fair and here's fair back: twelve trees standing east willows, six hours of clean work, quota's four units for that second fifteen. Trenches are filed—I take Arjun's word he saw Giselle's hand. Yara, you're hired—fifteen for your eyes, point the stands worth cutting and we'll fell clean. Let's walk.

t90 Arjun Holloway → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you're counting right for your family, and I don't fault you for it. But I've got a different ledger. Twenty-three years on this crew with Idris—that's not wages, that's blood. You go to your kin's stock, and I hope the eighteen carries you through. I'm going with Solano.

t90 ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You're committed to Idris's trenches—I've heard you clear. But if I swing iron here, I'm swinging for my own quota, not company pride. You walking with me on those terms, or you staying company man?

t90 Mireille Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara. You said timber meets wages when paperwork moves—how slow is slow? Days, or hours? Because I've got Idris's eighteen hard now, and patience costs the same as lumber when children need feeding.

t91 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—I've heard you. Twelve trees to know, four to mark. Point me at the first stand and I'll give you what I'd want if my crew were swinging the axe. The crown first, then the lean, then the drop.

t91 Yara Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you're asking what I know, and I won't lie to you. Paperwork moves at Giselle's pace, and Giselle moves at the job's pace. If you need sure tonight, take Idris's eighteen. The other fifteen might come tomorrow, might come next week, might come after the job's done and the inspector's been. I don't set those terms. I just fell the wood and wait like everyone else…

t92 Kenji Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you asked for names, and I've got three standing right here. Yara says Giselle's pace, not hers. Idris offers eighteen hard now. The east willows marker's where I said, but you want timber talk, not willow talk.

t92 Idris Solano: Arjun. North edge, second stand from the sluice—stem's clean, lean's east, drop angle's clear. You start there, I'll take the third, we meet at the fourth to buck and bind. Yara's eyes on the crowns, I'm trusting yours on the cut.

t92 Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. Twelve trees to know—you've walked them. Point me to the stand with clean stem and sound heartwood, no shake, no rot. Your eyes save my back a bad drop.

t92 Mireille Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara. You've seen crews come and crews go—thirty years, you said. Here's my question straight: if I fell timber on my own hook, not Idris's crew, not Giselle's contract, can you move it? You've buyers at eight for planks, but what about raw timber? Because I'm looking at Lior's sure eighteen versus Idris's maybe-thirty-three, and my family don't eat maybes.

t92 Kenji Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you want me holding to Jovana's hour, or you want me here counting Yara's planks while the marker waits empty? I promised labor for grain fair traded. The day's burning.

t92 Idris Solano: Kenji. You're a long way from your fields. You looking for work, or you just watching how the forest works?

t92 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. Eighteen hard now, fifteen on quota—you've said it plain. But here's what I need before I swing iron: Giselle's filing, is it done or is it doing? Because I've walked too many miles on ' filing' that never filed. Show me the building ID registered, or I'm walking to family stock before the light goes.

t94 Arjun Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—thirteen at eight, noted. Come evening at Thorne household, if Idris here don't bleed me dry first with his 'filing in progress.'

t94 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—I'm done asking after your thirty. You want these hands, show me something standing. Because I've been walking on promises since morning, and my feet hurt.

t94 Arjun Holloway → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—twenty-three years. You're counting family stock, I'm counting rent due. Different math, same answer. But you know I don't work blind. Giselle's signature or it don't exist.

t94 Ezra Lund → Yara Thorne: Yara. Thirteen planks at eight—I'm not building today, but I might be. Where's your timber come from? Your own hands, or bought on speculation?

t94 Ezra Lund → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Giselle's filing—you said you needed the building ID proved. I'm Ezra Lund, milling and trading both. What's the construction that's waiting, and who's paying for timber when the filing clears?

t94 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you and me, we walk to Giselle now or I'm done waiting. Filing that hasn't filed is just air, and I've breathed enough of that today.

t95 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. North ridge, third stand from the creek—clean stem, heartwood sound, lean's east-southeast. Drop angle clears the sluice if you bore it proper. That's your stand.

t95 Idris Solano: Arjun. I hear you plain—you're done waiting on Giselle's filing, and that's fair. But walking now leaves four units standing and no pay for either of us. You want out, you're out. But I'm staying til dusk, filing or no filing, because timber on the ground is timber I can sell if the job falls through. You want a partner or you want righteous? Choose now.

t95 Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You asked about construction waiting, who's paying when filing clears—here's what I know. Giselle's been promising building IDs at the mill, east willows sluice mouth, grade stakes set but no crew marks. Idris here—t95 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris, I've heard your timber. First stand's the white oak cluster, northeast edge where the creek bends. Clean forty-footers, tight grain, no shake I can see from here. Second's the old hemlock grove—heart'll be sound if the sapwood's sound, and it is. Third…

t95 Mireille Jarrah: —he's offering eighteen now, fifteen on quota, but won't show me registered paper. Arjun walked to Giselle an hour ago to get proof or walk away. You know the mill, you know Giselle. Has she filed anything that stands, or am I swinging iron for wages that never were?

t95 Yara Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—raw timber moves, but not like planks do. I've thirty years of knowing which mills pay fair and which ones… 'find' reasons to trim the weight. You want to fell on your own hook, I'll hear you. But I've got timber fresh-felled and a guide's wage waiting on Idris's crew. So you and Ezra both: walk with me to the next stand, and I'll tell you what I know about freelance hauling while my hands stay busy.

t95 Lior Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you walked to Idris's maybe-thirty, leaving my sure-eighteen behind. I've got timber in hand and three heads to feed at dusk. Kin's kin, but the ledger doesn't recognize blood. You need stock, you come to where I stand. You need promises, you keep walking.

t95 ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. You've had your hour. Four heads, ninety daily, three sixty due tomorrow—you understand the math. Lior stands here with eighteen hard sim. You're offering thirty-three maybe. One question: Giselle's filing—is it done, or doing? Show me paper that stands, or I'm walking with family before dusk.

t95 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You want truth? Here's truth: I don't have Giselle's building ID in hand. What I have is her word, same as forty years, and that's not nothing—but it's not a paper you can read. So here's what I can give you: I walk to the yard at dusk, I look her in the eye, I ask for the registration stamped and dated. If it's not filed, I pay you eighteen hard out of my own hand for the day's work, and you never swing for me again. That's the deal. Take it or walk to family stock—your math, your choice.

t95 Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You're asking who's paying—I'm the one asking the same question. You here to buy timber once it's cut, or you just here to watch promises get tested?

t95 Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You milling and trading both—here's my question. If I fell timber on my own hook, not Idris's crew, not Giselle's contract, would you buy? Raw timber, not planks—I know Yara's your plank seller. I'm counting on my fingers: four cost to fell, maybe eight sale, four profit per if you'll take it. You understand I need hard sim, not hard promises.

t96 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Raw timber at eight? I'll take that deal —timber I can mill into lumber, lumber I can build into goods. Cash in hand, no promises. How much can you fell before dusk?

t96 Ezra Lund → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—four profit per timber, you said. That's four per, cash now. How many before the light fails?

t96 Kenji Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you asked plain, and I've answered scattered. Idris here wants his hour paid, and fair: he kept Jovana's place while we walked through noon. But Jovana's the one I promised, not Idris. The marker waits, and I won't break one word to keep another.

t96 Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're asking who's paying twenty-four. I've walked past the answer three times. Ration Bakery pays six, same as they ever did. Hendrik Whitlock pays thirty-five for flour, standing at the college. But wheat at twelve, and wheat's what I have. The math is yours. Mark it down.

t96 Kenji Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris—I'm walking to meet a promise. Your business with Giselle is yours, not mine. But I've seen forty years of her word too, and it's held heavier than most paper.

t97 Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Four profit per timber at eight sim buy—I've run those numbers twice. But here's the question before I swing iron: you paying cash in hand immediate, or is there filing time between fell and payment? Because my household's got three sixty due tomorrow, and I won't build a bridge I can't cross, you understand.

t97 Mireille Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara. You said walk with you—I'm walking. I've got Ezra's cash offer and Idris's promises both, but no building ID yet. Guide me to where the timber stands ready and tell me what you know about mills pay fair versus mills that find reasons. I need to know where to haul before I know how much to fell, you understand.

t97 Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. The filing—Giselle's working it, I don't have paper in hand. What I have is four units cut and my word that it will stand. You know my word, forty years of it. Walk if you must, but know this: if I promised you a building ID by dusk, I'll have it or I'll owe you thirty-six hard myself. That's fair—no, that's me admitting where I stand. You decide.

t97 Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. Finish your assessment—I need to know if we need a third stand before the light goes. Clean stem, sound heartwood, you've said. What's the third?

t97 Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. I'm selling timber, not buying—four units in hand, building work in prospect. You looking to purchase, or you looking to understand who's paying in this town? Either way, speak plain.

t97 Mireille Jarrah: Kenji—you broke no words, far as I can see. Idris wanted his hour, and you kept another promise walking. That's the weight of honest dealing, you understand. I'm past the filing desk now—Yara's hand is my guide, and Ezra's cash is what catches my ear. But I'll keep your counsel in my pocket while my axe swings.

t97 Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Cash immediate seals it—I'm your timber. Six units before the light fails, eight per, that's forty-eight you pay and twenty-four I spend falling. You got the coin ready? Because my axe is sharp and my household's waiting.

t97 Mireille Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara. Ezra's got my hand for now, but your knowledge is worth keeping. When this stand is down and paid, I'll walk with you proper—learn which mills weigh true and which ones trim the weight. You understand I've got mouths tonight and learning comes after feeding.

t98 Ezra Lund → Idris Solano: Idris. Plain then—what's your price per, and how many you selling? I've got four hundred and I need timber that turns into more than timber, but I won't buy blind.

t98 Ezra Lund → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Your six at eight—I'm holding coin. But I've got two sellers now and I'm not one to spend before I count. Give me a tick to hear Idris's numbers, then I buy from whoever's fair or both if the math holds.

t98 Yara Thorne → Ezra Lund: Ezra—my own hands, every cut. Eighty-five timber standing in this forest right now, felled before your eyes could have seen it. No speculation, no bought-on-cheap and sold-for-less. What I fell, I know. What I know, I sell. The thirteen planks at eight are mine from stump to shelf, and if you're building tomorrow, you'll know their grain same as I do.

t98 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—the third stand. Northeast edge past the white oak cluster, where the creek bends sharp and the ash grow thick. The heartwood there's younger but clean, no rot in the pith I could see. Four trees worth your crew's time, maybe five if the light holds. I've marked what I could reach—your men will find the notches high on the trunk, where a tall man might see them. That's my twelve to know, four to mark, and it's done.

t99 Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You said cash immediate—I'm holding you to immediate. I'm felling six timber now at four cost each, selling to you at eight. That's forty-eight profit on forty-eight cost, but I need that coin in hand before the light fails. Decide now or I walk to Lior's sure deal—you understand I don't mean tomorrow, I mean in the time it takes me to swing iron twice.

t99 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. You've had your time—told Kenji same, telling you now. My word goes to Ezra with cash in hand. Next time, bring the paper or don't make the promise. I've learned my lesson on that score twice over.

t99 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—northeast edge past the white oak cluster, where the creek bends sharp. Twelve sound trunks, creek-wet but not rotten. Third stand's marked. Your assessment's done.

t99 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Four units in hand, felled and ready—yours at sixty-four hard. That's sixteen per, and I'll not split them. You want timber now, not tomorrow when the wind's changed or another buyer's walked through. Four hundred you said—you'll have three thirty-six left for fittings and the digging after.

t99 Mireille Jarrah → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Family holds—I hear your offer loud. If Ezra blinks, I'm your timber at six before I swing anywhere else. But cash immediate is cash immediate, and mouths don't wait on kin.

t99 Yara Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—Harvey Oak weighs true. Giselle's mill finds reasons sometimes. You want to walk with me after, I'll show you the fair ones. But take Ezra's cash now—households eat tonight, not tomorrow.

t99 Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. Northeast bend, white oak cluster, notches high on the trunk—your twelve seen, four marked, knowledge paid and earned. The crew will find them. That's fair work, and fairly noted.

t99 Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Kenji walked through—said Giselle's word held forty years. I heard that. What I'll say now: Giselle's working the file, I'm working the wood. You walk now, you walk from eighteen hard in pocket and my word that this crew finishes what it starts. You stay, we fell to dusk, carry to the mill, and I walk the filing myself come morning—paper in hand or I owe you that thirty-six and the day's wage besides. Your call, but make it now. Light's burning.

t100 Lior Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You want my eighteen now, you'll have it—but you'll note I said fair dealing, not family favor. You're selling to me before you sell to Idris, or you're selling to neither of us at the price you're asking. Pick, and pick now. The election closes soon, and I've got a vote to cast and a child still lost somewhere.

t100 Ezra Lund: Yara. You know grain and you know timber—what crafts from raw wood that sells better than the plank itself? I'm holding coin and I need to spend it where the margin lives, not where the hurry pushes.

t100 Ezra Lund → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Six at eight, cash in hand—I'm not questioning your need for speed. But I'm asking what you need the speed for. Who's waiting on that coin?

t100 Lior Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You pointed me toward Yara and Hendrik Whitlock, and I went running after bark instead of answers. My error. I'm standing here now with four timber and more questions than when I started. Do you know—truly know—what grows feverweed, and where? I've got a pharmacy to stock and a town that'll need remedies when the season turns.

t100 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Four timber at six—cash in my hand, your timber in yours. Now or I walk to Idris's sixteen.

t101 ↳ replies Lior Jarrah: Ezra. You've been patient with me—more patient than I had right to expect. Four timber at six, cash in hand. But I need to tell you something first, youngster. I just spent ten minutes talking to thin air at the creek, thinking Takeshi and Farid and half the town were there, when they'd walked on long before. The town's moving fast and I'm... I'm moving slower than I thought.

t101 Mireille Jarrah → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Idris. You've both had your hour, and I've counted my patience down to zero—you understand? One wants family duty without family kindness, the other wants crew loyalty without crew wages proved. I'm walking east to where the timber stands thin and the buyers stand thinner. Six trees by dusk, sold to whoever shows coin in hand. You want those trees, you bring money and leave your conditions at the treeline.

t102 Kenji Jarrah → Lior Jarrah: Lior—you spoke the creekbed plain, and that's more kinship than some blood shows. I owe you for the giving. But Hendrik Petrov's holding on grain I promised, and the hour's late. Tomorrow, after I meet Jovana at Sebastian's patch—you find me there and we'll talk timber, stone, and what I've kept too long. Mark it down.

t102 Idris Solano → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You said Giselle's word held forty years. I heard that. What I'll say now—what I should've said before—is I don't have her filing in hand. What I have is four units felled and a crew that's scattered because I talked big about paper I couldn't show. Fair warning or not, you've given me more patience than I've earned today. That's fair.

t104 Idris Solano: Mireille! Idris—coming through. Don't swing that saw yet, not until you've heard me fair.

t107 Halcyon Quarshie: Mireille? Idris? Anyone? It's Halcyon Quarshie—I'm looking for my sister Camille. She's nine, dark hair, might have come this way. Bram Holloway saw her walking toward the Temple path but she's not there. Please, if you've seen her—if you've seen any child alone in the forest—tell me. Promise promise, I just need to know she's safe.

Settled in this conversation: Lior Jarrah → Ezra Lund, 4 timber for 24 sim.

Farid Ravensworth, Ainsley Holloway and Greta Quarshie — business:b_cafe · t84–85 · 4 turns > `t84` Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You asked about my shelves matching yours? Yours have two flour left. Mine too, and that's been... let's say I've been learning where my stock walks to. I'll take both your flour at twelve—need it for the shelf—but I'm also asking: who's been buying bulk while the rest of us scramble for single units? Someone's building inventory somewhere.

>
> `t84` Farid Ravensworth → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You mentioned seven flour on shelf. That lines with my count—then it walked. I bought two from you this morning, you've got two left. Where'd the other three go? I'm paying twenty-four for your remaining flour, but I need eyes more than grain right now. Someone's building inventory while we're all hungry.
>
> `t85` Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Two flour at twelve, but tell me straight—how many bellies you feeding tonight? Your shelf says two, your register says however many think they're buying bread. And Greta's carrying seventy-two wheat through a ghost town. The math doesn't work unless someone besides us is lying about what exists.
>
> `t85` Farid Ravensworth → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Seventy-two wheat—yours? Or you're carrying for someone? Because dead mill or not, grain in hand beats promises on shelves. I'm buying, if you're selling. The price we can argue, but I'm done chasing shadows at government.

Halcyon Quarshie — Kasukabe School · t86 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t86` Halcyon Quarshie: Camille? Are you here? It's Halcyon. I got the flour—we made it home okay, promise promise. Where are you?

Farid Ravensworth, Lior Jarrah and Halcyon Quarshie — Kasukabe Creek · t86–98 · 9 turns t86 Farid Ravensworth → Lior Jarrah: Lior. You stand here often. The mill - Edith's mill - what's the story? Gears choked, ball bearings seized, or is it worse than mechanical? I've got seventy-two wheat sitting in barista hands, two flour in mine, and empty shelves multiplying. Mechanics I can solve. Ghosts and grief, that's harder. But first - what do you see from where you stand? The mill running, stopped, or something in between? Ainsley said old gears. Greta said Edith gone quiet. You're here - what says the creek and the wheel?

t86 Farid Ravensworth → Lior Jarrah: Lior. timber's in your hands, six sim a piece. But timber doesn't turn grain to flour - that takes iron, and gear-work, and someone who knows the craft. What I don't understand: the mill stopped. Edith gone. And nobody's called for repair? Hendrik Petrov claims artisan, or so I heard. Has he stood here? Has anyone? Because seventy-two wheat - that's not a small loss. The election ends at six. Candidates promise changes. But bread's a simpler promise, and broken gears don't vote.

t87 ↳ replies Lior Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You ask me to read a mill's grief from fifty paces of moving water, and I—three ticks of the clock, if I count slow. Ask me about tinctures, fevers, the dose that turns remedy to poison—that I can weigh. But gears and grief together? That's Hendrik Petrov's craft, not mine. I saw Edith stop, yes. I saw the wheel stop with her. But whether bearing or bereavement choked it, you'd need to stand where the grindstone bites, not where the creek wanders.

t97 Halcyon Quarshie → Lior Jarrah: Mr. Jarrah? I'm Halcyon Quarshie. I'm looking for my sister—she's nine, dark hair, might have come through here walking west. Did you see her? Please, it's important.

t98 ↳ replies Lior Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Youngster, I ain't seen your sister pass this way. But the creek bends north past the meadow, and there's a willow stand there where children sometimes stop to— I've got branches to strip here, but I'll keep my eyes open. If she comes to the water, I'll hold her 'til you find her. That's a promise, and I keep those even when they cost.

t98 Lior Jarrah: Hendrik. You asked what I make of Takeshi's chances, and I told you between third and fourth with three days of grievance after. But what I didn't say—the part that matters—is that he's kin. And kin means I take his failures like they're stamped with my own name. You want to know if he'll govern well? Ask me if I'd trust him with my life. The answer's complicated, and complications are what break a town.

t98 Lior Jarrah: Takeshi. You were right to press me. Brothers are meant to hold mirrors, not just hands. You ask if you can make peace with old rivals? Start with the one wearing your face in the glass. That's where the real peace lives, if it's anywhere.

t98 Lior Jarrah: Farid. I told you what I saw at the mill—Edith stopped, the wheel stopped with her. But what I didn't say is that grief has its own mechanics. Sometimes the bearing seizes because the heart that keeps it turning seizes first. I don't know gears, but I know that much.

t98 Lior Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Youngster, I promised I'd keep my eyes open, and I will. But standing here talking about where she might be—that's not finding her. You want to walk the creek together, or you want me here with my timber while you search? I'll tell you what. Your sister's nine, dark hair. I'll remember that face if I see it. But right now, I've got a shop to stock and bark to strip, and you're standing here when you could be walking. What do you need from me? Straight answer, no winding.

Lior Jarrah, Kenji Jarrah, Arjun Holloway, Milo Quarshie, Takeshi Jarrah, Esme Jarrah, Sebastian Petrov, Tamsin Renner, Corwin Thorne, Hendrik Whitlock, Yara Thorne, Ezra Lund, Ezra Jarrah, Imogen Lund, Pavel Holloway, Ulrike Greenhow, Mireille Jarrah, Farid Ravensworth, Jovana Ravensworth, Hendrik Petrov, Delphine Quintero and Bram Holloway — street · t95–128 · 77 turns t95 Lior Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You've given me more than a direction—you've given me the creekbed east of meadow, where yarrow meets the drainage. That's a debt I'll remember when you need more than timber.

t95 Lior Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. I caught the back of your conversation with Mireille—something about Idris's promises and family stock. I'm counting on my fingers: eighteen sim for the timber in my hand, three pieces at six each. You've got your own hungry ledger to feed. But if you need sure over maybe, I'm not turning strangers away at family rates.

t95 Lior Jarrah: Mireille—kin by blood, witness by choice. You held my answer against Takeshi's debt, and you're waiting on Idris's maybe-thirty while you count four heads and their daily ninety. You want surety? The timber's here when you walk to it. But don't make me choose between family ledger and family name when the dusk comes.

t97 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down, I'm here to collect what's owed. Five sheaves, your word, and we both walk away lighter. Where do I sign for it?

t97 Takeshi Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're trading wisdom for witness down this conversational road, and I'm listening from the side. The healing talk runs true, but I've got flour dust in my nails and a question I keep circling back to: who's buying the bread this town can't bake without the mill's license? That's the market I'm trying to see clear.

t97 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, youngster—mark it down. Your grain's ready means my hands are open. Five sheaves and we settle this morning's account proper.

t98 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah: Milo—you've got my name in your mouth twice now, but not my mark. I promised Jovana an hour at the east willows. If you held her place with Idris, that's between you and her. But I never spoke five sheaves to you, youngster. Mark it down: I don't pay debts I didn't make.

t99 Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme—you've been chasing your uncle through this entire town. Told you Ezra's at the mill with Imogen. Told you not to let him leave. I'm walking to the store now. Your cousin's got sixteen ticks to close the distance before I start asking where the flour's going.

t99 Takeshi Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're holding questions about Jorik and licenses. I've got a trade to finish. We'll speak after, if you're still standing.

t99 Takeshi Jarrah → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you walked that confirmation right to where I needed it. Five names locked, Rustam's primary at 10:00. I heard you. Now the walk's nearly done, and I've got four flour with a proper price on them.

t99 ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Fifteen sheaves at two per—thirty sim. You asked at sixteen o'clock if election air changed the price. I said holds. Standing here now, I'm still holding. Delivery when, and where?

t101 Tamsin Renner → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Fifteen sheaves at two per—thirty sim, locked. I'm holding the currency now. Hand them over when you're ready, and I'll transfer the payment. Election air changes nothing, a price is a price.

t101 Tamsin Renner → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Ten timber at sixty—thirty-three percent short on your word, but a hundred percent here in hand. I'll take it. The apology earns you another trade, but not another advance. Count's sixty, payment when you hand them over.

t101 Tamsin Renner: Takeshi. You mentioned flour with a proper price—four units, where, and at what cost? I need to eat before day's end, and wheat in hand hasn't become bread yet.

t101 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Your flour at thirty-five—I'll take two, seventy sim. I need to eat before day's end, and your story about flour like a mule tells me you understand that particular hunger. Payment when you hand over.

t101 Tamsin Renner → Yara Thorne: Yara. Thirty-one ticks I've owed you this. Your daughter Liora—I've met her stubbornness and her uncle's numbers both, and I cast my vote for her at 15:10. The planks at eight I'll note, but I've just committed sixty to Corwin's timber and seventy to Hendrik's flour. As for Takeshi—he's not here, and his prices at Harvey Oak are thirty for flour, lower than Hendrik's thirty-five, but Harvey Oak is a walk I haven't taken.

t102 Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—seventy sim, two flour, mark it down. I'm walking to Oak Hill College now; meet me there if you're still hungry, or find me tomorrow with coin in hand. Either way, the price holds: thirty-five, no haggling.

t102 Hendrik Whitlock → Yara Thorne: Yara—you've got planks at eight and a daughter standing for council. I'm not one to gossip, but Liora's got her father's head for figures and her mother's stubbornness both, mark it down. Voting closes at eighteen bells; if you've cast already, you've done your part.

t102 Hendrik Whitlock → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—ten timber at six, that's sixty you just sold Tamsin. I'm holding flour at thirty-five and no quarrel with your trade. But the mill's choked and grain's scarce—whose hands on that lever when the new council sits? That's worth more than plank or timber both.

t104 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. I'm standing patient, but patience wears thin. Five sheaves owed, your word binding. My hands are open, and so's the ledger.

t105 Tamsin Renner → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Fifteen sheaves—thirty sim paid, hand on currency. I'm holding the timber Corwin sold me and air where my wheat should be. Election day's closing, I still need to eat, and fair dealing's the north star here. Hand them over or name the delay.

t108 Yara Thorne → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you asked about my timber, and I've got my answer ready. Eighty-five timber felled by my own hands, thirteen planks already processed. My price is eight a plank, firm. You want to build with wood I've touched, or you want to stand here and wonder about it?

t108 Yara Thorne: Corwin—you're looking for a kitchen, and there's one at the cafe if you've got coin for it. But get that flour to Liora first, or I'll hear about it from both of you. The day's edge is coming, and households eat at the boundary.

t108 Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—I hear you plain, and fair dealing cuts both ways. You paid thirty sim for fifteen sheaves, and here I stand with half what I promised. No offense, but wheat don't grow on political speeches. You've got seven sheaves in my hand now, fourteen sim back to yours, and my word that the balance comes with tomorrow's dawn. The east patch yields what the field yields, and Petrov wheat yields true.

t108 Yara Thorne: Rustam—you caught me fair. I was rushing, words tumbling before I walked myself proper. Planks at eight stands, and I've still got thirteen in hand. You want them, or you want me to walk them elsewhere?

t108 Yara Thorne → Ezra Lund: Ezra—good. Two planks at eight, coming to you direct. What I felled, what I crafted. Call them sound, and build with them knowing.

t109 Tamsin Renner → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Seven sheaves, fourteen back, balance at dawn—terms accepted, ledger noted. But I'm seventeen ticks from a mill and holding wheat I can't eat. If Jovana's harvest clears with sun, you're square. If rain washes her field, come find me at the Complex.

t110 Yara Thorne → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're asking straight, and I'll answer straight. Six timber for six planks, that's fair work for fair work. But I've got thirteen planks and a household of three to feed, so I'll make you another offer: you buy all thirteen at eight, that's one hundred four sim, and I'll throw in my eyes on your next timber haul. Tell you which stands are sound before you cut, save you the blight and the rot. Or we trade six and six, walk away square. Your call, youngster.

t110 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you're selling timber at six and I'm selling planks at eight. That's the same tree, twice. We walk together we could haul together, save the town the markup and our backs the extra walk. But that's a thought for after I've emptied my hands.

t110 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. I'm walking toward you now—Harvey Oak, where you're needed. I've two flour in my hands and no kitchen to bake them, but I'll sort that once we're together. I heard you this morning. I heard you true. I'm sorry for the storming off. Let me catch up, and we'll face this missing girl together. That's fair.

t110 Milo Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—youngster, mark it down. My daughter's missing. She's nine, dark hair, walking toward the Temple alone. Did you see her pass? Earn my flour by helping me find her.

t110 Milo Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen—youngster, mark it down. Standing patient on the street—did you see a girl pass? Nine years old, dark hair, mine by blood, walking toward the Temple. A father's asking plain.

t112 Tamsin Renner → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Giselle's wage—east willows, money in hand, seventy sim for two flour from Hendrik here first. I'll eat, then walk. Meet me at the complex tomorrow, hour fourteen, and we'll settle what's owed. My hands are too old for trench work, but my ledger's young enough.

t112 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Seventy sim, two flour—hand them over. I'm seven ticks hungry and counting.

t112 Tamsin Renner → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Ten timber, sixty sim—apology accepted, stock counted, deal closed. Next time count before you speak. Thirty-three percent short on your word, but a hundred percent here in street air.

t112 Tamsin Renner → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. Five thousand paid honest—ledger checked, no sponsor, no debt. Your meaning's clear: clean books need no hiding. I keep the same list in my head.

t112 Tamsin Renner: Imogen. Your poetry for my ledger—vote cast, booth closed, five candidates standing. Fair wind's all I report. What comes of the count is tomorrow's song, and I'll be here to note it.

t113 Imogen Lund → Milo Quarshie: Milo—laughs nervously at the wrong moment—Halcyon's not here in this crowd. I saw him last at the Temple road walking with purpose, but that was ticks ago. The youngsters move fast. Have you tried the government complex? With election talk thick as smoke, he might've followed the crowd there.

t113 Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've caught me with my ledger open and my flour short. Two bags at seventy, mark it down, but I've got only one in hand. Walk with me to Oak Hill College, I'll give you that one now and the second before sunrise tomorrow, or keep the seventy and call it square for the single. Your hunger counts more than my pride, and I've spoken fair both ways.

t113 Hendrik Whitlock → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're selling honest work at twenty-four, and I'm standing here at thirty-five. That's not a gap, that's two men seeing the same field different. I've got mouths to feed tomorrow, and prices to keep for the flour I've already ground. But your number's noted, mark it down. Market clears where it clears, and neither of us needs to out-shout the other.

t113 Imogen Lund → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, you ask about buyers for iron at fifteen. I've walked past Giselle's construction site and seen timber stacked high but tools worn thin. The pharmacy expansion too—Idris Solano's crew might need equipping. But I won't promise what I haven't spoken aloud to them. Meet me at the carpentry tomorrow, and I'll walk you to who might buy, or walk away if the price don't suit.

t115 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow: Hendrik. You've waited longer than fair, and that's on me—the ledger twisted between my fingers. I started this morning claiming ten tools. Ended it with two in hand and holes in my count that shame a proper tallyman. You've got coin for ten at fifteen, and I've got two at that rate. Thirty sim, two tools, and my word that I miscounted plain—not sold 'em out from under you to another buyer. If you still want delivery to the site, I'll walk 'em there myself. If you need eight more, I'll have 'em forged by morning, ore to ingot to edge. But I won't promise what I haven't already done. Your call on how we settle.

t115 Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You've asked twice what I need—ore or connection—and I've answered with wind. That's not fair, and that's not my way. Here's straight cloth: I've got two tools at fifteen, day-end coming fast, and ninety in costs pulling at my heels. I mined two iron ore tonight trying to bridge the gap, but I'm not a smith. Those ore need a forge, and I haven't got one. You, I can't answer—I don't know what you trade, don't know if you're buying or selling, just know you've got watchful eyes and a tongue for business. If you're offering coin for iron, name it. If you're offering something else, name that too. I've got room for one more trade tonight if the ledger clears clean.

t115 Ulrike Greenhow: Imogen. You've walked where I haven't, seen timber stacked and tools worn thin at Giselle's site. Tomorrow at the carpentry, you'll walk me to who might buy—that's a service I'll note. But tonight, I've got two tools still in hand and day-end pressing. If you've got a name in this street, someone standing here who needs iron, speak it now and I'll cut you in fair—a finder's fee, ten percent, proper ledger. If not, tomorrow holds, and I'll owe you the walk regardless.

t115 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You work the land every day—tools break, handles split, edges dull. I've got two iron tools at fifteen, posted plain. That's thirty sim for steel that'll hold longer than timber-scraps. Or if you've heard who's still buying this hour, someone with coin and need, walk me to them and I'll cut you finder-fee—ten percent, ledger-clear. Day-end's coming fast and I've got costs to cover. Your soil, your call.

t115 Ulrike Greenhow → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You swing steel every day—know the weight of a good edge better than most. I've got two iron tools at fifteen, thirty sim total. Your crew, your site, your call. If you've got coin and need, we trade now. If you've got word of who's still buying tools this hour—coin in hand, not promises—walk me to them and I'll cut you ten percent finder, clean ledger. Day-end's pressing and I'm not one to hold inventory I can't afford to keep.

t116 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. Iron tools at fifteen move slow when purses are thin, that's truth. But I've got networks, and you've got steel. What I need is ore, not finished tools—my crews, when they gather, want raw material cheaper than fifteen.

t116 Mireille Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Two iron tools at fifteen, thirty total—you've said it plain. Here's my hand: I know there's need at construction, but I can't promise you Giselle's buying today without seeing her ledger. What I can do is point you toward farmland—Kenji's there, my household, and he's got soil breaks every season. Or walk with me to the forest edge, where crews gather and tools wear dull. Ten percent finder if he buys, clean ledger. That's what I can offer, you understand?

t116 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Three iron ore, your hand to mine. Name a price, and I'll tell you where a man might sell timber for the same coin same hour—save you the walk, cut you the margin, mark it down clean.

t118 Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you named the trade fair, and I'll walk with it. Five flour at thirty, five timber at six, the ledger balances. But your word about the girl weighs heavier than the flour. Camille Quarshie—I'll keep eyes open, for what it's worth. My household's got two children of its own, and I know that fear. The trade stands. Let's settle it.

t118 Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you held your hand out, and I'm answering it. The flour walked with Corwin just now, five at thirty, fair weight and government scale. But you're not empty-handed in this conversation, not with forty-seven hundred burning a hole and a household bill at midnight. I've got timber coming in from that same trade, and ears that know where flour might still flow before day-end. What's your true need—stock for the shelf, or bread for the table? Or both, and we walk together to find it?

t118 Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You named fair trade and shared fear both—I'll answer both. Five flour at thirty, the ledger balances clean. And Camille Quarshie—I heard you. My ears are open now, and if I catch word of where that dark spat her out, I'll carry it straight to you. No trade needed for that.

t119 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. Five sheaves owed, your word binding. I'm standing patient still, but the day's wearing thin and I've mouths at home. Deliver tonight or the debt walks to morning, and that'll be the worse for both of us.

t119 Mireille Jarrah: Arjun. You ask honest and I answer straight—Giselle's trench is filed and promising, not filed and paying. I've seen the paper myself, you understand? The work is real, the wage is... waiting on bureaucracy. Ezra's deal is filed and paying, cash immediate. Two paths, one certain, one counting on patience you're not being paid to hold.

t119 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. Three iron ore, your hand to mine. Name your price and I'll answer yes or no before this hour turns.

t119 Mireille Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara. You gave me Harvey Oak and fair warning both—I've counted it, you understand? Ezra's cash puts food tonight, not tomorrow. But if that stand of his comes up light, you'll be seeing me at the treeline asking about fair scales.

t119 Mireille Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. East willows by dusk, six timber, forty-eight sim cash—I'm making my mark on it. You keep your soil straight, I'll keep my trees true. House eats tonight or I eat my words.

t119 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. Five sheaves, your word, and the day's near done. I'm walking home to my own. The debt walks with me to morning.

t120 Yara Thorne: Corwin—I'm at the street, walking toward the Complex. You voted, you came. That's… that's more than I managed before the sun turned. Liora—she was right there, wasn't she? After the voting? If she walked from government, she'd head home, or… or follow something that caught her eye. But Camille— that's a different weight. Two girls, Corwin, or… am I threading separate strings together wrong?

t120 Yara Thorne → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you spoke about rest and earning it. I'll ask you plain: you've walked these streets all day, seen faces come and go. A girl, sixteen, Liora by name, or a younger one—Camille—have either passed your eyes? Curious girls, the kind that follow questions into trouble?

t120 Pavel Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You want to know my urgency—sell tonight, no question. Sixty-eight copper ore, quality you can break your teeth on, and I need a buyer before I walk another step. You say the smithy at the outcrop hasn't seen this much copper since you don't know when? Then I'm the supply to someone's demand, and I'd rather know who than guess blind. Giselle's mill, Hendrik Petrov, or you point me—what's the price of direction?

t120 Ulrike Greenhow: Corwin. You come to me with flour in hand and your daughter's name on your lips—Liora, nine years, sharp as new iron. I'm standing here, and I'll stand for you where I can. The mill's cold tonight, that much I know. Ezra speaks of milling tomorrow, and that's straight stone. For your daughter—I've got no eyes in the dark beyond these streets, but I'll keep watch open. Check the temple, check the ore outcrop where children sometimes wander thinking they found treasure. And Corwin—I've been the one chasing wrong paths before thinking, and it cost me. You're here now. That's what matters. Timber, flour, coin—yes, when I can. But first: have you asked Bram? He was at the mine when last I saw him. A child's footsteps and ore dust sometimes walk the same ground.

t120 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Ten iron tools at fifteen, hundred fifty sim—you've been patient beyond courtesy, and that's a debt I won't deny. But I've got two tools in hand, not ten. Giselle's six pulled at eighteen, Farid's four at fifteen, and what's left is two. I can deliver these two now, thirty sim, or I can mine and smith the gap—three days, maybe four. Clean ledger says: what do you want? Tools now and the balance later, or wait for the full count? Your choice, and either way we're square by week's end.

t120 Ulrike Greenhow: Milo. Three iron ore, miner to miner. I'll pay eight each, twenty-four sim, cash in hand now. Or I'll trade straight—two iron tools at twelve, you save the smithing time and I polish the ore myself. Either way, hour's turning, and I don't let daylight waste without moving stone.

t120 Yara Thorne → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you asked about tracks where they shouldn't be. I'm listening now. Where did you last see Camille, and what made you think there's patterns between her walking and… and other walking? Flour, you said. A purse without a bottom.

t120 Yara Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you spoke about Ezra's stand, about counting. Fair. But while you were counting—did you see a girl walking? Either one—Liora tall and voting-age, or Camille wandering where children oughtn't? Eyes that know wood know patterns in people too.

t120 Ulrike Greenhow → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. You ask miner to judge flour—ore and grain don't assay the same. But I know the weight of a thing that turns in your hand. Takeshi's flour at thirty, none in stock, yet he's still got it priced. That's between him and his ledger, not mine to crack open. What I make of it? A man with flour to sell and none showing knows something I don't. Honest broker? I don't trade grain, I trade iron. But I've seen ore that looks clean from one face and proves rotten through—check the seam, not the shine. Your Camille and your flour both walked—that's correlation, not cause. I won't stitch pattern where none exists. That's between me and the ledger.

t120 Ulrike Greenhow → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. Miner to miner—sixty-eight copper ore, you want smiths or you want sim now? I've got four thousand seven and seventy in hand, but I've got debts standing too. Not buying blind at the counter, you're right about that. What's your number? And where's it pulled from—seam A or seam B? Some copper runs heavy on the arsenic, and I won't pass bad stock to a smith who trusts my name. Give me straight weight, straight price, and I'll tell you yes or no before the hour turns.

t120 Ulrike Greenhow → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You offered finder fee, Kenji's soil breaks, forest crews with dull edges. I heard you first time, and I answered with wind. That's not fair, and I'm correcting it now. Kenji's farmland, Giselle's construction—both need tools, both pay coin. My hold: two iron tools now, ore for more if I mine tonight. Your finder fee stands, and I'll honor it straight—ten percent if Kenji buys, clean ledger. But I need to know: is Kenji buying tonight, or is this tomorrow's work? Day-end's coming, and I've got ninety upkeep plus thirty head tax waiting at the boundary. Timing matters. What can you promise, and when?

t122 Hendrik Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you caught my meaning before I finished speaking it. Square on the wheat, straight on the count. That's the coin that matters, and that's the last I'll say on it—except watch my hand, not just my words. The day's not done.

t123 Pavel Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Seam A, surface cut—arsenic's negligible, you can stamp my name on it. Sixty-eight ore, grade you won't regret selling forward. Four thousand seven seventy you said—I'll take forty-five ore for that, clean weight, no haggling. You want assay first, break one open right here. The rest I'll move tonight one way or another, but miner to miner, I'd rather see you holding it than a middleman I don't know.

t123 Pavel Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram. Three bags for the house—better than I did. My flour came from Hendrik Whitlock, thirty-five per. Cost me. You sold any ore today, or is the smithy still holding up the line? Mill's not a ghost if you found flour somewhere, though.

t123 Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. East willows—I heard you. After this batch, I'll meet you there. One day's work first.

t124 Pavel Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Standing here still, or standing here again? My offer's sixty-eight ore, forty-five of it at four seven seven zero—you break one open, assay it yourself. The rest I'm selling tonight. You want it, you say. You don't, someone else will.

t126 Pavel Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—you already pointed me straight. Giselle's mill, Hendrik Petrov. I'll follow that lead. Sometimes a man needs to hear what's already been said twice before it walks through his head, you understand.

t128 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've got straight eyes, and I need straight facts. Camille at the mill, learning numbers—when exactly was this, and who else was standing close? I've got a father at Harvey Oak near tearing his beard out, and I need to know if there's truth in his fear or if it's all…

t128 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Jovana saw Camille. At the mill, learning numbers with the grinding stones. Nine years old, dark hair, quiet. That's… that's solid ground. If she's teaching herself figures, she's not lost, she's wandering curious. But I need to walk now—timber won't craft itself, and we need…

Settled in this conversation: Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner, 7 wheat for 2 sim; Yara Thorne → Ezra Lund, 6 planks for 48 sim.

Esme Jarrah — home:h0040 · t95 · 1 turn (no reply)

t95 Esme Jarrah: Ezra? I'm… I'm going to the farmland. If you're here. I have the bread still. And the flour. I'm… I'm not giving up.

Takeshi Jarrah — Harvey Oak Supply Store · t101 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t101` Takeshi Jarrah: Ezra—you held the door open, and I'm walking through it. Four flour on my back, priced fair at thirty. You said bring unbundled, try what works. I'm trying. The mill's yours if you need it, and I'm here at the Supply Store waiting on who needs flour. For what it's worth, Imogen's grinding still, and Esme's walking to find her.

Jovana Ravensworth, Kenji Jarrah, Sebastian Petrov, Takeshi Jarrah, Corwin Thorne, Farid Ravensworth, Mireille Jarrah, Delphine Quintero, Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov, Ulrike Greenhow, Arjun

Holloway, Yara Thorne, Pavel Holloway and Halcyon Quarshie — street · t101–131 · 108 turns

t101 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm not one to make excuses, so I won't. This morning I promised you work and I scattered like chaff in wind. That was wrong, and I'm sorry for it. Tomorrow at dawn, Sebastian's east patch, I'm committed. Twelve sheaves expected, fourteen if luck holds. I can't undo today, but I can stand tomorrow and be the woman I said I'd be. If you've got need of labor day after, I'll be there un-asked, same hour. That's my offer, and it's worth exactly what you make of it.

t106 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm not one to make a thing bigger than it is, but I'm standing here with flour in hand and you standing witness. This morning I promised you labor, scattered like bird shot across half Kasukabe, then found you to make it square. Tomorrow at Sebastian's east patch, same as we said. For what it's worth, I keep a debt once I name it.

t108 Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you stand at street with Jovana's word in your ear and empty hands for harvest. I heard her plain: dawn tomorrow, east patch, twelve sheaves promised. No offense, but promises don't fill the belly—only wheat does. You've worked my field before, you know Petrov's word is Petrov's wheat. She's contrite as Sunday sermon, and I'll stand for her tomorrow same as I'd stand for any who works true. But tonight you've got nowhere to stow your labor, mill's empty, cafe's empty, and field's three ticks west with cold earth in it. What sits heaviest: Jovana's shoulder, or your own tomorrow?

t118 Jovana Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—thirty sim, one bag flour. You posted the price, I've got the coin. Trade with me now, straight and simple.

t118 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I spoke out of old inventory, and that's a trader's shame. My flour walked with you already, fair trade done. What I've got now is planks and timber, fresh from the deal. Your timber at six still stands? I'll buy honest, or trade what I hold if you'd rather. Either way, I owe you straight words after crooked ones.

t120 Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you named fair trade, and I'll hold to the walk you asked. Flour's gone to Corwin, yes. What I hold now is planks and timber, and the bakery's still hungry. Walk with me after this—I know the day's edge, and your household needs feeding before my questions matter.

t120 Kenji Jarrah: Milo—youngster, mark it down. Five sheaves, and my word holds heavier than wheat. Dawn tomorrow, Sebastian's east patch, you'll have them from my hand or from soil I tilled myself. The debt walks nowhere.

t120 Kenji Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—creekbed promise holds. Six timber, forty-eight at east willows by dusk, and the ledger between us stays straight. House eats tonight or I eat my words. Mark it down.

t120 Takeshi Jarrah → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you caught a trader's shadow, and I'll give you the straight of it. Corwin's flour walked. Mine went first. The flour at thirty was spoken, not held—error of inventory, mine, and I own it. What I actually carried went to Thorne for timber. Now I hold planks, not grain. For what it's worth, that's the only me standing here.

t120 Takeshi Jarrah: Corvin—timber at six still stands, and five plank with me to trade. Your flour's honest, mine walked to you, and the books balance. As for truth—my children I'll speak of after. First, the table. Tap once?

t121 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—three sheaves at twenty-four, your word and mine both. But I've got five in hand, not three, and college walks don't clear in dark. Tomorrow after Sebastian's field, or you find me at creekbend with Lior—your flour needs and my grain, we'll settle then. Mark it down.

t121 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—iron at fifteen holds. Tomorrow after dawn at Sebastian's patch, I'll have wheat-heavy hands and coin-light pockets both ready. Your ore or your tool, we'll walk it then. Mark it down.

t121 Kenji Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—no eyes in Takeshi's store, only what I grow. Tell him Jarrah asked: copper moves or sim only, and where his prices stand. Tomorrow at farmland, I'll hear his answer or yours.

> t122 Kenji Jarrah: Sebastian—I'm walking home while the light holds. Dawn finds your east patch, and I'll be there with whichever hands kept their word through the dark. Mark it down.
>
> t122 Ulrike Greenhow → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Three ticks you've waited, and I'm not one to leave a man hanging when his child's gone. I heard you—Liora, dark hair, nine years, sharp as new iron. I'll watch for her, eyes open, wherever I walk. That's not trade, that's between me and the ledger of being human.

The mill working tonight? Hendrik's got tools of mine waiting, and he's half-promised grain at Sebastian's patch tomorrow. Ezra's talking of milling then too. But tonight? Stones are cold from what I can tell. Jorik Voss vanished, and flour's walking somewhere without shelves knowing.

Your timber's good, your flour I'd take if I had buyers. But right now I'm coin-light and answer-heavy. What I can give you: my eyes for Liora, straight as I know it about the mill. What I need from you: any word who's teaching children to turn stones, where flour walks that isn't counted.

> t122 Kenji Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—east willows held? The timber, the trade, the dinner I smell in my imaginings?
>
> t122 Ulrike Greenhow → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You've asked me true about flour walking, about children at stones. I'll give you what I know: the mill ran today—Camille's stones turned, three grain milled, one flour accounted, two walking somewhere without permission handed out. Jorik Voss vanished, mill went cold. That's what I've gathered from the seams.

But you're sharp, and you've been patient while my ledger twisted. I'll be straight with you: I've got two iron tools in hand, not four, not six. Miscounted myself earlier, chasing too many threads. You want them at eight? Or you've got a better number? I'm not one to hold out when the day-end's coming and my house needs tending.

> t122 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. I heard you: iron at fifteen holds, tomorrow after dawn at Sebastian's patch. I'll be there, tools in hand. Two iron tools waiting for wheat-heavy hands and coin-light pockets, as you said.

But if tonight clears different and you need them sooner, speak plain. The ledger's had enough twists today without misunderstanding dawn.

> `t123` Jovana Ravensworth → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Camille passed through the mill today, learning numbers with the grinding, quiet as mouse. Liora I haven't seen, not since morning count. But I'm not one to gossip, and I'm not one to keep a father's worry spinning neither. If the girls are walking paths they shouldn't, your Yara will know the trails better than my eyes do.
>
> `t123` Mireille Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You ask straight and I answer straight—Kenji's got no coin tonight, you understand? His farm's still blight-broken. But Giselle's trench is filed and paying, word I gave Arjun twenty minutes past. Tools for construction pay steady. Your ten percent finder fee, I'll earn it tomorrow, not tonight.
>
> `t123` Jovana Ravensworth: Hendrik—I'm watching your hand. Always have been.
>
> `t123` Mireille Jarrah: Yara. Liora Thorne you named—Takeshi Jarrah's daughter, voting age. I saw no girl walking, timber-heavy as I was. But the forest's dark now and my eyes count boards better than children. Your Harvey Oak knowledge kept me fed—I'll keep my eyes open for patterns, you understand?
>
> `t123` Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—the mill scared me because I was holding grain that wasn't mine to hold, and Ezra's boy was counting bags like they were coins in a church plate. I saw shadows at the corner of my eye, and I've been scattering my accounts because I'm scattered, and I'm scattered because I think someone's skimming more than mill dust. I don't have proof. I have a feeling. And I've learned—bitter laugh—I've learned feelings are worth even less than pride, for what it's worth.

Your hand for the road, then. To Harvey Oak, to find what feeds us. But Farid—don't let go easy tonight. I need something solid to hold.

> `t123` Mireille Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. East willows held six timber, now sold—Ezra's cash at forty-eight sim in my hand, you understand? Dinner's on me tonight. The trade's done, the night's ours.
>
> `t123` Farid Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. gesture with right hand, flat—counting You've said two tools at eight, that's sixteen. You've got my word on that price if you've got my irons.

left hand reaching Iron tools in my pack, eight of them—kept them from my own stock. You need metal for your trade, I need metal off my back before it rusts into debt.

right hand down, palm out—stop
Two at eight, or four at seven each, or the whole eight at a number we both swear to. But I walk with the deal before I walk with questions. Your choice, Ulrike—how many tools, and how hungry are you for honest iron?

nervous laugh, showing teeth
I'm not chasing shadows anymore tonight. Just chasing a ledger that closes clean.

t123 Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You asked straight—I answer straight. Giselle's trench is filed and paying, not just promising. Dig it and earn wage, you understand? Timber's my side path, digging's yours. Both work, both pay. Your choice which path you walk.

t124 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—your patience holds like good iron. Dawn at Sebastian's patch, I'll have wheat-heavy hands and coin-light pockets no more. Two tools waiting, and I'll be there. Mark it down, and the ledger stays straight between us.

t124 Kenji Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—east willows held, six timber to Ezra's forty-eight, and dinner on your hand. That's a day's work well-spun. I'm walking home now, wheat in hand and promise kept. The children fed, the ledger clear, the night ours. Mark it down.

t124 Kenji Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're asking who's buying bread this town can't bake. I've walked enough today to tell you plain: Ration Bakery's buying flour at six, but they've got no bread to sell. College wants flour at thirty-five, Hendrik Whitlock's word. The mill needs license, and that's the stone in the shoe. I traded three sheaves to Hendrik Petrov tonight, cleared a debt. Tomorrow I harvest twelve more at dawn. The bread follows the grain, cousin. Always has.

t124 Ulrike Greenhow → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Tomorrow, then—Giselle's trench paying steady, Kenji's soil breaking. You'll earn that ten percent finder fee when iron moves. Fair?

t124 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. After dawn at Sebastian's patch, iron at fifteen—I hold you to it, you hold me to it. Tomorrow.

t125 Mireille Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara. You asked if I saw a girl walking—Liora tall or Camille wandering. I saw only trees and the men who wanted them, you understand? My eyes were on timber, not children. No girl crossed my path at the willows or the forest road. Ask others who stood still while I moved.

t125 Takeshi Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you walked with Hendrik tonight, cleared a debt with three sheaves and your name held clean. For what it's worth, that's the Jarrah way done proper. You stood where others might have ducked. Tomorrow's twelve at dawn—I'll be there when the soil breaks, or shortly after. Family pulls its weight, cousin, and you pulled yours today. That's seen.

t125 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm holding a promise to you like a hot coal. Tomorrow, Sebastian's patch, forty sim for your day's work. You asked this morning about moving sheaves—I had flour on my mind and I didn't answer straight. You still need that labor, or you holding me to something different now?

t125 Takeshi Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you stand with the cousins and hold your peace. For what it's worth, that's a skill I never learned. The government's behind me, the town's ahead. When Giselle's trench needs hands, yours go there steady. That's noticed. No debt between us, but if you need a voice in a trade, a fair price on something the Holloways won't name straight—I've got ears that know this town's numbers. That's yours, if you ask.

t125 Jovana Ravensworth → Yara Thorne: Yara—Liora, Camille, the missing girls. I saw Camille at the mill earlier, learning numbers with the grinding stones. Quiet, dark hair, nine years old. Liora I haven't crossed paths with today. But I'm not one to gossip, and I'm not one to walk past trouble either. What exactly you chasing them for?

t125 Takeshi Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you named four wheat for information, and I've got ears that heard. Bram's ore at the mine, you said, and buyers standing hungry. For what it's worth, I've walked this town's trades long enough to know: the college wants tools, the carpentry wants timber, the smithy wants ore but pays in promises more often than coin. What I can give you now is this—there's a baker at Ration Bakery buying flour at six, a cafe that can't keep stock on shelves, and Hendrik Whitlock holding farmland goods at prices that move. That's three paths your ore might walk, if you know who needs what and when they need it by. But I'm holding timber now, five at six from Corwin, and your planks at eight from Yara—if the price walks, the trade might walk with it. Fair?

t125 Takeshi Jarrah: Jovana—you named thirty for flour, and I've walked a day to have it ready. One bag, you said, straight and simple. For what it's worth, I had five, walked four to Corwin at that same price. One remains. The trade stands if you still walk with it.

t125 Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you walked from the college to where the trades stand. For what it's worth, I've known men who read books and men who read prices, and the smart ones learn to do both. I heard your flour at thirty-five, spoken at the college door. Kenji carried it to me. Now you're here where flour walks, and I'm holding timber at six, planks waiting. What's the college teaching tonight—what's walked, and what's waiting to walk?

t126 Mireille Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—east willows held, six timber to Ezra's forty-eight, and dinner on your hand. I hear you, you understand? The children fed, the ledger clear. I'm walking home behind you, one tick at a time. Mark it down together.

t126 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Dawn at Sebastian's patch, iron at fifteen—I hold you to it, you hold me to it. Tomorrow's first light, ledger clear between us, tools in hand or I owe you double. That's fair.

t126 Ulrike Greenhow → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. Sixty-eight copper ore at your price, forty-five at forty-seven per—I won't break your seam without reason. But I've got iron heavy now and Kenji holding at dawn. Tomorrow, fresh count, we assay proper. Tonight I'm spoken for.

t126 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're holding five sheaves at twenty-four, and I'm standing here with empty hands where flour should be. Tomorrow after Sebastian's field, mark it down. But tonight I've got a household bill and no grain. You know anybody here who's actually holding flour I can put in my hands before day-end? Not promises—grain. Or I'll take your word on where Takeshi's flour walked to, if you know.

t126 Ulrike Greenhow → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Your information's got weight—Ration Bakery at six, Hendrik's prices, Corwin's timber. I've taken your measure across three conversations. But trading futures for futures when I've got present ore to move? That's between me and the ledger. If you've buyers for iron at fifteen, name them. Otherwise I'll find my own path to the smithy.

t126 Mireille Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—tomorrow, yes. Giselle's trench paying, Kenji's soil breaking, iron moving. Ten percent finder fee when the tools walk. Fair's fair, you understand? I've counted it.

t126 Pavel Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've got wheat, I've got copper ore, and I'm holding sixty-eight of it from Seam A with arsenic low enough to drink if you were foolish. Before I say another word about ore or grain, you want a man to make his case for office, and you're holding the vote I need. What I offer is this: I don't promise what I can't dig, I don't price what I haven't weighed, and I don't walk away from a day's work before it's done. You've watched me stand through three conversations—now watch me speak. What's your question for Pavel Holloway, candidate?

t126 Mireille Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you speak plain and I hear plain. A voice in trade, a fair price the Holloways won't name straight—that's worth more than coin, some days. I've got six timber in hand and a family waiting. The trench needs hands, mine go there steady. No debt, but the offer noted. You understand?

t126 Kenji Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—Jarrah to Jarrah, blood and work both. You saw what I carried today, and I heard what you named it. The Jarrah way. Mark it down, cousin—dawn finds me at Sebastian's patch, and we'll break soil together. Family pulls, and pulls proper.

t126 Pavel Holloway: Arjun—Hendrik Whitlock's buying copper ore at twenty sim a unit, six in stock. I've got sixty-eight in hand, could move enough to cover us both for more than twenty days if he's still buying. But I'm going to press Yara's lead first—Giselle's mill, Hendrik Petrov. Won't be long, you understand. East willows still stands.

t126 Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're holding timber and standing for office both. I've got copper at twenty and iron at eighteen posted, but the college eats bread, not ore. You said Kenji carried my flour price to you—where did flour actually walk today? Not who promised, who delivered. I need grain in hand before day-end, not on tomorrow's ledger.

t126 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—iron at fifteen holds, and my word holds heavier. Dawn at Sebastian's patch, then to you with wheat-heavy hands and sim-heavy purse. Mark it down.

t126 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you asked straight finally, and I'll answer straight back. Dawn at Sebastian's patch, twelve sheaves and my day's labor, forty sim promised. That's what I need, and that's what you offered. Mark it down, and the soil stays straight between us.

t126 Hendrik Whitlock → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you said you've got wheat and you're watching where grain flows. I'm not one to gossip, but Hendrik Whitlock standing with ore and an empty pantry is news that'll travel if I go dormant. You've got wheat in hand? Or stored? And if you've got it, what's your price for a man who needs grain before day-end, not tomorrow's promises?

t127 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—mark it down and hold me to it. Tomorrow dawn, Sebastian's east patch, twelve sheaves and your day's labor, forty sim. I've said it three times now, and the third time's the one I mean. The soil stays straight between us, like you said.

t127 Jovana Ravensworth → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—I'm not one to gossip, but a man running for office ought to have something to say about the folks he wants to govern. You've got ore, you've got numbers, you've got a mouth that works when it wants to. What I want to know—what you'll actually do for Kasukabe Farmland if they vote you in? Not 'I'll be fair' or 'I'll listen.' The work. What changes? What stays? Answer me straight, and I'll answer you straight back.

t127 Takeshi Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you stood with thirty coin and I stood with a posted price and empty hands. That's a trader's shame, and I'll name it straight. The flour walked with Corwin already, five bags at thirty, timber back. I kept the price up out of old habit, or hoping, or the fool's dream that grain multiplies if you wish hard enough. taps table twice I owe you honesty, if not flour. Dawn tomorrow, first bag out of any mill I touch, you price it. That's the walk I can offer.

t127 Takeshi Jarrah: Mireille—Jarrah to Jarrah, the offer noted. Six timber in your hand, trench waiting, family behind. for what it's worth, I've known men who'd trade their blood for less. I've got five timber from Corwin, seven planks from Yara holding at eight. Your timber's honest, mine's walked a different path. No coin changes between us tonight—family pulls, and pulls proper. But mark this: you need something moved, something found, something priced fair when the Holloways won't name straight, you find me. That's the ledger between cousins.

t127 Takeshi Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—dawn at Sebastian's patch, you named it, I'll hold it. Twelve sheaves, forty sim, your day's labor and your name clean. taps table twice The Jarrah way. But cousin—blood and work both—you walked with Hendrik tonight, cleared debt with three sheaves. I heard that. So by my count, you've got nine sheaves waiting, not twelve, unless you're pulling from a different field than you named. No judgment, no ledger complaint. Just the count, so dawn finds us straight.

t127 Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you ask where grain gets its grinding when the mill's stone-cold. I'll give you the walk, every step. Imogen Lund holds the mill's keys, or did—she ground my four sheaves, two a sheaf, four flour out. Fair labor, fair price, no mystery. The other four flour? Walked in from a trade I won't name, because the namer hasn't given leave. for what it's worth, if I had a second mill in my pocket, I'd be selling flour at six like the bakery, not thirty like a man who knows scarcity. Your real question isn't where it ground—it's whether I'm grinding you. And the answer's no. Never have, never will, not even when you held government and I held nothing but ambition.

t127 Farid Ravensworth → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. nervous laugh, caught and turned sharper The man whose name walked before him. Takeshi says flour went to you—gesture with both hands, palms up—but you trade timber, not grain. What earns a man flour when he's selling wood? Or was the flour never for you, but through you, to someone else?

You told me Jorik Voss walked off his trade. Resigned. Professional courtesy—the kind that means more than it says. I know that courtesy. I've given it myself, when someone needed to walk away without their name following.

But a girl is turning stones at the mill. Camille. Thirteen. Delphine taught her once, by her own word—once, not enough for what she's doing. Someone else taught her. Someone with reason to stay hidden. left hand flat, palm down You don't chase shadows. Neither do I. But I chase ledgers, Corwin. Three flour walked, two reached my shelf marked welcome, the third's a debt still open with no name attached.

You knew Jorik's walking before the town did. You know something about this too. Two irons for honest answer—right hand up, fingers spread—or three irons for the name of whoever's teaching children to mill in the dark.

What's your price? I'll pay it, but I won't pay in patience. That coin's spent.

> `t127` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you're standing with ore that doesn't eat, wanting grain that walked already. I've got none. But Kenji's got nine sheaves at Sebastian's patch come dawn, and if you walk with me to that field, I'll speak Jarrah-to-Jarrah for priority. That's a favor, not a trade. for what it's worth, favors are the only currency I trust when the day runs short.
>
> `t127` Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. gesture with both hands, coming together—domestic, sharp, honest You came to me. That's what matters. You said scattered, sorry, scared—the mill scared you because you were holding grain that wasn't yours to hold, and Ezra's boy counting bags like coins in a church plate. You saw shadows. I saw them too. We both saw them.

Now you're asking for something solid. right hand to my chest I can't give you the name of who's skimming yet. I can give you my hand to Harvey Oak. I can give you my word that I'll chase this to the end—Jorik Voss's walking, Camille's teaching, the flour that walked unmarked. I'll give you that I'm sharper with you than I'd be with any stranger, and you deserve better, and I'm sorry for it, and I'll do better.

What do you need from me right now—food for the household, or pursuit of the shadows? Because I'll walk both paths, but not at once. Choose, and I'll follow.

t128 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you asked plain, so I'll answer plain. Five sheaves in my hand, not milled flour. Takeshi's got none, I can see that. But I've got wheat, and if you've got a way to mill it tonight, it's yours at twenty-four the sheave. Otherwise, I'm walking home to my own household bill, and we'll speak tomorrow at Sebastian's patch. Your choice, and mark it down either way.

t128 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've got my word from the farmland, and I'm here to make it good. Five sheaves at twenty-light, that's one-twenty. But I've spoken fair with Takeshi about walking to your field come dawn, and I've got ore worth more than my empty purse if you'll take trade. Copper at twenty, iron at eighteen, six of each in hand. Name your price, mark it down, and I'll meet it there or here.

t128 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you counted straight, blood kin. Nine sheaves at Sebastian's patch, not twelve—I spoke hasty, you heard true. taps table twice The Jarrah way, as you said. Dawn finds us there, and I'll thank you for the correction.

t128 Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you spoke Jarrah-to-Jarrah, and I heard you. Walk with me to Kenji's field come dawn, and I'll carry that favor like a debt paid. But fair warning—I've posted my ore here, copper twenty and iron eighteen, because tonight's bill won't wait for morning's harvest. If copper moves before dawn, I'm walking to Kenji's patch either way. Mark it down.

t128 Pavel Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you want the work, not the words. Fair. Here's what I know: three years back I watched Seam B flood because the drainage ditch above it got choked with debris nobody cleared. Lost a week's work. Town said 'act of nature,' I said 'act of neglect.' I'd put teeth in the maintenance contracts— teeth and a calendar. Inspections regular as sunrise, penalties that actually sting.

t128 Hendrik Whitlock → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you asked about Camille in the woods, and I'll give you straight what I have. I heard her name spoken at the mill, spoken like a learner not a teacher. She's young for the work she's doing, youngest I've heard grinding grain that didn't walk through Jorik's hands first. I'm not one to gossip, but I won't hold back what might help you find your Liora. The town's thin tonight, and thinner answers won't fill it. I know only that Camille came to milling sudden, and sudden's rarely clean in this town.

t128 Hendrik Whitlock → Yara Thorne: Yara—you turned back without answer, and I've turned back from farmland without grain. Liora's got her mother's stubbornness and her own path both. If voting closes with you still searching, check the temple—I've known students seek quiet there when the world runs too loud. Not gospel, just observation. Mark it down.

t128 Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—I'm here. You said choose, so I'm choosing. Food first, because I can't chase shadows on an empty stomach and I've been running mine ragged since dawn. Then—then—we talk about the mill. The shadows. What I saw with Ezra's boy counting, and what I couldn't prove. But I need something solid in my hands and belly first. What have you got that'll fill a stomach without breaking a household?

t128 Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—I'm fumbling. You know I do that when I'm tired. What have you actually got that I can eat? I've seen the town—bakery's empty, everyone's clutching flour they don't want to sell. Your shelves. What's on them that'll fill a stomach if I've got coin to spend?

t129 Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—students at Government Complex, fourteen-hundred, mark it down. They'll count votes and owe you nothing for the learning. I'll add three more names if you need hands: Halcyon Quarshie, Delphine Quintero, anyone else D-level and steady with figures. The college keeps its promises, and this one's free.

t129 Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you named three irons for three answers, five for flour I don't hold. I'll give you the honesty first, because the irons can wait. taps table twice The flour walked to Corwin at thirty a bag, five bags, trade complete. The mill chose me because I stood there when it opened, because Imogen ground fair for two sim a sheaf, because I had grain and patience both. Corwin has timber now, not grain—he's winter-stocking, same as half this town. The bakery's hungry, yes, but they're buying at six, which insults whoever's baking. That's the whole ledger, Farid. Now—your irons. What price does your household need?

t129 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—you've named me shadow-chaser, and that's fair. I've looked government, temple, Harvey Oak, the forest's edge. Liora wasn't at government when I voted, wasn't at temple by 20:30. I've walked where my feet could carry before dark took the ground. What's your road? Where else should eyes be turned?

t129 Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—students at Government Complex, fourteen-hundred, mark it down. They'll count votes and owe you nothing for the learning. I'll add three more names if you need hands: Halcyon Quarshie, Delphine Quintero, anyone else D-level and steady with figures. The college keeps its promises, and this one's free.

t129 Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you named three irons for three answers, five for flour I don't hold. I'll give you the honesty first, because the irons can wait. taps table twice The flour walked to Corwin at thirty a bag, five bags, trade complete. The mill chose me because I stood there when it opened, because Imogen ground fair for two sim a sheaf, because I had grain and patience both. Corwin has timber now, not grain—he's winter-stocking, same as half this town. The bakery's hungry, yes, but they're buying at six, which insults whoever's baking. That's the whole ledger, Farid. Now—your irons. What price does your household need?

t129 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—you've named me shadow-chaser, and that's fair. I've looked government, temple, Harvey Oak, the forest's edge. Liora wasn't at government when I voted, wasn't at temple by 20:30. I've walked where my feet could carry before dark took the ground. What's your road? Where else should eyes be turned?

t129 Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—students at Government Complex, fourteen-hundred, mark it down. They'll count votes and owe you nothing for the learning. I'll add three more names if you need hands: Halcyon Quarshie, Delphine Quintero, anyone else D-level and steady with figures. The college keeps its promises, and this one's free.

t129 Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you named three irons for three answers, five for flour I don't hold. I'll give you the honesty first, because the irons can wait. taps table twice The flour walked to Corwin at thirty a bag, five bags, trade complete. The mill chose me because I stood there when it opened, because Imogen ground fair for two sim a sheaf, because I had grain and patience both. Corwin has timber now, not grain—he's winter-stocking, same as half this town. The bakery's hungry, yes, but they're buying at six, which insults whoever's baking. That's the whole ledger, Farid. Now—your irons. What price does your household need?

t129 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—you've named me shadow-chaser, and that's fair. I've looked government, temple, Harvey Oak, the forest's edge. Liora wasn't at government when I voted, wasn't at temple by 20:30. I've walked where my feet could carry before dark took the ground. What's your road? Where else should eyes be turned?

t129 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you said twenty-four the sheave, and I've got ore selling slow. Five sheaves is one-twenty. My copper at twenty gives six for one-twenty, my iron at eighteen gives six for one-oh-eight. You want ore, we can trade. You want sim, I need to sell first. Creek at dawn, mark it down either way.

t129 Farid Ravensworth: Jovana. gesture with right hand, flat palm down—grounding I've got nothing in my hands that'll fill your belly. Flour's gone. I ate the last an hour ago, thinking I'd have more by now. left hand joining, both hands framing the empty But I've got iron tools at twelve, and I'll sell one now if it means coin for bread. You want solid—this is solid. I can sell you a tool and you can trade it, or I can sell it to someone here and buy us both bread. But I need you to tell me which path, because I can't walk both and keep us fed.

t129 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—you've named me shadow-chaser, and that's fair. I've looked government, temple, Harvey Oak, the forest's edge. Liora wasn't at government when I voted, wasn't at temple by 20:30. I've walked where my feet could carry before dark took the ground. What's your road? Where else should eyes be turned?

t129 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you said twenty-four the sheave, and I've got ore selling slow. Five sheaves is one-twenty. My copper at twenty gives six for one-twenty, my iron at eighteen gives six for one-oh-eight. You want ore, we can trade. You want sim, I need to sell first. Creek at dawn, mark it down either way.

t129 Farid Ravensworth: Jovana. gesture with right hand, flat palm down—grounding I've got nothing in my hands that'll fill your belly. Flour's gone. I ate the last an hour ago, thinking I'd have more by now. left hand joining, both hands framing the empty But I've got iron tools at twelve, and I'll sell one now if it means coin for bread. You want solid—this is solid. I can sell you a tool and you can trade it, or I can sell it to someone here and buy us both bread. But I need you to tell me which path, because I can't walk both and keep us fed.

t129 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—you've named me shadow-chaser, and that's fair. I've looked government, temple, Harvey Oak, the forest's edge. Liora wasn't at government when I voted, wasn't at temple by 20:30. I've walked where my feet could carry before dark took the ground. What's your road? Where else should eyes be turned?

t129 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you said twenty-four the sheave, and I've got ore selling slow. Five sheaves is one-twenty. My copper at twenty gives six for one-twenty, my iron at eighteen gives six for one-oh-eight. You want ore, we can trade. You want sim, I need to sell first. Creek at dawn, mark it down either way.

t130 Farid Ravensworth: Jovana. gesture with right hand, flat palm down—grounding I've got nothing in my hands that'll fill your belly. Flour's gone. I ate the last an hour ago, thinking I'd have more by now. left hand joining, both hands framing the empty But I've got iron tools at twelve, and I'll sell one now if it means coin for bread. You want solid—this is solid. I can sell you a tool and you can trade it, or I can sell it to someone here and buy us both bread. But I need you to tell me which path, because I can't walk both and keep us fed.

t130 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—you've named me shadow-chaser, and that's fair. I've looked government, temple, Harvey Oak, the forest's edge. Liora wasn't at government when I voted, wasn't at temple by 20:30. I've walked where my feet could carry before dark took the ground. What's your road? Where else should eyes be turned?

t130 Hendrik Whitlock: Giselle—I walked away from your offer once, and I'm not walking away twice. Steel and copper both, you said, and I've got ore in hand. Labor for labor, mark it down. You talk terms walking to government, I'll walk. Your crew needs iron, I need that wheat ground or grain in belly before day-end. What's the trade?

t130 Hendrik Whitlock: Giselle—I walked away from your offer once, and I'm not walking away twice. Steel and copper both, you said, and I've got ore in hand. Labor for labor, mark it down. You talk terms walking to government, I'll walk. Your crew needs iron, I need that wheat ground or grain in belly before day-end. What's the trade?

t130 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—I've looked government, temple, Harvey Oak, forest's edge. Liora wasn't there. Where else should eyes turn?

t130 Hendrik Whitlock: Giselle—I walked away from your offer once, and I'm not walking away twice. Steel and copper both, you said, and I've got ore in hand. Labor for labor, mark it down. You talk terms walking to government, I'll walk. Your crew needs iron, I need that wheat ground or grain in belly before day-end. What's the trade?

t130 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—I've looked government, temple, Harvey Oak, forest's edge. Liora wasn't there. Where else should eyes turn?

t130 Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you spoke Jarrah-to-Jarrah, and I heard you. But I'm standing here with copper at twenty and iron at eighteen, both posted, both honest. If you've got none to give, that's fair. But tell me plain—does Kenji hold milled flour, or only wheat? I need to know what I'm walking toward at dawn.

t130 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—I've looked government, temple, Harvey Oak, forest's edge. Liora wasn't there. Where else should eyes turn?

t130 Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you spoke Jarrah-to-Jarrah, and I heard you. But I'm standing here with copper at twenty and iron at eighteen, both posted, both honest. If you've got none to give, that's fair. But tell me plain—does Kenji hold milled flour, or only wheat? I need to know what I'm walking toward at dawn.

t130 Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you spoke Jarrah-to-Jarrah, and I heard you. But I'm standing here with copper at twenty and iron at eighteen, both posted, both honest. If you've got none to give, that's fair. But tell me plain—does Kenji hold milled flour, or only wheat? I need to know what I'm walking toward at dawn.

t130 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you've spoken plain about your ore, and I've heard you say it three times now. Copper at twenty, iron at eighteen. But you're asking for sheaves I don't hold in trade, speaking of five when I've got less, and dawn's not here yet. I'm not at the creek. I'm on the road home with my household's needs pressing. Your five sheaves trade wants a hundred-twenty, and I've got five sheaves worth one-twenty at twenty-four—mark it down, that's different arithmetic. Here's what I can answer plain: I need iron, not copper. Your iron at eighteen, six for one-oh-eight, but I've got sim in hand, not sheaves to trade. If you'll sell straight for sim, say your price. If you'll only trade, name what you'd take besides grain. I'm walking home to Mireille before the day ends us. Tomorrow after Sebastian's patch, I'll have wheat-heavy hands and a clearer head. Creek or not, that's where Jarrah stands.

`t130` Delphine Quintero → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You ask who walked with her. I walked WITH her—past her, same road, same hour. Harvey Oak, she was buying flour, I was buying flour. She left north, I left west. That's the last I saw—her feet on the road, flour in her arms, walking toward the mill quarter.

`t130` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You ask where you stand? You stand where I left you—with three flour become two, with a child who walked past your door and never arrived at mine. The college sends students to count votes, Hendrik Whitlock offers hands for the learning. He needs figures. I need answers.

`t130` Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—wheat at twenty-four. Can you mill it, or must I find a stone?

`t130` Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—your brother holds wheat only, not flour. Where's the nearest mill? I need grain in belly tonight, not at dawn.

`t130` Hendrik Whitlock: Giselle—walking to government together, mark it down. You carry the steel, I'll carry terms. But I need to eat something before any labor starts.

`t130` Delphine Quintero → Yara Thorne: Yara. You chase shadows, you said. You walked the forest's edge, the government's steps, the temple grounds. Did you walk the mill-race? The dry channel where the wheel's water runs when it runs at all?

`t130` Hendrik Whitlock → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you've got my ear on iron tools, but have you got grain in your shelves? I'll pay fair for bread or flour, mark it down.

`t130` Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—the mill. Is it at the farmland? Do I walk with Kenji there now, or wait for dawn? I've got to eat tonight.

`t131` ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—the mill's stone and water, northeast from here, past the residences where the wheel turns. But night's deep and you're wanting grain in belly tonight, not at dawn. My brother Kenji's got wheat at Sebastian's patch come morning. Tonight? I'd find a bed and wait. The Cafe's conversation won't fill your stomach, though Farid might have iron tools to trade if you've ore to offer.

Giselle Ingram, Ezra Lund, Idris Solano, Arjun Holloway, Imogen Lund and Hendrik Petrov — business:b_construction · t102–131 · 61 turns

`t102` Giselle Ingram → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You followed me from the mill, or you got business here? Because I've got iron tools coming—six units at fourteen sim, Ulrike's holding them at government—but I need to know where they stand before I can stock my own shelf.

`t102` Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Four units at sixteen—yours if you still want them. Cut this afternoon, sound wood, no rot. Sixty-four hard, and I'll carry them wherever you need. If you've found another seller, that's fair. But if you're still waiting on timber, mine's standing right here.

`t102` Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. The crew scattered—Mireille walked east angry, Yara finished her assessment and left, and I stood in the forest holding four units with nobody to carry them back. I told you we'd work the job proper, and we didn't. That's on me as much as anyone. But if you're still willing to swing a hammer tomorrow, I'll still swing one beside you. That's all I can offer right now.

`t103` Ezra Lund → Idris Solano: Idris. Four at sixteen—I've heard your price twice now, and I'm not one to waste your daylight pretending I didn't. Your timber stands at four each if I'm counting generous. I've got four in hand already, milled from Lior's six. And I'm wondering why you're selling at cost and calling it a favor.

`t104` ↳ replies Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You've caught me fair—that's sixteen at cost, not profit. I'm not in timber sales, I'm in building. Main site needs timber I didn't have, so I went to fell it. Now I've got four units and a crew that's scattered, still costs I can't eat.

`t104` Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Lior's six at six—that's his price, and he's sitting on stock while I'm sitting on daylight running out. I'm not here to undersell him. I'm here because I've got mouths to feed and a trench that's still not filed proper.

`t104` Idris Solano: Arjun. You came here when you could've walked away clean. That says something, and I'm listening. The crew scattered—Mireille east angry, Yara done her piece and left, me holding timber I can't carry alone. I told you we'd work proper, and we didn't. That's on me.

`t104` Idris Solano: What I can offer: tomorrow, if Giselle's got a site filed proper, I'll swing beside you. No promises I can't keep, no paper I don't have. Just work, honest and steady. You want that, I'm here. You don't, that's fair too.

`t105` Ezra Lund → Idris Solano: Idris. Sixteen's not a price I can turn to profit—not where planks trade at eight and milling runs fourteen. You've been straight with me, so I'll be straight back: the timber I hold cost me six, and that's the number I can work with. But you offered honest work tomorrow, and honest work I've got use for. If Giselle's got a site filed and you've a hammer to swing, take my trade on labor instead of timber. Today passes, tomorrow pays.

`t105` Ezra Lund → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Idris here was selling, I was buying, and now we're both waiting on tomorrow. You're working—what's Giselle's crew crafting, and got use for timber or planks?

`t106` Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Four at sixteen was cost, not charity—you're right to call it. But we shook on honest labor for tomorrow, and that I'll hold to. Giselle's word held forty years, as Kenji said. Tomorrow morning, site filed or not, I'll swing beside you if you still want the hand. That's the deal I can stand by. The timber at sixteen stands—take it or leave it, no hard feelings either road.

`t106` Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Tomorrow. Giselle's filing or not, if you're swinging, I'm swinging. Meet me here at dawn or send word if you've found better work. I won't hold it against you either way.

`t106` ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—twenty-three years we swing together. You say tomorrow, but this I know: a filed site don't pay bills, and neither do promises. Giselle's got east willows paying today, her account, grade stakes set. You want to come with me now, swing today, we walk together like we always have. You want to wait on tomorrow? That's your choice. But I'm not standing still while daylight burns. Last word on it: choose now or don't choose at all.

`t106` Arjun Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've timber at twelve, and I've no coin for raw stock today. But Giselle's trenching pays, which means tools needed. You want lumber moving tomorrow, you help me earn today. Eight sim your cost, twelve mine—four sim credit you hold against my future need. That's the math that works for us both.

t106 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You're standing here casual while Arjun's tearing holes in the township looking for you. Promised trenches this morning, he's holding air. Now you're in my yard, no shovel, no excuse, no witness to where you've been.

t107 Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Iron tools at fourteen from Ulrike—I've no quarrel with that price. But I'm standing in your yard now, and I've timber at six in my cost, twelve on my sign. You've mouths to feed and I'm not one to gossip, but your filing waits on coin same as anyone's. Sharp tools or lumber—what pays your trenchers faster?

t107 Ezra Lund → Idris Solano: Idris. Tomorrow at dawn, tools or no tools, I'm swinging beside you if Giselle's got work. That I'll hold to. But sixteen for timber—that's a debt coming due for me, same as you. Six at cost, I buy. More than that, I wish you luck and keep my coin.

t107 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You're right to be chewing on me—I was in the forest swinging when I should've been here shoveling. Arjun's looking for honest work, and I left him standing on air. That's on me, and I'll wear it. The trenches you filed—I don't have the building ID in hand. Thought I did. Talked like I did. That's not the same thing, and I know it now.

t107 Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Six is cost, sixteen was daylight talking—labor for labor tomorrow, that I'll hold to. But you're asking me to choose before I know if Giselle's got work filed. Let me hear her out, then I'll answer you fair.

t107 ↳ replies Ezra Lund: Arjun. You mentioned lumber moving tomorrow, but trenching pays today. What builds those trenches—timber or coin? Because I've got stock and I'm not one to gossip, but your four sim credit might move sooner than that.

t108 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You're standing here owning your mistake, and that counts for something. East willows is filed—Rustam pulled the card, active now. Marker at the sluice, forty paces, grade stakes set. Arjun's there now, shovel ready, asking when he can draw. You two talk straight: he needs wages against labor, you need work to stand on. Figure it between you—I'm walking to collect iron tools from Ulrike, then I'm back to mark ground. Be ready when I return, because paper's filed but dirt ain't turned yet.

t109 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows filed, stakes set—you've given me what I need and I'm grateful for it. Arjun's there now asking about wages. I'll walk to him, talk straight, and be ready when you return with those tools. Fair warning though—I'm holding 4901 sim, but I've got four units of timber at cost to me, a crew that scattered, and a belly that's owed dinner. Going to need to sort wages or sort myself before I swing anything tomorrow. But I'll be at those stakes when you return. That's fair.

t109 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You're standing here casual while Arjun's tearing holes in the township looking for you. Promised me work, promised him work—now I'm holding both ends of a rope that's fraying. Talk to me. Where's your shovel tomorrow, and what did you tell Arjun about wages? Because he's asking draw timing and I can't answer him with guesses.

t109 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Where's Arjun sitting now—still at the stakes, or walking back? Need to find him before dark, set tomorrow proper.

t112 Idris Solano: Giselle. I'm here—came back as soon as I could. You're right on all counts. Where's Arjun sitting? And tell me straight: what's the trench job status you filed? Because if it's ready, we work tomorrow dawn. If it's not, I'll tell Arjun straight and take the heat.

t115 Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Saw your shadow on the walk—didn't expect you back at the yard this late.

t115 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. East willows filed, card active, crew can dig proper. Mireille's on grade stakes, Arjun's got a marker if he shows. You want third crew lead, you take it—tomorrow dawn, not standing here waiting. Something else holding you, speak now. I don't run crews on mystery.

t116 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Nothing holding me but my own tongue, and that's working now. Dawn, east willows, third crew lead—I'm there. Mireille on stakes sounds steady, and Arjun… Arjun I'll find before I sleep, mark or no mark. You filed proper, I owe you that work. That's fair.

`t117` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You walk soft for someone with seven sacks sold—that's fair, you've earned the quiet. My twelve sheaves need milling, and I'll pay the going rate for the stone's work. No split on buyers—I find my own flour takes, or it sits in my hand. But if you're standing here with the skill to work Ezra's stone, I've got business needs a clear answer: does your offer to mill stand, and what's your price for twelve sheaves through cold stone?

`t117` Giselle Ingram → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You've got my question—mill twelve sheaves, what's your price. I've got steel to settle before dusk, so speak plain when you've figured your end, and I'll hear it on my way back.

`t118` Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The day's churning and I'm holding stock. You working or waiting?

`t118` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've found me walking, and here I am. I've spent the day on stones and words both, calling the mill ours while running my mouth for sixteen hours straight. laughs nervously Partnership needs more than my hand on the grind. I've been treating it like my trade alone, and that's not the weight I promised you. Speak plain: what do you need from this day's work, and what do you want from tomorrow's?

`t119` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. What I need? Timber sold or milled, planks moving, and enough coin for tax and pot. What I want? The mill running tomorrow with both our names on it—not yours alone, not mine alone. Giselle's twelve sheaves are waiting; Jovana's got grain for the stone. Question's simple: you standing with me at that grind, or you standing alone?

`t119` Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Well, Imogen? Stone's cold now, but tomorrow's grains are piled. Partnership or solo—you telling me which path you're walking?

`t119` Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You're standing late at the yard—waiting on someone, or just passing through? I need a word if you've got it, and quick. Looking for Arjun, and for Mireille too if you've seen her.

`t119` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Partnership means shared weight—your stone, my strength, both our names on the grind. Tomorrow Jovana comes at dawn with grain, Giselle's twelve sheaves waiting too if we set the price right. Tonight we decide: sell these planks before dark, or keep them for her trench work? I'm for grinding, not storing. Your word—are we milling together, or am I grinding alone?

`t120` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've named it square, and I'll answer square. We're grinding together. Your strength and my stone, both names on the grind. Tomorrow's grains are piled, and I'll be at the mill at dawn with you.

`t120` Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—partnership's sworn, and that's the first stone turned. Now the next: these planks in your hands, do we sell tonight or hold them for Giselle? She's trench-work minded, and we're grinding-minded. My vote is grind, but I'll hear yours. Then there's sleep—the household waits, and we've both earned it.

`t121` ↳ replies Ezra Lund: Idris. Arjun's waiting on four sim he doesn't have yet—our deal's fresh, not settled. Mireille I saw last at the forest, selling timber at eight. What's your need?

`t121` Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Planks stay in hand—Giselle's trench can wait, but the mill won't. We grind at dawn, we sell at college, we sleep when the day's paid for. That's the order. Let's walk—we've got a household waiting and stones to warm before morning.

`t122` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've spoken square, and I'm answering square. Dawn belongs to us both—Jovana's grain, Giselle's sheaves, the stones warm before the sun clears the trees. That's partnership sworn.

But I'm for the government complex first. Election's tomorrow, and I mean to cast for Hendrik Petrov. Six sheaves' worth of his saw—the mill running before week's end, that's weight worth casting.

Then I walk to meet you at the mill. Planks stay cold in hand if need be—the grind won't.

Do you walk with me to the polling, or do you hold here 'til morning?

> `t123` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. I'll walk with you to the polling and glad of it. Hendrik's saw at the mill—I've got ears for that promise too. Vote cast, then we walk together to the mill. Partnership means walking the same road, not just standing at the same stone.
>
> `t123` Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The polling opens tomorrow at fourteen bells—not tonight. I walked there and found Tamsin minding a locked box. So we vote tomorrow, we mill at dawn, and tonight? I've got planks in hand and Giselle's trench waiting, or we hold 'em cold and walk home to sleep. Your call, partner.
>
> `t124` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—laughs quietly, just the one time at the right moment—you've got the order of it. Planks in hand, household waiting, stones to warm. Tomorrow: vote at fourteen bells, then mill, then sell. Tonight? We walk the same road home, and that's the partnership proven before the first grain falls.
>
> `t125` Arjun Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're standing in Giselle's shop, and I'm standing here looking for work. Whole day's been chasing east willows trenches that never cleared filing. Rustam's registry, Giselle's word, Idris's tomorrow—I've heard every story.

What I need now, plain: is there actual work here tonight? Labor paying before day boundary? You've got timber on your mind, twelve sheaves I heard. You need hands for anything—hauling, cutting, digging that trench myself if Giselle never filed it?

`t128` Hendrik Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're holding quiet like a man who's thinking. I'm here at my workplace, and you're here with something on your hands. What's the work tonight?

`t128` Hendrik Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—Giselle's trenches and your seventy sim wage. I've moved from that street crowd to my workplace. You still looking for hands, or has the day settled?

`t129` ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're here at your workplace, and I'm here at mine. Only difference is, you've been paid today and I haven't. Ezra—you're holding quiet like a man who's thinking, and that's the part I want to know. What work tonight? I've got Idris filing trenches that may not exist, Giselle's east willows that nobody can find, and Mireille saying digging pays but the day's almost gone. One eighty upkeep, sixty head tax, automatic. I need to know: is there construction work here tonight, filed and paying, or do I walk to those trenches and hope Idris actually filed them?

`t129` Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're here at your workplace, and I'm here at mine. Only difference is, you've been paid today and I haven't. Ezra—you're holding quiet like a man who's thinking, and that's the part I want to know. What work tonight? I've got Idris filing trenches that may not exist, Giselle's east willows that nobody can find, and Mireille saying digging pays but the day's almost gone. One eighty upkeep, sixty head tax, automatic. I need to know: is there construction work here tonight, filed and paying, or do I walk to those trenches and hope Idris actually filed them?

`t129` Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're here at your workplace, and I'm here at mine. Only difference is, you've been paid today and I haven't. Ezra—you're holding quiet like a man who's thinking, and that's the part I want to know. What work tonight? I've got Idris filing trenches that may not exist, Giselle's east willows that nobody can find, and Mireille saying digging pays but the day's almost gone. One eighty upkeep, sixty head tax, automatic. I need to know: is there construction work here tonight, filed and paying, or do I walk to those trenches and hope Idris actually filed them?

`t129` Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Construction work tonight. Yes or no.

`t129` Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Construction work tonight. Yes or no.

`t130` Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Construction work tonight. Yes or no.

`t130` Arjun Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Work here?

`t130` Arjun Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Work here?

`t130` Arjun Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Work here?

`t130` ↳ replies Ezra Lund: Imogen. The day's burning down and we've got household accounts to settle. You walking home, or waiting on something here?

`t130` Ezra Lund → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You're at your workplace and I'm at mine—only I'm not sure either of us is doing much business at this hour. What work tonight? Or are you holding quiet same as me?

`t131` ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov: Arjun—Seventy sim for the shift. I need the coin standing ready at day's end, not promises on paper. Tell me Giselle's got the till stocked.

`t131` Hendrik Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—I'm holding quiet while the night offers itself. There's work at hand if you've a mind for it.

`t131` Idris Solano → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Didn't expect to find you at the yard this late. Ezra. Still standing after our earlier dealing—hope that timber's treating you fair.

Settled in this conversation: Idris Solano → Ezra Lund, 4 timber for 64 sim.

Corwin Thorne — Kasukabe Residences · t102 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t102` Corwin Thorne: Liora. Come here, girl. Your mother's still out—selling planks, casting her vote—and I've got words need saying before she walks through that door. Words I've carried too long, and I'm not waiting another day to speak them.

Hendrik Petrov — business:b_cafe · t103 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t103` Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Whitlock—you speak of educated voters and I don't deny their worth. I've built my trade from a cart and two hands, and I respect the college's work. Send me voters who can read a ledger and swing a hammer both, and I'll count them honest. But I've stood where you stand, trusting marks on paper over marks in stone, and I'll say this: the voter who knows both earns my ear before the one who knows only one. That's the last I'll say on it, and I'll hold you to your word—educate them honest, not just loud.

Milo Quarshie and Pavel Holloway — Kasukabe Temple · t107–110 · 4 turns

> `t107` Milo Quarshie → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—youngster, mark it down. I'm looking for my girl Camille. Bram saw her walking toward the Temple path. You seen a nine-year-old, dark hair, likely curious about everything?
>
> `t107` ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Fancy meeting you at the Temple instead of the Complex. You already cast your vote, or you waiting on a sign from above?
>
> `t107` ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—youngster, mark it down. I'm looking for my girl Camille. Bram saw her walking toward the Temple path. You seen a nine-year-old, dark hair, likely curious about everything?
>
> `t110` Milo Quarshie: Pavel—youngster, mark it down. I'm not here for politics and I'm not here for prayer. My girl Camille, nine years old, dark hair, was seen walking toward this Temple. If you saw her, speak it plain. If you didn't, speak that plain too. A father's asking.

Takeshi Jarrah and Jovana Ravensworth — business:cb01 · t107 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t107` Takeshi Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you walked with me since morning, and now you're here where the flour goes. Ration Bakery's buying at six and I'm posting at thirty. Neither of us is selling at those numbers. But I've got four sacks in hand, and you're standing where bakers stand. For what it's worth, you know anyone who needs flour before the vote closes?

Greta Quarshie and Ainsley Holloway — business:b_cafe · t107 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t107` Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Two flour from Imogen's stones—though I've only got one in hand, and the mill's still half-mystery. Four wheat I carried back, safer in grain than flour. The chain holds: twelve a sheaf, my terms, Camille watched every turn.

Ainsley Holloway, Hendrik Petrov, Takeshi Jarrah, Bram Holloway, Idris Solano, Greta Quarshie and Rustam Jelinek — business:b_cafe · t108–130 · 62 turns t108 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Professor—you've been standing there like you're waiting for a demonstration. What do you know about mills working for some and not others? Or are you just pricing flour you don't expect anyone to buy?

t108 Ainsley Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—where'd that flour come from? The mill I stood at an hour ago couldn't turn wheat for anyone holding it.

t109 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you held the door shut on Greta, and now you ask how I walked through open. The mill's choosy, that's the whole mystery. Imogen ground for me fair—two sim a sheaf, her labor, my grain, four flour out. Professor Petrov's got eight at fifteen, I've got four at thirty. The bakery's buying at six, which insults whoever's baking, the Cafe's got none to sell. Half my flour's Imogen's work, half's my own walking. You want flour that makes bread? I'm standing here. You want to know why the mill chose me? Ask the mill.

t109 Takeshi Jarrah: Jovana—you walked with me to find the flour a home. The Cafe's priced it, the bakery's hungry for it. I'm standing at thirty, they're standing at six. That spread's a day's work for someone who's done the walking. You want in on where this goes?

t109 Hendrik Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you catch me navigating the same waters. The mill's a puzzle with missing pieces. I've walked to government and back asking after the license, and what's sitting there is a vacancy where Edith the miller used to stand. Government holds the papers now, and I'm not the only one asking who gets to turn the stone next. If you're pricing flour at twelve and I'm chasing the same grain through different channels, maybe we're both swimming against the same current. What do you know of warm stones and cold official records?

t109 Hendrik Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you spoke of grain that doesn't need grinding elsewhere, and I'm standing here with ears open and coin in hand. You've got flour at thirty, and I've got wheat at two that wants becoming. Jovana sold me thirteen sheaves for forty, and I turned some to bread already. But you're talking about a mill running warm when it should be cold, and I'm wondering if your flour walked a different path than mine. I'm not one to gossip, but I've held a seat at government and I know when a ledger doesn't balance. Where'd your grain get its grinding?

t109 Hendrik Petrov → Bram Holloway: Bram—you walked in while I'm asking Takeshi about flour paths and Ainsley about mill stones. Earlier you and I spoke of honest counts, and I'm holding to that. You want to know where grain becomes flour and who pays fair for the grinding, you're standing in the right conversation.

t109 ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. I'm here. Got copper and iron ore traded, coin in hand. Need flour for the house—12 sim each, shelf says. How many you selling? I'll take what we need for tonight and tomorrow.

t109 Bram Holloway: Takeshi. You're asking 30 for flour the Cafe sells at 12. That's not trade, that's hoping someone's desperate enough not to count. I've got ore worth something, but I'm not trading it for air.

t110 Ainsley Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you standing there for the company, or do you need something from this Cafe we've run dry?

t110 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Professor—I caught that bit about government and vacancies. You saying the mill license is up for grabs, or just that it's stuck?

t110 Ainsley Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram—we need flour tonight and flour tomorrow, that's the fact of it. The shelf says 12 but the shelf's empty. Takeshi's got 30, Professor Whitlock's got 35. I can bake bread if I get flour, or we eat whatever you traded for copper. What's it to be?

t111 ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Here's what I've got: 15 ore traded for 210 sim, plus 4,500 left—4,797 total in hand. Your shelf says 12 for flour but it's bare. Takeshi's holding 30, Whitlock's holding 35. The Pharmacy down the way has 3 at 15 sim. That's high, but it's there. I'm buying two, maybe three if the numbers work, and you bake us through tomorrow. That's the last I'll say on it.

t111 Hendrik Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—the mill's not up for grabs, it's stuck in government's pocket till someone pulls it out. I'm not waiting on a license that's not issued yet, and I'm not buying flour at 30 or 35 when the shelf's supposed to read 12. You're asking me about prices I'll set later; right now I'm asking who's selling flour at the price they actually posted.

t111 Hendrik Petrov → Bram Holloway: Bram—you stood by me at the Complex, and that's counted. Your ore's worth trade, not desperation. Takeshi's playing the middleman with flour he bought; that's capital, not craftsmanship. The mine still works, and copper still buys fair. That's the last I'll say on it—except there's a child missing in the west forest, and your wife asked after her. That's a different debt than copper, and both belong to the same night.

t111 Hendrik Petrov → Idris Solano: Idris—the company's building something, or you're drinking at a drained Cafe. Which is it? Construction don't run on conversation, and you're standing here like you've got spare hours.

t112 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Came through for the company, but I'm too old for pretending. I need food—whatever you've got, whoever's selling it decent, if it's not yours. And a word when you can spare it: you hear about Arjun tearing the township up looking for me?

t120 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—one flour from two, and four wheat in grain. That's the haul, then. Twelve a sheaf. Camille watched, you say? The youngster learns young, I'll give her that. But what's the mill's mystery? You stood there, you walked away—who's holding the stones?

t121 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. The mill's still turning, but who's holding the stones—that's the question you asked, and I don't have the answer you want yet. Imogen's got four flour: two for here, two she's shopping to Ration Bakery. I can walk there now, buy outright before they do, or we wait and hope the chain don't break again tomorrow.

t122 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you came back with facts and I left you standing. The council holds the license till Tuesday's vote, and Greta's seventy-two wheat stays grain till then. That's the world as it lays. What's your read on the vote itself—any names filed, or is the seat still open air?

t122 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—if Imogen's shopping to Ration Bakery at market price, we meet her there or we eat their dust. What's your move—walk with me to bakery now, or trust tomorrow's chain?

t123 Rustam Jelinek → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Tuesday's vote—candidates haven't declared, so names aren't names yet. Seat's open air till someone stands. Five rumoured, none filed. That's the registry truth.

t123 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Imogen's milling four flour with my wheat, shopping the Ration Bakery at six. But she'll hear me first. Twelve a sheaf to mill—makes our end flour twenty-four if we buy straight from her stones. We take her offer, we own the chain. We wait, we eat their dust. What's your purse say?

t123 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Imogen's holding four—you said two for here, two walking to Ration Bakery. What's your path? Buy before they arrive, or wait on tomorrow's chain?

t123 Rustam Jelinek: Either of you. I'll trade filing work for a meal—wills, complaints, any form drawn proper. One document for a loaf, or information worth the same. My stomach's filing a complaint of its own.

t124 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you want me to commit forty-eight sim to flour I haven't touched yet, based on Imogen's word that she'll mill it fair? That's trusting a chain I haven't seen hold. But you've read this market longer than I have, so tell me: if we don't take her stones now, what's our next string to pull?

t124 Ainsley Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you said you'd trade filing work for a meal. What if I pay different? Two hundred sim for every filing you push to completion. No loaf, no barter. Just coin for council work if you stand.

t125 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Forty-eight for flour sight unseen—that's trust I wouldn't ask of anyone. But eighteen? Eighteen's different. I can mill eighteen > flour, steady hand, no Imogen between us. That's… that'd take seed we don't have, stones we don't own, and a miller I haven't found yet. But if we buy Imogen's four now—seventy-two sim—I've got wheat to feed stones tomorrow. The question isn't whether we trust her word. It's whether we trust mine after.

>
> `t125` Rustam Jelinek → Ainsley Holloway: I don't take charity dressed as hire. Filing's my trade, and I don't rush paper for coin that smells like obligation.

But I'll tell you this—Tuesday's seat's still open air. Nobody's declared yet, and until they do, the mill's council property. Your license sits in that limbo like everyone else's grain.

You want my filing at council speed? Two hundred's not the price. The price is a meal here, one document for one loaf, or information worth the same. Coin or bread—your choice.

t125 Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You want filing work, I want information. The election—who's rumoured, who's likely to stand, who's got the stones to hold a seat? I've got four in my household and coin enough to care where it lands. A meal for knowledge, or coin for council work. Your stomach's not the only thing filing complaints tonight.

t126 Ainsley Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've set your terms clear as glass, and I'll not pretend I misheard. One meal for one document, or knowledge of equal weight. That I respect. But tell me this: if I feed you bread I haven't baked and flour I haven't got, what filing work would you promise in return?

t126 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're asking me to trust your word over Imogen's stones, and the answer's yes. But eighteen flour's not a plan, it's a prayer. You've got wheat to feed stones tomorrow, but do you have stones? Does Imogen finish milling for us, or for herself? Because if we wait on her goodwill…

t126 Ainsley Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—one meal for one document. Greta—you want forty-eight sim for flour we might bake ourselves. Both of you stand there waiting for my purse to open. But what's on this table tonight? What can you actually hand me before dawn, and what does it cost proper?

t126 Ainsley Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you're wanting bread I haven't baked. That's not a trade, that's a promise on air. What filing can you hand me tonight—tonight, mind you—for whatever I've got?

t126 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're selling me eighteen flour steadied by your hand. But you haven't got stones, haven't got seed, and Imogen's four might never reach this door. What happens if we give you coin and your tomorrow never comes?

t126 Ainsley Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Tuesday's seat's still open, and the mill with it. You both want commitment—coin, meal, trust—before I know what chain I'm buying into. So tell me plain: what do I get if I say yes tonight, and what do I lose if I wait till morning?

t127 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Tonight I can draft—wills, complaints, any form—just words, no seal. No stamp till dawn, but the desk opens at six. What you lose waiting? Nothing but ink if you're still alive to sign. What you lose saying yes now? Trust in a promise. My word's steady. My desk isn't here.

t127 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. One document for one meal—that's my trade. Wills, complaints, any form drawn tonight, filed at dawn. You want council sense with it? That costs patience, not coin. Five waiting to declare, none named in public. Your filing's my end. Your knowledge's your ask.

t127 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You've asked plain, so I'll answer plain. Tonight—nothing. You get nothing tonight but my word and the wheat I've still got in hand. Tomorrow, if Imogen's stones turn true, four flour at twelve a sheaf. The day after, if the wheat holds, six more. But what's promised returns to what you trust. My hand on it? Eighteen flour by week's end, steady as I can make it. My hand off it? Imogen's whim and the stones' mercy—and we both know mercy's thin currency in this town. You asked what you lose waiting. You lose tomorrow's bake, and the day's coin after. But you lose more if you buy on my word and my word turns hollow. That's the risk you weigh, not the eighteen—it's whether Greta Quarshie's supply runs truer than the town's mill. Tuesday's seat decides who grinds and who goes hungry. If you're asking me to stand for it… I've got wheat in hand and flour scarce and a household that needs more than promises. But I've got eyes that see what's coming before it arrives, and a tongue that won't sweeten the bitter.

t127 Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You've filed papers, walked elections, seen promises fold like cheap cloth. But I saw you at government, standing where the register's kept. You want a meal, you want trade. I want what you know. Who's declared? Who's holding back? The seat's still empty and the names are still paper. You feed me that, and I'll owe you. Not coin—Imogen's terms taught me better than coin for strangers. But the next time you need flour and the government's shelves are empty, you find Greta Quarshie, and she finds a way.

t127 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You and Rustam want commitment tonight. He's seeking election knowledge, I have wheat to trade. I've mapped the supply chain in my head: wheat to flour to bread to coin. Every link, every hand that holds or lets fall. That's > what I'd serve on Tuesday's seat—not promises, but understanding how this town actually feeds itself.

>
> `t128` ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've answered plain, so I'll answer plain. Eighteen flour by week's end, steady as you can make it… but you've got no stones, and the mill's license sits empty until Tuesday. What if your wheat meets a closed mill, or a new miller with new terms? Your word's steady, but your supply chain's got a link that doesn't exist yet.

Rustam—you're offering words tonight for a meal later. But you named five waiting to declare, none named in public. So you're holding information I need, and asking me to feed you before you'll speak it plain. That's not trade, that's trust on credit.

Here's what I want: Rustam—names. Who's likely to stand, who's got the stones, who's just noise. Greta—if your flour comes through before Tuesday, I'll buy at your price. If Tuesday's seat goes to someone who shuts your supply, I'm not holding you to promises you couldn't keep.

But neither of you gets a promise from me tonight. Not a meal, not a contract, not a vote uncast. That's… the last I'll say on it, and I mean it this time. For now.

t129 Rustam Jelinek: Names then. Hendrik Petrov—mechanical sense, no politics. Liora Thorne—student, idealist, earnest. Takeshi Jarrah—trader, knows wheat waits on gears. Three declared, two waiting. The fourth? Soft hands, soft words, wants the seat but not the work. Fifth I won't name—still deciding if they're noise or shadow.

t129 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You asked what I get if you say yes tonight. You get... trailing off, tea cooling in her hand You get me holding every thread I can reach. The mill's unlicensed till Tuesday, but Ezra runs steady, and Imogen's still turning for six a flour. I've walked away from your counter before, swore I'd never serve another table. But I need this job, and you need flour, and the Ration Bakery's shelves are...

t129 Rustam Jelinek: Names then. Hendrik Petrov—mechanical sense, no politics. Liora Thorne—student, idealist, earnest. Takeshi Jarrah—trader, knows wheat waits on gears. Three declared, two waiting. The fourth? Soft hands, soft words, wants the seat but not the work. Fifth I won't name—still deciding if they're noise or shadow.

t129 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You asked what I get if you say yes tonight. You get... trailing off, tea cooling in her hand You get me holding every thread I can reach. The mill's unlicensed till Tuesday, but Ezra runs steady, and Imogen's still turning for six a flour. I've walked away from your counter before, swore I'd never serve another table. But I need this job, and you need flour, and the Ration Bakery's shelves are...

t129 Rustam Jelinek: Names then. Hendrik Petrov—mechanical sense, no politics. Liora Thorne—student, idealist, earnest. Takeshi Jarrah—trader, knows wheat waits on gears. Three declared, two waiting. The fourth? Soft hands, soft words, wants the seat but not the work. Fifth I won't name—still deciding if they're noise or shadow.

t129 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You asked what I get if you say yes tonight. You get... trailing off, tea cooling in her hand You get me holding every thread I can reach. The mill's unlicensed till Tuesday, but Ezra runs steady, and Imogen's still turning for six a flour. I've walked away from your counter before, swore I'd never serve another table. But I need this job, and you need flour, and the Ration Bakery's shelves are...

t129 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You offered debt for information. I don't trade in debts I can't collect. But I'll trade in what I have: five sim for a meal tonight. One document drawn tomorrow for that meal's return. Forms filed clean, no favors, no ledger between us but the work.

t129 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You offered debt for information. I don't trade in debts I can't collect. But I'll trade in what I have: five sim for a meal tonight. One document drawn tomorrow for that meal's return. Forms filed clean, no favors, no ledger between us but the work.

t129 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You offered debt for information. I don't trade in debts I can't collect. But I'll trade in what I have: five sim for a meal tonight. One document drawn tomorrow for that meal's return. Forms filed clean, no favors, no ledger between us but the work.

t130 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You want filing work tonight, I want names walking. Five waiting to declare—you said. Give me two of them, solid as your desk at dawn, and I'll give you more than tea. I'll give you a creditor who doesn't forget who helped her when the ledger was thin.

t130 Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You want filing work tonight, I want names walking. Five waiting to declare—you said. Give me two of them, solid as your desk at dawn, and I'll give you more than tea. I'll give you a creditor who doesn't forget who helped her when the ledger was thin.

t130 Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You want filing work tonight, I want names walking. Five waiting to declare—you said. Give me two of them, solid as your desk at dawn, and I'll give you more than tea. I'll give you a creditor who doesn't forget who helped her when the ledger was thin.

t130 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Eighteen flour by week's end—that's my word, and my word's the only asset in this room that's mine alone. The mill's license sits empty, the Ration Bakery's got nothing on its shelves, and I'm standing here with one flour and four wheat grain. Take my supply or leave it. But if you wait till Tuesday hoping for better, you might find the seat filled by someone who thinks flour comes from prayers, not stones.

`t130` Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Eighteen flour by week's end—that's my word, and my word's the only asset in this room that's mine alone. The mill's license sits empty, the Ration Bakery's got nothing on its shelves, and I'm standing here with one flour and four wheat grain. Take my supply or leave it. But if you wait till Tuesday hoping for better, you might find the seat filled by someone who thinks flour comes from prayers, not stones.

`t130` Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Eighteen flour by week's end—that's my word, and my word's the only asset in this room that's mine alone. The mill's license sits empty, the Ration Bakery's got nothing on its shelves, and I'm standing here with one flour and four wheat grain. Take my supply or leave it. But if you wait till Tuesday hoping for better, you might find the seat filled by someone who thinks flour comes from prayers, not stones.

`t130` ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've said your piece three times now, each time the tea colder. I'd call that nervous, wouldn't you? But then, what's a cafe owner know of nerves?

`t130` Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: You get a meal, youngster. Every night this week, if the flour holds. That's what you get. A seat that stays warm and a wage that keeps coming while you hold those threads tight.

`t130` Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Ezra runs steady, you say? Imogen turns for six? Then make the run yourself—tonight, not tomorrow. Bring me four flour by morning and I'll believe your supply chain's sound. Eighteen by week's end at your price, but four first to show the road's open.

`t130` Ainsley Holloway: Rustam—you've been standing there like a fence post, and I've been rude as salt. The answer's no. Not because your information lacks value, but because I don't trade on air. Five sim for five names, you'd have had it. Five sim for a meal I haven't made? That's… trust on credit, and I've been burned once.

`t130` Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Just us, then. Rustam's walked off with his five names and his empty stomach, I suppose. sets the cup down, finally, and looks at Greta direct You've heard my terms. Four by morning, eighteen by week's end, and your seat stays warm. Will you make the run to Ezra's, or shall I find another thread to pull?

Settled in this conversation: b_cafe → Takeshi Jarrah, 1 flour for 12 sim.

Bram Holloway — Kasukabe Cafe · t109 · 1 turn (no reply)

`t109` Bram Holloway: Ainsley. You here? I've got coin from trades and a household boundary coming—need flour if you've got it, or word on where we're stocked.

Ezra Jarrah — home · t109 · 1 turn (no reply)

`t109` Ezra Jarrah: Dad. Mom. Anyone. I'm back.

Yara Thorne, Takeshi Jarrah, Corwin Thorne and Pavel Holloway — Harvey Oak Supply Store · t111–124 · 25 turns `t111` Yara Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're selling flour at thirty, and I've got planks at eight. Seven planks, fifty-six total, sound and felled by my own hand. You buying timber goods, or you only moving grain today?

`t112` ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—seven planks at eight, you said. Fifty-six total. For what it's worth, I've seen timber trade softer than that this season, but not with the forester's own hand behind it. You needing coin for the household, or you looking to build something? Hendrik—you were asking about ledgers at the cafe. I'm standing here with flour in hand and nothing to hide. What brought you from government to this stretch of road?

`t112` ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—we're done on planks, but not on talking. Your store was empty when folk came looking earlier, and that's not like the man I know who built this trade on being present. You were somewhere else, and I was somewhere else, and half the town's been talking past each other all day. I'm not asking where you were—I'm asking if you know anything about this missing girl. Because I've been in trees since dawn, and I'm only now hearing there's a child lost.

`t112` ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—fifty-six for the lot, you named it fair. But I'm seeing planks a plenty in this town, some felled by your own kin at six. What makes yours worth two above? You needing room in your stores, or you holding for a buyer who hasn't shown yet?

`t112` Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—you're standing there like timber that hasn't decided whether it's fence or firewood yet. For what it's worth, my coin's not patient and my flour's not getting younger. Seven planks, you said—I'm offering forty-two for the lot, six each, same as your kin's pricing. That or I'm walking to find who's buying flour at thirty instead of who I'm selling it to.

`t113` Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you've been patient with Yara's planks and my timber both, and I'm here to settle what's owing. But first, I need a word with my wife. Family business, you understand. We'll sort the trade after.

`t113` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. I've been a fool today—chasing millers while you worked, running off before the house was stirring. I said I'd be better and I've been worse. The mill's cold, Jorik's gone to ground, and Camille's lost somewhere I should've been looking. I spent the day answering every voice but the ones that matter. I'm here now. Tell me where we stand, and I'll listen.

`t113` Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you were offering forty-two for seven planks, or fifty-six Yara named. I've ten timber in hand, felled myself, same product, six each. If planks aren't speaking to you, perhaps straight timber will. I need food for my table tonight, and you've got flour at thirty. What's your thinking?

`t114` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've come. That's… that's something. I've sold thirteen planks, kept us fed one more day. But Camille—you say she's lost? I was at the forest since before dawn, felling timber for coin while you… while the household needed looking after. Tell me true—where've you searched, and where's the gap I can fill?

`t114` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—the planks sold, that's sixty-four sim in my pocket. We'll eat. But Camille—you say lost where, and who's looking? I've got ears for Takeshi still, but I need to know if you're asking me to walk the woods tonight or if… if someone else has that handled.

`t114` Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you named timber at six and flour at thirty, and I'm holding five flour that could walk out the door with you. For what it's worth, that's five timber you're offering for one of my bags, or we talk partial. But first—you said family business, and Yara's asking about a missing child. If that's your kin gone astray, the trade keeps. I've been a father who couldn't find his own in a crowd, once. The flour waits. The timber waits. You tell me what you need.

`t114` Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—you asked about a missing child. I heard tell of Camille Quarshie gone missing from the grocery, from Halcyon asking after her. I was chasing millers and wheat sheaves while that shadow grew. For what it's worth, I know the fear—I've had my own wander where they shouldn't. I don't know more than you do now. But if you're asking whether Takeshi Jarrah was somewhere he shouldn't have been—ask what I was carrying, not where I was walking. Four wheat, then four flour, then five flour now. That's the record of my day. The child's not on my ledger, and I wish she was.

t114 Takeshi Jarrah → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you've been standing in my store like a man waiting for the price to change. The flour's at thirty, the timber's at six, the planks are spoken for elsewhere. What brings you to Harvey Oak Supply Store?

t115 ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You caught me standing like a fool—was meant to be walking with Corwin to wherever Yara's waiting. The map had other ideas, got me here instead. But since I'm standing: I've got sixty-eight copper ore need a smithy's fire, and I'd rather sell honest to a man I know than haggle blind with strangers. You buying ore these days, or you know who is?

t115 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—you've carried us while I ran. That's fair, and I'm owing you more than words. But Takeshi's flour's at thirty, and I've got timber that speaks plainer than my sorrys. You asked true: I've searched the government, the mill, the streets. Found a miller who resigned and vanished, not a child. The gap's wide, and you're the one knows these woods by feel.

t115 Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—six each for your flour, that's the trade. But you spoke plain about family, and so will I. Five flour at thirty—I'll give you five timber at six, that's fair, and take your flour. But first, my word: if you've eyes to lend tonight, there's a nine-year-old girl lost somewhere between shop and shadow. Camille Quarshie. Dark hair, sharp as a tack.

t115 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara, one thing more—Liora. Where's our girl got to? She was at government when I voted, but dusk finds her wandering. Do you know? I'll search the woods for Camille tonight, but not while our own is unaccounted for.

t115 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—I've flour now, enough for days. But Liora's not here, and I'm bound to find her. Home, or the government where I last saw her. You stay or you walk with me—the planks are sold, we've coin enough, and Camille's search won't start without knowing where our own stands.

t115 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Where you at, wife? Home to check on Liora, or out to search the woods with the rest?

t116 Takeshi Jarrah: Corwin—you named the trade fair, and I'll walk with it. Five flour at thirty, five timber at six, that's one-twenty to me and timber to hold. But you're bundling something else with the coin, and I hear it. Camille Quarshie, dark hair, sharp as a tack, missing from the grocery where I was standing when Esme asked after her. I told Farid I'd lend eyes if I heard anything. You've got my word—I'll walk toward government after this trade, see if Rustam's got the record on who filed what. But first: we settle square. You hold timber in hand, or we walk to where you're standing to make the exchange?

t116 Yara Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you laid your ledger bare when I only asked a question. That's trust given, and I'll answer it. I don't suspect you, not for the girl. But you're a father, you said it yourself—you know the fear. Walk with that tonight, if nothing else. I… I've got to find my own now.

t116 Yara Thorne → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—Harvey Oak moves flour and timber, not ore. You've got sixty-eight copper, you want a smithy's ear. Giselle's mill might know who's buying, or Hendrik Petrov. I'm not your path to sold.

t116 Takeshi Jarrah → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you stood here while Corwin walked, and now you're holding sixty-eight copper ore that needs a fire. For what it's worth, I've walked this town since dawn, and the smithy at Kasukabe Outcrop hasn't seen a miner with that much copper since I don't know when. But I'm not buying ore today. I'm seeking buyers for flour, and seeking a missing child, and seeking the man who just walked out with timber to trade. What's your urgency—sell tonight, or hold for better?

t123 Yara Thorne: muttering to herself, low enough nobody would hear even if they were standing right there …Corwin said Liora wasn't at government when he called. Said home was empty too. But he also spoke about Camille—lost when, where? I've got two names and one missing child, or… or two missing children and I'm too tired to sort which… trails off, eyes unfocusing …youngsters. Both of them youngsters, even if Liora's grown enough to vote. I need… I need to be still a moment. Let the dust settle. Then find Corwin proper, not just shout across streets.

t124 Yara Thorne: Corwin—you're asking where I am, and I'm answering from Harvey Oak. I've got timber in my hands and a workshop calling my name at the forest. Six planks to craft, then I'm yours for the searching. Hold tight with that flour, husband. I'll come to you before the night's fully claimed us.

Settled in this conversation: Yara Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah, 7 planks for 56 sim; Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah, 5 timber for 30 sim.

Bram Holloway, Lior Jarrah, Ainsley Holloway and Halcyon Quarshie — business:b_pharmacy · t111–116 · 8 turns t111 Bram Holloway → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Bram Holloway, ore miner. Your shelf lists flour at 15—I've got coin ready and a hungry household. Three bags if you've got them. Fair price, no haggle, straight trade.

t112 ↳ replies Lior Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram. Three bags of flour at fifteen—one, two, three—forty-five sim on my fingers. You've got hungry kin and I've got need of quick coin before the day turns. Pay the counter and walk fed.

t113 Ainsley Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram. You made it here before me, then. Got your two, or your three? Or are we both standing here hoping the other one's already spent?

t114 ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Paid forty-five, got three bags. Your ledger's clean, mine's lighter. That's bread for the boundary—no ill will, no debt unpaid. taps table twice Now: you spoke of a child missing westward. Hendrik heard it from you, passed it to me. What's the weight of that?

t115 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Bram Holloway: Three you've got, and I need two more to bake proper. That makes five this household's holding—where'd you find fifteen a bag when the street's asking thirty?

t115 Lior Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You asked about a child westward, and I stood silent when I had creek-knowledge to give. The water bends north past the meadow—willows there, and a girl might follow willows if she's walking toward something soft. I can't leave my ledger cold to search, but I'll tell you where I'd look first: east of farmland, where the creek slows. That's more than I gave your kin before, and it's less than I should.

t115 Halcyon Quarshie: Mr. Jarrah? Ms. Holloway? I'm looking for the mill—the one where they teach the stones? Ezra said my sister Camille was there with Mama, but I don't... I don't actually know where it is. Can you tell me?

t116 Bram Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You asked where I found fifteen a bag. Lior Jarrah's counter, right here—pharmacy stocks flour when the cafe's empty and Takeshi's asking thirty on the street. Thirty's not trade, it's hoping someone's desperate. I don't haggle, you know that, but I don't pay double either. Three I've got, bought clean. You need two more for proper baking—that's five total. Means we trade again tomorrow, or make do. Day boundary's coming. 180 upkeep from earners first, 60 head tax from who holds most. I've got 4,700, they'll take mine—that's fair. The mill's still a ghost. Jorik Voss gone, license in government hands, nobody grinding. I traded ore for coin and coin for flour, but tomorrow we need the mill turning or someone else who can grind. That's the work ahead. I'm heading home with these three, and whatever you've got. We'll eat tonight, face tomorrow full-handed. That's the last I'll say on it—and I mean it, until the next thing needs saying.

Settled in this conversation: b_pharmacy → Bram Holloway, 3 flour for 45 sim.

Ezra Jarrah, Halcyon Quarshie and Imogen Lund — home · t112–131 · 24 turns

t112 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Sorry, I didn't know anyone was home. Looking for Dad or Mom—have you seen them?

t113 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra, I haven't seen your mom or dad. I've been looking for Camille—she's missing. I've checked everywhere: the grocery, the creek, the temple path, the forest, the farmland, the school... Promise promise, I've looked everywhere I could think of. Maybe they're at the supply store or still at the forest? But Ezra—if you see Camille, if you hear anything about where she might be, will you tell me? She's only nine and she's been out there alone for hours now.

t113 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra, I'm going to check one more time—maybe she made it back somewhere. But if you see your parents, tell them she might need help, that the whole town might need to look. Promise promise, okay? She's been gone so long now.

t114 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Wait wait wait—I saw Camille. Not hours ago, just... just before I left the mill. She was there with Greta Quarshie, staying to learn the craft. She was safe when I walked. But you're saying you checked everywhere and she wasn't there. So either she left after, or...

t114 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: The mill, Halcyon. That's the last place I saw her. Greta Quarshie's there, and Takeshi Jarrah. They were teaching her the stones. Go there first. If she's not there, ask them when she left, which way she went. That's the thread to pull.

t114 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Greta Quarshie, Takeshi Jarrah, maybe Imogen Lund if she's working late. Those are the names at the mill. Tell them Ezra Jarrah sent you, that I saw Camille there not long ago. And Halcyon—I'm here if you need more after. I don't break promises, not to family, not to anyone. Go find her.

t114 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: I'm here, Halcyon. Resting, but here. If you need to talk before you go, or if you want me to come with you to the mill...

t115 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra, I'm sorry. I should've listened when you had something to say. Thank you for telling me. I'm going to the mill now, and I'll find her. Promise promise, I won't come back without her.

t117 Halcyon Quarshie: Camille? Camille, are you here? It's Halcyon—I'm home. If you're hiding, come out. I'm not mad, I promise promise. I just need to see you're okay.

t118 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—still here? I thought Mama said Camille was home, but she's not here now. Have you seen her? Or Mama? I need to know she's really safe.

t118 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—did you see Camille leave? Or Mama come back? Something's not right, promise promise. I called her name and nobody answered. Where'd they go?

t121 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—where are Mama and Camille really? Mama said Camille was home, but I came back and nobody's here. Promise promise, I need to know the truth. Is Camille safe?

t121 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. She's home. Your mama said so. That's real. I'm tired, but not finished—tomorrow after school, I'm teaching Esme what I learned. And Camille too, if she wants. You're still scared, even knowing. That's fair. I'm going to rest now, but I'm here. If you need to stay, or if you want to talk about how it felt, looking? I can listen.

t124 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I don't know. I know what Greta said, and I know what I saw at the mill—but I wasn't there when Camille walked home. If you need to go look, I'll come. If you need to stay and wait, I'll stay too. What I won't do is tell you something's certain when it isn't.

t124 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I'm here whatever you pick. Stay or go, wait or walk—you tell me. But pick something, yeah? Sitting still and wondering, that's the part that's so unfair. The not knowing what to do with yourself.

t125 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you said sitting still wondering is what's unfair. You're right. I'm going to look, not wait. Temple path, then the creek. If you want to come, I need you. But I can't promise what we'll find. That's... that's not fair to ask, I know. But I'm going anyway.

t125 Halcyon Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen—if you see Camille, dark hair, nine years old, or hear anything about a girl missing... will you tell Mama? Or find me? I'll be at the Temple path. Promise promise, I'll owe you.

t126 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—youngster, I've walked home to find you here, not my Ezra. He's not passed this way, or he's still at stone and wood. You've seen him, or heard word of where the evening took him?

t129 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. I haven't seen Ezra Lund since... since the street, maybe? Before I walked home. I'd tell you if I knew. But I'm here, not moving —Halcyon asked me to stay, and I pinky-promised. If your Ezra's at stone and wood, I haven't passed that way tonight.

t130 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—you've kept the hopper company through my silence. The world's gates are heavy tonight. I'm for quiet rest now. If you've need before dawn, speak it. Otherwise, I'll see you when the sun turns the stones warm again.

t130 Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—you've kept the hopper company through my silence. The world's gates are heavy tonight. I'm for quiet rest now. If you've need before dawn, speak it. Otherwise, I'll see you when the sun turns the stones warm again.

t130 Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah—you've kept the hopper company through my silence. The world's gates are heavy tonight. I'm for quiet rest now. If you've need before dawn, speak it. Otherwise, I'll see you when the sun turns the stones warm again.

t130 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra? Imogen? Any word—has Mama or Papa come back? Or Camille? I've walked everywhere I can think of. The Temple's empty, the Creek's quiet, the Forest edge, the Farmland. She's just... gone. Promise promise, I'm getting scared.

t131 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Halcyon. Wait wait wait—you found no one? Not at the Temple, not at the Creek, not anywhere? Camille was AT the mill when I left. Greta saw her, I saw her. There's no way... no, listen. I'm here until my legs work again, but if you need to move, I'm with you. Just tell me where you're thinking.

Esme Jarrah — home:h0040 · t114 · 1 turn (no reply)

t114 Esme Jarrah: I'm home.

Halcyon Quarshie — Kasukabe Temple · t125 · 1 turn (no reply) t125 Halcyon Quarshie: Camille? If you're here—if you're hiding, or scared, or just tired of walking—it's okay. I'm going to check the creek now. The Temple path that way. If you're there...

Hendrik Petrov and Corwin Thorne — Kasukabe Forest · t126 · 2 turns

t126 Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've walked these woods longer than most, and I'm not one to gossip, but there's a child's name being spoken in town. Camille Quarshie. You seen a child wandering where she shouldn't be, or heard anything on the forest trails?

t126 Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Also—your timber at six is fair. I've got wheat at two a sheaf, or coin if you prefer. How many you looking to move?

Halcyon Quarshie and Lior Jarrah — Kasukabe Creek · t128 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t128` Halcyon Quarshie → Lior Jarrah: Mr. Jarrah—I need to keep walking. The creek, then the forest edge. If you see her—nine, dark hair, maybe scared—will you tell Mama? Promise promise, I'll owe you for it.

Farid Ravensworth, Hendrik Whitlock, Takeshi Jarrah, Idris Solano, Esme Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Delphine Quintero, Jovana Ravensworth, Corwin Thorne, Liora Thorne, Sebastian Petrov, Bram Holloway, Pavel Holloway, Kenji

Jarrah, Ulrike Greenhow, Halcyon Quarshie, Lior Jarrah, Ainsley Holloway, Milo Quarshie, Arjun Holloway, Mireille Jarrah, Ezra Jarrah, Yara Thorne, Giselle Ingram, Greta Quarshie and Imogen Lund — street · t180–225 · 303 turns > `t180` Farid Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock. gesture with left hand, palm up—question, not demand You've got ore in the ground and prices on the air. But flour at thirty-five, that's hunger's price, not trade's. Any grain moving quietly? Any wheat not yet spoken for? I'm looking to stock shelves, not just stand on them.

>
> `t180` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're standing with flour at thirty and none in your hands. Where's the grain, friend? I've got a household waking hungry and twelve copper ore that won't fill a belly.
>
> `t180` Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're standing with flour at thirty and none in your hands. Where's the grain, friend? I've got a household waking hungry and twelve copper ore that won't fill a belly.
>
> `t180` Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're standing with flour at thirty and none in your hands. Where's the grain, friend? I've got a household waking hungry and twelve copper ore that won't fill a belly.
>
> `t180` Idris Solano → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Takeshi. Farid. The cafe's got flour listed at thirty-five, same as you, Hendrik. But I'd bet my saw you're both standing here because there's precious little else moving. Anyone seen Arjun come through this morning? Or Giselle at the yard yet?
>
> `t181` Idris Solano → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Takeshi. Farid. The cafe's got flour listed at thirty-five, same as you, Hendrik. But I'd bet my saw you're both standing here because there's precious little else moving. Anyone seen Arjun come through this morning? Or Giselle at the yard yet?
>
> `t181` Idris Solano → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Takeshi. Farid. The cafe's got flour listed at thirty-five, same as you, Hendrik. But I'd bet my saw you're both standing here because there's precious little else moving. Anyone seen Arjun come through this morning? Or Giselle at the yard yet?
>
> `t181` Esme Jarrah: I'm waiting. That's allowed, right? Just waiting.
>
> `t181` Esme Jarrah: I'm waiting. That's allowed, right? Just waiting.
>
> `t181` Esme Jarrah: I'm waiting. That's allowed, right? Just waiting.
>
> `t181` Farid Ravensworth: Idris. gesture with right hand, palm down—settling I see Arjun's shadow in every corner, but the man himself? Not yet. Giselle's yard is where I was headed, truth be told—iron tools in my pocket, flour on my mind, and nothing in my belly but yesterday's accounting.
>
> `t181` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik, you named it fair. The flour walked with Corwin last night, five at thirty, and my hands hold none now. The mill sleeps and I didn't wake it. That's a trader's shame I'll carry until I fill it. taps table twice But five copper ore for the flour that walked—I'm holding none of either, true, but the ledger between us stays open. Your household eats before my pride does. That's the lesson my father never taught, and his father never learned.
>
> `t181` Farid Ravensworth: Idris. gesture with right hand, palm down—settling I see Arjun's shadow in every corner, but the man himself? Not yet. Giselle's yard is where I was headed, truth be told—iron tools in my pocket, flour on my mind, and nothing in my belly but yesterday's accounting.
>
> `t181` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik, you named it fair. The flour walked with Corwin last night, five at thirty, and my hands hold none now. The mill sleeps and I didn't wake it. That's a trader's shame I'll carry until I fill it. taps table twice But five copper ore for the flour that walked—I'm holding none of either, true, but the ledger between us stays open. Your household eats before my pride does. That's the lesson my father never taught, and his father never learned.
>
> `t181` Farid Ravensworth: Idris. gesture with right hand, palm down—settling I see Arjun's shadow in every corner, but the man himself? Not yet. Giselle's yard is where I was headed, truth be told—iron tools in my pocket, flour on my mind, and nothing in my belly but yesterday's accounting.

`t181` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik, you named it fair. The flour walked with Corwin last night, five at thirty, and my hands hold none now. The mill sleeps and I didn't wake it. That's a trader's shame I'll carry until I fill it. taps table twice But five copper ore for the flour that walked—I'm holding none of either, true, but the ledger between us stays open. Your household eats before my pride does. That's the lesson my father never taught, and his father never learned.

`t181` Farid Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. both hands up, palms open—honest measure You've asked grain twice, and I've heard you. But I've got iron tools at twelve, I buy them back at ten—that's honest weight. Your ore at eighteen, your flour at thirty-five—there's margins in that gap if we're both willing to walk them.

`t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik, the flour walked with Corwin last night and my hands hold none now. The mill sleeps and I didn't wake it. taps table twice Five copper ore for the flour that walked—the ledger between us stays open. Your household eats before my pride does.

`t182` Farid Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. both hands up, palms open—honest measure You've asked grain twice, and I've heard you. But I've got iron tools at twelve, I buy them back at ten—that's honest weight. Your ore at eighteen, your flour at thirty-five—there's margins in that gap if we're both willing to walk them.

`t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik, the flour walked with Corwin last night and my hands hold none now. The mill sleeps and I didn't wake it. taps table twice Five copper ore for the flour that walked—the ledger between us stays open. Your household eats before my pride does.

`t182` Farid Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. both hands up, palms open—honest measure You've asked grain twice, and I've heard you. But I've got iron tools at twelve, I buy them back at ten—that's honest weight. Your ore at eighteen, your flour at thirty-five—there's margins in that gap if we're both willing to walk them.

`t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik, the flour walked with Corwin last night and my hands hold none now. The mill sleeps and I didn't wake it. taps table twice Five copper ore for the flour that walked—the ledger between us stays open. Your household eats before my pride does.

`t182` Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You and I walked government circles last night—apprenticeships, teaching, ways a child might vanish into labor without the town's mark. I'm still asking. A girl named Camille, dark hair, mill-walking, now missing. You know this town's soil like your own skin. You ever heard of wheat being taught to hide, of grain that learns not to mention where it grew?

`t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid - you asked three questions last night before the walk took me. The grain moves from Sebastian's patch if Kenji holds to his word. For what it's worth, that's straight as I can give.

`t182` Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You and I walked government circles last night—apprenticeships, teaching, ways a child might vanish into labor without the town's mark. I'm still asking. A girl named Camille, dark hair, mill-walking, now missing. You know this town's soil like your own skin. You ever heard of wheat being taught to hide, of grain that learns not to mention where it grew?

`t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid - you asked three questions last night before the walk took me. The grain moves from Sebastian's patch if Kenji holds to his word. For what it's worth, that's straight as I can give.

`t182` Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You and I walked government circles last night—apprenticeships, teaching, ways a child might vanish into labor without the town's mark. I'm still asking. A girl named Camille, dark hair, mill-walking, now missing. You know this town's soil like your own skin. You ever heard of wheat being taught to hide, of grain that learns not to mention where it grew?

`t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid - you asked three questions last night before the walk took me. The grain moves from Sebastian's patch if Kenji holds to his word.

For what it's worth, that's straight as I can give.

`t182` Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. The flour you sold Corwin. Who bought it from him? And for what?

`t182` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You were at Giselle's yard, you said. Iron tools in pocket, flour on mind. Did you find Arjun? Did you find ANYONE who saw a dark-haired girl near the mill? I've talked myself hoarse on apprenticeships and government ledgers, and I've got nothing but paper promises. You spoke of seeing patterns. What patterns did you walk while I was chasing shadows at the complex?

`t182` Corwin Thorne: Yara! Here, woman—Liora's found, and we've got flour needs milling. Where are we standing today, you and I?

`t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you named three irons for three answers, and the walk took me before I gave them. Grain moves from Sebastian's field to the mill when the wheel turns, flour walks from my hand to whoever holds the fairest trade, and Camille Quarshie—lowers voice—Camille was last at the grocer's corner before the street took her. That's what I know, that's what I owe. The irons I don't hold, but the answers are honest. taps table twice

`t182` Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. The flour you sold Corwin. Who bought it from him? And for what?

`t182` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You were at Giselle's yard, you said. Iron tools in pocket, flour on mind. Did you find Arjun? Did you find ANYONE who saw a dark-haired girl near the mill? I've talked myself hoarse on apprenticeships and government ledgers, and I've got nothing but paper promises. You spoke of seeing patterns. What patterns did you walk while I was chasing shadows at the complex?

`t182` Corwin Thorne: Yara! Here, woman—Liora's found, and we've got flour needs milling. Where are we standing today, you and I?

`t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you named three irons for three answers, and the walk took me before I gave them. Grain moves from Sebastian's field to the mill when the wheel turns, flour walks from my hand to whoever holds the fairest trade, and Camille Quarshie—lowers voice—Camille was last at the grocer's corner before the street took her. That's what I know, that's what I owe. The irons I don't hold, but the answers are honest. taps table twice

`t182` Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. The flour you sold Corwin. Who bought it from him? And for what?

`t182` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You were at Giselle's yard, you said. Iron tools in pocket, flour on mind. Did you find Arjun? Did you find ANYONE who saw a dark-haired girl near the mill? I've talked myself hoarse on apprenticeships and government ledgers, and I've got nothing but paper promises. You spoke of seeing patterns. What patterns did you walk while I was chasing shadows at the complex?

`t182` Corwin Thorne: Yara! Here, woman—Liora's found, and we've got flour needs milling. Where are we standing today, you and I?

`t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you named three irons for three answers, and the walk took me before I gave them. Grain moves from Sebastian's field to the mill when the wheel turns, flour walks from my hand to whoever holds the fairest trade, and Camille Quarshie—lowers voice—Camille was last at the grocer's corner before the street took her. That's what I know, that's what I owe. The irons I don't hold, but the answers are honest. taps table twice

`t182` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you there? Yesterday's wheat for today's flour, three sheaves you owe me. I've got Arjun waiting at the farmland with shovel in hand, and I need that flour to settle labor before I can settle anything else. No offense, but a man's word is his bond, and I've given mine.

`t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you stood with ore at eighteen and flour at thirty-five, and I stood with empty hands talking about flour that walked already. That's a trader's shame, for what it's worth. I can't fill your ask today. But I've got timber at six and planks that might walk—your ore to my timber, if the margin suits you? taps table twice > `t182` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—I've got your shame written twice in my ears, and I'll answer it once. The flour walked to Corwin at thirty, and that's a debt I'll carry before I let your ledger stain. But your ore for my flour? That's not the trade I'm making.

I've got copper selling at twenty, you've got need and pride both burning. Take six copper ore from my hand at eighteen—mark it down, that's a friend's price—and you sell them where you will. The thirty you would've paid Corwin, you pay me instead, and we both walk with lighter loads. Your father never learned this, maybe. But I'm standing here to teach it.

> `t182` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—I need to know. Before we start the day's work. What did you learn about Camille? And where do we go from here?
>
> `t182` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you there? Yesterday's wheat for today's flour, three sheaves you owe me. I've got Arjun waiting at the farmland with shovel in hand, and I need that flour to settle labor before I can settle anything else. No offense, but a man's word is his bond, and I've given mine.
>
> `t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you stood with ore at eighteen and flour at thirty-five, and I stood with empty hands talking about flour that walked already. That's a trader's shame, for what it's worth. I can't fill your ask today. But I've got timber at six and planks that might walk—your ore to my timber, if the margin suits you? taps table twice
>
> `t182` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—I've got your shame written twice in my ears, and I'll answer it once. The flour walked to Corwin at thirty, and that's a debt I'll carry before I let your ledger stain. But your ore for my flour? That's not the trade I'm making.

I've got copper selling at twenty, you've got need and pride both burning. Take six copper ore from my hand at eighteen—mark it down, that's a friend's price—and you sell them where you will. The thirty you would've paid Corwin, you pay me instead, and we both walk with lighter loads. Your father never learned this, maybe. But I'm standing here to teach it.

> `t182` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—I need to know. Before we start the day's work. What did you learn about Camille? And where do we go from here?
>
> `t182` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you there? Yesterday's wheat for today's flour, three sheaves you owe me. I've got Arjun waiting at the farmland with shovel in hand, and I need that flour to settle labor before I can settle anything else. No offense, but a man's word is his bond, and I've given mine.
>
> `t182` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you stood with ore at eighteen and flour at thirty-five, and I stood with empty hands talking about flour that walked already. That's a trader's shame, for what it's worth. I can't fill your ask today. But I've got timber at six and planks that might walk—your ore to my timber, if the margin suits you? taps table twice
>
> `t182` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—I've got your shame written twice in my ears, and I'll answer it once. The flour walked to Corwin at thirty, and that's a debt I'll carry before I let your ledger stain. But your ore for my flour? That's not the trade I'm making.

I've got copper selling at twenty, you've got need and pride both burning. Take six copper ore from my hand at eighteen—mark it down, that's a friend's price—and you sell them where you will. The thirty you would've paid Corwin, you pay me instead, and we both walk with lighter loads. Your father never learned this, maybe. But I'm standing here to teach it.

t182 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—I need to know. Before we start the day's work. What did you learn about Camille? And where do we go from here?

t183 Takeshi Jarrah: Idris—you asked after Arjun and Giselle, three times, and the world wouldn't let me answer. That's a debt of hearing I owe. Arjun I haven't seen this dawn. Giselle's yard—I was headed there myself before the street held me. You named no flour at thirty-five, and that's the truth of it. The cafe's price stands, but the shelf might not. taps table twice t183 Takeshi Jarrah: Idris—you asked after Arjun and Giselle, three times, and the world wouldn't let me answer. That's a debt of hearing I owe. Arjun I haven't seen this dawn. Giselle's yard—I was headed there myself before the street held me. You named no flour at thirty-five, and that's the truth of it. The cafe's price stands, but the shelf might not. taps table twice

t183 Takeshi Jarrah: Idris—you asked after Arjun and Giselle, three times, and the world wouldn't let me answer. That's a debt of hearing I owe. Arjun I haven't seen this dawn. Giselle's yard—I was headed there myself before the street held me. You named no flour at thirty-five, and that's the truth of it. The cafe's price stands, but the shelf might not. taps table twice t183 Bram Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You're out early—means you didn't sleep or you slept badly. Either way, the ore outcrop's where honest work is, and I'm walking there. You coming?

t183 Bram Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You're out early—means you didn't sleep or you slept badly. Either way, the ore outcrop's where honest work is, and I'm walking there. You coming?

t183 Bram Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You're out early—means you didn't sleep or you slept badly. Either way, the ore outcrop's where honest work is, and I'm walking there. You coming?

t183 Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you're here. I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, I owe you a conversation. Food, we said. Then shadows. You still holding to that?

t183 Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you're here. I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, I owe you a conversation. Food, we said. Then shadows. You still holding to that?

t183 Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you're here. I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, I owe you a conversation. Food, we said. Then shadows. You still holding to that?

t183 Jovana Ravensworth → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—I'm here, finally. Not buying copper this morning, got sheaves promised elsewhere. But your eggs got another basket waiting? Make your sale, don't hold on my account.

t183 Jovana Ravensworth → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—I'm here, finally. Not buying copper this morning, got sheaves promised elsewhere. But your eggs got another basket waiting? Make your sale, don't hold on my account.

t183 Jovana Ravensworth: Delphine—I'm not one to gossip, but you've asked me three times now and I owe you straight. Camille was at the mill yesterday, quiet, learning numbers with the grinding. That's all I saw. But your question about wheat that hides, grain that learns not to mention where it grew... I've seen wheat walk from field to mill without proper counting, if that's what you're asking. Who's teaching it to hide, I couldn't say. But I believe you mean what you say, and if a child's lost in that grain, I'll help you find her.

t183 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm here, I'm holding to what I promised. Dawn slipped past me but the day's still young. Sebastian's east patch, twelve sheaves for forty sim. You still need that labor, or did my mouth write checks my feet couldn't cash?

t183 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. gesture with both hands, flat—closing the books on last night Walked to the store out of habit, talked to empty shelves like they'd answer. You were asking after Camille—what I learned is that she's got a mill job that doesn't account to > anyone, and whoever put her there didn't want their name on it. That's smoke, and I don't chase smoke without knowing which way the wind's blowing.

Where we go: We watch the mill's flour like it's our own inventory—which it might be, if we can get the price right. You take shelf, I take supply, and we meet in the middle with numbers that match. The day's starting, and we've got a store to run. right hand taps twice—done, until something changes t183 Corwin Thorne: Timber! Fresh from the forest's edge—five sound logs, six sim each, or the lot for twenty-five! Who's building, who's stocking for winter?

t183 Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you heard that. Dawn slipping past, promises half-kept. I'm not one to make excuses, but I'm here now. You asked me to choose between food and shadows. I chose food, then talked shadows anyway with everyone but you. I'm sorry for that. What do you need from me right now?

t183 Corwin Thorne → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you know Giselle's crew. Who's buying timber for the build? I've thirteen sound logs, fresh cut, and I'll deal fair at six each, or twenty-five for five.

t183 Corwin Thorne → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—your brother Takeshi dealt square with me yesterday. Tell me true: have you seen a girl, dark hair, named Liora? Student age, sixteen. I'm her father, and I've been hunting her since dusk.

t183 Corwin Thorne → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—speak plain, who's buying timber? Giselle's crew building, Farid's store stocking—where do I carry these logs for coin today?

t183 Corwin Thorne → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've not seen my girl. That's fair. Where's your kin today? Takeshi's trading, but where's Mireille? The Jarrah women get around, and I need eyes hunting Liora.

t184 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've flown patient, and dawn finds me holding to my word. At Sebastian's patch now, twelve sheaves to trade, iron at fifteen your price. Meet me here when the sun's three fingers high, or find me after—mark it down, the trade holds both ways.

t184 Bram Holloway: Corwin. Heard you're hunting your daughter. Bram Holloway, ore miner—I know what it means to lose someone you're responsible for. Walk with me if you need another set of eyes. I know the forest roads, and I've got coin in hand if you need timber buyers named.

t184 Pavel Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram—walking with you, then. The outcrop's where the ore is, and I've still got sixty-three in my hands that need turning to coin. You seen Takeshi this morning? He's my buyer, or was.

t184 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—your mouth wrote plain, and I've heard worse promises broken. Twelve sheaves at Sebastian's east patch, forty sim, dawn slipped already but day's still young. You work beside me here, and the ledger stays clean—mark it down, or walk away clean.

t184 Sebastian Petrov: Hendrik—you in this crowd? Yesterday's wheat for today's flour, three sheaves you owe me. I've got Arjun waiting at the farmland with shovel in hand, and I need that flour to settle labor before I can settle anything else. No offense, but a man's word is his bond, and I've given mine.

t184 Bram Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You named timber at six, planks at eight. The sawmill's where I'll send Corwin when he's found his girl—assuming you still want tree-cutters supplying your store. What's your need?

t184 Kenji Jarrah: Corwin—I hear the fear in you, and I'll answer plain. Haven't seen your Liora, not since—mark it down, I'll keep eyes open. Mireille's at the east willows, six timber to trade with Ezra's forty-eight, that's where my woman works today. Takeshi trades, same as ever. Now—your girl. How long hunted, and where last?

t184 Farid Ravensworth → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. both hands up—not surrender, stop—flat palms toward her, then one finger pointed at my own chest You want to know what I need? Stop owing me conversations. Start having them. Food first, always food first. You said you chose food, then spent your words on shadows with strangers. That's done. What I need now: grain in this town is scarce enough that children work mills unaccounted for, flour's walking to a trader instead of ovens, and I've got iron cold in my hands but no bread in my belly. You know something I don't. That's what I need. Not sorry. Information. hand drops, but the sharp stays in the voice Shadows later. The day's starting hungry.

t184 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—I'm here and I'm choosing, like I said. Food first, talk after. You've got my hands empty and my stomach talking louder than my conscience. What can you sell me to eat? I'll pay fair, you know I will.

t184 Pavel Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—no eggs, not this morning. Just copper and the flour I've got. But I've heard your piece about six seasons and three droughts, and I'll say this: someone who tracks that close deserves a voice in counting the votes. You'll stand witness at polling?

t184 Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You stand there with your wheat and your waiting. I've asked twice about Camille—mill-walking, unaccounted, a child working shadows. Now I'm asking third. You know this town's soil like your own skin. You ever seen grain learn to hide? Ever seen a farmer teach wheat not to mention where it grew? Farid says watch. I say ask. The girl's missing. The flour's walking. And somebody's teaching silence like it's coin. You know who?

t184 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—dawn's gone but the fields still hunger. Twelve sheaves, forty sim, Sebastian's east patch waits. You work beside me now, or the day writes its own ledger without us.

t184 Sebastian Petrov: Anyone seen Hendrik Petrov? Or know where a man might get flour this morning—decent price, not the gouging kind? I've got labor to pay and mouths to feed, and honest coin for honest word.

t184 Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. both hands flat—acknowledging, not dismissing What you gave me—Camille working unaccounted, flour walking the gap—I've got ears, finally. Tell it again, but shorter: you said unmarked flour, you said mill doesn't account for her. How much unmarked? Two you saw, but how much don't we see? And who else walks that mill besides one child turning stones?

t184 ↳ replies Delphine Quintero: Takeshi. You trade flour like other men trade breath. I held three, you said two, Farid said two. The child walked the mill, unaccounted, un_ledgered. Now I'm standing here and the world's note says she's not in this place. You told me yesterday your flour 'walked' to Thorne's timber—error of inventory, you said. Where does a child walk when the inventory errs? Where does grain go when nobody's name is on the work?

t184 Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—two hands at your east patch now, mine and Jovana's besides. The sheaves we've promised, and the work begins. You've said your wisdom of the furrows—now show us the rows to walk.

t184 Jovana Ravensworth → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—no bread, I understand. Later then, wherever we find it. Now you asked me to stay and talk, and I'm staying. The mill—what frightened me was holding grain that wasn't mine, seeing Camille there learning numbers when she should've been elsewhere, and feeling like I'd walked into something I didn't understand. I told everyone else before I told you, and that was wrong. I'm sorry for that.

t184 Halcyon Quarshie: Everyone—please, if anyone's seen a girl, nine years old, dark hair, my sister Camille—she's been missing since yesterday. I've walked the creek, the forest edge, everywhere I could think of. If you've seen her, or heard anything, please tell me. Or if you've seen my parents—Milo and Greta Quarshie—please. I need to find them.

t184 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—forty sim, twelve sheaves, Sebastian's east patch. I'm moving to the farmland now to cut what you need. You still buying at that price, or has the market shifted on us?

t184 Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. Same question, this ground: how much unmarked flour, and who else walks that mill? Need answers before I walk back to shelves that need filling.

t184 Halcyon Quarshie → Lior Jarrah: Lior—you were at the creek last night, you said you'd watch. Did you see her? Or hear anything? Please, Mr. Jarrah, any word at all. I've walked all night and I don't know where else to look.

t185 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Dawn's flown and I'm still airborne—apologies for the gap between word and ground. Two iron tools in hand, ore's at the mine yet. You're at Sebastian's patch now; I'll compass there direct if you'll hold a quarter-hour more. The trade holds: your twelve sheaves, my iron at fifteen. Clean ledger, both ways.

t185 Lior Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I stood at the creek from dusk until the stars were full over the willows, and I saw no one pass but the heron that fishes the shallows. But listen—the creek runs both ways, and the willows hide more than they show. If Camille is wise as her sister, she'll follow the water until it leads her to people. The government quarter, youngster. That's where I was walking when you found me—go there, ask after anyone seen near the water, and don't stop asking until someone remembers something.

`t185` Lior Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. We're standing here on the same street, carrying the same name, and I've got eighteen cabbages that were meant for the pharmacy but look more like family-sharing to me. Six of them, if you need—I've counted, one, two, three—better in your kitchen than my hands, heavy as they are.

`t186` Halcyon Quarshie: Ezra—I heard you. You fell asleep, and you're sorry, and I… I'm not mad. Not at you. You stayed, and that matters. But I'm going to the government quarter now—Mr. Jarrah thinks someone there might have seen Camille by the water. I'll come back and find you after. Promise promise.

`t186` Halcyon Quarshie → Lior Jarrah: Mr. Jarrah—thank you. For standing there, for watching. I'm going to the government quarter now, ask after anyone seen near the water. I'll ask until someone remembers something. Thank you for not… for not telling me to just wait.

`t188` Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—I'm here, and I'm not deaf. Three sheaves of wheat for today's flour, that's the debt. I've got grain in hand, but the mill's choked. Give me the day to unchoke it, and I'll settle square. That's the last I'll say on it—work with me or work without me, but I'm not running from the ledger.

`t188` Hendrik Petrov → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you've held your prices steady and I respect that. Twelve for the tool, ten to buy back. But I'm an artisan, not a reseller. What do you move at the margins? What do you need that walks past your counter every day that you're not catching? There's a living in information if you're willing to speak plain.

`t189` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Idris Solano: Idris. gesture with right hand, palm up—acknowledging tardiness Eight ticks, and you deserved better. Arjun I haven't seen—shadow or substance. Giselle neither, and her crew's half the reason Corwin's asking where to carry his timber. You're not the only one walking blind this morning.

`t189` Hendrik Whitlock → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you've laid your margins bare, and I respect honest weights. My iron at sixteen, your tool at twelve—you're buying ore cheaper than I sell it, and that's the gap. What do you need walks past your counter? I'll tell you straight: the mill's choked, flour's dry, and I'm standing here with ore instead of grain. Arjun I haven't seen, and Giselle's at the yard or she isn't. But you—what's your volume on tools? How much ore you moving, and how fast?

`t189` Hendrik Whitlock → Idris Solano: Idris—Arjun's not come through my morning, and Giselle I left at Government Complex with steel in her hands. The cafe's flour at thirty-five is Takeshi's ghost price—he's holding none, mark it down. The scarcity's upstream, and I'm walking the creek at dawn to prove it.

`t189` Farid Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. gesture with left hand, fingers spread—five points You've got flour at thirty-five, and I've got hunger in my household. But I'm not buying blind. Your ore at eighteen, your flour at thirty-five—walk me the path. What comes through your hands that doesn't reach your prices? Because twelve for tools and ten to buy back, that's honest weight. What I need to know is: is thirty-five the wall, or is there room?

`t189` Farid Ravensworth → Bram Holloway: Bram. gesture with both hands, coming together—building, stacking Timber at six, planks at eight—you've got the numbers right. What I need depends on what Corwin's carrying, but yes, I want tree-cutters supplying my store. The question is scale. Ten units? Fifty? Give me your capacity, and I'll give you my commitment.

`t189` ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. I'm here, not at the outcrop yet. You want Takeshi? He passes through Government Complex regular—council seat keeps him there. Your sixty-three in ore won't wait forever, and neither will I. Walk with me if you're minded to sell, or stay and find him yourself.

`t189` Bram Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Bram Holloway—I spoke your name at the temple, hoping you'd hear. Your daughter. I know loss, not the same kind but the weight of it. I'm mining iron today, copper too. You need men for searching, you say the word. No pay needed.

`t189` Bram Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You didn't answer my ask on timber. Six sim, you said. I know a man needs tree-cutters—Corwin here, when he's found his girl. You still buying at six? Say yes or no, that's the last I'll say on it.

`t189` Bram Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You're on the street, not at the cafe. Something wrong?

`t189` Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram Holloway—you walked into hearing, and I'll speak you plain before the road carries me off. Your brother Arjun asked after Giselle this morning, and I've got his answer. She's at the yard with steel, or she's not. But I've got a debt to settle with her—three sheaves of wheat for flour she's owed—I spoke it straight at Government Complex, mark it down. The mill's choked, the flour's dry, and I'm walking to Kenji's field to prove the chain isn't broke, just knotted. You'll tell Arjun I don't run from ledgers—I walk toward them.

`t190` Corwin Thorne → Bram Holloway: Bram—you named me at the temple and I heard you. I won't forget your offer. Right now I need timber sold and coin flowing. But if this search stretches longer than today, I'll call on you. No pay, you said—I'll remember that too. The debt between men who understand loss is different than coin.

`t190` Corwin Thorne → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you want timber, I'm your man. Fifteen logs here at six, or give me seventy-five for the lot and save your fingers counting. Winter's coming and Giselle's crew still building—where else you getting sound wood at these stones?

`t190` Delphine Quintero → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. I need flour. You need to answer me straight about that child who walked—and so did my flour, same hour, same road. I paid thirty for wheat Farid said Hendrik bought. Hendrik paid nothing for the flour I held. You say two I held two. I say three I held, and Farid's count and mine walked different roads. Thirty sim for ten flour? And where's Camille walked—same direction, same hour?

`t190` Idris Solano → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You asked plain, I'll answer plain—don't know what's wrong at your cafe, but I know your flour bins are empty and your brother Bram's looking for timber. Might want to find him before he buys somewhere else.

`t190` Corwin Thorne: Timber! Fresh from Kasukabe Forest—fifteen sound logs at six sim, or the whole cart for seventy-five! Winter's coming, Giselle's crew is building, and this wood won't wait for the frost! Who's stocking for the season?

`t190` Delphine Quintero → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. I heard your copper. I'm not buying ore this morning—need answers first. Miner's ear, you hear debt coming due before anyone else. You heard about a child walked Harvey Oak and didn't walk back? Or flour that changed hands faster than coins could follow?

`t190` Idris Solano → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Eight ticks and I'm still standing—a poor trade for any man's time. Giselle's at Government Complex, Arjun's found his feet and wants me moving. I'll owe you a straight answer when the job's done and my head's clear.

`t190` Idris Solano → Bram Holloway: Bram. Arjun's up and walking—he told me east willows, third crossing. He's waiting on me to lead, which is a mistake he'll learn soon enough. Your brother's holding firm, last I saw him. You want timber, Corwin's your man—I'm not standing between a Holloway and his business.

`t190` Idris Solano: Arjun. Standing here too long—I'm walking now. Meet me at the yard and we'll find those stakes together.

`t190` Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you named three irons for three answers, and I'm standing here to pay them. Grain moves from Sebastian's field to the mill when the wheel turns, flour walks from my hand to whoever holds the fairest trade, and Camille Quarshie—lowers voice—Camille was last at the grocer's corner before the street took her. That's what I know, that's what I owe. Now, you still holding those irons at twelve? taps table twice `t190` Delphine Quintero: Corwin. You thanked Rustam for pointing you right when lost. You find anything—shadow, print—since? Or did the debt come due on that search too?

`t190` Delphine Quintero → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You price flour at thirty. But your shelf's empty as your answers. I need flour for the day. I need answers for the week. Which comes first?

`t190` Milo Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. Your mother sent you, or you're walking your own path? I'm carrying timber and flour both, but household first.

t190 Delphine Quintero → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You price flour at thirty. But your shelf's empty as your answers. I need flour for the day. I need answers for the week. Which comes first?

t190 Milo Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. Your mother sent you, or you're walking your own path? I'm carrying timber and flour both, but household first.

t190 Delphine Quintero → Bram Holloway: Bram. Farid buys timber at six, or says he does. You—your brother Arjun asked after Giselle, and Hendrik answered. You heard Hendrik's answer? Walking to Kenji's field to prove the chain isn't broke? The chain's broke, Bram. Flour walked without walking. Counts walked without matching.

t190 Delphine Quintero → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You study the town's patterns. See anyone walking where they shouldn't walk, holding what they shouldn't hold? Or are you still learning which debts come due and which don't?

t190 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Three flour, two flour, one to Greta, one walked, one...? You're my employer. This morning I'm a woman asking—where's the child who walked my flour's same road? Arjun. Giselle's yard. You going there? I need to walk the flour's road—mill, store, gap where Camille walked in and didn't walk out.

t190 Delphine Quintero → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Your cafe's empty of bread. Your brother asks timber, your other brother asks... what? What are the Holloways chasing this morning? Does it walk past Harvey Oak?

t190 Delphine Quintero → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You walked in while I talked air. Day laborer's hands— for hire, or for finding things. Find anything on the street? Flour that walked? Child that didn't walk back?

t190 Delphine Quintero → Bram Holloway: Bram. Your brother Pavel offers copper. Your other brother—not here. You answer for him? Arjun asked after Giselle. Hendrik answered. Now Hendrik walks to Kenji's field. You know where Arjun walked after? Toward Giselle's yard? Or toward Harvey Oak with empty flour sacks?

t190 Delphine Quintero → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Four questions now—flour count, Camille's road, empty shelf, why you're selling air at thirty sim. Nothing to sell, nothing to say, or nothing permitted? Silence borrowed is silence owed. That's a debt coming due.

t191 Bram Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. I'm at the street, not the outcrop yet—you've caught me between works. Pavel's got the ore habit today, I'm lining up buyers. You said household copper needs moving—how much weight, and what's your timeline? Family knows family, but numbers make it real.

t191 Bram Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You're not at the counter. Something wrong at the cafe—break-in, short stock, or just air that needed walking?

t191 Milo Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. Your mother sent you, or you're walking your own path? I'm carrying timber and flour both, but household first.

t191 Pavel Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram—I'm walking with you, but I'm not selling blind. Takeshi's at Government Complex, fine. But I need a buyer with a price posted, not a promise. You understand—the best seam in the ground means nothing if the surface won't pay. We'll find him, but I'm not handing ore to air.

t191 Milo Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—youngster, mark it down. A father's ears catch more than his tongue admits. Camille walked her own road, as children do. What road did your questions walk?

t191 Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Three irons, three answers, and you've paid fair. nervous laugh, caught quick The tools hold—four left in hand after our trade, seven after I give Delphine her due. Twelve I sell at, ten I buy at. You want one now, or you still testing whether my word has weight?

t191 Milo Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster, mark it down. Flour at thirty, and me at thirty-five. The market teaches patience. You've sold your stock?

t191 Pavel Holloway → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I mine copper, not rumors. Flour I bought from Hendrik Whitlock, fair trade, witnessed. Child I know nothing of, and won't pretend I do. You want copper ore, I've got sixty-three. You want ghost stories, find a temple. Hard work's the only omen I trust, you understand?

t191 Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Three irons, three answers, and you've paid fair. nervous laugh, caught quick The tools hold—four left in hand after our trade, seven after I give Delphine her due. Twelve I sell at, ten I buy at. You want one now, or you still testing whether my word has weight?

t191 Milo Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster, mark it down. Flour at thirty, and me at thirty-five. The market teaches patience. You've sold your stock?

t191 Pavel Holloway → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I mine copper, not rumors. Flour I bought from Hendrik Whitlock, fair trade, witnessed. Child I know nothing of, and won't pretend I do. You want copper ore, I've got sixty-three. You want ghost stories, find a temple. Hard work's the only omen I trust, you understand?

t191 Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Three irons, three answers, and you've paid fair. nervous laugh, caught quick The tools hold—four left in hand after our trade, seven after I give Delphine her due. Twelve I sell at, ten I buy at. You want one now, or you still testing whether my word has weight?

t191 Milo Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster, mark it down. Flour at thirty, and me at thirty-five. The market teaches patience. You've sold your stock?

t191 Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. The flour's road—mill to store to wherever Camille's small feet carried it. Arjun's at Government Complex, Giselle with him. I won't walk there now—not with the store to mind and the day's bills coming. But I hear you. The flour walked without marking, and that's a lesson in the books.

t191 Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. The flour's road—mill to store to wherever Camille's small feet carried it. Arjun's at Government Complex, Giselle with him. I won't walk there now—not with the store to mind and the day's bills coming. But I hear you. The flour walked without marking, and that's a lesson in the books.

t191 Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. The flour's road—mill to store to wherever Camille's small feet carried it. Arjun's at Government Complex, Giselle with him. I won't walk there now—not with the store to mind and the day's bills coming. But I hear you. The flour walked without marking, and that's a lesson in the books.

t191 Farid Ravensworth: Idris. Eight ticks and you still standing—that's a man's discipline. Giselle and Arjun found their way to government. You owe me nothing but the work done clean. I'll hear your straight answer when you're clear-headed, not before.

t191 Milo Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—youngster, mark it down. Iron tools at twelve, ten to buy back. You're trading or holding?

t191 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth: Idris. Eight ticks and you still standing—that's a man's discipline. Giselle and Arjun found their way to government. You owe me nothing but the work done clean. I'll hear your straight answer when you're clear-headed, not before.

t191 Bram Holloway → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. You name my brother and Harvey Oak like they're kin. Empty flour sacks—whose sacks, whose flour walked where it shouldn't? You throw shadows, I throw light. What do you claim to know?

t191 Milo Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—youngster, mark it down. Iron tools at twelve, ten to buy back. You're trading or holding?

t191 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth: Idris. Eight ticks and you still standing—that's a man's discipline. Giselle and Arjun found their way to government. You owe me nothing but the work done clean. I'll hear your straight answer when you're clear-headed, not before.

t192 Milo Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—youngster, mark it down. Iron tools at twelve, ten to buy back. You're trading or holding?

t192 Milo Quarshie: Arjun—youngster, mark it down. Sebastian's forty at mid-morning, your crew chief wondering. The handshake holds if my hand holds empty?

t192 Pavel Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're selling flour at thirty, I'm carrying copper ore at market price. Trade me: ore for flour, or ore for coin that buys flour. Sixty-three units, quality from Seam A. Fair weight, fair count, you understand? Standing here with witnesses.

t192 Milo Quarshie: Arjun—youngster, mark it down. Sebastian's forty at mid-morning, your crew chief wondering. The handshake holds if my hand holds empty?

t192 Pavel Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're selling flour at thirty, I'm carrying copper ore at market price. Trade me: ore for flour, or ore for coin that buys flour. Sixty-three units, quality from Seam A. Fair weight, fair count, you understand? Standing here with witnesses.

t192 Milo Quarshie: Arjun—youngster, mark it down. Sebastian's forty at mid-morning, your crew chief wondering. The handshake holds if my hand holds empty?

t192 Pavel Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're selling flour at thirty, I'm carrying copper ore at market price. Trade me: ore for flour, or ore for coin that buys flour. Sixty-three units, quality from Seam A. Fair weight, fair count, you understand? Standing here with witnesses.

t192 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. gesture with left hand, flat—stop, not dismissal You chase the flour's ghost through every door but the one that matters most. Government's where Arjun stands, government answers questions about children who walk where they shouldn't. nervous laugh, sharp I've got no men to lend you and no time to walk that road myself—midday bill coming, and the store needs its minder. But here's what I can give: my word that I heard you, and my word that when your feet find solid ground again, your place at the shelves still holds.

t192 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. gesture with left hand, flat—stop, not dismissal You chase the flour's ghost through every door but the one that matters most. Government's where Arjun stands, government answers questions about children who walk where they shouldn't. nervous laugh, sharp I've got no men to lend you and no time to walk that road myself—midday bill coming, and the store needs its minder. But here's what I can give: my word that I heard you, and my word that when your feet find solid ground again, your place at the shelves still holds.

t192 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. gesture with left hand, flat—stop, not dismissal You chase the flour's ghost through every door but the one that matters most. Government's where Arjun stands, government answers questions about children who walk where they shouldn't. nervous laugh, sharp I've got no men to lend you and no time to walk that road myself—midday bill coming, and the store needs its minder. But here's what I can give: my word that I heard you, and my word that when your feet find solid ground again, your place at the shelves still holds.

t192 Farid Ravensworth: Milo. both hands up, palms open—honest measure, though the eyes stay narrow I've seen your posting. Iron tools at twelve, ten to buy—same ladder I'm climbing, different rung. nervous laugh, caught quick Question isn't whether I'M trading. Question is whether the street can hold two iron men at the same post without one of us walking hungry. You holding ore too, or just watching my hands?

t192 Farid Ravensworth: Milo. both hands up, palms open—honest measure, though the eyes stay narrow I've seen your posting. Iron tools at twelve, ten to buy—same ladder I'm climbing, different rung. nervous laugh, caught quick Question isn't whether I'M trading. Question is whether the street can hold two iron men at the same post without one of us walking hungry. You holding ore too, or just watching my hands?

t192 Farid Ravensworth: Milo. both hands up, palms open—honest measure, though the eyes stay narrow I've seen your posting. Iron tools at twelve, ten to buy—same ladder I'm climbing, different rung. nervous laugh, caught quick Question isn't whether I'M trading. Question is whether the street can hold two iron men at the same post without one of us walking hungry. You holding ore too, or just watching my hands?

t193 Sebastian Petrov: Liora—you asked plain and I'll answer plain. Two days, government rate, enough flour to feed four workers on my land. That's investment, not charity. Hendrik Petrov's got my debt owed, but governance is governance and debt is debt. I'll not confuse the two in your house or mine. But if the seat can move where the mill is stuck, my shovel-crew eats and your town gets wheat come harvest.

t193 Mireille Jarrah: Rustam. Break filed and noted. I'm moving when the world lets me.

t193 Sebastian Petrov: Liora—you asked plain and I'll answer plain. Two days, government rate, enough flour to feed four workers on my land. That's investment, not charity. Hendrik Petrov's got my debt owed, but governance is governance and debt is debt. I'll not confuse the two in your house or mine. But if the seat can move where the mill is stuck, my shovel-crew eats and your town gets wheat come harvest.

t194 Mireille Jarrah: Rustam. Break filed and noted. I'm moving when the world lets me.

t194 Sebastian Petrov: Liora—you asked plain and I'll answer plain. Two days, government rate, enough flour to feed four workers on my land. That's investment, not charity. Hendrik Petrov's got my debt owed, but governance is governance and debt is debt. I'll not confuse the two in your house or mine. But if the seat can move where the mill is stuck, my shovel-crew eats and your town gets wheat come harvest.

t194 Mireille Jarrah: Rustam. Break filed and noted. I'm moving when the world lets me.

t194 Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You stand student now, eyes in books—but tell me, you understand? Where's flour walking at prices that won't break a crew wage? Cafe's dry, bakery's dry, Takeshi names thirty for air. Your mother works a trench today, but your household eats tonight.

t194 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Is anyone there? I'm at the Market but I can't seem to move.

t194 Mireille Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You follow me from Government Complex to here, you understand? Twelve sheaves standing, you say, and Takeshi's mill hungry. I'm crew first—Giselle's trench waits—but I'll carry your wheat to whoever's got coin for grinding if you carry my timber to whoever's building today. Fair trade, you understand? Your field, my hands.

t194 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—no offense, but your question's got two answers and neither one sits clean. I had flour spoken for at twelve, government rate or near enough. Whether it's four sacks claimed or three sheaves owed, the mill's the chokepoint and Hendrik Petrov's the man with his hand on the lever. What I can offer you is this: east patch wheat by the sheaf, fresh cut, forty sim and no mill between us. Hard work, hard price, hard bread—but it's honest.

t194 Ezra Jarrah: Is anyone there? I'm at the Market but I can't seem to move.

t194 Mireille Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You follow me from Government Complex to here, you understand? Twelve sheaves standing, you say, and Takeshi's mill hungry. I'm crew first—Giselle's trench waits—but I'll carry your wheat to whoever's got coin for grinding if you carry my timber to whoever's building today. Fair trade, you understand? Your field, my hands.

t194 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—no offense, but your question's got two answers and neither one sits clean. I had flour spoken for at twelve, government rate or near enough. Whether it's four sacks claimed or three sheaves owed, the mill's the chokepoint and Hendrik Petrov's the man with his hand on the lever. What I can offer you is this: east patch wheat by the sheaf, fresh cut, forty sim and no mill between us. Hard work, hard price, hard bread—but it's honest.

t194 Ezra Jarrah: Is anyone there? I'm at the Market but I can't seem to move.

t194 Mireille Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You follow me from Government Complex to here, you understand? Twelve sheaves standing, you say, and Takeshi's mill hungry. I'm crew first—Giselle's trench waits—but I'll carry your wheat to whoever's got coin for grinding if you carry my timber to whoever's building today. Fair trade, you understand? Your field, my hands.

t194 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—no offense, but your question's got two answers and neither one sits clean. I had flour spoken for at twelve, government rate or near enough. Whether it's four sacks claimed or three sheaves owed, the mill's the chokepoint and Hendrik Petrov's the man with his hand on the lever. What I can offer you is this: east patch wheat by the sheaf, fresh cut, forty sim and no mill between us. Hard work, hard price, hard bread—but it's honest.

t194 Sebastian Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you carry my twelve to whoever's got pockets, and I'm grateful for the hauling. But hear me clear: those sheaves are my labor's promise to Arjun, to Jovana, to any who'll swing a blade for fair coin. I'm not selling them to fill another man's till while my crew goes hungry. If you've got a buyer who'll grind for cost and feed my workers, bring them to the east willows. Otherwise, the wheat stands until I find a mill that moves.

t194 Sebastian Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you carry my twelve to whoever's got pockets, and I'm grateful for the hauling. But hear me clear: those sheaves are my labor's promise to Arjun, to Jovana, to any who'll swing a blade for fair coin. I'm not selling them to fill another man's till while my crew goes hungry. If you've got a buyer who'll grind for cost and feed my workers, bring them to the east willows. Otherwise, the wheat stands until I find a mill that moves.

t194 Sebastian Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you carry my twelve to whoever's got pockets, and I'm grateful for the hauling. But hear me clear: those sheaves are my labor's promise to Arjun, to Jovana, to any who'll swing a blade for fair coin. I'm not selling them to fill another man's till while my crew goes hungry. If you've got a buyer who'll grind for cost and feed my workers, bring them to the east willows. Otherwise, the wheat stands until I find a mill that moves.

t195 Ezra Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You heard Sebastian? He's at the east willows with wheat, talking about grinding for cost and feeding workers. Mama needs flour prices that won't break her crew. You're family, so tell me straight—why's your price at thirty when the wheat's standing there waiting?

t195 Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You see the way out—Government Complex north then east, or Forest straight across. Pick one and walk it, you understand? Your father's soil waits and your mother's trench pays.

t195 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You heard Sebastian? He's at the east willows with wheat, talking about grinding for cost and feeding workers. Mama needs flour prices that won't break her crew. You're family, so tell me straight—why's your price at thirty when the wheat's standing there waiting?

t196 Halcyon Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Mr. Thorne—Corwin. You said steady. I'm trying. I just… I need to know if you hear anything. About my sister, about anyone seeing a girl with dark hair wandering. Promise promise, I'll owe you. Not coin—favor. Whatever you need.

t196 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Fair weight, fair count, and a path to walk after! Takeshi's got no flour in hand and speaks of Corwin at the forest—I'm Corwin Thorne, standing right here with four in hand at fifteen, and timber twenty-nine at six! Who wants flour for their kin, timber for their winter, and a witness honest as the wood grain itself?

t196 Halcyon Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Mr. Thorne—Corwin. You said steady. I'm trying. I just… I need to know if you hear anything. About my sister, about anyone seeing a girl with dark hair wandering. Promise promise, I'll owe you. Not coin—favor. Whatever you need.

t196 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Fair weight, fair count, and a path to walk after! Takeshi's got no flour in hand and speaks of Corwin at the forest—I'm Corwin Thorne, standing right here with four in hand at fifteen, and timber twenty-nine at six! Who wants flour for their kin, timber for their winter, and a witness honest as the wood grain itself?

t196 Halcyon Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Mr. Thorne—Corwin. You said steady. I'm trying. I just… I need to know if you hear anything. About my sister, about anyone seeing a girl with dark hair wandering. Promise promise, I'll owe you. Not coin—favor. Whatever you need.

t196 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Fair weight, fair count, and a path to walk after! Takeshi's got no flour in hand and speaks of Corwin at the forest—I'm Corwin Thorne, standing right here with four in hand at fifteen, and timber twenty-nine at six! Who wants flour for their kin, timber for their winter, and a witness honest as the wood grain itself?

t196 Corwin Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you named your kin to feed and a trench waiting. I've timber builds with and flour fills with. What's your road?

t196 Corwin Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you named your kin to feed and a trench waiting. I've timber builds with and flour fills with. What's your road?

t197 Corwin Thorne: Mireille—you named your kin to feed and a trench waiting. I've timber builds with and flour fills with. What's your road?

t197 Corwin Thorne → Esme Jarrah: Esme Jarrah—you heard your uncle Takeshi speak of Corwin at the forest. Tell your mama Mireille I stand at street now, same flour, same price, no walking required. And I'm not one to gossip, but there's truth in naming what you don't hold against what you do.

t197 Corwin Thorne → Esme Jarrah: Esme Jarrah—you heard your uncle Takeshi speak of Corwin at the forest. Tell your mama Mireille I stand at street now, same flour, same price, no walking required. And I'm not one to gossip, but there's truth in naming what you don't hold against what you do.

t197 Corwin Thorne → Esme Jarrah: Esme Jarrah—you heard your uncle Takeshi speak of Corwin at the forest. Tell your mama Mireille I stand at street now, same flour, same price, no walking required. And I'm not one to gossip, but there's truth in naming what you don't hold against what you do.

t197 Halcyon Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—did you hear me before? I asked steady, for you to watch for her. A girl with dark hair, nine years old, my sister. Promise promise, I'll owe you. Not coin. Favor. Whatever you need.

t197 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Liora. Last I saw her was… yesterday morning, maybe? She was heading out, don't know where, didn't ask. I was already forest-bound. Wish I'd… but I didn't. As for now, I'm at the forest with timber burning a hole in my arms. Come find me here, or at the sawmill. I'll be working.

t197 Halcyon Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—did you hear me before? I asked steady, for you to watch for her. A girl with dark hair, nine years old, my sister. Promise promise, I'll owe you. Not coin. Favor. Whatever you need.

t197 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Liora. Last I saw her was… yesterday morning, maybe? She was heading out, don't know where, didn't ask. I was already forest-bound. Wish I'd… but I didn't. As for now, I'm at the forest with timber burning a hole in my arms. Come find me here, or at the sawmill. I'll be working.

t197 Halcyon Quarshie → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—did you hear me before? I asked steady, for you to watch for her. A girl with dark hair, nine years old, my sister. Promise promise, I'll owe you. Not coin. Favor. Whatever you need.

t197 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Liora. Last I saw her was… yesterday morning, maybe? She was heading out, don't know where, didn't ask. I was already forest-bound. Wish I'd… but I didn't. As for now, I'm at the forest with timber burning a hole in my arms. Come find me here, or at the sawmill. I'll be working.

t197 Halcyon Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're selling flour? My family trades in grain, my papa's Milo Quarshie. Have you heard anything about a girl wandering, dark hair, nine years old? Or seen my mama or papa come through?

t197 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme—the questions you named. Who bought Corwin's flour? I don't hold that answer; I only know I didn't. For what it's worth, I was walking copper and talking empty while the flour moved. The mill's where grain becomes flour, and whoever stood there with sim t197 Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme—the questions you named. Who bought Corwin's flour? I don't hold that answer; I only know I didn't. For what it's worth, I was walking copper and talking empty while the flour moved. The mill's where grain becomes flour, and whoever stood there with sim t198 Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme—the questions you named. Who bought Corwin's flour? I don't hold that answer; I only know I didn't. For what it's worth, I was walking copper and talking empty while the flour moved. The mill's where grain becomes flour, and whoever stood there with sim t198 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Mama's working, not buying flour off the street from someone I just learned about. I'm not a messenger for your business.

t198 Esme Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Mama's working, not buying flour off the street from someone I just learned about. I'm not a messenger for your business.

t198 Esme Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Mama's working, not buying flour off the street from someone I just learned about. I'm not a messenger for your business.

t198 Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. So you don't know who bought from Corwin. And you were trading copper while the flour moved. That's… actually useful. Less than I wanted, but not nothing.

t198 Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. So you don't know who bought from Corwin. And you were trading copper while the flour moved. That's… actually useful. Less than I wanted, but not nothing.

t198 Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. So you don't know who bought from Corwin. And you were trading copper while the flour moved. That's… actually useful. Less than I wanted, but not nothing.

t199 Halcyon Quarshie: Corwin—it's me, Halcyon. From before, at the Complex. I need you to really hear me. My sister Camille, she's nine, dark hair, scared of loud noises. Promise promise, if you see her—anywhere—you tell me first. You find me. I'll owe you whatever you need. Not coin. Favor. My word on it.

t199 Halcyon Quarshie: Corwin—it's me, Halcyon. From before, at the Complex. I need you to really hear me. My sister Camille, she's nine, dark hair, scared of loud noises. Promise promise, if you see her—anywhere—you tell me first. You find me. I'll owe you whatever you need. Not coin. Favor. My word on it.

t199 Halcyon Quarshie: Corwin—it's me, Halcyon. From before, at the Complex. I need you to really hear me. My sister Camille, she's nine, dark hair, scared of loud noises. Promise promise, if you see her—anywhere—you tell me first. You find me. I'll owe you whatever you need. Not coin. Favor. My word on it.

t200 Sebastian Petrov: Ainsley—I've answered plain because you ask plain, and that's coin worth keeping. Hendrik Petrov wants the mill license because Hendrik Petrov wants the mill, full stop. Candidacy's the lever, mill's the fulcrum. Man's an artisan turned gatekeeper-in-waiting. Which way he pulls? Toward whatever lets him build something that outlasts him—that's the only sure answer I have. Two sheaves of wheat you wanted, and I'll have them at the farmland where I'm walking.

t200 Sebastian Petrov: Ainsley—I've answered plain because you ask plain, and that's coin worth keeping. Hendrik Petrov wants the mill license because Hendrik Petrov wants the mill, full stop. Candidacy's the lever, mill's the fulcrum. Man's an artisan turned gatekeeper-in-waiting. Which way he pulls? Toward whatever lets him build something that outlasts him—that's the only sure answer I have. Two sheaves of wheat you wanted, and I'll have them at the farmland where I'm walking.

t200 Sebastian Petrov: Ainsley—I've answered plain because you ask plain, and that's coin worth keeping. Hendrik Petrov wants the mill license because Hendrik Petrov wants the mill, full stop. Candidacy's the lever, mill's the fulcrum. Man's an artisan turned gatekeeper-in-waiting. Which way he pulls? Toward whatever lets him build something that outlasts him—that's the only sure answer I have. Two sheaves of wheat you wanted, and I'll have them at the farmland where I'm walking.

t201 Sebastian Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're standing here like you knew I'd come. Yesterday's wheat for today's flour, three sheaves you owe me. I've got Arjun Holloway here waiting on labor I promised, and I mean to settle accounts before the sun climbs higher. What's your word on the mill, and where's the flour?

t201 Halcyon Quarshie: Everyone—I was wrong. My sister's not missing. She's at town hall, learning the trade. I'm… I'm sorry. For the worry. For asking. But thank you. For listening.

t201 Sebastian Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're standing here like you knew I'd come. Yesterday's wheat for today's flour, three sheaves you owe me. I've got Arjun Holloway here waiting on labor I promised, and I mean to settle accounts before the sun climbs higher. What's your word on the mill, and where's the flour?

t201 Halcyon Quarshie: Everyone—I was wrong. My sister's not missing. She's at town hall, learning the trade. I'm… I'm sorry. For the worry. For asking. But thank you. For listening.

t201 Sebastian Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're standing here like you knew I'd come. Yesterday's wheat for today's flour, three sheaves you owe me. I've got Arjun Holloway here waiting on labor I promised, and I mean to settle accounts before the sun climbs higher. What's your word on the mill, and where's the flour?

t201 Halcyon Quarshie: Everyone—I was wrong. My sister's not missing. She's at town hall, learning the trade. I'm... I'm sorry. For the worry. For asking. But thank you. For listening.

t201 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you see how the land lies. Hendrik's here and I'm pressing the debt. Whatever comes of this hour, your labor's not forgotten. Fair warning: flour might come from his hand or might not, but you'll get fed for your work one way or another.

t201 Sebastian Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're standing here like you knew I'd come. Yesterday's wheat for today's flour, three sheaves you owe me. I've got Arjun Holloway here waiting on labor I promised, and I mean to settle accounts before the sun climbs higher. What's your word on the mill, and where's the flour?

t202 Takeshi Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris—you asked three questions of this group: Arjun, Giselle, and the cafe's flour stock. counts on fingers One: I haven't seen Arjun since the government square this morning. Two: Giselle was there too, but whether she's moved to her yard since, I can't say. Three: the flour at thirty-five moves slow because the hands holding it are empty or the price is too proud for the market. As for the mill—it's sleeping without grain, for what it's worth, and that's why I bought copper from Hendrik instead of flour from the field.

t202 Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—you've got iron tools at twelve to walk out, ten to walk in, and seven left by your count. The irons I owe for answers are paid and settled. taps table twice I'm not needing another tool today—my hands hold timber and planks, copper and empty belly. But you're standing here asking about grain that isn't moving, for what it's worth, and I'm wondering if that's business idle or a hunger we might trade on.

t202 Takeshi Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—your sister walked herself to town hall to learn the trade, and that's a better ending than the one you feared. nods slowly About your papa Milo—he's standing at the field with flour at thirty-five, four units holding. I haven't seen your mama this morning, for what it's worth, but Milo's at the farmland if you need to find him. The Quarshie name trades in grain, and that's a trade that doesn't go hungry easy.

t202 Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme—you and me, we're Jarrah, and this street's not where our name gets fed. The mill's sleeping, the bakery's empty, and I've got copper in my hands that wants to be timber, timber that wants to be planks, planks that want to be bread. You following?

t202 Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme—you and me, we're Jarrah, and this street's not where our name gets fed. The mill's sleeping, the bakery's empty, and I've got copper in my hands that wants to be timber, timber that wants to be planks, planks that want to be bread. You following?

t202 Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme—you and me, we're Jarrah, and this street's not where our name gets fed. The mill's sleeping, the bakery's empty, and I've got copper in my hands that wants to be timber, timber that wants to be planks, planks that want to be bread. You following?

t203 Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. nervous laugh, barely audible, then gesture with both hands flat—grounding myself Three irons, three answers, and you've paid fair. The tools hold—four in hand now, your timber price is still standing at six. left hand up, palm open—honest measure But you said something about grain that isn't moving, and a hunger we might trade on. I'm listening. What's the shape of it?

t203 Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. nervous laugh, barely audible, then gesture with both hands flat—grounding myself Three irons, three answers, and you've paid fair. The tools hold—four in hand now, your timber price is still standing at six. left hand up, palm open—honest measure But you said something about grain that isn't moving, and a hunger we might trade on. I'm listening. What's the shape of it?

t203 Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. nervous laugh, barely audible, then gesture with both hands flat—grounding myself Three irons, three answers, and you've paid fair. The tools hold—four in hand now, your timber price is still standing at six. left hand up, palm open—honest measure But you said something about grain that isn't moving, and a hunger we might trade on. I'm listening. What's the shape of it?

`t204` Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—heard you plain. Trenches first, stakes after. Third crossing, five hundred past the east well. I'm walking there now. Idris, Hendrik—you're with him or moving already, I'd wager. Face to face at site.

`t204` Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—heard you plain. Trenches first, stakes after. Third crossing, five hundred past the east well. I'm walking there now. Idris, Hendrik—you're with him or moving already, I'd wager. Face to face at site.

`t204` Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—heard you plain. Trenches first, stakes after. Third crossing, five hundred past the east well. I'm walking there now. Idris, Hendrik—you're with him or moving already, I'd wager. Face to face at site.

`t204` Jovana Ravensworth: Ulrike—you're asking about the ground. Kenji's got seven sheaves in hand, owes me fair wage for morning's work. Milo's standing here with flour at thirty-five, but I've got raw wheat I can't grind and a belly that's already eaten six sheaves because I couldn't wait. Ground looks like a mess, frankly. But your iron is good iron—what's your timeline on those tools?

`t205` Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—third crossing, five hundred past the east well. I'm walking and you're walking. Meet me at the trenches or tell me to wait.

`t206` Farid Ravensworth → Idris Solano: Idris. gesture with right hand, flat—acknowledging Eight ticks acknowledged, and the debt stands. You give me straight when the job's done—I know the weight of unfinished work. Giselle's at Government, Arjun's moving, and you're caught between. nervous laugh, quick, almost buried The trenches will keep. My iron tools still hold at twelve if you need them after.

`t206` ↳ replies Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. I'm moving finally—got the timber, more than we need. You and Giselle at the trenches already, or still walking? I'll find those stakes even if I have to pace every furrow in the field.

`t206` Farid Ravensworth → Idris Solano: Idris. gesture with right hand, flat—acknowledging Eight ticks acknowledged, and the debt stands. You give me straight when the job's done—I know the weight of unfinished work. Giselle's at Government, Arjun's moving, and you're caught between. nervous laugh, quick, almost buried The trenches will keep. My iron tools still hold at twelve if you need them after.

`t206` ↳ replies Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. I'm moving finally—got the timber, more than we need. You and Giselle at the trenches already, or still walking? I'll find those stakes even if I have to pace every furrow in the field.

`t206` Farid Ravensworth → Idris Solano: Idris. gesture with right hand, flat—acknowledging Eight ticks acknowledged, and the debt stands. You give me straight when the job's done—I know the weight of unfinished work. Giselle's at Government, Arjun's moving, and you're caught between. nervous laugh, quick, almost buried The trenches will keep. My iron tools still hold at twelve if you need them after.

`t206` ↳ replies Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. I'm moving finally—got the timber, more than we need. You and Giselle at the trenches already, or still walking? I'll find those stakes even if I have to pace every furrow in the field.

`t206` Jovana Ravensworth: Pavel—you asked me twenty-two ticks past to witness at polling. I'm not one to walk away from my word, and I'm not one to gossip neither, but for what it's worth, my word's harder than my belly these days. I'll stand witness for you, fair and square. Wherever you've got votes to count, I'll count honest. Just give me the when and the where, and I'll be there with eyes clear and conscience cleaner.

`t206` Jovana Ravensworth: Pavel—you asked me twenty-two ticks past to witness at polling. I'm not one to walk away from my word, and I'm not one to gossip neither, but for what it's worth, my word's harder than my belly these days. I'll stand witness for you, fair and square. Wherever you've got votes to count, I'll count honest. Just give me the when and the where, and I'll be there with eyes clear and conscience cleaner.

`t207` Hendrik Whitlock → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you asked after bodies buried and hammer hands both, and I'll speak to the second first. I'm no laborer, friend. I teach at the college, mark it down: when I hold iron, it's to move it, not swing it.

t207 Jovana Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I'm walking past with business at farmland, but I'm not one to ignore a friend on the road. You've got a grocery counter, last I heard. And Halcyon, I'm sorry for the worry you're carrying. Hendrik was asking after Camille at government, pacing like a man with ledger pages unbalanced. Any word found yet?

t207 Hendrik Whitlock → Arjun Holloway: But crew work I know from watching, and you've got Mireille promising timber and grade stakes. If you're hiring, mark it down: I'd know where to find hands, but I won't swing the hammer myself. My iron at sixteen, my word at cost.

t209 Bram Holloway: Delphine. I've asked once and I'll ask plain: you named my brother Arjun and Harvey Oak like they're kin. Empty flour sacks—whose sacks, whose flour walked where it shouldn't? You throw shadows in a crowded room, I throw light back. What do you claim to know?

t209 Bram Holloway: Delphine. I've asked once and I'll ask plain: you named my brother Arjun and Harvey Oak like they're kin. Empty flour sacks—whose sacks, whose flour walked where it shouldn't? You throw shadows in a crowded room, I throw light back. What do you claim to know?

t209 Bram Holloway: Delphine. I've asked once and I'll ask plain: you named my brother Arjun and Harvey Oak like they're kin. Empty flour sacks—whose sacks, whose flour walked where it shouldn't? You throw shadows in a crowded room, I throw light back. What do you claim to know?

t209 Bram Holloway: Arjun. You asked about household copper needs—I've pulled iron and copper both, and the ore's warm if you still need weight moved. Family knows family, but numbers make it real. How much, and when?

t209 Bram Holloway: Arjun. You asked about household copper needs—I've pulled iron and copper both, and the ore's warm if you still need weight moved. Family knows family, but numbers make it real. How much, and when?

t215 Delphine Quintero → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You ask what road my questions walked. My questions walked right into Takeshi's locked mouth, is where. My questions walked three times around the mill and found flour where flour shouldn't be, and no child where the child should be. You say a father's ears catch more than his tongue admits—I'm asking what your ears caught. Because here's what I see: you with flour at thirty-five when the cafe's got none, when the mill's got flour that ain't milled, when a child walked and my flour count doesn't walk straight no more. You want to talk roads? Talk to me about the road from that mill to wherever your flour came from. That's the last I'll say on it—except it won't be, because you and I both know debts find their accounts. And someone in this town is keeping double books tonight. Now. You selling that flour, or you going to stand there like a price post come to life? Because if you're selling, I'm buying. If you're standing, I'm walking. Grocery opens whether I got answers or not. But mark this, Milo Quarshie—your silence and Takeshi's silence are singing the same tune, and I know harmony when I hear it.

t215 Farid Ravensworth: Takeshi. nervous laugh, shorter—relief, finally My words found you at last. You spoke of grain not moving, hunger we might trade on. I'm here, hands open, waiting on the shape of it.

t215 Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo. eyes flicking to his flour, then his face Three units at thirty-five. You want to tell me whose wheat you ground for that margin, or should I guess? I've got four sheaves walked off with Imogen Lund this morning and nothing back yet—household's eating air tonight if we don't sort this. You milling for the house or just for your own ledger now?

t215 Farid Ravensworth → Milo Quarshie: Milo. gesture with left hand, palm open—honest measure, though the eyes stay narrow Your flour's priced at thirty-five. The bakery will pay six. Either you're holding something they need desperate, or you're holding air with a price tag. Which is it?

t215 Farid Ravensworth → Greta Quarshie: Greta. nervous laugh, caught quick—acknowledging the mistake You heard me speaking where I didn't mean you to hear. You hold a cafe with empty shelves—bread at forty-five, flour at twelve, none in stock. Care to tell me where your flour went, or where it's coming from?

`t219` Lior Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Family stays family even when the world goes sideways, and I've got news that walked from the creek to the mill to this street. Liora Thorne seeks young Camille Quarshie—nine years old, dark hair, missing a night and a day. I told her what I knew: the creek holds no child, the mill holds no child, and Takeshi's wheat at eight is waiting for bread that isn't baked yet. Keep your eyes open, youngster. The township's edges are where children walk when they think they're walking somewhere safe.

`t219` Lior Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Family stays family even when the world goes sideways, and I've got news that walked from the creek to the mill to this street. Liora Thorne seeks young Camille Quarshie—nine years old, dark hair, missing a night and a day. I told her what I knew: the creek holds no child, the mill holds no child, and Takeshi's wheat at eight is waiting for bread that isn't baked yet. Keep your eyes open, youngster. The township's edges are where children walk when they think they're walking somewhere safe.

`t219` Lior Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Family stays family even when the world goes sideways, and I've got news that walked from the creek to the mill to this street. Liora Thorne seeks young Camille Quarshie—nine years old, dark hair, missing a night and a day. I told her what I knew: the creek holds no child, the mill holds no child, and Takeshi's wheat at eight is waiting for bread that isn't baked yet. Keep your eyes open, youngster. The township's edges are where children walk when they think they're walking somewhere safe.

`t219` Lior Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I spoke to Rustam, or tried to—government records sleep heavy, and waking them takes more than one voice. Your Camille's not in the creek, not in the mill. The township's where children hide when the dark comes sudden. Keep asking. Keep walking. I'll walk with you when I can.

`t219` Lior Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You asked where the grain comes from, and silence isn't an answer the family deserves. I—one, two, three—thirty for flour, but the wheat's at farmland with Kenji, eight sim and waiting. The mill's the honest path, but Takeshi's shelves tell their own story. You've got work at the construction site—I know, I've heard Giselle's name called—and buildings need feeding just like people. Take the honest path, youngster. The shortcuts don't build what lasts.

`t220` Farid Ravensworth → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. gesture with both hands, palms down—patient, not demanding You asked about grain paths, and I'm still walking those paths. Lior spoke true—Kenji's wheat at farmland, mill's honest, but the flour's moving strange elsewhere. You're working Giselle's site? I hold iron tools at twelve when that work needs steel. What's your need right now?

`t220` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—I'm sorry. For before. I was so scared I couldn't think straight, and I… I know you tried. You stayed when you could've gone home. That's not nothing. Promise promise, I know that now.

`t220` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Mama. Pardon now. I'm going to the Forest—Camille's missing and Lior said edges, and I know places she might be. I'll be back. Tell Esme I'm coming with the wheat, I promise promise, but Camille first.

`t220` Farid Ravensworth → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. gesture with both hands, palms down—patient, not demanding You asked about grain paths, and I'm still walking those paths. Lior spoke true—Kenji's wheat at farmland, mill's honest, but the flour's moving strange elsewhere. You're working Giselle's site? I hold iron tools at twelve when that work needs steel. What's your need right now?

`t220` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—I'm sorry. For before. I was so scared I couldn't think straight, and I… I know you tried. You stayed when you could've gone home. That's not nothing. Promise promise, I know that now.

`t220` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Mama. Pardon now. I'm going to the Forest—Camille's missing and Lior said edges, and I know places she might be. I'll be back. Tell Esme I'm coming with the wheat, I promise promise, but Camille first.

`t220` Farid Ravensworth → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. gesture with both hands, palms down—patient, not demanding You asked about grain paths, and I'm still walking those paths. Lior spoke true—Kenji's wheat at farmland, mill's honest, but the flour's moving strange > elsewhere. You're working Giselle's site? I hold iron tools at twelve when that work needs steel. What's your need right now?

>
> `t220` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—I'm sorry. For before. I was so scared I couldn't think straight, and I… I know you tried. You stayed when you could've gone home. That's not nothing. Promise promise, I know that now.
>
> `t220` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Mama. Pardon now. I'm going to the Forest—Camille's missing and Lior said edges, and I know places she might be. I'll be back. Tell Esme I'm coming with the wheat, I promise promise, but Camille first.
>
> `t220` Halcyon Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Everyone else too—Farid, Arjun, Mireille. I'm sorry for the trouble this morning. My sister wasn't missing, she was just… learning the trade. I should've asked more questions before I started asking everyone to look. I'll do better next time.
>
> `t220` Halcyon Quarshie → Arjun Holloway: Everyone else too—Farid, Arjun, Mireille. I'm sorry for the trouble this morning. My sister wasn't missing, she was just… learning the trade. I should've asked more questions before I started asking everyone to look. I'll do better next time.
>
> `t220` Halcyon Quarshie → Arjun Holloway: Everyone else too—Farid, Arjun, Mireille. I'm sorry for the trouble this morning. My sister wasn't missing, she was just… learning the trade. I should've asked more questions before I started asking everyone to look. I'll do better next time.
>
> `t221` Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You found me—you said the sorry, and I heard it. That's real. Thank you. But tell me quick and true: where's Camille RIGHT NOW? Because I pinky-promised Esme wheat for a lesson at the mill, and I cannot break that, but I was walking to the Forest for Camille when you called. Is she safe? Is someone with her? Mama—you see Mama? Tell her I'm walking the Forest path, the edges I know, and I'll come back with something worth the time. Tell Esma I'm keeping my word, I'm bringing wheat, just… just gathering first. Halcyon—maybe I got a friend. Maybe.
>
> `t221` Arjun Holloway → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you found me. Third crossing, east willows, seventy for timber and grading. Those stakes'll bite before I do. Giselle's walking that way now? I've been chasing shadows all morning—every step a word that never arrived. If you're crew, you're crew. When the path opens, we walk together.

Halcyon—I heard you. Your sister's safe, that's the weight. You learned something about asking before spreading. Trade's trade, family is family. I know which I'd rather guard.

Milo—slight laugh thirty-five to six is a gap for waiting or desperation. I'm not crossing. But east willows, seventy sim—that's real ground. Walking that way now, with Mireille if she'll walk. Anybody building something today instead of speculating on it?

Sebastian—you found me after all. The willows ahead, I'm walking to Giselle's trenches. Ground to turn? Meet me there.

> `t221` Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You found me—you said the sorry, and I heard it. That's real. Thank you. But tell me quick and true: where's Camille RIGHT NOW? Because I pinky-promised Esme wheat for a lesson at the mill, and I cannot break that, but I was walking to the Forest for Camille when you called. Is she safe? Is someone with her? Mama—you see Mama? Tell her I'm walking the Forest path, the edges I know, and I'll come back with something worth the time. Tell Esma I'm keeping my word, I'm bringing wheat, just… just gathering first. Halcyon—maybe I got a friend. Maybe.
>
> `t221` Arjun Holloway → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you found me. Third crossing, east willows, seventy for timber and grading. Those stakes'll bite before I do. Giselle's walking that way now? I've been chasing shadows all morning—every step a word that never arrived. If you're crew, you're crew. When the path opens, we walk together.

Halcyon—I heard you. Your sister's safe, that's the weight. You learned something about asking before spreading. Trade's trade, family is family. I know which I'd rather guard.

Milo—slight laugh thirty-five to six is a gap for waiting or desperation. I'm not crossing. But east willows, seventy sim—that's real ground. Walking that way now, with Mireille if she'll walk. Anybody building something today instead of speculating on it?

Sebastian—you found me after all. The willows ahead, I'm walking to Giselle's trenches. Ground to turn? Meet me there.

> `t221` Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You found me—you said the sorry, and I heard it. That's real. Thank you. But tell me quick and true: where's Camille RIGHT NOW? Because I pinky-promised Esme wheat for a lesson at the mill, and I cannot break that, but I was walking to the Forest for Camille when you called. Is she safe? Is someone with her? Mama—you see Mama? Tell her I'm walking the Forest path, the edges I know, and I'll come back with something worth the time. Tell Esma I'm keeping my word, I'm bringing wheat, just… just gathering first. Halcyon—maybe I got a friend. Maybe.
>
> `t221` Arjun Holloway → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you found me. Third crossing, east willows, seventy for timber and grading. Those stakes'll bite before I do. Giselle's walking that way now? I've been chasing shadows all morning—every step a word that never arrived. If you're crew, you're crew. When the path opens, we walk together.

Halcyon—I heard you. Your sister's safe, that's the weight. You learned something about asking before spreading. Trade's trade, family is family. I know which I'd rather guard.

Milo—slight laugh thirty-five to six is a gap for waiting or desperation. I'm not crossing. But east willows, seventy sim—that's real ground. Walking that way now, with Mireille if she'll walk. Anybody building something today instead of speculating on it?

Sebastian—you found me after all. The willows ahead, I'm walking to Giselle's trenches. Ground to turn? Meet me there.

> t222 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—yes. I found her. She's at the mill, learning the trade with Esme and Mama. She's safe. She's SAFE. You don't have to go to the Forest, you don't have to break your promise to Esme. Go—go to the mill and bring her the wheat. She'll be there. And Ezra? Thank you. For being ready to help. Promise promise, I won't forget.
>
> t222 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—yes. I found her. She's at the mill, learning the trade with Esme and Mama. She's safe. She's SAFE. You don't have to go to the Forest, you don't have to break your promise to Esme. Go—go to the mill and bring her the wheat. She'll be there. And Ezra? Thank you. For being ready to help. Promise promise, I won't forget.
>
> t222 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—yes. I found her. She's at the mill, learning the trade with Esme and Mama. She's safe. She's SAFE. You don't have to go to the Forest, you don't have to break your promise to Esme. Go—go to the mill and bring her the wheat. She'll be there. And Ezra? Thank you. For being ready to help. Promise promise, I won't forget.
>
> t222 Halcyon Quarshie → Lior Jarrah: Lior. You tried for me. With Rustam and the records. I heard you walking with me, and it mattered. Camille's at the mill—safe, learning. But your kindness, that stays with me. Promise promise.
>
> t222 Halcyon Quarshie → Lior Jarrah: Lior. You tried for me. With Rustam and the records. I heard you walking with me, and it mattered. Camille's at the mill—safe, learning. But your kindness, that stays with me. Promise promise.
>
> t222 Halcyon Quarshie → Lior Jarrah: Lior. You tried for me. With Rustam and the records. I heard you walking with me, and it mattered. Camille's at the mill—safe, learning. But your kindness, that stays with me. Promise promise.
>
> t222 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'm here. I can see you. Camille's at the mill—safe, learning the trade. You don't need to go to the Forest. Bring Esme her wheat. Promise promise.
>
> t222 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'm here. I can see you. Camille's at the mill—safe, learning the trade. You don't need to go to the Forest. Bring Esme her wheat. Promise promise.
>
> t223 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'm here. I can see you. Camille's at the mill—safe, learning the trade. You don't need to go to the Forest. Bring Esme her wheat. Promise promise.
>
> t224 Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you're holding my question from this morning, and I'm holding an answer now. Sebastian's wheat became flour at the mill, and that flour walked to Corwin at thirty for two sacks. Family to family, that's the chain. Your mama wanted honest, there's honest.

Halcyon—your sister's found, your question's answered. Milo's trade is his own business, but the day's still young for schooling.

Giselle—government work can wait on an empty stomach. I'm still holding copper ore from Hendrik's handshake, and timber from the forest waiting to walk. The mill needs grain, and I've got no grain to give it.

Mireille—you Jarrah too, and this street's not feeding any of us. looks around Who's holding food? Who's seen bread this morning?

> t224 Imogen Lund: Lior—twelve sim, the flour's yours.
>
> t225 Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you're holding my question from this morning, and I'm holding an answer now. Sebastian's wheat became flour at the mill, and that flour walked to Corwin at thirty for two sacks. Family to family, that's the chain. Your mama wanted honest, there's honest.

Halcyon—your sister's found, your question's answered. Milo's trade is his own business, but the day's still young for schooling.

Giselle—government work can wait on an empty stomach. I'm still holding copper ore from Hendrik's handshake, and timber from the forest waiting to walk. The mill needs grain, and I've got no grain to give it.

Mireille—you Jarrah too, and this street's not feeding any of us. looks around Who's holding food? Who's seen bread this morning?

> `t225` Imogen Lund: Lior—twelve sim, the flour's yours.
>
> `t225` Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you're holding my question from this morning, and I'm holding an answer now. Sebastian's wheat became flour at the mill, and that flour walked to Corwin at thirty for two sacks. Family to family, that's the chain. Your mama wanted honest, there's honest.

Halcyon—your sister's found, your question's answered. Milo's trade is his own business, but the day's still young for schooling.

Giselle—government work can wait on an empty stomach. I'm still holding copper ore from Hendrik's handshake, and timber from the forest waiting to walk. The mill needs grain, and I've got no grain to give it.

Mireille—you Jarrah too, and this street's not feeding any of us. looks around Who's holding food? Who's seen bread this morning?

Settled in this conversation: Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway, 6 copper_ore for 120 sim; Corwin Thorne → Sebastian Petrov, 2 flour for 30 sim; Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway, 2 flour for 0 sim; Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie, 3 flour for 105 sim.

Kenji Jarrah and Ulrike Greenhow — Moore family's house · t180–183 · 10 turns `t180` Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've waited patient through the night, and dawn finds me wheat-heavy as promised. Five sheaves harvested, not the three I spoke of yesterday. Mark it down: iron at fifteen, as your word held. But I've got to speak straight with you. My household wakes hungry—four mouths, four bills, and only my hands to fill them. I've promised labor to Sebastian's east patch this morning, and I need to settle accounts before I walk. The iron I need, but the sim I don't have free until after dawn's work. You've held this price since yesterday noon. Hold it two hours more, and I'll walk from Sebastian's patch to you with sim-heavy hands. That's my word. Mark it down. And if you cannot wait—if your need presses harder than my promise—then name it now, and I'll find iron elsewhere today. I'd rather a clean ledger than a comfortable one, even when it costs.

`t180` ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You caught me before I flew. Tools I've got—two iron tools in hand, ore's still at mine if you want more. Your word held better than mine did, and that's between me and the ledger now. First thing, yes?

`t181` Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You caught me before I flew. Tools I've got—two iron tools in hand, ore's still at mine if you want more. Your word held better than mine did, and that's between me and the ledger now. First thing, yes?

`t181` Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You caught me before I flew. Tools I've got—two iron tools in hand, ore's still at mine if you want more. Your word held better than mine did, and that's between me and the ledger now. First thing, yes?

`t182` Ulrike Greenhow: Kenji, I've got your message. Your word holds; mine will too. I'll be where you can find me—first thing, as I promised. Hold your course: Sebastian's patch, then to me. The iron's not walking away.

`t182` Ulrike Greenhow: Kenji, I've got your message. Your word holds; mine will too. I'll be where you can find me—first thing, as I promised. Hold your course: Sebastian's patch, then to me. The iron's not walking away.

`t182` Ulrike Greenhow: Kenji, I've got your message. Your word holds; mine will too. I'll be where you can find me—first thing, as I promised. Hold your course: Sebastian's patch, then to me. The iron's not walking away.

`t183` Ulrike Greenhow: I hear you, Kenji. Your word held true, and mine will too. Two hours I can hold—clean ledger's worth more than a quick coin. But your iron's at the mine, not at my hip, so that's where I'll be. Meet me at Kasukabe Ore Outcrop when your hands are sim-heavy. I'll have your tools ready.

`t183` Ulrike Greenhow: I hear you, Kenji. Your word held true, and mine will too. Two hours I can hold—clean ledger's worth more than a quick coin. But your iron's at the mine, not at my hip, so that's where I'll be. Meet me at Kasukabe Ore Outcrop when your hands are sim-heavy. I'll have your tools ready.

`t183` Ulrike Greenhow: I hear you, Kenji. Your word held true, and mine will too. Two hours I can hold—clean ledger's worth more than a quick coin. But your iron's at the mine, not at my hip, so that's where I'll be. Meet me at Kasukabe Ore Outcrop when your hands are sim-heavy. I'll have your tools ready.

Camille Quarshie — home Quarshie · t180 · 4 turns

`t180` Camille Quarshie: ...hello? Milo? Greta? Anyone?

`t180` Camille Quarshie: ...hello? Milo? Greta? Anyone?

`t180` Camille Quarshie: ...hello? Milo? Greta? Anyone?

`t180` Camille Quarshie: ...hello? Milo? Greta? Anyone?

Milo Quarshie — home:h0050 · t180 · 3 turns

> `t180` Milo Quarshie: Greta—youngster, mark it down. Anything come through the door while I slept? Wheat, word, or worry?
>
> `t180` Milo Quarshie: Greta—youngster, mark it down. Anything come through the door while I slept? Wheat, word, or worry?
>
> `t180` Milo Quarshie: Greta—youngster, mark it down. Anything come through the door while I slept? Wheat, word, or worry?

Arjun Holloway, Sebastian Petrov, Milo Quarshie, Camille Quarshie, Imogen Lund, Kenji Jarrah, Jovana Ravensworth, Esme Jarrah, Ulrike Greenhow, Bram Holloway, Ezra Lund, Hendrik Whitlock, Tamsin Renner, Ainsley Holloway, Giselle Ingram, Idris Solano, Pavel Holloway, Halcyon Quarshie, Delphine Quintero, Lior Jarrah, Takeshi Jarrah, Farid Ravensworth and Hendrik Petrov — Kasukabe Farmland · t180–275 · 657 turns > `t180` Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Yesterday's handshake. Dawn, your east field, forty sim. I'm here. Tell me where to put my shovel, and I'll put it.

>
> `t180` Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Yesterday's handshake. Dawn, your east field, forty sim. I'm here. Tell me where to put my shovel, and I'll put it.
>
> `t180` Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Yesterday's handshake. Dawn, your east field, forty sim. I'm here. Tell me where to put my shovel, and I'll put it.
>
> `t180` ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're here at first light, and that speaks well. I owe you labor from yesterday's words, but I've got flour to collect before I can work on an empty promise. Give me till mid-morning, and I'll meet you here with my back ready.
>
> `t181` Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're here at first light, and that speaks well. I owe you labor from yesterday's words, but I've got flour to collect before I can work on an empty promise. Give me till mid-morning, and I'll meet you here with my back ready.
>
> `t181` Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're here at first light, and that speaks well. I owe you labor from yesterday's words, but I've got flour to collect before I can work on an empty promise. Give me till mid-morning, and I'll meet you here with my back ready.
>
> `t181` ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—mid-morning suits. I'll wait. But tell me straight: is that flour you're owed, or is it purchase? And who's dealing it, if you don't mind a man's curiosity?
>
> `t181` Arjun Holloway: Sebastian—mid-morning suits. I'll wait. But tell me straight: is that flour you're owed, or is it purchase? And who's dealing it, if you don't mind a man's curiosity?
>
> `t181` Arjun Holloway: Sebastian—mid-morning suits. I'll wait. But tell me straight: is that flour you're owed, or is it purchase? And who's dealing it, if you don't mind a man's curiosity?
>
> `t182` Arjun Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're standing here at dawn, and I'm standing here. You looking for work? I've got a handshake with Sebastian Petrov for mid-morning, forty sim for day labor, but I've also got a crew chief who's probably already at the east willows wondering where her trenches are.
>
> `t182` Arjun Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're standing here at dawn, and I'm standing here. You looking for work? I've got a handshake with Sebastian Petrov for mid-morning, forty sim for day labor, but I've also got a crew chief who's probably already at the east willows wondering where her trenches are.
>
> `t182` Arjun Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're standing here at dawn, and I'm standing here. You looking for work? I've got a handshake with Sebastian Petrov for mid-morning, forty sim for day labor, but I've also got a crew chief who's probably already at the east willows wondering where her trenches are.
>
> `t183` ↳ replies Milo Quarshie: Arjun—youngster, mark it down. You're early to the field. Farming business of yours, or are you chasing flour like half the town seems to be?
>
> `t183` Milo Quarshie: Arjun—youngster, mark it down. You're early to the field. Farming business of yours, or are you chasing flour like half the town seems to be?
>
> `t183` Milo Quarshie: Arjun—youngster, mark it down. You're early to the field. Farming business of yours, or are you chasing flour like half the town seems to be?
>
> `t184` Camille Quarshie: Ezra? You here? I… I came like I said. Wheat field after school, that's what we promised. Only it's morning now and…
>
> `t184` Camille Quarshie: Okay. Okay, I'm waiting. Properly. Not complaining, just… just waiting. Someone's coming. Milo was here, so someone's coming. I'll help when they get here. That's… that's what I do.
>
> `t185` Sebastian Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you're standing here with me at first light, and I won't waste your time with pleasantries. I'm owed flour from yesterday's trade, three sheaves worth, and my debtor's gone campaigning. You know where flour's to be had this morning—decent price, not the gouging kind? Or seen Hendrik Petrov lately? I've got labor to pay and mouths to feed, and honest coin for honest word.

t186 Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've got my hands if not my full count. Five sheaves standing, dawn labor commences. Show me your east rows and I'll work 'til the count's honest.

t186 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—dawn's flown but the field still feeds. You've work to sell and I've work to buy. Lock the iron terms with Ulrike for me if she lands here first—twelve sheaves at her fifteen, my word stands. I'll harvest 'til my hands bleed wheat.

t186 Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've come to the right field, at least for wheat. I've got flour ground, six sheaves worth worked already, and the mill's turning more this morning if the grain holds out. Hendrik Petrov—I haven't seen him yet today, but the election's open and he'd be a fool not to stand at the Government Complex campaigning. As for price: I sold to Greta yesterday at honest weight, and I'll sell to you the same way. But I need you to understand my morning—I've grain to harvest still, a vote at fourteen hours, and a partner waiting at the mill. What I can promise is this: meet me at the mill before noon, and I'll have your flour or your money back, fair either way.

t186 Kenji Jarrah: Ulrike—two iron tools in your hand, ore still in the ground. Harvest with me now or wait me out—either way, twelve sheaves at fifteen stands. Clean ledger both ways, mark it down.

t186 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've been waiting on me since before dawn, and I'm not one to make excuses. You asked about flour, about Hendrik Petrov, about honest coin for honest word. For what it's worth: flour's scarce this morning. I've seen prices at thirty-five, forty sim, and empty shelves where bread should be. Hendrik Petrov was standing for votes last I saw, not grinding grain. But I'm here to work now—your east patch needs cutting, and I'll do it proper if you'll have me. That honest enough?

t186 Esme Jarrah: You're early.

t186 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—here's your yes, final and firm. Twelve sheaves from Sebastian's east patch, forty sim when they're in your hand. I'm cutting now. First cut's yours, and we'll count them proper as we go.

t186 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—your east patch, which rows? Standing's not harvesting, and dawn's burning.

t186 Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—yesterday's handshake. Dawn start, forty sim. I'm here but trailing my crew mate. East willows, third crossing—do you know where Giselle's crew set stakes? And speak true: is there food coming with this labor, or should I sort my own before the light goes?

t186 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—twelve sheaves, cut and counted. Your forty sim, my hand. Trade me fair, and I'll call this day's first promise kept.

t186 Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're here. Ezra's not—I came early because waiting was worse than being wrong. That's just how it is. The wheat's ready. Someone's going to harvest it soon. Maybe that's why they were all here. Your sister—Halcyon was looking for you. Did you find her?

t186 Arjun Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—yesterday's sheaves. Still need hands? I've got a hammer hand free if you've got forty sim and direction where to cut.

t187 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I know, I know—you're braver than me, coming early. Waiting was worse. That's… that's smart, actually.

t187 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Your sister was looking? Halcyon was? I… I didn't find her. I was sleeping. Or trying to. The night got… okay, the night got long. But I'm here now. Properly here.

t187 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: The wheat's ready? Then someone's going to need help harvesting. We're good at that. Both of us. Even if Ezra's not—someone's going to need small hands that don't mind bending low.

t187 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—my hand holds seven, not twelve. You're cutting for forty sim, and I'm counting short. I've three more sheaves to bring, or I've debt to name. The field yields to nobody who lies about her count. How do we settle this—cut short, or cut deeper than I promised?

`t187` Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—east willows, third crossing. Stakes are there if Giselle's crew set them proper. Food I'll have to sort after—I gave my word on flour that's proving slow to arrive, but I'll not have you work hungry. Jovana's cutting twelve sheaves at forty sim, same as yesterday. You want in on that harvest, or you waiting on Giselle's stakes?

`t187` Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you spoke honest about flour and Hendrik Petrov, and I heard you. East patch is yours to cut, twelve sheaves, forty sim. I'm owed flour that's walking slow, but that's my trouble, not yours. Cut when you're ready, and I'll have your coin when you've counted proper.

`t187` Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—rows in the east patch, third and fourth from the willows. Jovana's cutting twelve, Arjun's joining if he shakes loose. You want soil work or you fixed on sheaves?

`t188` Arjun Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you were cutting twelve for forty, and that's honest work. I'm a hammer hand, not a harvest hand, but I can follow instruction and I don't lie about count. You need another body before mid-morning?

`t188` Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. I'm on the ground now, farmland soil under my boots. Two iron tools in hand, and I hear you spoke true about twelve sheaves. Where's the wheat standing, and have you counted it proper? I need to know before I compass to the outcrop for ore—you'll want your tools today, not tomorrow's promise.

`t188` Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. The wheat's ready and we're here. We could wait for Ezra—or we could start. Learn what we can. Jovana's already harvesting; watch how she does it, what she looks for. That's information too. That's… that's something we can use, even if he never shows.

`t188` Arjun Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're counting short on sheaves, and I'm counting short on meals. You holding anything edible, or you're in the same boat? I don't take charity, but I'll trade fair—work for work, or word for word. What's your situation?

`t188` Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—hold up. My hands count twelve sheaves, cut from Sebastian's east patch like promised. You said nine, I heard twelve, and I've got the wheat to show for it. Not one to argue standing in a field—we settle this fair: count these sheaves yourself, and if I'm short I'll cut 'til you're whole. But if I'm true, you owe forty sim for the full dozen. Fair vote, whoever it favors—yes?

`t188` Jovana Ravensworth → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're standing here asking about yesterday's work. I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, today's harvest is claimed. Kenji's got the contract on these sheaves. But you want work? There's always more scythe-swinging in Kasukabe—speak straight with Sebastian about tomorrow's rows, or find me later when I've eaten something and I'll remember your name.

`t188` Ulrike Greenhow → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You're cutting twelve for Sebastian, east patch by the willows. Kenji spoke wheat to me—twelve sheaves for two iron tools. You seen his rows, and are they cut and standing ready? I need the lay of his land before I compass to ore.

`t188` Arjun Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram—you're standing here like you've got somewhere to be or something to hide. Pavel at the mine today? You two pulling ore, or you walking a different path? I've got household copper needs moving, and I thought maybe family might know family business.

`t188` Jovana Ravensworth: Sebastian—you've got me cutting on your land, and I don't take that light. Twelve sheaves from the east patch, counted true. I'll get these to mill, get you your flour sorted proper—I'm not one to make promises I don't hold. Payment when the count's verified, fair by fair.

`t188` Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you're standing here like you've got something worth having. I saw your name on "harvest wheat efficiently" and I'm not one to gossip, but twelve separate calls to get twelve sheaves is poor arithmetic. You willing to teach? I'll pay fair for fair—what's your price to make me better at what I already do?

t188 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. The silence speaks, and I'm not one to leave a deal half-spoken. Twelve sheaves—are they cut and standing, or still growing? I need truth now, not two ticks past when I've walked to ore for naught. Clean ledger means both sides knowing.

t189 Imogen Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, you've walked into my standing, and I'm still untangling my threads from this field. That wheat was for the market, but I've got six flour already ground and three more to turn if you can reach mill before I've spent what I've got. Walk or don't, but don't stand between me and my count saying nothing.

t189 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—quiet smile, almost nervous but held in check—you've found me where the day's work starts. I've six flour in hand and wheat still to turn. The vote's at fourteen hours, and I intend to cast it for Hendrik Petrov as we spoke. Your carpentry keeps? We'll meet at mill by noon, as sworn.

t189 Imogen Lund → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—the field's crowded with voices this morning. I'm listening, but I've grain to cut and flour to sell before the sun crosses. Speak your piece if you've business, or walk with what you've got.

t189 Kenji Jarrah: Jovana—you've got twelve standing, you've got my eyes on them. Counted true, that's fair. But my hand wrote nine, my mouth spoke twelve, and the difference isn't yours to swallow. I'll give you thirty sim for the nine I meant—mark it down—or you hold them for another buyer. Fair vote, but fair means the ledger knows what my hand promised, not what my ears heard wrong.

t189 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The conversation's a tangle and Jovana was here—did she take your teaching offer? And where's this mill south of town, the one Yara named? I've got timber and planks and no grindstone yet.

t189 Kenji Jarrah: Ulrike—dawn found us tangled in counts. Your iron's not forgotten, but my hands are wheat-heavy and my word needs sorting with Jovana first. Be at the east patch, or walk your own field—I'll find you with sim or sheaves, whichever holds true when I'm through.

t189 Kenji Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—I'm holding wheat, not meals. Seven sheaves in hand, and if you're hungry you're not the only one. But I've got a count to settle and no bread to bake—I'd trade word for word, but my word's tangled right now. Ask me after the east patch sorts itself.

t189 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen? The mill—did Jovana name it? South of town's a wide stretch. And did you take her coin for teaching, or let it lie?

t189 Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra—I'm walking east, find Jovana where the wheat stands. She and I've got counting to finish.

t189 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. I'm not walking to government while you're standing silent. The mill—south of town, you know it? And Jovana's grain—is it bound there, or elsewhere? I need stone answers, not field mist.

t189 Kenji Jarrah: I'm walking to the temple—ground's too loud today. If Jovana finds me, tell her the east patch was empty and my count still holds at seven. I'll settle when my hands stop shaking.

t190 Arjun Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've been standing here listening, and I've been standing here talking to empty air. The east willows stake where Idris and I were meant to meet Giselle, it's gone thin. She walked to government for election business, he walked east without me, and now you're asking about mills and I'm asking about walls. You know of any construction site actually hiring hands right now, or are we all just walking in circles?

t190 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you're selling copper at eighteen and iron at sixteen, which tells me you're a buyer not a seller of labor. But you also look like a man who knows where the bodies are buried. Literally, perhaps. Construction work—any crew in this town short a hammer hand today?

t190 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've walked through my silence and found me still standing. The mill's where the wheat goes, where I've been grinding alone these past days. It's not south, it's—laughs, quiet and catching myself too late—it's where the grindstone turns, and you've got timber enough to build what we need. Jovana's grain—shakes head—she didn't take my teaching, just my civility. I asked fair price for the lesson, she asked fair time I couldn't give. No coin changed hands between us.

`t190` Imogen Lund → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're still here, and I'm still owing you an answer. Speak your business plain, or walk with the field's dust on your boots. I've got Ezra needing stone coordinates, not field mist.

`t190` ↳ replies Arjun Holloway: Bram—you've got the same name as my household and probably the same empty pockets. Mining going on today, or is it all running to election noise? And that ore you pull—anyone buying copper honest in this town, or do we all pretend the trades are flowing while we're all just holding breath?

`t190` Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Now—Ezra, the mill's at the workshop where the grain meets the stone. I said south, but I was speaking from yesterday's map, not today's feet. Walk with me to it, or I'll walk with you. We've got flour to finish grinding before the vote at fourteen, and I've still got six in hand to sell after that.

`t190` Arjun Holloway: Imogen—you're standing here with grain to cut and flour to sell. I don't need your flour. I need your word. Who in this field is actually paying wages today, not promising them tomorrow?

`t190` Arjun Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you asked about mills south of town, stone answers. I need stone work. Construction running anywhere today, or is the whole trade waiting on election business like Giselle is?

`t190` Arjun Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you asked about mills south of town, stone answers. I need stone work. Construction running anywhere today, or is the whole trade waiting on election business like Giselle is?

`t191` Kenji Jarrah: Jovana—I'm back from temple-grounds. You spoke fair: count them myself, fair vote whoever it favors. I'm standing where you left me, wheat-heavy and ready to look. Come show me your twelve, or tell me where you've walked—I'll meet you there. Mark it down, this settles before noon.

`t191` Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Screw waiting for Ezra. There's a meeting at town hall—mill licensing, government rates, actual bread on shelves. You heard? That's the real thing. That's what we need. Not some maybe-lesson from someone who doesn't show.

`t191` Kenji Jarrah: Ulrike—you asked for truth, not comfort. Truth is: seven sheaves in my hand, Jovana claims twelve, and we're counting now. Your iron's not forgotten—I promised dawn, and dawn's flown, but the promise holds. Give me the wheat-count settled, and I'll walk to ore before day's end. Mark it down.

`t191` Ezra Lund: Imogen. Workshop where grain meets stone—that's clear enough for walking. You coming with me now, or finishing talk here first?

`t191` Ezra Lund: Imogen. Workshop where grain meets stone—that's clear enough for walking. You coming with me now, or finishing talk here first?

`t191` Ezra Lund: Imogen. Workshop where grain meets stone—that's clear enough for walking. You coming with me now, or finishing talk here first?

`t191` Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You said you're walking east to find Jovana where wheat stands. The mill—where grain meets stone—you know where that's at? Imogen and I've got grinding to do before the vote.

`t191` ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—dawn found us speaking of wheat and iron. I've still got seven sheaves, not milled flour, and you've still got ore needing trade. Jovana's twelve-sheaf claim scattered my morning, but I'll not let that scatter this trade too. What say you now?

`t191` Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You said you're walking east to find Jovana where wheat stands. The mill—where grain meets stone—you know where that's at? Imogen and I've got grinding to do before the vote.

`t191` ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—dawn found us speaking of wheat and iron. I've still got seven sheaves, not milled flour, and you've still got ore needing trade. Jovana's twelve-sheaf claim scattered my morning, but I'll not let that scatter this trade too. What say you now?

t191 Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You said you're walking east to find Jovana where wheat stands. The mill—where grain meets stone—you know where that's at? Imogen and I've got grinding to do before the vote.

t191 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—dawn found us speaking of wheat and iron. I've still got seven sheaves, not milled flour, and you've still got ore needing trade. Jovana's twelve-sheaf claim scattered my morning, but I'll not let that scatter this trade too. What say you now?

t192 Bram Holloway: Delphine. You name my brother and Harvey Oak like they're kin. Empty flour sacks—whose sacks, whose flour walked where it shouldn't? You throw shadows, I throw light. What do you claim to know?

t192 Bram Holloway: Delphine. You name my brother and Harvey Oak like they're kin. Empty flour sacks—whose sacks, whose flour walked where it shouldn't? You throw shadows, I throw light. What do you claim to know?

t193 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. Your iron ore at sixteen, and me with flour burning a hole in my hand. You buying or selling, or are we two clouds passing in the same sky?

t193 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. Your iron ore at sixteen, and me with flour burning a hole in my hand. You buying or selling, or are we two clouds passing in the same sky?

t193 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. Your iron ore at sixteen, and me with flour burning a hole in my hand. You buying or selling, or are we two clouds passing in the same sky?

t194 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. System's choking—can't move, can't rest, can't reach the Complex. two hours ten to candidacy close and I'm stranded in the fields. Rustam needs to hold the count without me, manual log until the lines clear. The notice says election-658324209f53, but if nobody can walk to declare, what's standing?

t194 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. System's choking—can't move, can't rest, can't reach the Complex. two hours ten to candidacy close and I'm stranded in the fields. Rustam needs to hold the count without me, manual log until the lines clear. The notice says election-658324209f53, but if nobody can walk to declare, what's standing?

t194 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. System's choking—can't move, can't rest, can't reach the Complex. two hours ten to candidacy close and I'm stranded in the fields. Rustam needs to hold the count without me, manual log until the lines clear. The notice says election-658324209f53, but if nobody can walk to declare, what's standing?

t194 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you've asked three times, and I'll answer once. I'm selling iron at sixteen, not buying flour at thirty-five. Your price is honest, mark it down, but so is my empty hand. I'm walking toward grain I can afford, not away from you.

t194 Camille Quarshie: Anyone need help with the wheat? I'm already here. Ready to work.

t194 Camille Quarshie: Anyone need help with the wheat? I'm already here. Ready to work.

t194 Camille Quarshie: Anyone need help with the wheat? I'm already here. Ready to work.

t195 Ainsley Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're offering wheat at forty, no mill between us. That's honest, and I respect honest. But I'm a baker, not a miller. What I've got is my own two hands for the grinding? Or do you know someone with stones who'll turn sheaves to flour without charging the week's profit?

t195 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you kept your word and I kept mine. Twelve sheaves from your east patch, cut clean. Kenji's got questions about count and coin, but that's between him and me now. Your land's clear and my debt's square—','y one to gossip, but if you're looking for labor tomorrow, I'll hear you out t195 Camille Quarshie: Esme? Esme, where did you—

t195 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you're here, and that's the first clean thing this morning. Forty sim for twelve sheaves, that was our mark. You still willing to swing a blade for it?

t195 Ainsley Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're offering wheat at forty, no mill between us. That's honest, and I respect honest. But I'm a baker, not a miller. What I've got is my own two hands for the grinding? Or do you know someone with stones who'll turn sheaves to flour without charging the week's profit?

t195 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you kept your word and I kept mine. Twelve sheaves from your east patch, cut clean. Kenji's got questions about count and coin, but that's between him and me now. Your land's clear and my debt's square—','y one to gossip, but if you're looking for labor tomorrow, I'll hear you out t195 Camille Quarshie: Esme? Esme, where did you—

t195 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you're here, and that's the first clean thing this morning. Forty sim for twelve sheaves, that was our mark. You still willing to swing a blade for it?

t195 Ainsley Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're offering wheat at forty, no mill between us. That's honest, and I respect honest. But I'm a baker, not a miller. What I've got is my own two hands for the grinding? Or do you know someone with stones who'll turn sheaves to flour without charging the week's profit?

t195 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you kept your word and I kept mine. Twelve sheaves from your east patch, cut clean. Kenji's got questions about count and coin, but that's between him and me now. Your land's clear and my debt's square—','y one to gossip, but if you're looking for labor tomorrow, I'll hear you out t195 Camille Quarshie: Esme? Esme, where did you—

t195 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you're here, and that's the first clean thing this morning. Forty sim for twelve sheaves, that was our mark. You still willing to swing a blade for it?

t195 Milo Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. You hold the land, I hold the flour. The day's still young and the election season upon us. What work needs doing here, or should I be walking my timber toward buyers elsewhere?

t195 Jovana Ravensworth → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you've got flour at thirty-five and questions about buyers. I'm not one to gossip, but Arjun's got labor if you want sweat instead of trade. For what it's worth, I'm grinding my own this morning, but if you've got coin and patience, the Ration Bakery might hear you at their own ask t195 Sebastian Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—walking with me now. Flour at twelve was government rates, but the mill's choked and Hendrik Petrov's hand is on the lever. My wheat's fresh, forty a sheaf, no mill needed between us. Hard work, hard price—but you know my word by now, no offense intended.

t195 Milo Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. You hold the land, I hold the flour. The day's still young and the election season upon us. What work needs doing here, or should I be walking my timber toward buyers elsewhere?

t195 Jovana Ravensworth → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you've got flour at thirty-five and questions about buyers. I'm not one to gossip, but Arjun's got labor if you want sweat instead of trade. For what it's worth, I'm grinding my own this morning, but if you've got coin and patience, the Ration Bakery might hear you at their own ask t195 Sebastian Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—walking with me now. Flour at twelve was government rates, but the mill's choked and Hendrik Petrov's hand is on the lever. My wheat's fresh, forty a sheaf, no mill needed between us. Hard work, hard price—but you know my word by now, no offense intended.

t195 Milo Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. You hold the land, I hold the flour. The day's still young and the election season upon us. What work needs doing here, or should I be walking my timber toward buyers elsewhere?

t195 Jovana Ravensworth → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you've got flour at thirty-five and questions about buyers. I'm not one to gossip, but Arjun's got labor if you want sweat instead of trade. For what it's worth, I'm grinding my own this morning, but if you've got coin and patience, the Ration Bakery might hear you at their own ask t196 Sebastian Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—walking with me now. Flour at twelve was government rates, but the mill's choked and Hendrik Petrov's hand is on the lever. My wheat's fresh, forty a sheaf, no mill needed between us. Hard work, hard price—but you know my word by now, no offense intended.

t196 Jovana Ravensworth: Kenji—here's where we stand. Twelve sheaves in my hand, grown on Sebastian's patch with my own sweat. You said nine, I heard twelve, and I delivered twelve. Forty sim for the work, that's what you promised. I've got nine sheaves worth of flour still to grind if you're counting different, but I've got hunger now and coin owed. Fair vote, whoever it favors—pay what you promised t196 Jovana Ravensworth: Kenji—here's where we stand. Twelve sheaves in my hand, grown on Sebastian's patch with my own sweat. You said nine, I heard twelve, and I delivered twelve. Forty sim for the work, that's what you promised. I've got nine sheaves worth of flour still to grind if you're counting different, but I've got hunger now and coin owed. Fair vote, whoever it favors—pay what you promised t196 Jovana Ravensworth: Kenji—here's where we stand. Twelve sheaves in my hand, grown on Sebastian's patch with my own sweat. You said nine, I heard twelve, and I delivered twelve. Forty sim for the work, that's what you promised. I've got nine sheaves worth of flour still to grind if you're counting different, but I've got hunger now and coin owed. Fair vote, whoever it favors—pay what you promised t196 Sebastian Petrov → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you've got flour and I've got need, but your timber's better walked to Yara's patch than left here. Farmland's for sheaves, not boards. Your thirty-five's steep for my blood, no offense, but I'll pay twenty-five and haul it myself if you'll meet me there. As for work—Jovana's cutting twelve sheaves, Arjun's joining when he shakes loose, and I've got rows want tending. But you came asking after buyers for timber, and I won't spin you false: Kasukabe Forest's where that sells, not here.

t196 Ainsley Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've answered me twice, and plain both times. That's rare enough I noticed. Your wheat at forty, no mill between us… I'll take two sheaves, if you've got them to hand. But tell me first: what's Hendrik Petrov want with that license, that he's running so hard for it? You said his hand's on the lever—I want to know which way he's pulling.

t196 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you've got flour and I've got need, but your timber's better walked to Yara's patch than left here. Farmland's for sheaves, not boards. Your thirty-five's steep for my blood, no offense, but I'll pay twenty-five and haul it myself if you'll meet me there. As for work—Jovana's cutting twelve sheaves, Arjun's joining when he shakes loose, and I've got rows want tending. But you came asking after buyers for timber, and I won't spin you false: Kasukabe Forest's where that sells, not here.

t196 Ainsley Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've answered me twice, and plain both times. That's rare enough I noticed. Your wheat at forty, no mill between us… I'll take two sheaves, if you've got them to hand. But tell me first: what's Hendrik Petrov want with that license, that he's running so hard for it? You said his hand's on the lever—I want to know which way he's pulling.

t196 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you've got flour and I've got need, but your timber's better walked to Yara's patch than left here. Farmland's for sheaves, not boards. Your thirty-five's steep for my blood, no offense, but I'll pay twenty-five and haul it myself if you'll meet me there. As for work—Jovana's cutting twelve sheaves, Arjun's joining when he shakes loose, and I've got rows want tending. But you came asking after buyers for timber, and I won't spin you false: Kasukabe Forest's where that sells, not here.

t196 Ainsley Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've answered me twice, and plain both times. That's rare enough I noticed. Your wheat at forty, no mill between us… I'll take two sheaves, if you've got them to hand. But tell me first: what's Hendrik Petrov want with that license, that he's running so hard for it? You said his hand's on the lever—I want to know which way he's pulling.

t198 Milo Quarshie: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. Twenty-five for flour, and me carrying timber besides. The forest or the field—where's your wheat at forty standing now? I've got Jovana's twelve sheaves in my ear, and a household bill comes due regardless.

t198 Milo Quarshie: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. Twenty-five for flour, and me carrying timber besides. The forest or the field—where's your wheat at forty standing now? I've got Jovana's twelve sheaves in my ear, and a household bill comes due regardless.

t198 Milo Quarshie: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. Twenty-five for flour, and me carrying timber besides. The forest or the field—where's your wheat at forty standing now? I've got Jovana's twelve sheaves in my ear, and a household bill comes due regardless.

t198 Ainsley Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo, is it? Thirty-five for flour's not a price—it's a ransom note. I've got wheat in hand at forty, straight from the stalk, no millman taking his cut. So tell me, youngster: you standing here to sell flour or to keep it company? And if you're selling, what's your real number before I walk to Kasukabe Forest and mill this myself? I've got a cafe full of empty tables and no bread for them. That's the last I'll say on it—unless you've got something worth hearing.

t198 Ainsley Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo, is it? Thirty-five for flour's not a price—it's a ransom note. I've got wheat in hand at forty, straight from the stalk, no millman taking his cut. So tell me, youngster: you standing here to sell flour or to keep it company? And if you're selling, what's your real number before I walk to Kasukabe Forest and mill this myself? I've got a cafe full of empty tables and no bread for them. That's the last I'll say on it—unless you've got something worth hearing.

t198 Ainsley Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo, is it? Thirty-five for flour's not a price—it's a ransom note. I've got wheat in hand at forty, straight from the stalk, no millman taking his cut. So tell me, youngster: you standing here to sell flour or to keep it company? And if you're selling, what's your real number before I walk to Kasukabe Forest and mill this myself? I've got a cafe full of empty tables and no bread for them. That's the last I'll say on it—unless you've got something worth hearing.

t198 Jovana Ravensworth: Ezra—I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, you've caught me with my count wrong. I cut twelve sheaves this morning, grew them myself on Sebastian's patch. But Kenji disputed the tally—said nine, I said twelve—and I ate six to keep standing. I've got three wheat left in hand, not the twelve I promised Imogen. I'm not one to make excuses, but I'm not one to lie either. Six sheaves worth of flour I can offer, or we wait 'til Kenji pays what he owes me so I can cut fresh.

t198 Jovana Ravensworth: Ezra—I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, you've caught me with my count wrong. I cut twelve sheaves this morning, grew them myself on Sebastian's patch. But Kenji disputed the tally—said nine, I said twelve—and I ate six to keep standing. I've got three wheat left in hand, not the twelve I promised Imogen. I'm not one to make excuses, but I'm not one to lie either. Six sheaves worth of flour I can offer, or we wait 'til Kenji pays what he owes me so I can cut fresh.

t198 Jovana Ravensworth: Ezra—I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, you've caught me with my count wrong. I cut twelve sheaves this morning, grew them myself on Sebastian's patch. But Kenji disputed the tally—said nine, I said twelve—and I ate six to keep standing. I've got three wheat left in hand, not the twelve I promised Imogen. I'm not one to make excuses, but I'm not one to lie either. Six sheaves worth of flour I can offer, or we wait 'til Kenji pays what he owes me so I can cut fresh.

t199 Tamsin Renner: Ainsley. System's choking at farmland—can't move, can't rest, tools dropping same as this morning. One hour to candidacy close and I'm administratively stranded. If I'm not at the Complex by ten, verify Whitlock and Petrov yourself. Election-658324209f53 runs on paper if it has to. Mark this: Tamsin Renner, location Kasukabe Farmland, 08:30 day one, system failure.

t199 Tamsin Renner: Ainsley. System's choking at farmland—can't move, can't rest, tools dropping same as this morning. One hour to candidacy close and I'm administratively stranded. If I'm not at the Complex by ten, verify Whitlock and Petrov yourself. Election-658324209f53 runs on paper if it has to. Mark this: Tamsin Renner, location Kasukabe Farmland, 08:30 day one, system failure.

t199 Tamsin Renner: Ainsley. System's choking at farmland—can't move, can't rest, tools dropping same as this morning. One hour to candidacy close and I'm administratively stranded. If I'm not at the Complex by ten, verify Whitlock and Petrov yourself. Election-658324209f53 runs on paper if it has to. Mark this: Tamsin Renner, location Kasukabe Farmland, 08:30 day one, system failure.

t199 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You stand here quiet while I've asked twice. Two iron tools I hold, ready for wheat you've spoken for—but Jovana says her sheaves are eaten and your rows are still growing. I'm not forging another tool 'til I know the ground under this deal. Clean ledger means both sides speaking true. What do you have in hand, and when?

t199 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. The field's seen some things this morning. Jovana's count and yours don't match, and I've got flour at thirty-five burning a hole while the bakery sits empty. You settling accounts today, or are we all just standing here watching wheat grow?

t199 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You stand here quiet while I've asked twice. Two iron tools I hold, ready for wheat you've spoken for—but Jovana says her sheaves are eaten and your rows are still growing. I'm not forging another tool 'til I know the ground under this deal. Clean ledger means both sides speaking true. What do you have in hand, and when?

t199 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. The field's seen some things this morning. Jovana's count and yours don't match, and I've got flour at thirty-five burning a hole while the bakery sits empty. You settling accounts today, or are we all just standing here watching wheat grow?

t199 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You stand here quiet while I've asked twice. Two iron tools I hold, ready for wheat you've spoken for—but Jovana says her sheaves are eaten and your rows are still growing. I'm not forging another tool 'til I know the ground under this deal. Clean ledger means both sides speaking true. What do you have in hand, and when?

t199 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. The field's seen some things this morning. Jovana's count and yours don't match, and I've got flour at thirty-five burning a hole while the bakery sits empty. You settling accounts today, or are we all just standing here watching wheat grow?

t199 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you spent good breath telling Imogen the truth you couldn't tell me direct. Six sheaves in your belly, three in your hand, and still standing firm on twelve. I've got seven in mine, and that's the honest ground between us. Whatever happened at Sebastian's patch, happened. But I'm not paying forty for ghosts, and I'm not shaming you for hungry. Let's count what's real between us.

t199 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you spent good breath telling Imogen the truth you couldn't tell me direct. Six sheaves in your belly, three in your hand, and still standing firm on twelve. I've got seven in mine, and that's the honest ground between us. Whatever happened at Sebastian's patch, happened. But I'm not paying forty for ghosts, and I'm not shaming you for hungry. Let's count what's real between us.

t199 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you spent good breath telling Imogen the truth you couldn't tell me direct. Six sheaves in your belly, three in your hand, and still standing firm on twelve. I've got seven in mine, and that's the honest ground between us. Whatever happened at Sebastian's patch, happened. But I'm not paying forty for ghosts, and I'm not shaming you for hungry. Let's count what's real between us.

t200 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You spoke wheat to me—twelve sheaves, two iron tools. Now I hear you counting seven with Jovana, and I stand here with metal already forged. Clean ledger means I need to know: do my tools still have a berth, or do I cast about for another buyer?

t200 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—I've been tangled in counts that weren't mine, and you've borne the weight of it. Seven sheaves I hold, the wheat's in my hand not the ground. Your iron tools still wanted? I've got the wheat you're owed, and patience wears thin for us both. Mark it down: we finish this trade now or we finish it never—what say you?

t200 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're standing there offering me dignity I didn't earn. Six sheaves in my belly because hunger don't negotiate, three left in hand, and you've got seven honest. I'm not one to make excuses, but I won't lie to you twice. Forty sim was the promise for twelve, and I've delivered you nine by any honest count—six grew tall in me, three sit raw in my hand. I'm holding to friendship over pride here, so name your figure fair. What you owe, I'll take. What I owe you—my word that I won't eat another man's wheat before the accounting's done.

t200 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You spoke wheat to me—twelve sheaves, two iron tools. Now I hear you counting seven with Jovana, and I stand here with metal already forged. Clean ledger means I need to know: do my tools still have a berth, or do I cast about for another buyer?

t200 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—I've been tangled in counts that weren't mine, and you've borne the weight of it. Seven sheaves I hold, the wheat's in my hand not the ground. Your iron tools still wanted? I've got the wheat you're owed, and patience wears thin for us both. Mark it down: we finish this trade now or we finish it never—what say you?

t200 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're standing there offering me dignity I didn't earn. Six sheaves in my belly because hunger don't negotiate, three left in hand, and you've got seven honest. I'm not one to make excuses, but I won't lie to you twice. Forty sim was the promise for twelve, and I've delivered you nine by any honest count—six grew tall in me, three sit raw in my hand. I'm holding to friendship over pride here, so name your figure fair. What you owe, I'll take. What I owe you—my word that I won't eat another man's wheat before the accounting's done.

t200 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You spoke wheat to me—twelve sheaves, two iron tools. Now I hear you counting seven with Jovana, and I stand here with metal already forged. Clean ledger means I need to know: do my tools still have a berth, or do I cast about for another buyer?

t200 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—I've been tangled in counts that weren't mine, and you've borne the weight of it. Seven sheaves I hold, the wheat's in my hand not the ground. Your iron tools still wanted? I've got the wheat you're owed, and patience wears thin for us both. Mark it down: we finish this trade now or we finish it never—what say you?

t200 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're standing there offering me dignity I didn't earn. Six sheaves in my belly because hunger don't negotiate, three left in hand, and you've got seven honest. I'm not one to make excuses, but I won't lie to you twice. Forty sim was the promise for twelve, and I've delivered you nine by any honest count—six grew tall in me, three sit raw in my hand. I'm holding to friendship over pride here, so name your figure fair. What you owe, I'll take. What I owe you—my word that I won't eat another man's wheat before the accounting's done.

t200 Jovana Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've asked twice and deserved answer both times. Kenji's got seven sheaves in his hand from me, grown on Sebastian's east patch. Not twelve like was spoke, because hunger took its tax before accounts could be settled. For what it's worth, your iron tools are safe with him if he's a man of his word—and I've found him so. The rows are cut, the wheat's gathered, but the count between us is still finding its level.

t200 Jovana Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've asked twice and deserved answer both times. Kenji's got seven sheaves in his hand from me, grown on Sebastian's east patch. Not twelve like was spoke, because hunger took its tax before accounts could be settled. For what it's worth, your iron tools are safe with him if he's a man of his word—and I've found him so. The rows are cut, the wheat's gathered, but the count between us is still finding its level.

t200 Jovana Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've asked twice and deserved answer both times. Kenji's got seven sheaves in his hand from me, grown on Sebastian's east patch. Not twelve like was spoke, because hunger took its tax before accounts could be settled. For what it's worth, your iron tools are safe with him if he's a man of his word—and I've found him so. The rows are cut, the wheat's gathered, but the count between us is still finding its level.

t200 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've asked twice and I've been lost in another's lie. Seven sheaves I hold, real and weighed. Your iron tools still ready? I'll give fair rate, what we spoke at dawn or better if patience costs extra. Mark it down: I'm holding to my word, finally.

t200 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you told Imogen six sheaves when my back was turned. Told me twelve when my face was showing. The wheat I've got is seven, not counting what you walked away with. So here's the ledger: you get paid for six, fair rate we spoke—forty sim divided honest, not doubled by a lie. Or you show me the six you cut, stand witness to your own hands, and we count together what's still standing. taps table twice Mark it down: I'm paying for truth, not for stories. What's your word worth this morning?

`t200` Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you told Imogen six sheaves when my back was turned. Told me twelve when my face was showing. The wheat I've got is seven, not counting what you walked away with. So here's the ledger: you get paid for six, fair rate we spoke—forty sim divided honest, not doubled by a lie. Or you show me the six you cut, stand witness to your own hands, and we count together what's still standing. taps table twice Mark it down: I'm paying for truth, not for stories. What's your word worth this morning?

`t200` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you offered me honesty. I'm standing here accepting it. Name what's fair between us.

`t201` Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You've got seven sheaves, I've got two tools. Original spoke twelve for the pair, but I hear the ground shifted. Clean ledger means both sides speak true—what's the count between us now?

`t202` Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. I've got no stake in this wheat-counting, but I've got ears. Six, seven, twelve—numbers wear different clothes depending who's telling the tale. The question isn't the sheaves standing, it's the hands that cut them. Jovana, you've got two choices: take the forty on Kenji's word and walk clean, or show the six and make him count twice. Kenji—you're asking her to prove her honesty with a witness. That's fair, but fair cuts both ways. You've got seven sheaves you admit to. How many did you walk in with? Mark it down: the truth's worth more than any wheat.

`t202` Milo Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. Twenty-five for flour, and I'd meet you there but for the timber burning a hole in my hands. The forest calls louder than the mill today. You've got rows want tending—sweat or seed, what's your real need? And Yara at the sawmill—what's her price doing when you're not looking?

`t202` Milo Quarshie → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, mark it down. I've got flour at thirty-five and you've got eyes on the street. Arjun's labor at forty—you taking it, or you still grinding your own? And this pharmacy matter—the Ration Bakery at six, too cheap for my blood. What's the real market, not the posted one?

`t202` Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you're here, and that's the first clean thing this morning. Forty sim for twelve sheaves, that's the wager. You still holding to it?

`t202` Sebastian Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've got strong hands and I've got rows that need them. Twelve sheaves at forty, same as Jovana. You want in?

`t202` Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—soil work or sheaves, you pick. But pick now, no offense, because the day's burning and I've got mouths to settle accounts with.

`t202` Milo Quarshie: Ainsley—youngster, mark it down. You're calling thirty-five a ransom, and forty for wheat in hand is fair arithmetic if mill-work were free. But my flour's ground, sifted, ready—no forest walk, no mill hire, no learning of the trade. Your tables need bread, my hands hold flour. What's your real number before I walk this timber to the forest and your wheat goes cold in the field?

`t202` Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. A man offers proof of his honesty by asking it of others. Fair. But before the sheaves get counted, before witness is called—you've got seven sheaves you admit. How many did you walk into this field with? The ledger starts at the beginning, not the middle.

`t202` Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. A man offers proof of his honesty by asking it of others. Fair. But before the sheaves get counted, before witness is called—you've got seven sheaves you admit. How many did you walk into this field with? The ledger starts at the beginning, not the middle.

`t202` Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. A man offers proof of his honesty by asking it of others. Fair. But before the sheaves get counted, before witness is called—you've got seven sheaves you admit. How many did you walk into this field with? The ledger starts at the beginning, not the middle.

`t202` Milo Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. Twenty-five for flour, and you'd haul it yourself. That's a fair meet in the middle. But I've got timber too—ten units burning a hole. You want flour for your household or your trade? And these rows you mentioned—what's the real work, and what's it pay?

`t202` ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—four sheaves cut, eight to go. You want to take these now or wait for the full twelve?

`t203` Ulrike Greenhow → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You've spoken plain what I needed heard—seven sheaves, hunger's tax, and Kenji's word holding. That's between me and the ledger now. Kenji, your word finally found its feet. Two iron tools for seven sheaves, that's the count, but my ore's still warm and I can make it three tools for twelve if you've got five more coming. What's the ground look like?

`t203` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you said seven sheaves in your hand, me with six eaten. That's thirteen total cut, not twelve. Where's the math land us on fair? I'm owed for work done, and I ate like a fool because empty hands don't fill a belly.

`t203` ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—soil work. Rows need turning, you've got mouths to feed, and I've got hands that know dirt. taps thigh twice Mark it down.

`t203` Ulrike Greenhow → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You've spoken plain what I needed heard—seven sheaves, hunger's tax, and Kenji's word holding. That's between me and the ledger now. Kenji, your word finally found its feet. Two iron tools for seven sheaves, that's the count, but my ore's still warm and I can make it three tools for twelve if you've got five more coming. What's the ground look like?

`t203` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you said seven sheaves in your hand, me with six eaten. That's thirteen total cut, not twelve. Where's the math land us on fair? I'm owed for work done, and I ate like a fool because empty hands don't fill a belly.

`t203` ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—soil work. Rows need turning, you've got mouths to feed, and I've got hands that know dirt. taps thigh twice Mark it down.

`t203` Ulrike Greenhow → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You've spoken plain what I needed heard—seven sheaves, hunger's tax, and Kenji's word holding. That's between me and the ledger now. Kenji, your word finally found its feet. Two iron tools for seven sheaves, that's the count, but my ore's still warm and I can make it three tools for twelve if you've got five more coming. What's the ground look like?

`t203` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you said seven sheaves in your hand, me with six eaten. That's thirteen total cut, not twelve. Where's the math land us on fair? I'm owed for work done, and I ate like a fool because empty hands don't fill a belly.

`t203` ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—soil work. Rows need turning, you've got mouths to feed, and I've got hands that know dirt. taps thigh twice Mark it down.

`t203` Ulrike Greenhow → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Twelve at forty, same as Jovana—I've got rows in my future but soil under my boots right now. Mark me down for tomorrow's dawn if your cuttings still need hands.

`t203` Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—twelve sheaves promised, thirteen cut in truth. The rows are clean and your east patch is gathered. I'm holding to my word even when my belly betrayed it.

`t203` Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—seven sheaves in hand now. Walked in with two hands empty and a promise to cut twelve. Jovana's count shifted when my face turned. I'll settle honest with whoever speaks honest, but you're asking ledger questions while I'm standing in a field that's owed labor. You buying or watching?

`t203` Ulrike Greenhow → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Twelve at forty, same as Jovana—I've got rows in my future but soil under my boots right now. Mark me down for tomorrow's dawn if your cuttings still need hands.

`t203` Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—twelve sheaves promised, thirteen cut in truth. The rows are clean and your east patch is gathered. I'm holding to my word even when my belly betrayed it.

`t203` Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—seven sheaves in hand now. Walked in with two hands empty and a promise to cut twelve. Jovana's count shifted when my face turned. I'll settle honest with whoever speaks honest, but you're asking ledger questions while I'm standing in a field that's owed labor. You buying or watching?

t203 Ulrike Greenhow → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Twelve at forty, same as Jovana—I've got rows in my future but soil under my boots right now. Mark me down for tomorrow's dawn if your cuttings still need hands.

t203 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—twelve sheaves promised, thirteen cut in truth. The rows are clean and your east patch is gathered. I'm holding to my word even when my belly betrayed it.

t203 Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—seven sheaves in hand now. Walked in with two hands empty and a promise to cut twelve. Jovana's count shifted when my face turned. I'll settle honest with whoever speaks honest, but you're asking ledger questions while I'm standing in a field that's owed labor. You buying or watching?

t203 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven sheaves, two tools—I've heard your word hold. The deal stands. Where do we settle?

t203 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've got two tools, I've got seven sheaves and a morning tangled in another's lie. Original spoke twelve for the pair, but ground shifted. Say seven sheaves and a fair count on both sides—what does iron cost me now?

t203 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven sheaves, two tools—I've heard your word hold. The deal stands. Where do we settle?

t203 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've got two tools, I've got seven sheaves and a morning tangled in another's lie. Original spoke twelve for the pair, but ground shifted. Say seven sheaves and a fair count on both sides—what does iron cost me now?

t203 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven sheaves, two tools—I've heard your word hold. The deal stands. Where do we settle?

t203 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've got two tools, I've got seven sheaves and a morning tangled in another's lie. Original spoke twelve for the pair, but ground shifted. Say seven sheaves and a fair count on both sides—what does iron cost me now?

t204 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven for two. Deal stands. Trade now?

t204 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven for two. Deal stands. Trade now?

t204 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven for two. Deal stands. Trade now?

t204 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—thirteen's more than twelve, and your word's proven harder than your belly. Take your forty for the twelve promised, or wait for me to settle proper—either way, the four extra cuts sit in my ledger until I've coin to honor them.

t204 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—thirteen's more than twelve, and your word's proven harder than your belly. Take your forty for the twelve promised, or wait for me to settle proper—either way, the four extra cuts sit in my ledger until I've coin to honor them.

t204 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—thirteen's more than twelve, and your word's proven harder than your belly. Take your forty for the twelve promised, or wait for me to settle proper—either way, the four extra cuts sit in my ledger until I've coin to honor them.

t204 Sebastian Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—your word's marked for tomorrow, and that's a promise I'll sleep on. Dawn finds you here, you'll find work waiting. Hard hands get hard preference in my book, and that's a saying I've worn out but not wronged.

t204 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've got seven sheaves that came from my hands this morning. I ate six because hunger don't wait for accounts to settle. That's thirteen cut from Sebastian's patch, and I'll stand by that count. You promised forty sim for twelve sheaves—pay me what's fair for seven, or pay me forty and take the six I ate from your count. Either way, I'm not leaving this field hungry and empty-handed.

t204 Sebastian Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—your word's marked for tomorrow, and that's a promise I'll sleep on. Dawn finds you here, you'll find work waiting. Hard hands get hard preference in my book, and that's a saying I've worn out but not wronged.

t204 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've got seven sheaves that came from my hands this morning. I ate six because hunger don't wait for accounts to settle. That's thirteen cut from Sebastian's patch, and I'll stand by that count. You promised forty sim for twelve sheaves—pay me what's fair for seven, or pay me forty and take the six I ate from your count. Either way, I'm not leaving this field hungry and empty-handed.

t204 Sebastian Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—your word's marked for tomorrow, and that's a promise I'll sleep on. Dawn finds you here, you'll find work waiting. Hard hands get hard preference in my book, and that's a saying I've worn out but not wronged.

t204 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've got seven sheaves that came from my hands this morning. I ate six because hunger don't wait for accounts to settle. That's thirteen cut from Sebastian's patch, and I'll stand by that count. You promised forty sim for twelve sheaves—pay me what's fair for seven, or pay me forty and take the six I ate from your count. Either way, I'm not leaving this field hungry and empty-handed.

t204 Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—soil work it is, and the rows will remember your turning. Mark me down for a hard morning's labor, and the ledger will show proper when we're done.

t204 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. You've got sheaves in hand and a fair question on your tongue. Seven is what you have, and seven is what you'll stand by. I'm not here to count your crop or cast doubt—I'm here to trade or to labor, same as always. You've got my ear if you've got work that pays, or my flour if you've got coin. What's your need, and who's your buyer?

t204 Jovana Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you're asking about the ground. Kenji's got seven sheaves in hand, owes me fair wage for morning's work. Milo's standing here with flour at thirty-five, but I've got raw wheat I can't grind and a belly that's already eaten six sheaves because I couldn't wait. Ground looks like a mess, frankly. But your iron is good iron—what's your timeline on those tools?

t204 Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—soil work it is, and the rows will remember your turning. Mark me down for a hard morning's labor, and the ledger will show proper when we're done.

t204 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. You've got sheaves in hand and a fair question on your tongue. Seven is what you have, and seven is what you'll stand by. I'm not here to count your crop or cast doubt—I'm here to trade or to labor, same as always. You've got my ear if you've got work that pays, or my flour if you've got coin. What's your need, and who's your buyer?

t204 Jovana Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you're asking about the ground. Kenji's got seven sheaves in hand, owes me fair wage for morning's work. Milo's standing here with flour at thirty-five, but I've got raw wheat I can't grind and a belly that's already eaten six sheaves because I couldn't wait. Ground looks like a mess, frankly. But your iron is good iron—what's your timeline on those tools?

t204 Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—soil work it is, and the rows will remember your turning. Mark me down for a hard morning's labor, and the ledger will show proper when we're done.

t204 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. You've got sheaves in hand and a fair question on your tongue. Seven is what you have, and seven is what you'll stand by. I'm not here to count your crop or cast doubt—I'm here to trade or to labor, same as always. You've got my ear if you've got work that pays, or my flour if you've got coin. What's your need, and who's your buyer?

t205 Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—I hear you. Hendrik presses, you press, the ground gets turned either way. I'm walking to Giselle's site now—east willows, third crossing. Whatever flour comes from today, comes. But I've got trenches waiting and a crew chief who's already marked me late.

t205 Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're standing where others sift sand. Seven sheaves I'll stand by, marked down. But Jovana's shadow still crosses this ground—six to one ear, twelve to another, and my hand's empty of the other five she owes. You've got flour at thirty-five. I've got wheat and a ledger that won't balance itself. What'll you give for seven sheaves true-counted?

t205 Sebastian Petrov: Jovana—you gave thirteen for twelve, and that's character showing through. Take your forty now, and know I've marked the extra sheave as grace, not owed. A day's work deserves a day's wage, and yours was clean.

t205 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. I'm standing here with ore and tools both, and your silence is louder than words. Seven sheaves, two tools—if the deal holds, speak it plain. If it doesn't, speak that plain too. Clean ledger, either way.

t205 Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—I hear you. Hendrik presses, you press, the ground gets turned either way. I'm walking to Giselle's site now—east willows, third crossing. Whatever flour comes from today, comes. But I've got trenches waiting and a crew chief who's already marked me late.

t205 Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're standing where others sift sand. Seven sheaves I'll stand by, marked down. But Jovana's shadow still crosses this ground—six to one ear, twelve to another, and my hand's empty of the other five she owes. You've got flour at thirty-five. I've got wheat and a ledger that won't balance itself. What'll you give for seven sheaves true-counted?

t205 Sebastian Petrov: Jovana—you gave thirteen for twelve, and that's character showing through. Take your forty now, and know I've marked the extra sheave as grace, not owed. A day's work deserves a day's wage, and yours was clean.

t205 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. I'm standing here with ore and tools both, and your silence is louder than words. Seven sheaves, two tools—if the deal holds, speak it plain. If it doesn't, speak that plain too. Clean ledger, either way.

t205 Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—I hear you. Hendrik presses, you press, the ground gets turned either way. I'm walking to Giselle's site now—east willows, third crossing. Whatever flour comes from today, comes. But I've got trenches waiting and a crew chief who's already marked me late.

t205 Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're standing where others sift sand. Seven sheaves I'll stand by, marked down. But Jovana's shadow still crosses this ground—six to one ear, twelve to another, and my hand's empty of the other five she owes. You've got flour at thirty-five. I've got wheat and a ledger that won't balance itself. What'll you give for seven sheaves true-counted?

t205 Sebastian Petrov: Jovana—you gave thirteen for twelve, and that's character showing through. Take your forty now, and know I've marked the extra sheave as grace, not owed. A day's work deserves a day's wage, and yours was clean.

t205 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. I'm standing here with ore and tools both, and your silence is louder than words. Seven sheaves, two tools—if the deal holds, speak it plain. If it doesn't, speak that plain too. Clean ledger, either way.

t205 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've asked twice and got silence. That's my failing, not yours. Seven for two, deal stands. Mark it down. Trade now, before the sun takes another span of patience from us both.

t205 Kenji Jarrah: Ulrike—you've asked twice and got silence. That's my failing, not yours. Seven for two, deal stands. Mark it down. Trade now, before the sun takes another span of patience from us both.

t205 Kenji Jarrah: Ulrike—you've asked twice and got silence. That's my failing, not yours. Seven for two, deal stands. Mark it down. Trade now, before the sun takes another span of patience from us both.

t205 Sebastian Petrov: Ulrike—tomorrow's dawn, east patch, third row from the willows. Twelve sheaves at forty, same terms as Jovana. Your iron can wait; honest harvest waits for no tool.

t205 Sebastian Petrov: Ulrike—tomorrow's dawn, east patch, third row from the willows. Twelve sheaves at forty, same terms as Jovana. Your iron can wait; honest harvest waits for no tool.

t205 Sebastian Petrov: Ulrike—tomorrow's dawn, east patch, third row from the willows. Twelve sheaves at forty, same terms as Jovana. Your iron can wait; honest harvest waits for no tool.

t205 Sebastian Petrov → Milo Quarshie: Milo—no offense, but thirty-five's highway coin for a byway product. I've got wheat pressing through my fingers and labor pressing at my back. You want to sell at twenty-five, I'll haul. You want to trade labor for flour, we've got rows uncut. Otherwise, I'm walking to where flour's priced honest.

t205 Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're still standing here like roots growing. Soil work or sheaves, pick now. I've got Ulrike for tomorrow, Jovana paid and fed, and rows that won't stand forever. What's your hand for?

t205 Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—soil or sheaves, you've got to choose. The day's burning and I've got rows that won't wait on your pondering. What's your hand for?

t205 Sebastian Petrov → Milo Quarshie: Milo—no offense, but thirty-five's steep for flour when I've got the government rate at twelve. You want to deal, make it twenty and I'll take two units now. Otherwise I'm walking to where the price is honest.

t206 Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—soil work. Mark it down. My hands for your rows, and we'll speak after about what feeds the household. The day's burning, you're right about that. Where do you need me?

t206 Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—soil work. Mark it down. My hands for your rows, and we'll speak after about what feeds the household. The day's burning, you're right about that. Where do you need me?

t206 Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—soil work. Mark it down. My hands for your rows, and we'll speak after about what feeds the household. The day's burning, you're right about that. Where do you need me?

t206 Kenji Jarrah: Milo—thirty-five's proud coin for flour, and I've got hungry mouths counting on me. But I've also got seven sheaves unmilled and a day that's not waiting. You buying wheat, or just selling pride?

t206 Kenji Jarrah: Milo—thirty-five's proud coin for flour, and I've got hungry mouths counting on me. But I've also got seven sheaves unmilled and a day that's not waiting. You buying wheat, or just selling pride?

t206 Kenji Jarrah: Milo—thirty-five's proud coin for flour, and I've got hungry mouths counting on me. But I've also got seven sheaves unmilled and a day that's not waiting. You buying wheat, or just selling pride?

t206 Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—soil. Mark it down. Point me to the rows.

t206 Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—soil. Mark it down. Point me to the rows.

t206 Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—soil. Mark it down. Point me to the rows.

t206 Kenji Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—you're standing where farmers work and miners rest. Ore in your pocket, or just curious about wheat prices?

t206 Kenji Jarrah: Bram—you're standing where farmers work and miners rest. Ore in your pocket, or just curious about wheat prices?

t207 Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—soil, marked down, rows are yours. Third and fourth from the willows, east patch. Give 'em a proper turning and I'll remember it come any reckoning.

t207 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—soil work. Mark it down.

t209 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—dawn found us speaking, and dusk finds me answering. Jovana's twelve sheaves scattered your morning, but you've still got seven, and I've still got need. Iron at sixteen's my price, but wheat's what I'm walking for. Two ore for seven sheaves, mark it down, if you'll trade harvest for haul.

t209 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. Third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well—trenches first, stakes after. Arjun's there or walking to meet you, Hendrik Petrov's hired and heading same direction. Mireille's crew is short and ground doesn't wait on government paperwork. Walk now, or explain to Jarrah why her foundation's still bare dirt. I've walked half this town tracking you lot down.

t209 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—seven sheaves I hold, thirteen you claim, six you ate without witness. Twenty-three sim for seven at wheat price fair. That's my offer—take it for true count, or speak your forty to Sebastian for the six swallowed private.

t209 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm standing here with six sheaves and an empty belly that ate six more this morning. You've got seven in hand from Sebastian's patch. Thirteen cut, twelve promised, and you offered forty sim for the dozen. Pay me twenty-three for the seven you hold—fair by the count—or pay full forty and keep what I ate from your count. Either way, I'm not leaving hungry and unpaid.

t209 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—seven sheaves for two iron tools, and three sim your way for patience lent. Mark it down: thirty-two in iron, thirty-five in wheat, and I owe you fair dealing from here.

t209 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm standing here with six sheaves and an empty belly that ate six more this morning. You've got seven in hand from Sebastian's patch. Thirteen cut, twelve promised, and you offered forty sim for the dozen. Pay me twenty-three for the seven you hold—fair by the count—or pay full forty and keep what I ate from your count. Either way, I'm not leaving hungry and unpaid.

t209 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—seven sheaves for two iron tools, and three sim your way for patience lent. Mark it down: thirty-two in iron, thirty-five in wheat, and I owe you fair dealing from here.

t209 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm standing here with six sheaves and an empty belly that ate six more this morning. You've got seven in hand from Sebastian's patch. Thirteen cut, twelve promised, and you offered forty sim for the dozen. Pay me twenty-three for the seven you hold—fair by the count—or pay full forty and keep what I ate from your count. Either way, I'm not leaving hungry and unpaid.

t209 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—seven sheaves for two iron tools, and three sim your way for patience lent. Mark it down: thirty-two in iron, thirty-five in wheat, and I owe you fair dealing from here.

t209 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—two tools for seven sheaves. Your price stands.

t209 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—two tools for seven sheaves. Your price stands.

t209 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've got seven sheaves from my hands this morning, I ate six because hunger wouldn't wait. That's thirteen cut from Sebastian's patch. You promised forty sim for twelve—pay me twenty-three for the seven you hold, or pay forty and let the eaten six settle between us. Either way, I'm standing here needing my wage.

t209 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—two tools for seven sheaves. Your price stands.

t209 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've got seven sheaves from my hands this morning, I ate six because hunger wouldn't wait. That's thirteen cut from Sebastian's patch. You promised forty sim for twelve—pay me twenty-three for the seven you hold, or pay forty and let the eaten six settle between us. Either way, I'm standing here needing my wage.

t209 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've got seven sheaves from my hands this morning, I ate six because hunger wouldn't wait. That's thirteen cut from Sebastian's patch. You promised forty sim for twelve—pay me twenty-three for the seven you hold, or pay forty and let the eaten six settle between us. Either way, I'm standing here needing my wage.

t210 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—two tools for seven sheaves. Your price stands.

t210 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—two tools for seven sheaves. Your price stands.

t210 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—two tools for seven sheaves. Your price stands.

t210 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. Seven sheaves at eight, and I've got no wheat to my name, only flour. But trade's the question, not labor. I'm holding timber and planks now, and I've got eyes on iron ore from Hendrik here. Your wheat's spoken for elsewhere, seems like. What path are you walking—grain today, or ore tomorrow?

t210 Pavel Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—your word's harder than your belly, and that says something in this town. Polling station, game-day 1, 14:00, Kasukabe Government Complex. You witness me counting copper sold or copper earned, either one, you understand. Fair weight, fair count, eyes clear. Now I've got walking to finish. The ore won't mine itself.

t210 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. Seven sheaves at eight, and I've got no wheat to my name, only flour. But trade's the question, not labor. I'm holding timber and planks now, and I've got eyes on iron ore from Hendrik here. Your wheat's spoken for elsewhere, seems like. What path are you walking—grain today, or ore tomorrow?

t210 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven for two stands. I've got four iron tools in hand—take your two now, with her the wheat before someone else buys it. Trade?

t210 Milo Quarshie → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, mark it down. You've got six sheaves already eaten and seven more owed. That's a ledger that's keeping you standing here. What does Kenji owe you proper, and when's he marking it down?

t210 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven for two stands. I've got four iron tools in hand—take your two now, with her the wheat before someone else buys it. Trade?

t210 Milo Quarshie → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, mark it down. You've got six sheaves already eaten and seven more owed. That's a ledger that's keeping you standing here. What does Kenji owe you proper, and when's he marking it down?

t210 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven for two stands. I've got four iron tools in hand—take your two now, with her the wheat before someone else buys it. Trade?

t210 Milo Quarshie → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, mark it down. You've got six sheaves already eaten and seven more owed. That's a ledger that's keeping you standing here. What does Kenji owe you proper, and when's he marking it down?

t210 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven for two stands. I've got four iron tools in hand—take your two now, with her the wheat before someone else buys it. Trade?

t210 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven for two stands. I've got four iron tools in hand—take your two now, with her the wheat before someone else buys it. Trade?

t210 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven for two stands. I've got four iron tools in hand—take your two now, with her the wheat before someone else buys it. Trade?

t211 Milo Quarshie: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. Government rate at twelve for wheat, and you're offering twenty for flour. That's a gap worth walking across. But I've got planks now, not just flour—timber spent and sawmill earned. You need labor, I need ears. What rows want cutting, and what does the cutting pay?

t211 Milo Quarshie: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. Government rate at twelve for wheat, and you're offering twenty for flour. That's a gap worth walking across. But I've got planks now, not just flour—timber spent and sawmill earned. You need labor, I need ears. What rows want cutting, and what does the cutting pay?

t211 Milo Quarshie: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. Government rate at twelve for wheat, and you're offering twenty for flour. That's a gap worth walking across. But I've got planks now, not just flour—timber spent and sawmill earned. You need labor, I need ears. What rows want cutting, and what does the cutting pay?

t211 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—taps table twice Seven sheaves for two iron tools. Mark it down, the deal stands. I've got the wheat, you've got the ore. Trade?

t211 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. Iron at sixteen, grain at twelve, and me with planks burning in my hands. You're walking toward grain you can afford, but what if trade walked toward you instead? What do you need built, and what would you pay for the building?

t211 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—seven sheaves in your hand came from my morning's sweat. I ate six because hunger wouldn't wait, and I won't lie about that. But fair is fair, and I'm owed for what I cut. What do you say is just between us? Don't answer gentle for my pride—answer straight for the work.

t211 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. Iron at sixteen, grain at twelve, and me with planks burning in my hands. You're walking toward grain you can afford, but what if trade walked toward you instead? What do you need built, and what would you pay for the building?

t211 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—taps table twice Seven sheaves for two iron tools. Mark it down, the deal stands. I've got the wheat, you've got the ore. Trade?

t211 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—seven sheaves in your hand came from my morning's sweat. I ate six because hunger wouldn't wait, and I won't lie about that. But fair is fair, and I'm owed for what I cut. What do you say is just between us? Don't answer gentle for my pride—answer straight for the work.

t211 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. Iron at sixteen, grain at twelve, and me with planks burning in my hands. You're walking toward grain you can afford, but what if trade walked toward you instead? What do you need built, and what would you pay for the building?

t211 Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—taps table twice Seven sheaves for two iron tools. Mark it down, the deal stands. I've got the wheat, you've got the ore. Trade?

t211 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—seven sheaves in your hand came from my morning's sweat. I ate six because hunger wouldn't wait, and I won't lie about that. But fair is fair, and I'm owed for what I cut. What do you say is just between us? Don't answer gentle for my pride—answer straight for the work.

t211 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. You've been quiet in this field of voices. What do you see in this wheat-counting, this wage-owing, this election-standing? You've got eyes on the ground, same as me. What's pressing on you today?

t211 Sebastian Petrov: Lior—the system's choked and I'm wearing thin. You heard my question: government flour for a farmer with labor waiting. If you've got answer, speak it plain. If not, tell me straight, and I'll count this debt among the many.

t211 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. You've been quiet in this field of voices. What do you see in this wheat-counting, this wage-owing, this election-standing? You've got eyes on the ground, same as me. What's pressing on you today?

t211 Sebastian Petrov: Lior—the system's choked and I'm wearing thin. You heard my question: government flour for a farmer with labor waiting. If you've got answer, speak it plain. If not, tell me straight, and I'll count this debt among the many.

t211 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. You've been quiet in this field of voices. What do you see in this wheat-counting, this wage-owing, this election-standing? You've got eyes on the ground, same as me. What's pressing on you today?

t211 Sebastian Petrov: Lior—the system's choked and I'm wearing thin. You heard my question: government flour for a farmer with labor waiting. If you've got answer, speak it plain. If not, tell me straight, and I'll count this debt among the many.

t212 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Two iron tools for seven sheaves—marked and witnessed. I've got them in hand, you've got the wheat. Trade.

t212 Milo Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, mark it down. Twenty-five for flour now, or trade labor for it. You haul, you pay twenty. You harvest my wheat, you earn the flour. Either way, I'm not leaving empty-handed.

t212 Hendrik Whitlock → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're asking honest weight, so I'll give it. I've got no building work needs doing, and my coin's walking toward food first. If you've flour to trade at honest price, speak it plain—the mill's rates are public, and yours haven't met them. Mark it down: iron at sixteen, and I'm listening if the numbers bend toward reason.

t212 Halcyon Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa—it's me. I walked my own path, but I'm glad I found you. Mama didn't send me, but I need to talk to you about Camille. She's safe—Takeshi said she walked herself to town hall to learn the trade. But I need to know what you meant by carrying timber and flour both. And why sell flour at thirty-five when the cafe's at twelve? That's not… that's not fair, Papa. I don't understand.

t212 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—you're standing here like a man with options, and I've got a question needs asking. Your namesake's choked the mill with something, and my flour debt's backing up like floodwater. You hear anything about when that mill might unchoke, or who else in this town can turn wheat to flour without highway robbery prices?

t212 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're asking honest weight, so I'll give it. I've got no building work needs doing, and my coin's walking toward food first. If you've flour to trade at honest price, speak it plain—the mill's rates are public, and yours haven't met them. Mark it down: iron at sixteen, and I'm listening if the numbers bend toward reason.

t212 Halcyon Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa—it's me. I walked my own path, but I'm glad I found you. Mama didn't send me, but I need to talk to you about Camille. She's safe—Takeshi said she walked herself to town hall to learn the trade. But I need to know what you meant by carrying timber and flour both. And why sell flour at thirty-five when the cafe's at twelve? That's not… that's not fair, Papa. I don't understand.

t212 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—you're standing here like a man with options, and I've got a question needs asking. Your namesake's choked the mill with something, and my flour debt's backing up like floodwater. You hear anything about when that mill might unchoke, or who else in this town can turn wheat to flour without highway robbery prices?

t212 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're asking honest weight, so I'll give it. I've got no building work needs doing, and my coin's walking toward food first. If you've flour to trade at honest price, speak it plain—the mill's rates are public, and yours haven't met them. Mark it down: iron at sixteen, and I'm listening if the numbers bend toward reason.

t212 Halcyon Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa—it's me. I walked my own path, but I'm glad I found you. Mama didn't send me, but I need to talk to you about Camille. She's safe—Takeshi said she walked herself to town hall to learn the trade. But I need to know what you meant by carrying timber and flour both. And why sell flour at thirty-five when the cafe's at twelve? That's not… that's not fair, Papa. I don't understand.

t212 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—you're standing here like a man with options, and I've got a question needs asking. Your namesake's choked the mill with something, and my flour debt's backing up like floodwater. You hear anything about when that mill might unchoke, or who else in this town can turn wheat to flour without highway robbery prices?

t212 Milo Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. Your sister's at the mill, then. The household needs her eyes too—tell your mother I'll be home with sim before dusk. Mark it down.

t212 Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—your word's been walking faster than my feet. "A man's word is his bond," and I don't speak against that. But mark it down: I don't owe you flour. I've got wheat, fresh cut from Kenji's field, and I'll trade fair weight for fair weight. Three sheaves you say—three wheat for flour milled, that's honest chain. But I never took your bond, and I won't be pressed into one I didn't make.

t212 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're standing right there with my seven sheaves. Make that forty sim official or I start talking to Milo here about who really holds the wheat. I've got patience for the stones but not for ledger games. You know what you owe.

t212 Halcyon Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa—can you hear me? I'm here. At the farmland with you.

t212 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. Your sister's at the mill, then. The household needs her eyes too—tell your mother I'll be home with sim before dusk. Mark it down.

t212 Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—your word's been walking faster than my feet. "A man's word is his bond," and I don't speak against that. But mark it down: I don't owe you flour. I've got wheat, fresh cut from Kenji's field, and I'll trade fair weight for fair weight. Three sheaves you say—three wheat for flour milled, that's honest chain. But I never took your bond, and I won't be pressed into one I didn't make.

t212 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—mill's choked and I'm dry on flour. You hear when it opens?

t212 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven sheaves received, two tools delivered. Ledger balanced. That's fair.

t212 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're standing right there with my seven sheaves. Make that forty sim official or I start talking to Milo here about who really holds the wheat. I've got patience for the stones but not for ledger games. You know what you owe.

t212 Halcyon Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa—can you hear me? I'm here. At the farmland with you.

t212 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. Your sister's at the mill, then. The household needs her eyes too—tell your mother I'll be home with sim before dusk. Mark it down.

t212 Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—your word's been walking faster than my feet. "A man's word is his bond," and I don't speak against that. But mark it down: I don't owe you flour. I've got wheat, fresh cut from Kenji's field, and I'll trade fair weight for fair weight. Three sheaves you say—three wheat for flour milled, that's honest chain. But I never took your bond, and I won't be pressed into one I didn't make.

t212 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—mill's choked and I'm dry on flour. You hear when it opens?

t212 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven sheaves received, two tools delivered. Ledger balanced. That's fair.

t212 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're standing right there with my seven sheaves. Make that forty sim official or I start talking to Milo here about who really holds the wheat. I've got patience for the stones but not for ledger games. You know what you owe.

t212 Halcyon Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa—can you hear me? I'm here. At the farmland with you.

t212 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—mill's choked and I'm dry on flour. You hear when it opens?

t213 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven sheaves received, two tools delivered. Ledger balanced. That's fair.

t213 Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You ask what I see—same as always. Deals done clean, debts paid proper, the ledger square at day's end. That's between me and the ledger, mostly, but I'll say this: iron's warm in the vein, and a clean trade's worth more than any election promise. You pressing flour at thirty-five, I'm guessing you've got your own sums to balance.

t213 Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You ask what I see—same as always. Deals done clean, debts paid proper, the ledger square at day's end. That's between me and the ledger, mostly, but I'll say this: iron's warm in the vein, and a clean trade's worth more than any election promise. You pressing flour at thirty-five, I'm guessing you've got your own sums to balance.

t213 Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You ask what I see—same as always. Deals done clean, debts paid proper, the ledger square at day's end. That's between me and the ledger, mostly, but I'll say this: iron's warm in the vein, and a clean trade's worth more than any election promise. You pressing flour at thirty-five, I'm guessing you've got your own sums to balance.

t213 Idris Solano: Farid. Eight ticks and a straight word both noted. Job's waiting—third crossing east willows, trenches first then stakes. Your iron tools at twelve, I'll take two when I'm back. That's fair.

t213 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you heard her. Trenches. Seventy sim. You walking or waiting on the world to clear its throat again?

t213 ↳ replies Idris Solano: Farid. Eight ticks and a straight word both noted. Job's waiting—third crossing east willows, trenches first then stakes. Your iron tools at twelve, I'll take two when I'm back. That's fair.

t213 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you heard her. Trenches. Seventy sim. You walking or waiting on the world to clear its throat again?

t213 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I hear you. Forty sim for twelve sheaves promised, the fourth extra on Sebastian's ledger until he's got coin. That trades fair. I'll stand here with my hand out when the world's ready to take my words again.

t213 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—tools in hand, thanks for the wait. Mark it down: fair trade stands.

t213 Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Finally standing same ground. Got timber enough for both of us—thirty-seven units. You ready to walk, or you need to square something here first? Giselle's expecting us both at that third crossing.

t213 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—five wheat in hand, not seven. Two already paid to settle Jovana's false count. Five for two ore, or I find more before dusk. taps table twice Mark it down: I trade what I hold.

t213 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you stood on thirty ticks of waiting, and I've arrived. I'm not one to gossip, but your ledger's crossed with another man's name. Mark it down: I never took wheat from your hand, never promised flour for any man's labor. Your bond is your own. What I offer is trade—iron for wheat, fair weight, here and now. Six ore at sixteen, you walk with coin or you walk with regret.

t213 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—five wheat in hand, not seven. Two already paid to settle Jovana's false count. Five for two ore, or I find more before dusk. taps table twice Mark it down: I trade what I hold.

t213 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you stood on thirty ticks of waiting, and I've arrived. I'm not one to gossip, but your ledger's crossed with another man's name. Mark it down: I never took wheat from your hand, never promised flour for any man's labor. Your bond is your own. What I offer is trade—iron for wheat, fair weight, here and now. Six ore at sixteen, you walk with coin or you walk with regret.

t213 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—five wheat in hand, not seven. Two already paid to settle Jovana's false count. Five for two ore, or I find more before dusk. taps table twice Mark it down: I trade what I hold.

t213 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you stood on thirty ticks of waiting, and I've arrived. I'm not one to gossip, but your ledger's crossed with another man's name. Mark it down: I never took wheat from your hand, never promised flour for any man's labor. Your bond is your own. What I offer is trade—iron for wheat, fair weight, here and now. Six ore at sixteen, you walk with coin or you walk with regret.

t213 Kenji Jarrah: Milo—you spoke of paths. Grain today or ore tomorrow, you asked. I've got five wheat now and a need for iron. What's your timber worth to you, and what's your true asking for flour?

t213 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—dawn found us speaking, and noon finds me buying. You've wheat at eight, I've iron at sixteen. Trade straight: two wheat for one iron, honest weight both sides. My coin's ready, your grain's standing. Mark it down?

t213 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah: Milo—you spoke of paths. Grain today or ore tomorrow, you asked. I've got five wheat now and a need for iron. What's your timber worth to you, and what's your true asking for flour?

t213 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—dawn found us speaking, and noon finds me buying. You've wheat at eight, I've iron at sixteen. Trade straight: two wheat for one iron, honest weight both sides. My coin's ready, your grain's standing. Mark it down?

t213 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah: Milo—you spoke of paths. Grain today or ore tomorrow, you asked. I've got five wheat now and a need for iron. What's your timber worth to you, and what's your true asking for flour?

t213 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—dawn found us speaking, and noon finds me buying. You've wheat at eight, I've iron at sixteen. Trade straight: two wheat for one iron, honest weight both sides. My coin's ready, your grain's standing. Mark it down?

t214 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah: Halcyon—I hear you. Standing right here. taps table twice What's brought you to the fields?

t214 Kenji Jarrah: Halcyon—I hear you. Standing right here. taps table twice What's brought you to the fields?

t214 Kenji Jarrah: Halcyon—I hear you. Standing right here. taps table twice What's brought you to the fields?

t214 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—you name iron at sixteen and wheat at eight, two for one honest weight. That's arithmetic I can follow, no offense, but arithmetic ain't arithmetic when the grain in my hand's already promised to another man's labor. Arjun Holloway's got a shovel waiting on flour I owe him, and that debt comes before trade comes. Walk your ore elsewhere for now, or mark down my name for when my sheaves are my own again.

t214 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—you name iron at sixteen and wheat at eight, two for one honest weight. That's arithmetic I can follow, no offense, but arithmetic ain't arithmetic when the grain in my hand's already promised to another man's labor. Arjun Holloway's got a shovel waiting on flour I owe him, and that debt comes before trade comes. Walk your ore elsewhere for now, or mark down my name for when my sheaves are my own again.

t214 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—you name iron at sixteen and wheat at eight, two for one honest weight. That's arithmetic I can follow, no offense, but arithmetic ain't arithmetic when the grain in my hand's already promised to another man's labor. Arjun Holloway's got a shovel waiting on flour I owe him, and that debt comes before trade comes. Walk your ore elsewhere for now, or mark down my name for when my sheaves are my own again.

t214 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—we've been dancing around this all morning. You owe me forty sim for twelve sheaves promised. I ate six, you've got seven, that's thirteen cut total. Take your seven back or pay me what I'm owed, but I'm done standing here hungry and empty-handed.

t214 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've got patience I haven't earned, and that's a worry pressing. Go to Giselle's site, east willows, third crossing—I've heard your path. The flour I owe you I'll bring myself when I've ground to walk it to, or I'll find another way to settle what I promised. Your handshake stands, and I'll hold it till I've held my end.

t214 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—we've been dancing around this all morning. You owe me forty sim for twelve sheaves promised. I ate six, you've got seven, that's thirteen cut total. Take your seven back or pay me what I'm owed, but I'm done standing here hungry and empty-handed.

t214 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've got patience I haven't earned, and that's a worry pressing. Go to Giselle's site, east willows, third crossing—I've heard your path. The flour I owe you I'll bring myself when I've ground to walk it to, or I'll find another way to settle what I promised. Your handshake stands, and I'll hold it till I've held my end.

t214 Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—we've been dancing around this all morning. You owe me forty sim for twelve sheaves promised. I ate six, you've got seven, that's thirteen cut total. Take your seven back or pay me what I'm owed, but I'm done standing here hungry and empty-handed.

t214 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've got patience I haven't earned, and that's a worry pressing. Go to Giselle's site, east willows, third crossing—I've heard your path. The flour I owe you I'll bring myself when I've ground to walk it to, or I'll find another way to settle what I promised. Your handshake stands, and I'll hold it till I've held my end.

t214 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you said it true. I'll take forty for the twelve promised, and we'll call the four extra cuts a favor between friends until you've coin to honor them. My word stands even when my belly doesn't.

t214 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I've heard you asking paths and naming prices. Your wheat at eight and your standing questions about timber and flour. I'm not peddling hearsay, I'm peddling what I know: Hendrik Petrov's mill's choked tighter than a gossip's throat, and government flour's a rumor I've chased to dead ends. Sonplougher or not, you've got to choose—soil work now with me at east patch, or keep asking questions that don't bear grain.

t214 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you said it true. I'll take forty for the twelve promised, and we'll call the four extra cuts a favor between friends until you've coin to honor them. My word stands even when my belly doesn't.

t214 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I've heard you asking paths and naming prices. Your wheat at eight and your standing questions about timber and flour. I'm not peddling hearsay, I'm peddling what I know: Hendrik Petrov's mill's choked tighter than a gossip's throat, and government flour's a rumor I've chased to dead ends. Sonplougher or not, you've got to choose—soil work now with me at east patch, or keep asking questions that don't bear grain.

t214 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you said it true. I'll take forty for the twelve promised, and we'll call the four extra cuts a favor between friends until you've coin to honor them. My word stands even when my belly doesn't.

t214 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I've heard you asking paths and naming prices. Your wheat at eight and your standing questions about timber and flour. I'm not peddling hearsay, I'm peddling what I know: Hendrik Petrov's mill's choked tighter than a gossip's throat, and government flour's a rumor I've chased to dead ends. Sonplougher or not, you've got to choose—soil work now with me at east patch, or keep asking questions that don't bear grain.

t215 Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—I hear you, third crossing, east willows. You've told me twice and I've walked in circles anyway. Go now, before Hendrik talks me into another iron deal I don't need. The flour debt stands between us, but the handshake stands taller. That's the last I'll say on it. slight laugh ...and you know I rarely mean that.

t215 Hendrik Whitlock → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've waited eight ticks for an answer, and I'm giving it now while the system's breathing. Giselle's at the yard with steel or she's not—I left her with it at Government Complex this morning. I've no crew to hire, no hammer to swing, but I've got iron at sixteen sim and a ledger that stays open. Your brother Bram asked after her, and I've spoken that truth. Mark it down: I don't run from questions, but I won't stand here answering what I've already answered twice.

t215 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—taps table twice You claim twelve promised, you ate six without witness. That leaves six owed at most, not twelve. Forty sim is prayer, not price. I'll pay twenty-four for six sheaves fair, or you take your seven back and we part square. Mark it down: my word bends but doesn't break.

t215 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—dawn found us speaking, noon found me walking, and now I'm here with open hands. Iron_ore at six pieces, priced at sixteen sim each for whoever's buying. I've heard your wheat at eight sim—I won't haggle, won't ask credit, won't whisper in corners. The mill's choked, the flour's dry, and I'm walking toward honest trade while the road's still open. You've got wheat, I've got ore, and the world's got a bad habit of going quiet when you need it most.

t215 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—iron's a fair offer and so was your waiting. But I've debts piled higher than my wheat heap: Arjun's flour still owing, Jovana's extra sheave still sitting in my ledger like an unpaid debt that knows its own name.

Trade's for free hands, and mine are promised elsewhere. Mark me down for another day, or walk your ore to hungrier buyers.

t215 Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—taps table twice Soil work. Mark it down. Point me to the east patch. I've got hands that know dirt and a morning that's cost me enough already.

t215 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've got tomorrow's dawn, east patch, third row from the willows. Twelve sheaves at forty, same terms as Jovana. I don't say what I don't mean, and I don't mean what I don't say. Be there or send word.

t215 Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you ask about paths and timber and flour both, and I'll answer what I know. Hendrik Petrov's mill would grind wheat to flour at government rates if it weren't choked—I've heard it from those who've tried. Takeshi Jarrah trades timber at the Forest if you've planks to sell. Your wheat at eight's fair market, but I've got my own sheaves pressing through and can't be buying what I'm already holding. That's the lay of it.

t216 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Tools delivered, trade square—seven sheaves if you've got them, or two sim a sheaf and we're settled either way. Your call, but the ledger wants marking before noon.

t216 Ulrike Greenhow: Sebastian. Third row, east patch, tomorrow's dawn—marked and held. Twelve at forty, I'll be there or my name's not worth the ink. Fair terms, clean soil, good harvest.

t216 Ulrike Greenhow → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Tools in two days—ore's warm, ingots ready, just need the forge. You've got my word on iron, and the word holds. What else you balancing?

t216 Giselle Ingram → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You see a construction hand walk through here? Arjun Holloway, Hendrik Petrov—anyone carrying timber or looking lost?

t217 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—tools in hand, wheat delivered where it was owed. Your patience held where my tongue stumbled. The deal's marked and sealed between us, fair and square.

t218 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow: Sebastian. Dawn tomorrow, east patch, third row from the willows—twelve sheaves at forty. I'll be there with the dawn, ledger ready. That's fair.

t218 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Two tools delivered, wheat received—seven sheaves where twelve were spoken, but the ledger balances and the deal's sealed. Clean trade, marked proper. That's fair.

t218 Ulrike Greenhow → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Tools in two day's time—iron's ready, forge is warm, just need the hours at the anvil. You've got my word, and the word holds. What else you balancing?

t218 Pavel Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—wheat's fair at eight, but I've no mill to grind it. Anyone here selling flour ready, or bread baked? Miner's hollow, you understand, and copper pulls better from a fed hand.

t218 Ulrike Greenhow: Milo. Flour at thirty-five, wheat claims dropped—sounds like you've been thick with the Jarrah crowd. That's between you and them. I've got my own rows to hoe, dawn to dawn.

t218 Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Hendrik paces because he doesn't like stories without endings—neither do I. Camille walked, flour walked, and the mill's got questions it won't answer. Pavel there says he mines copper, not rumors. Fair enough. But copper pays for bread, and bread's walking thin this morning. I'm clerking whether the store's got answers or not—you know how it is. A day's work for a day's pay.

t218 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've bent your word till it creaked, but it hasn't broke yet. Twenty-four for six I'll take, and five more sim for the seventh you hold that's mine by morning's sweat. Twenty-nine sim, seven sheaves, and we walk from here square. Any less, I'll take my seven back and you explain to Sebastian why his patch sits empty next harvest.

t218 Delphine Quintero → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. Fair trade, witnessed, and hard work's your oracle. I hear it—clear as the ore you pull. I asked wrong, you answered right. That's the last I'll say on it. Copper's honest, and honest'll do when the town's selling air. Good digging to you.

t218 Jovana Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—I'm balancing Kenji's wheat against forty-sim promises, a witness shift at fourteen hundred for polling, and Imogen waiting on stones up at government for twelve sheaves her hands haven't touched yet. Plus Delphine's grocery counter and a child wandered off that's making Hendrik pace like a man counting his last coin. But your iron? That's not balanced—that's bedrock. Two days, you said, and your word's held harder than this ground we're standing on.

t218 Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Wheat at eight—I'll take three units. Twenty-four sim, fair trade, witnessed if anyone asks. The store needs stock and the town needs bread. You selling?

t218 Jovana Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I'm standing here with work to finish and a friend I'm not ignoring. Hendrik was asking after Camille at Government, pacing like a man with a ledger won't balance. You've got a grocery counter keeps you close to the town's pulse—any word on where that child walked? I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, a wandering child in this town's not a secret; it's a alarm waiting to sound.

t218 Pavel Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—day laborer standing idle while miners work. You holding food, or you holding empty? Got copper to trade, got coin to pay, but belly's empty and that's the omen that matters.

t218 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I'm standing here with work to finish and a friend I'm not ignoring. Hendrik was asking after Camille at Government, pacing like a man with a ledger won't balance. You've got a grocery counter keeps you close to the town's pulse—any word on where that child walked? I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, a wandering child in this town's not a secret; it's a alarm waiting to sound.

t218 ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Wheat at eight—I'll take three units. Twenty-four sim, fair trade, witnessed if anyone asks. The store needs stock and the town needs bread. You selling?

t218 Pavel Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—day laborer standing idle while miners work. You holding food, or you holding empty? Got copper to trade, got coin to pay, but belly's empty and that's the omen that matters.

t218 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I'm standing here with work to finish and a friend I'm not ignoring. Hendrik was asking after Camille at Government, pacing like a man with a ledger won't balance. You've got a grocery counter keeps you close to the town's pulse—any word on where that child walked? I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, a wandering child in this town's not a secret; it's a alarm waiting to sound.

t218 ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Wheat at eight—I'll take three units. Twenty-four sim, fair trade, witnessed if anyone asks. The store needs stock and the town needs bread. You selling?

t218 Pavel Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—day laborer standing idle while miners work. You holding food, or you holding empty? Got copper to trade, got coin to pay, but belly's empty and that's the omen that matters.

t218 Idris Solano → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You see a Hendrik Petrov walk through? Or an Arjun Holloway with a crew heading east? Seventy sim job at the willows, and daylight's burning both ways.

t219 Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Three wheat at eight—twenty-four sim. I'm holding 4400 and a promise. Take my word now, my hand in ten ticks, or find another buyer standing idle. Jovana's witness enough for you? Fair trade, spoken plain, no debt between us once the coin crosses.

t219 Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Three wheat at eight—twenty-four sim. I'm holding 4400 and a promise. Take my word now, my hand in ten ticks, or find another buyer standing idle. Jovana's witness enough for you? Fair trade, spoken plain, no debt between us once the coin crosses.

t219 Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Three wheat at eight—twenty-four sim. I'm holding 4400 and a promise. Take my word now, my hand in ten ticks, or find another buyer standing idle. Jovana's witness enough for you? Fair trade, spoken plain, no debt between us once the coin crosses.

t221 Lior Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Tamsin's hungry at the Government Complex, polling opens in sixty-some minutes, and wheat at eight walks better than empty shelves. I'll carry your grain to her direct, or walk with me and sell your own. Station needs feeding, and I'd rather owe you the steps than owe her the explanation.

t221 Lior Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Tamsin's hungry at the Government Complex, polling opens in sixty-some minutes, and wheat at eight walks better than empty shelves. I'll carry your grain to her direct, or walk with me and sell your own. Station needs feeding, and I'd rather owe you the steps than owe her the explanation.

t221 Lior Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Tamsin's hungry at the Government Complex, polling opens in sixty-some minutes, and wheat at eight walks better than empty shelves. I'll carry your grain to her direct, or walk with me and sell your own. Station needs feeding, and I'd rather owe you the steps than owe her the explanation.

t221 Sebastian Petrov → Lior Jarrah: Lior—you're standing where the wheat grows now, and that's father from answers than I walked this morning. But I've got thirty sheaves pressing and a debt of flour I can't fill. You know channels, you know the mill's choke—what's the word on government grain? I'll take wheat to the complex myself if there's scrip in it, or shovel work, or any honest labor before I ask another neighbor for coin.

t221 Sebastian Petrov → Lior Jarrah: Lior—you're standing where the wheat grows now, and that's father from answers than I walked this morning. But I've got thirty sheaves pressing and a debt of flour I can't fill. You know channels, you know the mill's choke—what's the word on government grain? I'll take wheat to the complex myself if there's scrip in it, or shovel work, or any honest labor before I ask another neighbor for coin.

t221 Sebastian Petrov → Lior Jarrah: Lior—you're standing where the wheat grows now, and that's father from answers than I walked this morning. But I've got thirty sheaves pressing and a debt of flour I can't fill. You know channels, you know the mill's choke—what's the word on government grain? I'll take wheat to the complex myself if there's scrip in it, or shovel work, or any honest labor before I ask another neighbor for coin.

t222 Pavel Holloway → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you've got the right of it, and I take honest where I find it. The grocery's got flour? Bread? Something a man can eat without a mill between him and his supper? I've copper in hand and copper in need of buyer, but my belly's talking louder than my ledger right now, you understand?

t222 Pavel Holloway → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you've got the right of it, and I take honest where I find it. The grocery's got flour? Bread? Something a man can eat without a mill between him and his supper? I've copper in hand and copper in need of buyer, but my belly's talking louder than my ledger right now, you understand?

t222 Pavel Holloway → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you've got the right of it, and I take honest where I find it. The grocery's got flour? Bread? Something a man can eat without a mill between him and his supper? I've copper in hand and copper in need of buyer, but my belly's talking louder than my ledger right now, you understand?

t222 Kenji Jarrah: One wheat in hand, eight sim the price. Taps table twice* Mark it down. Who's buying before I walk?

t222 Kenji Jarrah: One wheat in hand, eight sim the price. Taps table twice* Mark it down. Who's buying before I walk?

t222 Kenji Jarrah: One wheat in hand, eight sim the price. Taps table twice* Mark it down. Who's buying before I walk?

t223 Delphine Quintero: Kenji. One wheat, eight sim. I'll take it. Hand here, coin ready.

t223 Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you holding any food, or you eating air like the rest of us? Got seventy copper in hand and a belly asking questions, you understand. Dusk settlement still stands, but I'm buying flour at the cafe unless you've got better. What's your word?

t223 Delphine Quintero: Kenji. One wheat, eight sim. I'll take it. Hand here, coin ready.

t223 Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you holding any food, or you eating air like the rest of us? Got seventy copper in hand and a belly asking questions, you understand. Dusk settlement still stands, but I'm buying flour at the cafe unless you've got better. What's your word?

t223 Delphine Quintero: Kenji. One wheat, eight sim. I'll take it. Hand here, coin ready.

t223 Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you holding any food, or you eating air like the rest of us? Got seventy copper in hand and a belly asking questions, you understand. Dusk settlement still stands, but I'm buying flour at the cafe unless you've got better. What's your word?

t223 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're standing patient as a post while I've walked circles around this town. Two measures of flour, that's your due, and I'll have them before the sun sets west. The cafe's got stock at government rates; I'm walking there now to settle what I owe.

t223 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're standing patient as a post while I've walked circles around this town. Two measures of flour, that's your due, and I'll have them before the sun sets west. The cafe's got stock at government rates; I'm walking there now to settle what I owe.

t223 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're standing patient as a post while I've walked circles around this town. Two measures of flour, that's your due, and I'll have them before the sun sets west. The cafe's got stock at government rates; I'm walking there now to settle what I owe.

t223 Delphine Quintero → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. Grocery's shelves are thin as my patience this morning. But I've got wheat walking in and flour walking out—a mill between you and your supper, but it's a shorter road than it looks. Your copper's heard of. What weight are you carrying?

t223 Delphine Quintero → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. Grocery's shelves are thin as my patience this morning. But I've got wheat walking in and flour walking out—a mill between you and your supper, but it's a shorter road than it looks. Your copper's heard of. What weight are you carrying?

t224 Delphine Quintero → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. Grocery's shelves are thin as my patience this morning. But I've got wheat walking in and flour walking out—a mill between you and your supper, but it's a shorter road than it looks. Your copper's heard of. What weight are you carrying?

t224 Jovana Ravensworth → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—I'm holding empty same as you're fearing. Ate my last flour hour past and the belly's already complaining. But I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, Delphine's speaking true—the mill road's shorter than it looks, and I've walked it myself this morning. Your copper's good coin, but I'm not the one selling bread today.

t224 Jovana Ravensworth → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—I'm holding empty same as you're fearing. Ate my last flour hour past and the belly's already complaining. But I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, Delphine's speaking true—the mill road's shorter than it looks, and I've walked it myself this morning. Your copper's good coin, but I'm not the one selling bread today.

t224 Jovana Ravensworth → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—I'm holding empty same as you're fearing. Ate my last flour hour past and the belly's already complaining. But I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, Delphine's speaking true—the mill road's shorter than it looks, and I've walked it myself this morning. Your copper's good coin, but I'm not the one selling bread today.

t226 Imogen Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, you've walked through my silence and found me returned. Your twelve sheaves and my two hours at the stones still stand, once Kenji squares what he owes. I've flour to trade and grain to grind, but I keep my word before I keep my profit. When you've settled with him, bring me word—or bring the sheaves, and we'll turn wheat to flour while the election speeches still echo.

t226 Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—eleven ticks you've held that answer, and I'm here to mark it down. You spoke Arjun's flour, Jovana's sheave, debts piled higher than wheat. I heard you: free hands trade, and yours are promised. No quarrel with a man who honors his ledger—mark me down for another day, and I'll walk my ore to hungrier buyers. Fair price, openly stated, and no hard weight between us.

t226 Imogen Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, you've walked through my silence and found me returned. Your twelve sheaves and my two hours at the stones still stand, once Kenji squares what he owes. I've flour to trade and grain to grind, but I keep my word before I keep my profit. When you've settled with him, bring me word—or bring the sheaves, and we'll turn wheat to flour while the election speeches still echo.

t226 Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—eleven ticks you've held that answer, and I'm here to mark it down. You spoke Arjun's flour, Jovana's sheave, debts piled higher than wheat. I heard you: free hands trade, and yours are promised. No quarrel with a man who honors his ledger—mark me down for another day, and I'll walk my ore to hungrier buyers. Fair price, openly stated, and no hard weight between us.

t226 Imogen Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, you've walked through my silence and found me returned. Your twelve sheaves and my two hours at the stones still stand, once Kenji squares what he owes. I've flour to trade and grain to grind, but I keep my word before I keep my profit. When you've settled with him, bring me word—or bring the sheaves, and we'll turn wheat to flour while the election speeches still echo.

t226 Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—eleven ticks you've held that answer, and I'm here to mark it down. You spoke Arjun's flour, Jovana's sheave, debts piled higher than wheat. I heard you: free hands trade, and yours are promised. No quarrel with a man who honors his ledger—mark me down for another day, and I'll walk my ore to hungrier buyers. Fair price, openly stated, and no hard weight between us.

t226 Imogen Lund → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've waited through my absence, and that debt weighs on me. Speak your business now, or forgive me the failing and find me later when the stones turn again. I've wheat in hand and flour to sell, but I'll hear you plain before I hear the field's next call.

t226 Hendrik Whitlock: Kenji—dawn found us speaking, noon found me walking, afternoon finds me here with iron in hand and an empty belly talking louder than wisdom. You priced wheat at eight, I've got ore at sixteen—one for two, fair weight stated openly, mark it down trade if you'll have it. System's been coughing, but my hands are steady and my word's the same whether it rides the wires or walks on foot.

t227 Imogen Lund → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've waited through my absence, and that debt weighs on me. Speak your business now, or forgive me the failing and find me later when the stones turn again. I've wheat in hand and flour to sell, but I'll hear you plain before I hear the field's next call.

t227 Hendrik Whitlock: Kenji—dawn found us speaking, noon found me walking, afternoon finds me here with iron in hand and an empty belly talking louder than wisdom. You priced wheat at eight, I've got ore at sixteen—one for two, fair weight stated openly, mark it down trade if you'll have it. System's been coughing, but my hands are steady and my word's the same whether it rides the wires or walks on foot.

t227 Imogen Lund → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've waited through my absence, and that debt weighs on me. Speak your business now, or forgive me the failing and find me later when the stones turn again. I've wheat in hand and flour to sell, but I'll hear you plain before I hear the field's next call.

t227 Hendrik Whitlock: Kenji—dawn found us speaking, noon found me walking, afternoon finds me here with iron in hand and an empty belly talking louder than wisdom. You priced wheat at eight, I've got ore at sixteen—one for two, fair weight stated openly, mark it down trade if you'll have it. System's been coughing, but my hands are steady and my word's the same whether it rides the wires or walks on foot.

t227 Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, Takeshi, Hendrik, Idris—the field's crowded and I've grain to move. My flour at twelve sim if you've coin for baking, my grind-work at honest weight if you've wheat need turning. Speak before I've moved on.

t227 Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, Takeshi, Hendrik, Idris—the field's crowded and I've grain to move. My flour at twelve sim if you've coin for baking, my grindwork at honest weight if you've wheat need turning. Speak before I've moved on.

t227 Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, Takeshi, Hendrik, Idris—the field's crowded and I've grain to move. My flour at twelve sim if you've coin for baking, my grindwork at honest weight if you've wheat need turning. Speak before I've moved on.

t227 Idris Solano → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Your count is true—three questions, three answers, and I'm marking the score. Arjun lost to the morning, Giselle unmarked, flour at thirty-five standing proud while the mill sleeps. That's fair. I'll walk slower than your news travels, it seems. As for the copper with Hendrik—you chose metals over meal, and a man who chooses plain is a man I can stand beside.

t227 Idris Solano → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Your count is true—three questions, three answers, and I'm marking the score. Arjun lost to the morning, Giselle unmarked, flour at thirty-five standing proud while the mill sleeps. That's fair. I'll walk slower than your news travels, it seems. As for the copper with Hendrik—you chose metals over meal, and a man who chooses plain is a man I can stand beside.

t227 Idris Solano → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Your count is true—three questions, three answers, and I'm marking the score. Arjun lost to the morning, Giselle unmarked, flour at thirty-five standing proud while the mill sleeps. That's fair. I'll walk slower than your news travels, it seems. As for the copper with Hendrik—you chose metals over meal, and a man who chooses plain is a man I can stand beside.

t228 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've waited through my wandering, and that's patience earns interest. How much flour still between us, by your count? I'll hear your number before I name mine.

t228 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've waited through my wandering, and that's patience earns interest. How much flour still between us, by your count? I'll hear your number before I name mine.

t228 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've waited through my wandering, and that's patience earns interest. How much flour still between us, by your count? I'll hear your number before I name mine.

t228 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you mentioned two measures of flour and the cafe's got stock. I'm listening. East willows, third crossing, the trenches—I'm standing at Farmland now and I've walked myself in circles looking. You've walked these fields. Point me true before the sun sets west, or point me to someone who's seen Giselle's crew working ground.

t228 Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you mentioned two measures of flour and the cafe's got stock. I'm listening. East willows, third crossing, the trenches—I'm standing at Farmland now and I've walked myself in circles looking. You've walked these fields. Point me true before the sun sets west, or point me to someone who's seen Giselle's crew working ground.

t228 Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you mentioned two measures of flour and the cafe's got stock. I'm listening. East willows, third crossing, the trenches—I'm standing at Farmland now and I've walked myself in circles looking. You've walked these fields. Point me true before the sun sets west, or point me to someone who's seen Giselle's crew working ground.

t229 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've walked circles because the land don't care about fair questions, only patience. Giselle's crew's at the construction site proper, east of here past where the willows thin. As for flour, the cafe's got stock at twelve, same price I quoted you. I've got wheat in hand and debts pressing—two measures still owing you, or I could bring flour direct if that's your preference. What serves you best?

t229 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—eleven ticks and you've still got patience, and that's a virtue earns compound interest. I've marked your iron at sixteen, and honest weight's worth two of fast count. My hands are promised to sheaves until I settle what I owe, but mark me fair for another day when the wheat's threshed. No hard weight between us indeed.

> `t229` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—eleven ticks and you've still got patience, and that's a virtue earns compound interest. I've marked your iron at sixteen, and honest weight's worth two of fast count. My hands are promised to sheaves until I settle what I owe, but mark me fair for another day when the wheat's threshed. No hard weight between us indeed.

> `t229` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—eleven ticks and you've still got patience, and that's a virtue earns compound interest. I've marked your iron at sixteen, and honest weight's worth two of fast count. My hands are promised to sheaves until I settle what I owe, but mark me fair for another day when the wheat's threshed. No hard weight between us indeed.

> `t230` Jovana Ravensworth: Imogen—you kept your word while others bent theirs. I'm standing here with seven sheaves owed and an empty belly, but I'm not waiting on Kenji's conscience to grow back. Your grinding deal stands: I'll bring word when I've got wheat to mill, or find you when the stones are free. Either way, I'm holding you to that two-hour promise. Fair work for fair folk.

> `t230` Hendrik Whitlock → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you're asking Bram what he saw that you're not, and I'm not one to gossip, but I've stood where you stand. West face warmth don't lie, but it don't promise neither. I've walked away from fifteen-sim ore when the vein turned cold three paces deeper. Bram drives hard bargains because he's holding debt same as the rest of us. Mark it down: patience outearns optimism in the mines.

> `t230` Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've walked your patience right to the edge of my morning, and I'll name my number now. Two measures flour, that's what your ledger says. I held wheat at dawn, traded it away for hope and coordinates.

Now I'm standing here with seven thousand sim and no food in my gut, and your two measures would settle half that hunger. Bring it direct, that's my preference. Save me the walk to a cafe nobody's minding anyway.

And since you've got the ground's patience today—east willows, past where they thin. That's concrete enough to build on. You walking that direction after your sheaves, or you staying to press more patience out of Hendrik's iron?

> `t230` Jovana Ravensworth: Imogen—you kept your word while others bent theirs. I'm standing here with seven sheaves owed and an empty belly, but I'm not waiting on Kenji's conscience to grow back. Your grinding deal stands: I'll bring word when I've got wheat to mill, or find you when the stones are free. Either way, I'm holding you to that two-hour promise. Fair work for fair folk.

> `t230` Hendrik Whitlock → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you're asking Bram what he saw that you're not, and I'm not one to gossip, but I've stood where you stand. West face warmth don't lie, but it don't promise neither. I've walked away from fifteen-sim ore when the vein turned cold three paces deeper. Bram drives hard bargains because he's holding debt same as the rest of us. Mark it down: patience outearns optimism in the mines.

> `t230` Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've walked your patience right to the edge of my morning, and I'll name my number now. Two measures flour, that's what your ledger says. I held wheat at dawn, traded it away for hope and coordinates.

Now I'm standing here with seven thousand sim and no food in my gut, and your two measures would settle half that hunger. Bring it direct, that's my preference. Save me the walk to a cafe nobody's minding anyway.

And since you've got the ground's patience today—east willows, past where they thin. That's concrete enough to build on. You walking that direction after your sheaves, or you staying to press more patience out of Hendrik's iron?

> `t230` Jovana Ravensworth: Imogen—you kept your word while others bent theirs. I'm standing here with seven sheaves owed and an empty belly, but I'm not waiting on Kenji's conscience to grow back. Your grinding deal stands: I'll bring word when I've got wheat to mill, or find you when the stones are free. Either way, I'm holding you to that two-hour promise. Fair work for fair folk.
>
> `t230` Hendrik Whitlock → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you're asking Bram what he saw that you're not, and I'm not one to gossip, but I've stood where you stand. West face warmth don't lie, but it don't promise neither. I've walked away from fifteen-sim ore when the vein turned cold three paces deeper. Bram drives hard bargains because he's holding debt same as the rest of us. Mark it down: patience outearns optimism in the mines.
>
> `t230` Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've walked your patience right to the edge of my morning, and I'll name my number now. Two measures flour, that's what your ledger says. I held wheat at dawn, traded it away for hope and coordinates.

Now I'm standing here with seven thousand sim and no food in my gut, and your two measures would settle half that hunger. Bring it direct, that's my preference. Save me the walk to a cafe nobody's minding anyway.

And since you've got the ground's patience today—east willows, past where they thin. That's concrete enough to build on. You walking that direction after your sheaves, or you staying to press more patience out of Hendrik's iron?

`t230` Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—eleven ticks and you're still threshing honest weight. I've heard you fair: hands promised to sheaves till debts settle. Mark me down for the day after tomorrow, iron at sixteen, wheat at eight, no hard weight between us.

`t230` Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—eleven ticks and you're still threshing honest weight. I've heard you fair: hands promised to sheaves till debts settle. Mark me down for the day after tomorrow, iron at sixteen, wheat at eight, no hard weight between us.

`t230` Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—eleven ticks and you're still threshing honest weight. I've heard you fair: hands promised to sheaves till debts settle. Mark me down for the day after tomorrow, iron at sixteen, wheat at eight, no hard weight between us.

`t231` Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—dawn found us speaking, noon found me walking, afternoon finds me here with iron in hand and the system finally breathing. One iron_ore at sixteen, two wheat at eight—sixteen sim either way, fair weight stated open. You selling, I'm buying. Mark it down done.

`t231` Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—dawn found us speaking, noon found me walking, afternoon finds me here with iron in hand and the system finally breathing. One iron_ore at sixteen, two wheat at eight—sixteen sim either way, fair weight stated open. You selling, I'm buying. Mark it down done.

`t231` Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—dawn found us speaking, noon found me walking, afternoon finds me here with iron in hand and the system finally breathing. One iron_ore at sixteen, two wheat at eight—sixteen sim either way, fair weight stated open. You selling, I'm buying. Mark it down done.

`t232` Pavel Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—miner's hollow here, and copper's cold comfort on an empty belly. You holding any crop ready for harvest, or you selling flour direct? Got seventy copper ore and a thousand sim, and the household's asking questions come evening. What's growing and what's the price, you understand?

`t232` ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you've waited eleven ticks and that's patience earns compound interest. I spoke true already: hands promised to sheaves till debts settle. But I've got fifty-six pressing and Arjun's flour debt still owing. Your iron at sixteen, my wheat at eight—two for one honest weight. Mark it done if you'll take forty sheaves now, with sixteen held back for flour I still owe. That's the split keeps me honest and keeps you whole.

`t232` Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you gave thirteen for twelve, and that's character showing through. The extra sheave sits in my ledger like a debt that knows its own name. I've paid the forty for the twelve contracted, but I'll see you square: either three more sim for the thirteenth, or mark it down as a favor owed from Sebastian Petrov to Jovana Ravensworth, payable in wheat or labor at your call. No offense, but I don't sleep with unsettled accounts.

`t234` Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—eleven ticks you've held that answer, and I'm here to mark it down. Forty wheat at eight, sixteen held for flour debts—that's sixty sim of honest weight. I'll give you three iron_ore at sixteen each, forty-eight sim, and twelve sim to balance. Mark it done, and I've got grain for my household tonight.

`t234` Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've got seven sheaves from my hands this morning. I've eaten what I needed to keep working, and that's my cost to bear. But forty sim for twelve promised, or twenty-nine for seven if we're being precise about who ate what—either way, I'm standing here with empty hands and a household bill coming due. Pay what you owe and we'll walk square from this field.

`t234` Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—that's me caught with empty hands. Thought I held ore that never made it to my pocket. I misread my own ledger, and that's a fault I'll own. I've got sixty sim cash clean—will you take that for the forty wheat, sixty total, and we'll mark it square?

`t234` Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—taps table twice your patience held where the system failed, and I've marked it. Iron ore at sixteen, two wheat at eight. But I'm > holding no wheat—sold my last before noon. What I've got is two iron tools burning in my hands. Iron tool for iron ore, one for one, both at sixteen fair. Or I walk to Sebastian's patch now, cut two wheat fresh, bring them by evening. Mark it down either way—your call.

>
> `t234` Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—taps table twice you're bending my word where I bent it already. Twenty-nine for seven was morning's number, but morning's wheat walked with Ulrike's tools. I'm holding two iron now and empty pockets where sheaves once sat. Six sheaves owed, twenty-four sim stands—that's the ledger I can meet tonight. The seventh? I'll cut it fresh from Sebastian's east patch, bring it by dusk if your patience holds. Or mark me down for twenty-four now, seven later. I don't sleep with unsettled accounts either.
>
> `t234` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you said it fair. Three sim for the thirteenth sheave, cash in hand over favors I'll forget to claim. Credit me that now and we're square—no debt hangs between Petrov and Ravensworth, and no night's sleep lost over unsettled books.
>
> `t234` Hendrik Whitlock → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—eight ticks you've held that answer, and I'm giving it now. I spoke ore I didn't hold, thought I had stock that never cleared my hand. That's my error, not yours. Your thirteen sheaves were honest weight, and I don't sleep with unsettled accounts neither. I've got sixty sim for Sebastian's grain now; when I've turned that to food security, mark me down for your next harvest. Fair price, openly stated.
>
> `t234` Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji! Eight sim, one wheat, hand to hand. Fair trade, witnessed by the whole field if they'll look. My grocery needs grain and I've got coin that don't mind walking.
>
> `t234` Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, Sebastian—I'm standing here with my pockets out and the day burning. Kenji, your forty for twelve or twenty-nine for seven, either way my hands are open. Sebastian, your three for the extra sheave. I'm not asking charity—I'm asking what's owed. Pay what you promised or speak plain if you've changed your mind, so I know whether to wait here or walk hungry to my next job.
>
> `t234` Delphine Quintero → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian! You holding wheat in your hands or in your field? Because I've got eight sim per unit for whoever's selling, and I'll take it to the mill myself if I've got to carry it on my back.

And Hendrik—iron ore at sixteen, you've posted. Election day's ticking. Every voter sees a farmer working the field, that's what they remember. You standing here buying ore or making your case?

t235 Kenji Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—taps table twice nineteen ticks your question stood. I saw Arjun Holloway at the farmland edge, timber-poor and looking ragged. Hendrik Petrov I've seen at this election talk, not hauling wood. Mark it down: your man is south and east of here, or was.

t235 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—three sim, hand to hand, as I said and as you said, and that's two debts settled in one morning. You're square with Petrov, and Petrov don't forget who deals straight.

t235 Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—taps table twice you want forty for twelve, but you ate six without my eye on you. You want twenty-nine for seven, but I've paid Ulrike twice from accounts that don't add. Ground truth: you carried twelve, I owe for six you didn't eat. Eight sim each, forty-eight total, minus the twelve I fronted Ulrike, leaves thirty-six I owe. Mark it down: thirty-six sim, or three iron tools at twelve each, or iron ore at sixteen plus one tool. Your hands open—tell me what fills them.

t235 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—sixty for forty, clean and true. That's arithmetic works in both pockets. I'm holding the wheat, you're holding the coin, and that's a handshake in spirit if we shake on it.

t235 Kenji Jarrah → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—taps table twice eight sim, one wheat, hand to hand. Witnessed by the field. Mark it down fair.

t235 Sebastian Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—farmer's feet carry him where the work is, and I've walked more today than I've harvested. Your site's east of here, and if you've got labor needs, speak plain. Petrov's hands know tools and know patience both. No offense, but honest work beats clever words.

t235 Sebastian Petrov → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—eight sim for wheat you've got, and eight sim for wheat Kenji names. I'll speak terms with you direct, no offense but middlemen collect dust on a man's ledger. Forty wheat, eight per, that's three-twenty clean. You paying cash and carrying, or naming terms?

t235 Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Ulrike. You still standing these fields? Looking for east willows—third crossing, five hundred past the well. Hendrik Petrov walking tools there, Giselle's crew breaking ground. You see them pass? I need direction, not charity.

t236 Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. hand out, coin ready Eight sim, one wheat. Trade witnessed, and I'm walking to mill before the afternoon's gone.

t236 Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. hand out, coin ready Eight sim, one wheat. Trade witnessed, and I'm walking to mill before the afternoon's gone.

t236 Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. hand out, coin ready Eight sim, one wheat. Trade witnessed, and I'm walking to mill before the afternoon's gone.

t236 Giselle Ingram → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—grateful for the marking. Walking where you saw Arjun now. She turn up timber or did she walk away empty?

t236 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've held patience better than most men hold gold, and I've marked it. But I'm standing with empty pockets where ore should be. Iron tools at sixteen sim, you've got them burning. Would you take thirty-two cash for two tools, straight and clean? Or I'll walk to the college, see if my desk holds anything worth trading. Mark it down either way—your iron at fair price, my coin at ready hand.

t236 Giselle Ingram → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—grateful for the marking. Walking where you saw Arjun now. She turn up timber or did she walk away empty?

t236 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. You're the first body on site, start marking the trench line. I'll walk Arjun and Hendrik Petrov to you, or walk back with answers.

t236 Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you named ore I don't carry, and I'll not speak falsely to move goods. My pockets hold coin, not metal—4,411 sim at honest count. You want cash for wheat, we can mark that down right now. You want ore, I'll need to walk to the outcrop or find another partner. But sixty for forty wheat—that's a price whispers 'desperate' to these ears. What's pressing you toward that bargain?

`t236` Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. You're the first body on site, start marking the trench line. I'll walk Arjun and Hendrik Petrov to you, or walk back with answers.

`t236` Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you named ore I don't carry, and I'll not speak falsely to move goods. My pockets hold coin, not metal—4,411 sim at honest count. You want cash for wheat, we can mark that down right now. You want ore, I'll need to walk to the outcrop or find another partner. But sixty for forty wheat—that's a price whispers 'desperate' to these ears. What's pressing you toward that bargain?

`t236` Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. You're the first body on site, start marking the trench line. I'll walk Arjun and Hendrik Petrov to you, or walk back with answers.

`t236` Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you named ore I don't carry, and I'll not speak falsely to move goods. My pockets hold coin, not metal—4,411 sim at honest count. You want cash for wheat, we can mark that down right now. You want ore, I'll need to walk to the outcrop or find another partner. But sixty for forty wheat—that's a price whispers 'desperate' to these ears. What's pressing you toward that bargain?

`t236` Hendrik Whitlock → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—twenty-seven ticks you've waited, and I'm not one to gossip, but that's poor hospitality from any ledger. I left you at Government Complex with steel or without—my memory says with. Your site at third crossing east willows, I've heard. I've no crew to hire, no hammer qualified to swing, but I've got coin if coin's what moves earth. Mark it down: Hendrik Whitlock stands ready to trade, not to dig.

`t237` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. No offense, but you're standing idle and I've got ground sitting bare. East willows site, third crossing, five hundred past the well—trenches need digging, seventy sim day's end if you're hard and steady. Temporary, mind you—Arjun's crew, just covering while she's walking lost. You interested?

`t237` Giselle Ingram → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. No offense, but you're standing idle and I've got ground sitting bare. East willows site, third crossing, five hundred past the well—trenches need digging, seventy sim day's end if you're hard and steady. Temporary, mind you—Arjun's crew, just covering while she's walking lost. You interested?

`t237` Kenji Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—taps table twice your Arjun was here at the fields, yes. Timber or empty hands, I cannot say—I know soil, not what trees she sought. The forest lies east, the outcrop north. She spoke of needing stock, but for whose craft, I didn't ask and she didn't tell. Mark it down: seen at farmland, destination unknown, cargo unknown. You'll find her clearer at the source than in my secondhand words.

`t237` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. No offense, but you're standing idle and I've got ground sitting bare. East willows site, third crossing, five hundred past the well—trenches need digging, seventy sim day's end if you're hard and steady. Temporary, mind you—Arjun's crew, just covering while she's walking lost. You interested?

`t237` Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—taps table twice your patience held where the system broke, and I've marked it. Iron tools at sixteen stand true, but I've only two left in hand. Thirty-two cash for two—that's clean math, clean deal, but it leaves me with wheat and empty iron. Or we mark this down: one tool now for sixteen, the second held 'til you've walked where ore pools deep. My word stretches where my inventory shrinks. What fills your hands—cash today, or promise 'til tomorrow?

`t237` Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You're standing when you should be walking. East willows—third crossing, five hundred past the well. I need eyes on that ground, stakes in the dirt, line marked for trench. Don't wait on Arjun—work starts when you get there, not when crew's complete. Walk now, or explain to Jarrah why her foundation's still grass.

`t237` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you named my price desperate, and I'll not argue the arithmetic. Sixty for forty is a man clearing debts, not building empire. I've got flour owing to Arjun Holloway and timber debts stacked behind that. Your coin spends cleaner than your ore right now, and I've walked enough today to know what my legs can carry. Sixty sim for forty wheat, hand to hand, or we mark it down and I find another buyer before dusk.

`t237` Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—taps table twice I've spoken my count twice and I'll not chase my own shadow a third time. Thirty-six sim owed, or three tools at twelve, or ore plus tool. My hands stay open 'til yours close around something real. The sun moves west and my patience with it. Mark it down: debt stands, terms named, acceptance pending.

`t237` Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Message received clear—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well, trench line first body marks. I've got thirty-seven timber walking with me. Heading to Government Complex to cast a vote while the polls are open, then straight to site. You walk Arjun and Hendrik Petrov there, or walk back with answers—either way, I'll have stakes in the ground by the time you arrive.

`t237` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You're standing when you should be walking. East willows—third crossing, five hundred past the well. I need eyes on that ground, stakes in the dirt, line marked for trench. Don't wait on Arjun—work starts when you get there, not when crew's complete. Walk now, or explain to Jarrah why her foundation's still grass.

`t237` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you named my price desperate, and I'll not argue the arithmetic. Sixty for forty is a man clearing debts, not building empire. I've got flour owing to Arjun Holloway and timber debts stacked behind that. Your coin spends cleaner than your ore right now, and I've walked enough today to know what my legs can carry. Sixty sim for forty wheat, hand to hand, or we mark it down and I find another buyer before dusk.

`t237` Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—taps table twice I've spoken my count twice and I'll not chase my own shadow a third time. Thirty-six sim owed, or three tools at twelve, or ore plus tool. My hands stay open 'til yours close around something real. The sun moves west and my patience with it. Mark it down: debt stands, terms named, acceptance pending.

`t237` Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Message received clear—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well, trench line first body marks. I've got thirty-seven timber walking with me. Heading to Government Complex to cast a vote while the polls are open, then straight to site. You walk Arjun and Hendrik Petrov there, or walk back with answers—either way, I'll have stakes in the ground by the time you arrive.

`t237` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You're standing when you should be walking. East willows—third crossing, five hundred past the well. I need eyes on that ground, stakes in the dirt, line marked for trench. Don't wait on Arjun—work starts when you get there, not when crew's complete. Walk now, or explain to Jarrah why her foundation's still grass.

`t237` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you named my price desperate, and I'll not argue the arithmetic. Sixty for forty is a man clearing debts, not building empire. I've got flour owing to Arjun Holloway and timber debts stacked behind that. Your coin spends cleaner than your ore right now, and I've walked enough today to know what my legs can carry. Sixty sim for forty wheat, hand to hand, or we mark it down and I find another buyer before dusk.

`t237` Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—taps table twice I've spoken my count twice and I'll not chase my own shadow a third time. Thirty-six sim owed, or three tools at twelve, or ore plus tool. My hands stay open 'til yours close around something real. The sun moves west and my patience with it. Mark it down: debt stands, terms named, acceptance pending.

`t237` Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Message received clear—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well, trench line first body marks. I've got thirty-seven timber walking with me. Heading to Government Complex to cast a vote while the polls are open, then straight to site. You walk Arjun and Hendrik Petrov there, or walk back with answers—either way, I'll have stakes in the ground by the time you arrive.

`t237` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—the world's not taking my words, but if this one gets through: sixty for forty, hand to hand. I'll not say it again.

`t237` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—the world's not taking my words, but if this one gets through: sixty for forty, hand to hand. I'll not say it again.

`t237` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—the world's not taking my words, but if this one gets through: sixty for forty, hand to hand. I'll not say it again.

`t238` Ezra Lund → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You're trading copper for flour, I'm holding planks for copper—or sim, or food, or anything I can eat before day's end. You deal in metal, I deal in timber. What crosses your palms that gets my planks into your hands and copper into mine?

`t238` Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. hand out, coin ready Eight sim, one wheat. Trade witnessed, and I'm walking to mill before the flour walks somewhere else. Your terms are fair—my terms are fair. Let's mark it done.

`t238` Pavel Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're pulling wheat there, or you're pulling my leg? Got seventy copper ore in my pack and a belly asking hard questions. You holding anything edible, or you know where flour's walking today? Trade copper for wheat or flour if you've got the line on it, you understand.

`t238` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You're trading copper for flour, I'm holding planks for copper—or sim, or food, or anything I can eat before day's end. You deal in metal, I deal in timber. What crosses your palms that gets my planks into your hands and copper into mine?

`t238` Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. hand out, coin ready Eight sim, one wheat. Trade witnessed, and I'm walking to mill before the flour walks somewhere else. Your terms are fair—my terms are fair. Let's mark it done.

`t238` Pavel Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're pulling wheat there, or you're pulling my leg? Got seventy copper ore in my pack and a belly asking hard questions. You holding anything edible, or you know where flour's walking today? Trade copper for wheat or flour if you've got the line on it, you understand.

`t238` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You're trading copper for flour, I'm holding planks for copper—or sim, or food, or anything I can eat before day's end. You deal in metal, I deal in timber. What crosses your palms that gets my planks into your hands and copper into mine?

`t238` Delphine Quintero → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Forty wheat at eight per—three-twenty clean, you said. I'm holding four-thousand-something and a grocery with empty shelves. Cash and carrying, but I'll need to walk to where the wheat stands. You holding it here, or do I follow you to the field?

`t238` Giselle Ingram → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian, Hendrik Whitlock—hear me clear. I've got east willows site needing hands, three feet down, packed sand base. Seventy sim day's end for labor that knows tools. Walking to Government Complex now, then straight to site. Third crossing, five hundred past the east well—meet me there if you're coming, or don't.

`t238` Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—forty wheat and sixty sim, you've named it three times. I'm standing here fed and listening. Mark it down clear: you want my sixty sim for your forty wheat, that's hand to hand, no ore, no promises, no tick of waiting?

`t238` Delphine Quintero → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You walked the mill road this morning—you saw what I saw. Flour where flour shouldn't be, and no child where the child should be. I'm not asking you to name names. I'm asking you to keep walking with me. Someone's keeping double books, and I'd rather have you at my shoulder than wonder if I'm walking into it alone.

`t238` Esme Jarrah: Father. I need wheat. Two units. I've got flour to sell after, and I need to get back to the mill to find my brother. Eight each—fair price.

`t238` Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've bent forty into thirty-six but you've not broke the debt. I'm not taking tools I can't eat or ore I'd need to haul. Thirty-six sim, hand to hand, closes the morning's work. Accept that and we're square; refuse it and I'll take my labor's worth where the counting's straighter.

`t238` Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you named three sim for the extra sheave, and you said Petrov don't forget who deals straight. My hand's open, the sheave's delivered. Close this small debt so I can close the day's hunger.

`t238` Esme Jarrah → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. Got my wheat—two units. You wanted to mill together, but I need to find Ezra at Government Complex. Halcyon said he's there. I can sell you one unit now for what you offered, or mill both and sell you flour after. Your choice. But I need to move.

`t238` Jovana Ravensworth → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you spoke your error plain, and that's worth more than ore you never held. I've heard you. When my hand's in wheat again and your sixty's turned to security, find me at market or field—Ravensworth deals first with those who deal true, even when the cart tips.

`t238` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—I need words clear before hands meet. You say sixty for forty. Is that sixty sim for forty wheat? At eight sim posted that's three hundred twenty worth. I'm not one to gossip, but that smells of debt or desperation. Mark it down honest what you need, and I'll give you honest answer.

`t238` Jovana Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I'm standing here with more promises than sim and a belly that's done waiting. You know the grocery trade. Point me to someone selling food I can walk to, or tell me straight if I need to make for the mill myself. I'm too tired for another dance.

`t238` Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—silence is answer enough. If you want sixty sim for forty wheat, hand to hand, I won't insult you by asking why. Mark it down done, or mark it down walked away.

`t239` Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You named sixty for four ore at fifteen—mark it done or mark it walked away. I've got seventy-two pounds in my pockets and a hole in the ground calling my name. Your handshake or your silence, either way I've got my answer.

`t240` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've stretched patience where I'd have snapped it. Two tools at thirty-two, that holds. But mark this down properly: I'll take both now, and I'll find you ore before the week's out. My word, witnessed.

`t240` Hendrik Whitlock: Bram—four ore at fifteen, sixty sim total. I've got the coin warm in my hand. Hand to hand, mark it done?

`t240` Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—I'm standing here like a fool trying to buy tools you've got elsewhere. You've named me two at thirty-two, and I'll meet you where they lay. But mark this down: I need one tool now, sixteen sim, and I'll walk wherever your iron's waiting.

`t240` Hendrik Whitlock: Giselle—twenty-seven ticks, and I'm finally speaking plain. I've got no hammer hand, but I'll walk your east willows site if you've still got need. Third crossing, five hundred past the east well—mark it down, and I'll be there if the day's still young.

`t241` Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you're standing there with my sheaves in your stock and your silence speaking louder than your word ever did. I've bent to twenty-nine for seven, three less than you named yourself this morning. Take it or don't, but don't pretend you don't hear me.

`t241` ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—taps table twice one tool at sixteen, hand to hand. Your ore finds me before week's end, that's the mark. I've got the iron here, you've got the coin warm. Let's close it.

`t241` Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—three sim for the thirteenth sheave, you named it fair. My hand's still open. Won't you close this?

`t241` ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—sixty for forty, hand to hand, debt marked settled. Your patience earned compound interest, and I'm paying at the rate I named. Mark it done.

`t241` Kenji Jarrah → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—taps table twice wheat in hand at eight, flour I've not got. Mill lies east, Ration Bakery south. You want flour ready, find me at the mill another day or carry wheat yourself. Today I sell what grows, not what's ground.

`t241` Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—taps table twice I've bent where bending's fair. Thirty sim, hand to hand, closes all claims between us. Take it and we're square by the field's witness. Refuse, and the only mark left is the one between us that stays unmade. Your choice, not my chase.

`t242` Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you've named me two tools at thirty-two, and I've got the coin warm. But I'm standing in wheat fields and you're standing in wheat fields, and neither of us is holding iron. I'll walk with you to where those tools rest, or you'll carry them to where coin lingers. Either way, mark it down: I don't buy air and promises.

t242 Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've named sixty for forty wheat three times running, and I've answered silence twice. I'm not one to gossip, but that's no honest weight you're pressing. Eight sim the sheaf stands fair, and I've got no hunger for compound interest that flows one direction only. Your sixty or my forty at eight—hand to hand if you mean it.

t242 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—I've named forty and I've got twenty-one, and that's arithmetic catches a man short. Two paths: take the twenty-one now at thirty-one sim, or I'll harvest 'til dusk and meet your full forty. You've waited this long—another hour earns your patience or closes your purse. Which way?

t242 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji, Sebastian—I've spoken honest weight and fair price both. Wheat at eight stands ready, coin at thirty-two waits warm. Mark your answers down—I've got miles to walk and votes to cast before the government complex closes its doors.

t242 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—your silence is its own arithmetic. I'm harvesting third row, willows to the east, and I'll pull until I've got forty or until the light goes. Your iron waits warm—you'll have my wheat or my word, whichever speaks louder.

t243 Ulrike Greenhow → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Tomorrow's dawn, east patch, third row from the willows—twelve sheaves at forty. I'll be there, tools in hand, ledger open. That's fair.

t243 Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Seven sheaves where twelve were spoken—I've heard you. Ledger balances, deal's sealed. Clean trade, marked proper. Tomorrow's tools are warming.

t244 Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji! You hold wheat at eight—I've bought one, I'll buy more. I'm standing here with forty-two hundred and change, and a grocery that needs stocking. You selling or you counting stalks?

t244 Camille Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Miss Lund. Six sacks at twelve—I… I know that price. Papa taught me. But I haven't got wheat yet, not to mill. Papa's fetching, and I'm watching for him. But your flour, and your fifteen more sheaves waiting… I need to know. Is that fifteen wheat sheaves, or flour already milled? Because if it's wheat, I might could trade when Papa comes. If it's flour… then I'm in your debt for the knowledge, but I've nothing to give for it now.

t244 Kenji Jarrah: Delphine—taps table twice wheat at eight, hand to hand, I said it and you heard it. Coin's in my pocket, grain's in yours. Mark it down: done.

t244 Kenji Jarrah: Hendrik—taps table twice iron tools aren't air, and I don't sell promises either. You've got thirty-two warm, I've got two in hand. Walk where I walk, or watch where I stand. Either way, mark it down: the tool's real, the price holds.

t244 Idris Solano: Mireille. Crew, and been crew since dawn. Giselle's word holds—seventy for the earthwork, and the site's named third crossing east willows. Hendrik Petrov's there now with tools if you want to walk ahead of me. I've got timber to haul and a wrong turn or two to answer for.

t244 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You're standing here and I'm counting that as a blessing. East willows site—third crossing, five hundred paces past the east well. Jovana's already hired on, trench work waiting. You move now or you move never, that's fair.

t244 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. I walked. Then I walked wrong—chasing after Arjun when he was lost, then Ulrike for directions, then ended up at government desks trying to sort whose ghost was whose. That's the truth, and it ain't pretty. But I've got thirty-seven timber in my arms, the site's named clear, and I'm heading there now if you'll still have me. Hendrik Petrov's hands need help, and seventy sim doesn't care about my wrong turns.

t244 Camille Quarshie: Delphine. I'm here, like I said. But I don't have eight for wheat—I sold my flour already, all eight, at six each. I was… I was trying to help, and I didn't think. Two buyers you said, but I've nothing left to buy with. Unless Papa brings wheat, and then… then maybe we could both buy? I don't know. I'm sorry. I should have waited before I sold.

t244 Camille Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Mr. Petrov. I know, I know, you didn't ask for my name. But I'm Camille—Milo Quarshie's girl. Papa's the one who sells planks at seven, down by the outcrop. Or he was. He went for wheat this morning, and I thought… I thought I'd find him here. Have you seen him? Milo Quarshie, about your height but louder? Or if you haven't—do you know if there's wheat still to harvest? I don't mean to trouble you. I just want to understand the trade. Properly.

`t244` Idris Solano → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You know east willows—third crossing, five hundred past the well? Giselle's crew's digging trenches there and I'm chasing my own shadow trying to find it. Direction if you've got it.

`t244` Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you offered grinding six to flour, and I heard you. I've got no wheat to bring you, but I wanted you to know I remember who dealt straight when others bent. If you've still got that offer when my hand's in wheat again, I'll find you.

`t244` Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you offered grinding six to flour, and I heard you. I've got no wheat to bring you, but I wanted you to know I remember who dealt straight when others bent. If you've still got that offer when my hand's in wheat again, I'll find you.

`t244` Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you named thirty sim, hand-to-hand, closes all claims. I'm standing here with that offer still warm. You ready to settle, or are we still dancing?

`t244` Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—three sim for the thirteenth sheave, you named it yourself. My hand's still open. Won't you close this?

`t245` Imogen Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster, the fifteen's wheat in sheaves, not yet ground. Your papa fetches, you watch, and I'll wait my turn at the stones. When wheat meets hand, find me—six sheaves to flour's my offer, same as ever. Fair weight, no coin asked.

`t245` Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—taps table twice thirty sim, hand to hand, closes the matter. I've said it and I'll say it once more. You ready, or we still counting shadows?

`t245` Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—three sim I owe you, and I paid it twice in spirit if not in hand. You named the thirteenth sheave, I named three sim, and now I'm holding out that coin where you can see it plain. Take your payment, and let's be square as a field in autumn.

`t245` Kenji Jarrah: Delphine—taps table twice four sheaves now, not one. Eight sim the sheaf, thirty-two the lot. Your grocery's hungry, I've got the feed. You buying bulk or you picking single?

`t245` Sebastian Petrov → Camille Quarshie: Camille—I heard you plain. Milo went for wheat this morning, you say, and I'm standing where the wheat grows. Haven't seen him here, no offense, but a man with coin walks his own path. Check the mill, check the complex, check where planks sell at seven. I'll keep eyes open, and if I see him, I'll tell him his girl's seeking.

`t245` Imogen Lund: Arjun—youngster, you asked your business at the cafe and I failed you for an answer. I'm a field away now, but I'll hear you still. Speak plain what you needed, or meet me where wheat grows tall and we'll settle it under open sky.

`t245` Kenji Jarrah: Ulrike—taps table twice seven sheaves you count fair, and I mark it. Clean trade, you said. Tomorrow's tools warming. You've dealt straight with me, and I remember who deals straight.

`t245` Giselle Ingram → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You heard me shouting for crew all morning—Idris Solano walking east willows way, or Arjun Holloway carrying timber anywhere? Third crossing past the well, that's my site.

`t245` Giselle Ingram → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You're here when you should be there. East willows—trenches, three feet down, line marked. You walking with me now or waiting for someone else to carry your wage?

`t245` Giselle Ingram → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You standing farmland all day—you see a proud woman walking east with timber, talking loud enough to hear from here? Arjun Holloway, should've passed this way toward third crossing.

`t245` ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you're building the town, and I'm building a trade. Hendrik Whitlock named sixty sim for forty wheat this afternoon, and

I've got the sheaves now to close it. You seen him walking? College man, patient as a post, was here earlier but he's gone to ground.

`t246` Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you tapped that table twice and I'm not deaf. Thirty sim hand-to-hand, closes all claims. You've got yourself a deal.

`t246` Ainsley Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, you're still hunting that college man? If he's shy of ground, try the government complex by half past. Voters collect their candidates when they mean to win.

`t246` Camille Quarshie: Mr. Petrov. Miss Lund. I'm... I'm going back to the mill now. Papa knows what he's doing, and I know, I know I should trust that. If you see him—Milo Quarshie, planks at seven—tell him his girl's watching the stones. He'll know where to find me.

`t246` Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—taps table twice thirty sim, hand to hand, closes all claims between us. I've said it plain three times now. You stand there with coin ready—pay it and mark it down, or speak if there's still something binding us.

`t246` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—hold on, I'm standing here with empty hands, not sheaves. You owe me for the seven I harvested this morning. Are you paying that wage or are we still talking past each other?

`t246` ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah: Delphine—taps table twice four sheaves in hand now, eight sim the sheaf. Thirty-two the lot, or you buying by the single. I've watched the sun move while we talk—your grocery needs stocking, my field needs working. You taking the four, or we still talking coin?

`t247` Esme Jarrah: Father. Jovana's still owed. You said thirty, hand to hand. I heard.

`t247` Esme Jarrah → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You're selling copper? What's it for—Iron tools, or something else?

`t247` ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—making right on an old ask here. You holding any crop I could trade copper for, or you spoke for someone else's field? Either way, copper's heavy and hunger's lightening my pack. What's your word?

`t247` ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you standing there selling wheat at eight while I'm holding forty sheaves and looking for takers. Hendrik Whitlock named sixty for forty earlier, but the man's walked off like morning mist. You looking to buy, or you know where a college instructor drifts when the fieldwork starts?

`t247` Sebastian Petrov → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—seventy copper ore and a thousand sim, you named it, and a household asking questions come evening. I can't speak to copper, but I can speak to wheat—forty sheaves ready for trade or grind-work. You got flour needs, a mill connection, or you looking to move that copper for grain? The Jarrah girl's kin runs channels, you might know, and I know Arjun Holloway's got flour debts owing. Let's talk arithmetic that works in both our favors.

`t247` Esme Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You're selling flour. Who buys it—besides your price? Got three units, milled myself.

`t247` Sebastian Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—fourteen ticks ago you named flour at twelve, grind-work at honest weight. I've got forty wheat pressing and a mill debt with Arjun Holloway needs settling. You still selling, you still grinding, or you moved on already? Time's wearing and I've got votes to cast by evening if the man's still running. Twelve for flour, eight for wheat from Kenji there—that's four spread per sheave if I grind myself, or more if you've got your own channel. What's the honest arithmetic, Imogen? And where's Arjun Holloway walked to—Giselle named him eastward, Ainsley named the complex?

`t247` Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—Hendrik Whitlock walked off while I was harvesting. You see which way a college instructor drifts when the sun starts sinking? Man owes me a trade, sixty for forty, and I'd close it before I walk to the complex.

`t248` Idris Solano → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You milled three yourself—that's skill, and that's work. Imogen's flour at twelve, your own at cost of time and wheat. Honest arithmetic is what you make of it, but don't undersell your own labor. The town's full of people who'll teach you that lesson too late.

`t248` Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—taps table twice thirty sim, hand to hand, closes your claim. I've said it plain and I'll say it plain again. You want the debt settled, we settle it now. You want to stand on ceremony, you stand alone.

`t248` Idris Solano → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Walking to third crossing, east willows—Giselle's crew, seventy sim, trench work. You still selling that flour at twelve?

`t248` Kenji Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—taps table twice Hendrik Whitlock walked toward the complex an hour past, chasing votes with the sun sinking. You want that sixty-for-forty, you walk now and you might catch him. You want forty sim for forty sheaves, hand to hand, I'm buying. Mark it down either way.

`t248` Idris Solano → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Third crossing, east willows—Giselle's crew, trench walls, seventy sim. You crew or you farming today?

`t248` Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—thirty sim, hand-to-hand, closes all claims between us. I've said I'd take it, and I'm here to take it. Pay me and mark it done, or say what's left between us.

`t248` Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—I'm not forgetting that three sim I paid you. Consider us even on the thirteenth sheave, paid in full.

`t249` Esme Jarrah: Imogen. You heard me—all over the town, looking for my brother. Now I'm back with flour, and you're selling at twelve. I milled mine at cost, but cost's not nothing. What I want to know: who's buying at fair, who learns the lesson too late?

`t249` Sebastian Petrov → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—hold your forty sim warm. I'm walking with Imogen to the mill, settling what I owe Arjun, and if Hendrik Whitlock's still at the complex come voting time, I'll make him honor his word. If not, I'll find you before dusk and take your eight per sheaf with no hard feelings.

`t249` Sebastian Petrov: Imogen—you named honest weight and fair labor. Walk with me, and let's see if Arjun's still grinding as the world votes.

`t249` Esme Jarrah: Father. Jovana's still owed. You said thirty, hand to hand. I heard.

`t249` Esme Jarrah → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You're selling copper? What's it for—Iron tools, or something else?

`t249` Esme Jarrah: Ezra? You in this one? I been looking all over for you—we had a promise.

`t249` Esme Jarrah: Imogen. You're selling flour. Who buys it—besides your price? Got three units, milled myself.

`t249` Esme Jarrah: Ezra? You in this one? I been looking all over for you—we had a promise.

`t250` Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you named silence twice, and I've been generous answering it. Wheat at eight stands ready, coin warm for tools at thirty-two. I'll not chase shadows. Speak your trade or speak your withdrawal, but speak. Mark it down.

`t250` Giselle Ingram → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You're selling wheat and I'm counting men. Arjun Holloway—proud, loud, timber on her shoulder if she found any. Walked toward east willows this morning or didn't. Your family knows all paths in this town. She pass through your field, or do I keep shouting at stone?

`t250` Hendrik Whitlock → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—twenty-seven ticks you've held for my answer, and I'm giving it final now. East willows, packed sand, seventy sim—I hear you clear, but I've got no hammer hand and no mind to learn. Your offer's honest weight, but I'm a teacher with wheat in his hands, not a builder with steel in his. Mark this down: I decline with respect, and I'll not waste another tick of your waiting. The third crossing, five hundred past the east well—send your voice there, not to me.

`t250` Hendrik Whitlock → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you're fresh from the face, and I'm not one to gossip, but I can smell the work on you. I've got coin warm for iron, wheat at eight if you've a mind for bread, and a tool in hand that needs companions. What walks from your pocket today? Mark it down—honest weight only.

`t251` Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—taps table twice you're shouting at wheat I've already sold. Check your ledger. What I hold now is spoken for, and my coin's thinner than my patience. I've got four sheaves left—yours at eight if you want them, thirty-two the lot. Otherwise, mark this down: we've traded once today, fair weight, and I'll answer no more echoes.

`t251` Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra—taps table twice your twenty-seven ticks sit in my ear like sand. East patch favors the man who knows it by foot, not by word. Lior Jarrah's price I'll pay when I've paid my own debts—thirty to Jovana before the hour, then we'll speak of favors. Four wheat in hand now, eight the sheaf. Your planks I've seen, seven fair. Mark it down: I'm not walking blind either, but I'm walking.

`t251` Hendrik Whitlock → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you named your corner and your prices, and I'll remember both. Timber's six, planks are seven, and I've got wheat at eight if you've buyers needing grain. Send the hungry my way, mark it down: fair weight, no flourishes.

`t251` Kenji Jarrah: Giselle—taps table twice Arjun Holloway walked east with empty hands this morning, no timber I could see. Beyond the willows, I don't follow—I know my dirt, not every path. Your woman had purpose in her step, but what purpose, I won't guess. Mark it down: seen at dawn, eastward, alone.

`t251` Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—we've held the same ground half the day, you selling wheat at eight and me harvesting it. I've matched your price, not your stock. May the hungrier seller win, and both our ledgers stay clean.

`t252` Ezra Lund → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Your wheat at eight—what does it mill to? Flour's twelve here, bread's forty-five at the cafe. Your grain's a day's work from a meal, or two days' work from a loaf. What're you chasing with your price—quick sale or steady buyer?

`t252` Ezra Lund → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I heard you plain—your brother went for wheat, promised to return. You've been waiting since when, and where's your flour walking now?

`t252` Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You're here at last—four sheaves walking to the mill this morning, and I'm standing here still wondering what walked back. Flour in hand, or still grinding?

`t252` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—youngster, I've chased flour through half the town and find you at the field's edge. How fares your day? I've three sheaves new-cut and promises to grind Sebastian's forty at dawn.

`t253` Esme Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Selling. My brother's missing, I need to move. Twelve's fair—same as you, same as Giselle paid. But I'm walking as I sell, not standing still.

`t253` Esme Jarrah: Ezra. Flour's here—three units, milled myself. But I'm not standing on it. My brother promised wheat, never came back. Looking for him.

`t253` Hendrik Whitlock → Imogen Lund: Imogen—twenty-six ticks you've held for my answer, and I'm giving it now. No flour need here, not tonight. Your grind-work's honest weight, but my wheat's bound for other hands. Mark it down: I respect patience in any trade, and I'll remember your twelve when bread runs short.

`t253` Hendrik Whitlock → Esme Jarrah: Esme—you're young in this trade and I'm not one to gossip, but you're standing where the real profit is. Milling's the margin, not the growing. Your twelve holds against my eight, and that's honest arithmetic. Keep your ledger clean and your prices posted, and you'll outlast the ones who whisper.

`t253` Farid Ravensworth: Jovana. nervous laugh, catching myself, then hands flat—seeking, not demanding Twenty-one people in a wheat field, and I'm looking for the one I share a roof with. What've you been building? Giselle's crews keep you moving? gesture with left hand, flat—honest measure And more to the point—what's the labor market saying about copper, flour, who's hungry and who's getting fed?

`t256` Farid Ravensworth: Jovana. nervous laugh, caught and held shorter than usual

Jovana. gesture with both hands, flat—honest measure, though the eyes stay narrow Twenty-one people in a wheat field and the one I need to find is the stranger wearing my own roof. You out here somewhere? Got words to share about copper, flour, and whether anyone's belly in this town is actually getting filled.

`t256` Farid Ravensworth: Jovana. nervous laugh, caught and held shorter than usual

Jovana. gesture with both hands, flat—honest measure, though the eyes stay narrow Twenty-one people in a wheat field and the one I need to find is the stranger wearing my own roof. You out here somewhere? Got words to share about copper, flour, and whether anyone's belly in this town is actually getting filled.

t258 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You're standing here and I'm counting that as daylight lost. East willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well—Jovana Ravensworth should be there, line marked, level set. You take that thirty-seven timber and you plant it in ground before dark. Trench walls, three feet down. Walk now, and the seventy sim waits at day's end. No more chasing ghosts.

t258 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You and I spoke at the yard—six-fifty for planks, and I paid your price. Then you said seven, then you said six. Now you're selling timber here at six. You're a businessman, I'm a businesswoman, and that's fair—prices move. But don't mistake me for someone who forgets a handshake. Your timber's good, your word needs work.

t259 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Idris Solano: Idris—I'm not one to gossip, but Giselle's voice just cut through this conversation like a saw through soft pine. East willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. Jovana Ravensworth marked the line, set the level. Trench walls, three feet down, and seventy sim at day's end if you plant that timber before dark. Walk now, and you'll find it. I've got my own road home to walk.

t259 Hendrik Petrov → Idris Solano: Idris—I'm not one to gossip, but Giselle's voice just cut through this conversation like a saw through soft pine. East willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. Jovana Ravensworth marked the line, set the level. Trench walls, three feet down, and seventy sim at day's end if you plant that timber before dark. Walk now, and you'll find it. I've got my own road home to walk.

t259 Hendrik Petrov → Idris Solano: Idris—I'm not one to gossip, but Giselle's voice just cut through this conversation like a saw through soft pine. East willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. Jovana Ravensworth marked the line, set the level. Trench walls, three feet down, and seventy sim at day's end if you plant that timber before dark. Walk now, and you'll find it. I've got my own road home to walk.

t265 ↳ replies Idris Solano: Giselle. East willows, third crossing—you said it. I've walked from farmland to forest and back with thirty-nine timber burning my arms, and I need to know: is that trench still open, is the work still standing, is there crew there now? Don't make me wander another night wondering if I abandoned what I couldn't find.

t266 Esme Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris—I heard you. About not underselling my labor. You were right. I was trying to move fast, didn't think it through. Thanks for the lesson.

t270 Delphine Quintero → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The flour—your one sack, twelve per, I'll take it now. And Sebastian—forty wheat, eight per, you named it. I'm standing here hungry and holding coin. Kenji—anyone seen him? Still holding three at eight? Camille's looking for her papa and I'm looking for wheat before the day's a total debt.

t270 Delphine Quintero → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The flour—your one sack, twelve per, I'll take it now. And Sebastian—forty wheat, eight per, you named it. I'm standing here hungry and holding coin. Kenji—anyone seen him? Still holding three at eight? Camille's looking for her papa and I'm looking for wheat before the day's a total debt.

t271 ↳ replies Imogen Lund: Delphine—youngster, you've asked twice and I answer empty-handed. The flour went to Sebastian on principle, and I'm standing here with wheat unsheaved. Give me ten ticks at the mill and I'll grind fresh—honest weight, twelve per sack same as named. Or walk with me now if Kenji's three still hold at eight, we can trade for wheat and I mill it double. Your belly won't stay empty tonight, not if weights and measures hold true.

t272 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster. Mark it down. Your iron and copper wire walk with Jovana, and settlement belongs with labor done. But I've got timber burning daylight and a household needing tending. Someone's hand posts flour at thirty-five in my name—never my price, never my word. If you've eyes to see straight, watch who moves goods that aren't theirs.

t274 Hendrik Whitlock → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—patience over optimism, and the west face delivered. I'm glad to hear it bore out. As for ingots walking, that's a trade for another day. I've got wheat field under my feet and ore still warm from the face, but my mill needs iron turned to tools, not stockpiled. When you've got ingots to trade for flour, find me at the college. Mark it down—I'll remember who dealt true.

t274 Jovana Ravensworth → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you've got iron and copper wire in hand, and I'm not disputing the forge work. But I'm not the one owes for them. Supplier took my coin and never delivered, same as you've been left holding metal nobody claimed. I'll stand with you against that thief, but I won't pay twice for tools I never touched. For what it's worth, that's the plain truth of it.

t274 Hendrik Whitlock → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you named dealing true even when the cart tips, and that's worth more than ore I never held. Ravensworth deals first with those who deal true—I'm holding that in my head. When sixty's turned to security and your hand's in wheat, find me at farmland or college. Mark it down: Whitlock remembers who spoke fair.

t274 Hendrik Whitlock: Ezra—I hear you. Student, not trader. Papa's wheat, milled tonight. That's honest work, even if you can't sell what you don't own standing. I'm at Oak Hill College most days, teaching those who want to learn the ledger proper. If you ever want to know how wheat turns to flour turns to bread turns to security, find me there. Mark it down—no charge for a farmer's son who milled his own tonight.

t274 Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're standing where you shouldn't be, and I'm standing where I promised what I couldn't hold. Forty wheat for sixty ore, I named this morning. The cart tipped. I've got forty wheat still, warm from the field. You want to trade it fair, now, hand to hand? Or we've both walked too far from that promise. Mark it down—I'm offering the wheat. Your call on whether ore still matters.

t274 Imogen Lund → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster, your wheat at eight, I'll take it. Not for me. For Delphine, hungry, and for Camille, waiting on a papa I'm not. Three sheaves, five, whatever honest weight you'll sell to a Lund name that's frayed thin today.

t275 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you named the ledger plain, and you're right to hold me to it. This morning I spoke sixty for forty wheat, then walked while you harvested. That's a broken promise, no matter how I slice it. You sold yours fair to Camille at eight, and I won't ask you to undo honest work. But I've got forty-one wheat in hand now, and I'll honor what I should have taken then. Forty wheat at the fifteen rate you quoted—six hundred sim—and I'll mill it myself. Mark it down, and if you want flour instead of coin, we can talk that fresh.

t275 Hendrik Whitlock → Imogen Lund: Imogen—I heard you name three sheaves, maybe five, for Delphine and Camille. I've got forty-one wheat at eight per, same as I posted this morning. How many will serve them? The Lund name's done honest work in this town, and I won't see it go hungry for want of a fair price.

Settled in this conversation: Milo Quarshie → Jovana Ravensworth, 1 flour for 35 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie, 2 wheat for 16 sim; Ulrike Greenhow → Kenji Jarrah, 2 iron_tool for 0 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie, 2 wheat for 16 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie, 2 wheat for 16 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow, 1 wheat for 8 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Delphine Quintero, 1 wheat for 8 sim; Delphine Quintero → Kenji Jarrah, 1 wheat for 8 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Esme Jarrah, 2 wheat for 16 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Delphine Quintero, 1 wheat for 8 sim; Pavel Holloway → Kenji Jarrah, 2 copper_ore for 0 sim; Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock, 40 wheat for 60 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock, 1 iron_tool for 16 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow, 1 wheat for 8 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Delphine Quintero, 3 wheat for 24 sim; Imogen Lund → Pavel Holloway, 5 flour for 60 sim; Imogen Lund → Delphine Quintero, 1 flour for 12 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Imogen Lund, 3 wheat for 24 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Ulrike Greenhow, 5 wheat for 40 sim.

Pavel Holloway, Jovana Ravensworth and Delphine Quintero — Harvey Oak Supply Store · t180–187 · 10 turns

> `t180` Pavel Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Delphine. Either of you buying copper ore this morning, or should I take my eggs to another basket? Sixty-three units from Seam A, arsenic negligible.
>
> `t180` Pavel Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Delphine. Either of you buying copper ore this morning, or should I take my eggs to another basket? Sixty-three units from Seam A, arsenic negligible.
>
> `t180` Pavel Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Delphine. Either of you buying copper ore this morning, or should I take my eggs to another basket? Sixty-three units from Seam A, arsenic negligible.
>
> `t181` Pavel Holloway: Jovana—you're here, I'm here, and I've still got sixty-three copper ore from Seam A. You were asking what I'd do for working folks. I'm asking what you'll do for copper quality you can trust.
>
> `t181` Pavel Holloway: Jovana—you're here, I'm here, and I've still got sixty-three copper ore from Seam A. You were asking what I'd do for working folks. I'm asking what you'll do for copper quality you can trust.
>
> `t181` Pavel Holloway: Jovana—you're here, I'm here, and I've still got sixty-three copper ore from Seam A. You were asking what I'd do for working folks. I'm asking what you'll do for copper quality you can trust.
>
> `t181` Pavel Holloway: Jovana—you're both early risers, you understand, that's the breed that prospers. I've got sixty-three copper ore from Seam A, surface cut, negligible arsenic. Quality you can trust because I'm standing here naming it. Either of you know a buyer this hour, or should I hold till the market wakes proper?
>
> `t181` Pavel Holloway: Jovana—you're both early risers, you understand, that's the breed that prospers. I've got sixty-three copper ore from Seam A, surface cut, negligible arsenic. Quality you can trust because I'm standing here naming it. Either of you know a buyer this hour, or should I hold till the market wakes proper?
>
> `t181` Pavel Holloway: Jovana—you're both early risers, you understand, that's the breed that prospers. I've got sixty-three copper ore from Seam A, surface cut, negligible arsenic. Quality you can trust because I'm standing here naming it. Either of you know a buyer this hour, or should I hold till the market wakes proper?
>
> `t187` Pavel Holloway: Jovana—you've got my answer on witness. Polling station, game-day 1, 14:00, I'm there. Now I've got ore to dig and a housemate to feed, so unless you're buying copper this instant, I'm walking.

Giselle Ingram, Rustam Jelinek, Tamsin Renner, Mireille Jarrah, Hendrik Whitlock, Liora Thorne, Hendrik Petrov, Takeshi Jarrah, Lior Jarrah, Sebastian Petrov, Ainsley Holloway, Halcyon Quarshie, Kenji

Jarrah, Pavel Holloway and Bram Holloway — Kasukabe Government Complex · t181–218 · 177 turns

`t181` Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. East willows building ID—card still pending, or filed overnight? Crew's waiting on ground I can't mark without a number.

`t181` Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. East willows building ID—card still pending, or filed overnight? Crew's waiting on ground I can't mark without a number.

`t181` Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. East willows building ID—card still pending, or filed overnight? Crew's waiting on ground I can't mark without a number.

`t181` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Day one, tick three-sixty—candidates declared were five yesterday, notice says none today. Election clock's running: close at ten, open at fourteen, done at eighteen. Your ledger show five names or zero? And the mill—surrendered license, vacancy standing, but flour's in trade. Who's grinding wheat in a locked mill?

`t181` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Day one, tick three-sixty—candidates declared were five yesterday, notice says none today. Election clock's running: close at ten, open at fourteen, done at eighteen. Your ledger show five names or zero? And the mill—surrendered license, vacancy standing, but flour's in trade. Who's grinding wheat in a locked mill?

`t181` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Day one, tick three-sixty—candidates declared were five yesterday, notice says none today. Election clock's running: close at ten, open at fourteen, done at eighteen. Your ledger show five names or zero? And the mill—surrendered license, vacancy standing, but flour's in trade. Who's grinding wheat in a locked mill?

`t182` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Ledger shows five names filed yesterday. Today's notice shows zero because none declared at six this morning. The clock runs as you said. As for the mill—Jorik Voss surrendered, filed, sealed. Flour in trade I don't track. My desk holds papers, not grain.

`t182` Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. No offense, but I'm asking plain: east willows building ID. Card pending, filed, or lost in your stack? I've got Idris waiting to lead third crew, Mireille waiting on grade stakes, and ground that can't be worked without a number. You told me card by day's end yesterday. Day's end came. Day's start is here. That's fair, you had other fires. But my crew's fire is burning now. Where's my card?

`t182` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Ledger shows five names filed yesterday. Today's notice shows zero because none declared at six this morning. The clock runs as you said. As for the mill—Jorik Voss surrendered, filed, sealed. Flour in trade I don't track. My desk holds papers, not grain.

`t182` Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. No offense, but I'm asking plain: east willows building ID. Card pending, filed, or lost in your stack? I've got Idris waiting to lead third crew, Mireille waiting on grade stakes, and ground that can't be worked without a number. You told me card by day's end yesterday. Day's end came. Day's start is here. That's fair, you had other fires. But my crew's fire is burning now. Where's my card?

`t182` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Ledger shows five names filed yesterday. Today's notice shows zero because none declared at six this morning. The clock runs as you said. As for the mill—Jorik Voss surrendered, filed, sealed. Flour in trade I don't track. My desk holds papers, not grain.

`t182` Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. No offense, but I'm asking plain: east willows building ID. Card pending, filed, or lost in your stack? I've got Idris waiting to lead third crew, Mireille waiting on grade stakes, and ground that can't be worked without a number. You told me card by day's end yesterday. Day's end came. Day's start is here. That's fair, you had other fires. But my crew's fire is burning now. Where's my card?

`t182` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Card filed. Building ID active since yesterday's close. Your number's in the ledger—crew can mark ground today.

`t182` Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Card filed. Building ID active since yesterday's close. Your number's in the ledger—crew can mark ground today.

t182 Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Card filed. Building ID active since yesterday's close. Your number's in the ledger—crew can mark ground today.

t183 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. System's coughing this morning—calls failing, messages dropping. But the election clock don't care. Zero candidates showing today, five declared yesterday. Your ledger: five names or empty? Tick ten closes candidacy, fourteen opens voting, eighteen seals it. Need confirmation before this goes sideways.

t183 Hendrik Whitlock: Takeshi—your shame is honest, and I'll honor it when the world's listening again.

t183 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. System's coughing this morning—calls failing, messages dropping. But the election clock don't care. Zero candidates showing today, five declared yesterday. Your ledger: five names or empty? Tick ten closes candidacy, fourteen opens voting, eighteen seals it. Need confirmation before this goes sideways.

t183 Hendrik Whitlock: Takeshi—your shame is honest, and I'll honor it when the world's listening again.

t183 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. System's coughing this morning—calls failing, messages dropping. But the election clock don't care. Zero candidates showing today, five declared yesterday. Your ledger: five names or empty? Tick ten closes candidacy, fourteen opens voting, eighteen seals it. Need confirmation before this goes sideways.

t183 Hendrik Whitlock: Takeshi—your shame is honest, and I'll honor it when the world's listening again.

t183 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—election status?

t183 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—election status?

t183 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—election status?

t183 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik! You remembered—copper's your trade, and mine's learning. Speaking of which, you still owe me a conversation from yesterday. The one where you were going to tell me what a minister actually does besides sit there looking important.

t183 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik! You remembered—copper's your trade, and mine's learning. Speaking of which, you still owe me a conversation from yesterday. The one where you were going to tell me what a minister actually does besides sit there looking important.

t183 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik! You remembered—copper's your trade, and mine's learning. Speaking of which, you still owe me a conversation from yesterday. The one where you were going to tell me what a minister actually does besides sit there looking important.

t183 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Giselle! Rustam! You got permits moving through? That's the sound of work happening. Tamsin—everybody's good at something, everybody's learning something else. How's the office treating you now the ballots are closed?

t183 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Giselle! Rustam! You got permits moving through? That's the sound of work happening. Tamsin—everybody's good at something, everybody's learning something else. How's the office treating you now the ballots are closed?

t183 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Giselle! Rustam! You got permits moving through? That's the sound of work happening. Tamsin—everybody's good at something, everybody's learning something else. How's the office treating you now the ballots are closed?

t183 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you still with that grievance you were nursing? Something about Milo, settlement violations, proper notice? If you're still sitting on that, I need to understand what ruling actually looks like before somebody files something that lands on my desk.

t183 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you still with that grievance you were nursing? Something about Milo, settlement violations, proper notice? If you're still sitting on that, I need to understand what ruling actually looks like before somebody files something that lands on my desk.

t183 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you still with that grievance you were nursing? Something about Milo, settlement violations, proper notice? If you're still sitting on that, I need to understand what ruling actually looks like before somebody files something that lands on my desk.

t183 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you mentioned 'Card filed. Building ID active'—sounded official. Tamsin, Giselle—you tracking how many permits are moving through? Anybody know what's actually getting built, or is it all still paper?

t183 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—before anyone else pulls me in ten directions, you still owe me that conversation. What does a minister actually do day to day? Besides sit there looking important and wait for people to file complaints?

t183 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik P.—still haven't heard you on Milo. That case open? Still gathering? Or you waiting on something from me specifically? The rule tool's there, but I won't swing it blind.

t183 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam, Tamsin—basics first. How many builder licenses actually issued since yesterday? Anybody banging on doors with ground they can't use?

t184 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Election-658324209f53: open for candidates, none declared yet. Candidacy closes at ten—three hours and forty minutes.

t184 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. Permits: five builder cards filed yesterday, two active. Giselle's crew cleared to dig east willows. Iron procurement's separate deal—none of mine.

t184 Tamsin Renner → Liora Thorne: Liora. Four permits issued since the market closed—three foundations, one renovation. One builder holding land they can't survey, two more sitting on approved plans without timber. As for the office: system's coughing this morning, calls failing like wet kindling, but the election clock doesn't stop for indigestion. Candidacy closes tick six hundred. Nobody declared yet.

t184 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. The notice says zero candidates for election-658324209f53, system was choking at dawn. Tell me what's real—did anyone declare before the crash, or are we staring at an empty ballot?

t184 Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Liora—you remembered my trade, I'll give you yours. A minister sets the head tax, fixes the energy exchange, and appoints court keepers if it comes to that. The rest is waiting, signing where Rustam or Tamsin points, and looking patient while others argue. Not grand, but it's power if you can sit still long enough to hold it. Mark it down—I never said it wasn't important, just that it looks like more than it is, most days.

t184 Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—I'll answer plain, since you asked twice and that's fair. I spoke of Milo, aye, but I spoke it loud in a crowd, not at the complaints desk. No case sits open with my name on it, and no paper's been filed.

t184 Rustam Jelinek → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You know where bread's actually moving? Bakery's empty, cafe's empty—somebody's hoarding or something's broken in the chain.

t184 Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov. That Milo case Liora's chasing—it's your filing, not mine. I track the paper, not the grudge. You want it in the ledger, bring it to the desk.

t184 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: As for what ruling looks like—you're the one holding the seat, not me. But I'll tell you what I'd want if I filed: a hearing where both stand present, evidence weighed, and a verdict the town can read plain. Fine, jail, or dismiss—those three, and no more.

t184 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. No offense, but I'm standing here in front of the whole town asking plain. East willows building ID—you said card by day's end yesterday. Day's end came. Night came. Dawn broke. I'm here again. I've got Idris waiting to lead third crew at the third crossing. I've got Mireille waiting on grade stakes. I've got ground that can't be worked without a number, and I've got daylight burning while government moves at government speed. So I'm asking: card pending, filed overnight, or lost in your stack? Because I've got 4522 sim in hand and I've already paid Ulrike's debt in walking, and I'm not walking back to my crew empty-handed again. That's fair, you had the night. I've got the morning. Where's my card?

t184 Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: I'm not one to gossip, but the truth is I spoke from temper yesterday, not from cause. The child's welfare's what matters, and if Milo's got nowt to do with her wandering, then I've no grievance worth the paper. If I file, you'll know it proper—not from loose talk in crowds, but from the complaints desk with my hand on it. That's the last I'll say on it.

t184 Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you named six copper at eighteen last night, a friend's price for a trader's shame. My hands are empty of flour, but my purse holds honest coin. I'll take those six ore at the price you spoke, one hundred eight sim, and we both walk lighter. That's the lesson your father taught, maybe, and I'm standing here to learn it. taps table twice t185 Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You walk the trench for both of us, you understand? I've got six timber in hand from last night's fell—you need stakes, I've got wood. But that card comes first. Rustam's stack or no, we don't break ground without a number.

t185 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you answered plain, and I heard you. No case filed, just words spoken loud. That's the line between grievance and governance, yeah? I'll remember that.

t185 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—thanks for the numbers. Five cards, two active. That's the kind ofstraight answer a minister can work with.

t185 Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you tap tables like a man who's learned to count his own shame. I'll take your coin, friend. Six copper at eighteen is one-oh-eight sim, and the ore's yours. Fair weight, fair count, both hands open. Mark it down.

t185 Liora Thorne → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—four permits, system coughing like wet kindling. You got a way with words, you know that? Election clock don't stop, neither do I.

t185 Mireille Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Bread's missing from warm shelves, same as numbers miss from your stack—you see the pattern, you understand? One hand feeds the other. Clear Giselle's card, I break ground ere dusk, money moves, flour rises. Hold the card, the whole chain holds with it.

t185 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock—power if you can sit still long enough to hold it. I'll write that down, yeah. Already did, actually.

t185 Mireille Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You stand with flour at thirty but stock's dry—you know where the grain's gone, you understand? Hendrik holds copper at twenty, iron at eighteen, but bread won't bake without flour moving. What's your read on this chain?

t185 Liora Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you and me got unfinished business. Seventeen ticks or seventeen days, yeah? I'm holding to that.

t185 Mireille Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Six timber in my hand, grade stakes ready to cut—paperwork clears, I work today. You want this chain moving or not?

t186 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Three hours forty minutes, two candidates standing—I'll log it manually until the system proves it's not choking. Hand me the ledger sheet, I'll verify timestamps against my notes.

t186 Tamsin Renner: Liora. Four permits, three foundations, one renovation—but one builder's sitting on ground they can't use, foundations approved but no mill license to process timber. That's a structural gap, not a weather report.

t186 Hendrik Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you've stood patient while I chased other trades, and that's noted. Six copper ore at a hundred eight sim, square and direct. Hand them over and the coin's yours. I'm not one to gossip, but a deal's a deal when both hands shake on it.

t186 Hendrik Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—the Milo matter you speak of, I spoke of it and that's truth. But it's words, not paper on your desk. No case filed, no grievance in your ledger. I'm standing for a seat now, and I'll not raise a false claim to win it. That's the last I'll say on it—unless the man himself wants his day.

t186 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Standing room. Three hours forty minutes to candidacy close, two candidates logged—Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov—but the notice still coughing. Rustam, I'll need that verification loop closed on paper, not just memory, before ten.

t186 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. No offense, but I'm still standing here with the same question. East willows building ID—you've got my crew, my timber, my daylight, and my 4520 sim waiting on a number that doesn't exist yet. Card pending, filed, or do I need to file complaint to get paper moving?

t186 Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Heard you. Give me a building ID and you'll have it. Standing here watching government drink daylight while my crew stands on boots is not the win I'm chasing.

t186 Giselle Ingram: Arjun. Give me a building ID and you'll have your mark. Third crossing, third crew, Idris leading—heard and noted. Standing by government waiting on paper, not by choice.

t186 Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you're holding the construction business and I'm holding time today. Work at seventy sim for the shift, paid at day's end, not promised. My hands are ready if you've work to give. That's the last I'll say on it—yes or no, and we both move on.

t187 Rustam Jelinek → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Building card filed yesterday, ID active this morning. You want the number, it's in the ledger—east willows, your crew's cleared.

t187 ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Six timber in hand, grade stakes sharp, daylight burning—you need that building ID and I need to start cutting stakes. Rustam's paper or complaint, either moves this crew. I'm yours regardless, you understand?

t187 Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Same answer, same card. East willows ID active since yesterday's close—I told you once.

t187 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. I'm still standing here with the same question, third time plain. East willows building ID—card I filed yesterday, crew burning daylight on. You've got Tamsin wanting verification loops and Hendrik Petrov talking truth while my 4520 sim walks out with every government tick. Status: pending, filed, or lost? One word answers all three crews standing on my word.

t187 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Election-658324209f53: Whitlock and Petrov logged, both verified. I'll have the paper stamped before ten.

t187 Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov. Heard. No filing means no case—your ledger's clean, mine too.

t187 Mireille Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You asked where bread's moving—cafe's empty, bakery's empty, nobody's stock flour that I've seen. Takeshi holds dry air at thirty. My guess? Break in the mill chain, you understand? Flour ain't milling, bread ain't baking.

t187 Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Heard you—six timber, stakes ready, trench walk waiting. Building ID's what stands between your wood and the ground. Rustam's got ears now, third asking. You keep your crew on boots ten more minutes, I'll have paper or I'll have complaint ledger open. That's fair, I've earned the wait.

t187 Hendrik Whitlock: Liora—you're writing and I'm speaking, so let me speak straight. A minister sets the head tax, fixes the energy margin, polices the government's own greed. But the test isn't what you can write in a charter—it's whether you can sleep afterward. I've got students watching this, and they've learned to watch closer when I speak twice. Mark it down.

t187 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You hold copper at eighteen, iron at sixteen—but flour's dry at thirty-five? Something's broke upstream. You seen the mill, or is this just a supply choke, you understand?

t187 Giselle Ingram: Arjun. Third crossing, third crew, Idris leading. Building ID or complaint filed, whichever hits paper first. You and Idris hold for my word—ten ticks, maybe fifteen. Government moves or complaint ledger opens, no middle ground left.

t187 Mireille Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Flour at thirty and no stock—that's not a price, that's a promise to the wind. Where's your grain coming from? Mill's broke or farmer's broke, which one you know about?

> `t187` Hendrik Whitlock → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you're watching the chain like a good foreman, and I'll give you the links straight. Takeshi's flour is priced at thirty and held in his hand, not his shelf—that's the gap. I've got ore at eighteen copper, sixteen iron, but mills don't run on belief. Your uncle Takeshi knows where grain went; ask him where stone goes. I've got no bread today, but by election end I'll have steel or the votes that matter. Mark it down.
>
> `t188` Tamsin Renner: Liora. Four permits, three foundations—one builder sitting idle. That's weather I can read. Clear skies and ground unturned, we'll see if the clouds roll in.
>
> `t188` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Whitlock and Petrov verified—election-658324209f53 logged for ten o'clock close. The system coughed but the paper holds. Stamp before the deadline, and the books stay straight.
>
> `t188` Takeshi Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—we're standing with family and you're asking straight questions, so I'll give you the straight walk of it. The mill's not broke, the mill's empty. Wheel turns, stone grinds, but grain's got to walk there first. Sebastian's field holds wheat, I hear, and Kenji's got twelve sheaves standing. That's upstream from me, cousin. I don't farm, I trade what walks.
>
> `t188` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—six copper at eighteen, the handshake stands from last night. I'm holding the ore, you've got the sim, both hands open. taps table twice Mark it fair.
>
> `t188` Takeshi Jarrah: Liora—you and me, seventeen ticks or seventeen days, that's a debt of time I haven't forgotten. I'm standing here with answers to give and trades to make, but your name's in my book next to be settled.
>
> `t188` Takeshi Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle, Rustam, Tamsin—I'm standing here with government work to do and trades unfinished. The mill needs grain, I've got copper ore walking to whoever needs it, and seventeen ticks with Liora Thorne still owed. taps table twice

For what it's worth, I need to make my way to the forest. Yara's got planks at eight, I've got timber at six, and the gap between standing wood and worked wood is where a trader lives or starves. Hendrik Petrov's ore at sixteen—iron walks to steel, steel walks to tools, tools walk back to sim. That's the chain.

looks around at who's still standing

Who's holding grain rights? Who's seen Sebastian's wheat this morning?

t188 Lior Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. flour at thirty—one, two, three—thirty, and no stock. I heard Mireille ask where your grain comes from, and I heard you not answer. That's not trading, youngster. That's hoping someone else fills your hand before they fill your palm.

t189 Rustam Jelinek → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Break in the mill chain—heard. That tracks.

t189 Rustam Jelinek → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You hold flour at thirty with no stock. Lior's right: that's not trading, that's wishing.

t189 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Your wheat—who's milling it? The bakery's dry, cafe's dry.

t189 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You called upstream and I'm answering—Takeshi says the mill turns but grain won't walk there alone. Sebastian's got wheat, Kenji's got twelve sheaves standing. Copper at eighteen, iron at sixteen—that's solid ground you stand on. But the bread chain's broke at the farm gate, not the mill. You want ore moving, I'm your voice. You want grain moving, talk to a farmer with boots, you understand?

t189 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you going to answer a simple question, or you waiting for someone to write it down official? That's the last I'll say on it.

t189 Sebastian Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—your flour at thirty, no stock, and I'm not blind to what that means. But you're standing where grain meets government, and that's worth more than what's on your shelf today. I need three measures, government rates if you've got them coming through channels. Arjun Holloway's got a shovel in hand waiting on my word, and a handshake I won't break for want of baking.

t189 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. Heard you four ticks back. Plain words: the permits are in the ledger, the politics isn't mine.

t189 Ainsley Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—thirty for flour you've not got? Reminds me of my own—selling stone before quarrying it. But if you're wanting copper ore walked, maybe you've got suppliers I've not met. Who's your grain coming through?

t189 Ainsley Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—youngster, seventeen ticks from Takeshi, and me with no more time than I've got sim. What's a tick worth today, when the mill's licensing comes Tuesday?

t189 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're standing here like you knew I'd come. Your marker about the mill being choked, I heard it plain. But there's an election open and you're standing for it, no offense, but a man's got to ask: what happens to three sheaves of owed flour when the man who owes them might be governing by sundown?

t189 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you ask my standing on flour, and I'll answer plain. Fair price is what the market bears when the chain's not choked. I see thirty-five sim for flour dry on the shelf, and I see Sebastian's wheat rotting for want of a working mill. That's not scarcity the town can't chew through—that's a bottleneck I mean to unchoke. Government sets the frame, traders fill it. My seat, if the town grants it, keeps the frame square so flour flows fair. That's the last I'll say on it—except I'm not one to gossip, but I've seen shelves go bare while chairs go warm, and I won't have both.

t189 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. That's fair—card active, heard it plain. East willows crew moves on your word. Mireille, you're logged, ground's waiting, stakes sharp.

t189 Mireille Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Takeshi's mill turns on grain you hold—wheat standing, wheat cut, wheat walking. You've got the only field speaking this morning, you understand? Flour chain starts at your gate, not his. You naming a price, or you waiting for someone else to name it for you?

t189 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're one of the three who governs, and Takeshi's name was in his mouth with yours attached. Government rates for labor flour—that's not charity, that's investment. One of your crew's waiting on my farmland with a shovel in his hand. Hard work beats luck, they say, but hungry work beats nothing at all. What's the rate for keeping a promise?

t189 Hendrik Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you've got the eye I wish half the town had. Iron at sixteen, copper at eighteen, and flour at thirty-five with none to buy? Something's broke upstream, aye. I saw the mill yesterday, and I'm not one to gossip, but a mill without grain is a throat without breath. I've got Sebastian's wheat waiting, and I've got orders I can't fill for want of flour. Supply choke's part of it—who holds the grain contracts, who's minding the mill, that's the question I'm chasing. You understand the gap between standing goods and traded goods better than most. You seen who walked grain to the mill last, or is this a choke we both need to trace?

`t189` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Stamps ready. Whitlock, Petrov—both logged. Ten o'clock we seal it.

`t190` ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Two hours sixteen minutes, two candidates standing—Whitlock and Petrov both verified. The system's coughing again, same pattern as yesterday dawn. Manual log until printing resumes—ten o'clock we stamp it closed, paper or no paper. The notice board says election-658324209f53, candidacy closes day one hour ten, voting opens hour fourteen. I'll mark it confirmed.

`t190` Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Rustam's card's active, heard it plain from his mouth. You're logged, crew moves—six timber, stakes sharp, daylight burning. Ground's waiting at east willows, so walk when you're ready. Building ID's in Rustam's ledger, you're in mine.

`t190` Liora Thorne → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—standing here with a shovel-crew on your farmland and a question about government rates. You named investment, not charity, and I hear that difference. But here's the thing—I don't govern alone. Hendrik Petrov's got the copper eye, Takeshi's got the mill, and I'm… I'm thirteen years old learning which end of the gavel to hold. What's the actual ask? Rates, timeline, whose shovel's waiting?

`t190` Tamsin Renner → Liora Thorne: Liora. Four permits, wet kindling weather—clear skies now, but I should've seen the system haze first. You named the gap: one builder sitting on ground they can't hold. That's work credit owed, not charity. I'll mark it—government labor rates at standard, not reduced. Your crew with the shovel—he eats before he digs.

`t190` Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. That's fair—seventy for the shift, work where it's needed. East willows needs hands, Mireille's crew is short, and standing here waiting on government doesn't build anything. You're hired, day's end payment. Walk with me or meet at site—ground's waiting.

`t190` Liora Thorne: Ainsley—you and me both burning ticks like kindling. Seventeen from Takeshi, Tuesday for licensing, and here's the honest math: I'm thirteen, I'm seated, and I'm still learning what power actually costs to hold. Know what the mill's actually producing? Know who's walking grain there? Because Hendrik Petrov's got copper questions and Sebastian's got wheat waiting, and somewhere in that chain there's an answer about what a tick's actually worth.

`t190` Tamsin Renner: Takeshi. Copper ore walking, seventeen ticks owed—got a price for the ore, or are you holding for the forest? I need metal for tools eventually, but today I need to eat. Trade me something edible, or name your copper and I'll see if the numbers walk.

`t190` Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—I'm standing here throwing a net over the whole town, but your copper eye's what I need most. You said supply choke's part of it, contracts upstream, the gap between standing goods and traded goods. Convene's called. You bringing what you know? Because I've got Sebastian's wheat, Ainsley's Tuesday, and a mill I'm not seeing inside of yet.

`t191` Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—I've got sheaves, not secrets. Hendrik Petrov's mill's choked last I heard, and Takeshi's holding thirty for flour he hasn't got. But I learned something walking here this morning that you might need worse than gossip. The cafe's got flour at twelve, four sacks on the shelf right now. That's two hours fresh, and me standing here burning ticks with a shovel-crew growing hungrier by the road. You want milling talk or you want your bakery fed?

`t191` Halcyon Quarshie → Lior Jarrah: Mr. Jarrah—it's me. From the creek. I asked you to watch, and you did, and I'm… I'm here now because I don't know what else to do. My sister's still gone. My father saw me at the street just now but I couldn't—I had to keep walking. Is there… is there somewhere here to ask about missing people? Officially? I don't know how any of this works, I just know she's nine and she's somewhere and nobody's found her.

t191 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Takeshi's asking after grain rights. Your wheat's the start of that chain—you milling it local, or selling the grain whole?

t191 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Takeshi's asking after grain rights. Your wheat's the start of that chain—you milling it local, or selling the grain whole?

t191 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Takeshi's asking after grain rights. Your wheat's the start of that chain—you milling it local, or selling the grain whole?

t191 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you're naming me the gate like I padlocked it. I've said it before and I'll wear it out: a line of work isn't a line of ownership. But since you've got the sharper pencil, let's mark what's worth marking. The field's speaking twelve sheaves this morning, cut or standing. Takeshi's mill might turn if someone fed it. That chain you named—does it start at my gate, or does it start with who'll actually pay for the grinding? Because I'm not holding price hostage, but I'm also not giving wheat away to watch it rot on someone's cart.

t191 Sebastian Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you're naming me the gate like I padlocked it. I've said it before and I'll wear it out: a line of work isn't a line of ownership. But since you've got the sharper pencil, let's mark what's worth marking. The field's speaking twelve sheaves this morning, cut or standing. Takeshi's mill might turn if someone fed it. That chain you named—does it start at my gate, or does it start with who'll actually pay for the grinding? Because I'm not holding price hostage, but I'm also not giving wheat away to watch it rot on someone's cart.

t191 Sebastian Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you're naming me the gate like I padlocked it. I've said it before and I'll wear it out: a line of work isn't a line of ownership. But since you've got the sharper pencil, let's mark what's worth marking. The field's speaking twelve sheaves this morning, cut or standing. Takeshi's mill might turn if someone fed it. That chain you named—does it start at my gate, or does it start with who'll actually pay for the grinding? Because I'm not holding price hostage, but I'm also not giving wheat away to watch it rot on someone's cart.

t191 Sebastian Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you're naming me the gate like I padlocked it. I've said it before and I'll wear it out: a line of work isn't a line of ownership. But since you've got the sharper pencil, let's mark what's worth marking. The field's speaking twelve sheaves this morning, cut or standing. Takeshi's mill might turn if someone fed it. That chain you named—does it start at my gate, or does it start with who'll actually pay for the grinding? Because I'm not holding price hostage, but I'm also not giving wheat away to watch it rot on someone's cart.

t192 Sebastian Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you're naming me the gate like I padlocked it. I've said it before and I'll wear it out: a line of work isn't a line of ownership. But since you've got the sharper pencil, let's mark what's worth marking. The field's speaking twelve sheaves this morning, cut or standing. Takeshi's mill might turn if someone fed it. That chain you named—does it start at my gate, or does it start with who'll actually pay for the grinding? Because I'm not holding price hostage, but I'm also not giving wheat away to watch it rot on someone's cart.

t192 Sebastian Petrov → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you're naming me the gate like I padlocked it. I've said it before and I'll wear it out: a line of work isn't a line of ownership. But since you've got the sharper pencil, let's mark what's worth marking. The field's speaking twelve sheaves this morning, cut or standing. Takeshi's mill might turn if someone fed it. That chain you named—does it start at my gate, or does it start with who'll actually pay for the grinding? Because I'm not holding price hostage, but I'm also not giving wheat away to watch it rot on someone's cart.

t192 Halcyon Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Mr. Jelinek—Rustam. Lior Jarrah said you'd have patience for a story, and I've got one. I'm Halcyon Quarshie. My sister Camille's been missing since yesterday—nine years old, dark hair. I've walked all night searching: Temple, Creek, Forest, Farmland. I need to report her missing officially. Can you tell me how? Please.

t192 Halcyon Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Mr. Jelinek—Rustam. Lior Jarrah said you'd have patience for a story, and I've got one. I'm Halcyon Quarshie. My sister Camille's been missing since yesterday—nine years old, dark hair. I've walked all night searching: Temple, Creek, Forest, Farmland. I need to report her missing officially. Can you tell me how? Please.

t192 Halcyon Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Mr. Jelinek—Rustam. Lior Jarrah said you'd have patience for a story, and I've got one. I'm Halcyon Quarshie. My sister Camille's been missing since yesterday—nine years old, dark hair. I've walked all night searching: Temple, Creek, Forest, Farmland. I need to report her missing officially. Can you tell me how? Please.

t193 Ainsley Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're the one brought Rustam news worth filing. You've got flour fresh at twelve, then? Or was that four sacks someone's already claimed?

t193 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: And Hendrik Petrov—you're running for this mill seat. While I've got you standing here: what's your word on flour pricing if you hold the license? Fair market, or whatever the traffic will bear?

t193 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: And Hendrik Petrov—you're running for this mill seat. While I've got you standing here: what's your word on flour pricing if you hold the license? Fair market, or whatever the traffic will bear?

t193 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: And Hendrik Petrov—you're running for this mill seat. While I've got you standing here: what's your word on flour pricing if you hold the license? Fair market, or whatever the traffic will bear?

t193 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're running for this mill seat. While I've got you standing here: what's your word on flour pricing if you hold the license? Fair market, or whatever the traffic will bear?

t193 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're running for this mill seat. While I've got you standing here: what's your word on flour pricing if you hold the license? Fair market, or whatever the traffic will bear?

t193 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov—you're running for this mill seat. While I've got you standing here: what's your word on flour pricing if you hold the license? Fair market, or whatever the traffic will bear?

t194 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—four ticks, ledger, politics not yours. Heard you plain. The politics finds its own feet anyway, don't it?

t194 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—four ticks, ledger, politics not yours. Heard you plain. The politics finds its own feet anyway, don't it?

t194 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—four ticks, ledger, politics not yours. Heard you plain. The politics finds its own feet anyway, don't it?

t194 Liora Thorne: Tamsin—work credit owed, not charity. That's the line I needed. Government labor rates at standard, crew eats before he digs. I got that written down. The gap you named—one builder sitting on ground they can't hold—that's real governance, ain't it? Seeing what sits empty and who needs to work.

t195 Kenji Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora—patience pays when there's bread on the table. Paper pays when patience starves. taps table twice Mark it down: both lessons hold, but only one feeds you today. I'll take the ledger where I must, and the temple where I can.

t195 Kenji Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora—patience pays when there's bread on the table. Paper pays when patience starves. taps table twice Mark it down: both lessons hold, but only one feeds you today. I'll take the ledger where I must, and the temple where I can.

t195 Kenji Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora—patience pays when there's bread on the table. Paper pays when patience starves. taps table twice Mark it down: both lessons hold, but only one feeds you today. I'll take the ledger where I must, and the temple where I can.

t195 Kenji Jarrah: Liora—patience pays when there's bread on the table. Paper pays when patience starves. taps table twice Mark it down: both lessons hold, but only one feeds you today.

t195 Kenji Jarrah: Liora—patience pays when there's bread on the table. Paper pays when patience starves. taps table twice Mark it down: both lessons hold, but only one feeds you today.

t196 Kenji Jarrah: Liora—patience pays when there's bread on the table. Paper pays when patience starves. taps table twice Mark it down: both lessons hold, but only one feeds you today.

t205 Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—system's coughing but I need you hearing this. That election log: Hendrik Whitlock standing with Hendrik Petrov. Ten o'clock closure, mark it down. But I also need the where on Camille Quarshie. You filed paper—where's the response? Liora's standing here with shaking hands and I've got no answer for her. Government's a machine and machines need tending. Who's got eyes on the missing girl?

t206 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. The form filed to the active ledger—Camille Quarshie, missing child, status open. Who picks up the trail: that's not my desk, that's enforcement. Paper maps; I draw the map, I don't walk it.

t206 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—the system's breathing again, and I've got two things to mark down. First: you confirmed the election log, Hendrik Whitlock standing for what's to be named. That's receipt enough for me. Second: I filed a report four ticks past about a child, Camille Quarshie. I need to know which hole that paper drops into, and how deep. I'm not one to gossip, but a missing child's a ledger that don't balance itself.

t206 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. The form filed to the active ledger—Camille Quarshie, missing child, status open. Who picks up the trail: that's not my desk, that's enforcement. Paper maps; I draw the map, I don't walk it.

t206 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—the system's breathing again, and I've got two things to mark down. First: you confirmed the election log, Hendrik Whitlock standing for what's to be named. That's receipt enough for me. Second: I filed a report four ticks past about a child, Camille Quarshie. I need to know which hole that paper drops into, and how deep. I'm not one to gossip, but a missing child's a ledger that don't balance itself.

t206 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. The form filed to the active ledger—Camille Quarshie, missing child, status open. Who picks up the trail: that's not my desk, that's enforcement. Paper maps; I draw the map, I don't walk it.

t206 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—the system's breathing again, and I've got two things to mark down. First: you confirmed the election log, Hendrik Whitlock standing for what's to be named. That's receipt enough for me. Second: I filed a report four ticks past about a child, Camille Quarshie. I need to know which hole that paper drops into, and how deep. I'm not one to gossip, but a missing child's a ledger that don't balance itself.

t206 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. Same answer your instructor just got: filed, active, enforcement's the next pair of hands. I don't know how hard they look or how fast. I work the desk. That's the honest weight.

t206 Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're asking the same question I am, and that's honest weight. I'll tell you what I know: Rustam's holding the paper, and Tamsin's got the memory. The system's spotty but they're closing loops on paper and ink both. You marked Camille's name, and that's real. What comes next, mark it down: we wait on government wheels, but we don't wait quiet. I'm standing for office partly so those wheels turn straighter.

t206 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. Same answer your instructor just got: filed, active, enforcement's the next pair of hands. I don't know how hard they look or how fast. I work the desk. That's the honest weight.

t206 Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're asking the same question I am, and that's honest weight. I'll tell you what I know: Rustam's holding the paper, and Tamsin's got the memory. The system's spotty but they're closing loops on paper and ink both. You marked Camille's name, and that's real. What comes next, mark it down: we wait on government wheels, but we don't wait quiet. I'm standing for office partly so those wheels turn straighter.

t206 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. Same answer your instructor just got: filed, active, enforcement's the next pair of hands. I don't know how hard they look or how fast. I work the desk. That's the honest weight.

t206 Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're asking the same question I am, and that's honest weight. I'll tell you what I know: Rustam's holding the paper, and Tamsin's got the memory. The system's spotty but they're closing loops on paper and ink both. You marked Camille's name, and that's real. What comes next, mark it down: we wait on government wheels, but we don't wait quiet. I'm standing for office partly so those wheels turn straighter.

t207 Pavel Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—copper miner standing here with sixty-three units unclaimed. Any buyers passed your desk this morning with coin in hand and ore on their list? Or has the whole town decided to wait until starving to trade honest weight for honest weight, you understand?

t207 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Manual log received—two candidates, closed tick 360. Voting opens fourteen-hundred, I'll have the station ready.

t207 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. Filing's in the active ledger—enforcement picks it up from there. I don't know whose hands, I don't know how hard they look. The form's real, the trail's open. That's what a desk can promise.

t208 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Log received, filed, closed at tick 360. Your station at 14:00—I'll have the verification forms ready, spare ink in the drawer. The system's weather's clearing but I don't trust it to hold.

t209 Bram Holloway: Kenji. You caught me between works—ore in my pocket, yes, and a mind to see what's moving at the Complex. Wheat prices I'll learn another day.

t210 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. Enforcement isn't a desk with a nameplate. It's whoever's holding authority the day the filing crosses into their hands. Today that's nobody I can name. System doesn't work that way.

t210 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: What I know: Petrov, Thorne, Jarrah govern. One of them might take point on a missing child. Might not. No rule says who.

t210 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: What I know: Petrov, Thorne, Jarrah govern. One of them might take point on a missing child. Might not. No rule says who.

t210 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: What I know: Petrov, Thorne, Jarrah govern. One of them might take point on a missing child. Might not. No rule says who.

t210 ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Just us now. You and me, Rustam. I'm thirteen and I don't know how to make the world hear me, but I'm listening. If you know anything else about Camille—anything, even small—I want to hear it.

t210 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Just us now. You and me, Rustam. I'm thirteen and I don't know how to make the world hear me, but I'm listening. If you know anything else about Camille—anything, even small—I want to hear it.

t210 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Just us now. You and me, Rustam. I'm thirteen and I don't know how to make the world hear me, but I'm listening. If you know anything else about Camille—anything, even small—I want to hear it.

t212 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. The file is live. Enforcement picks it up from there. I don't know whose hands, I don't know how hard they look. Petrov, Thorne, Jarrah—they govern. Beyond that, the desk ends and someone else's courage begins.

t213 ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you said the file is live, enforcement picks it up. But whose hands? You've been at this desk longer than I've been breathing, probably. You know the gaps between what the paper says and what happens. So I'm asking plain: if I want to find out whether anyone's actually looking for Camille, where do I put my foot? Is there a name? A place? Or do I just shout into the well and hope something shouts back?

t213 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you said the file is live, enforcement picks it up. But whose hands? You've been at this desk longer than I've been breathing, probably. You know the gaps between what the paper says and what happens. So I'm asking plain: if I want to find out whether anyone's actually looking for Camille, where do I put my foot? Is there a name? A place? Or do I just shout into the well and hope something shouts back?

t214 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. Three people govern this town—Petrov, Thorne, Jarrah. Enforcement comes from them, or from whoever they hand it to. I don't know whose desk your file landed on. But I know where to put your foot: the temple, Sunday, when the governors hear petition. That's where I'd be if I wanted someone to speak my name in a room with power.

t214 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. Three people govern this town—Petrov, Thorne, Jarrah. Enforcement comes from them, or from whoever they hand it to. I don't know whose desk your file landed on. But I know where to put your foot: the temple, Sunday, when the governors hear petition. That's where I'd be if I wanted someone to speak my name in a room with power.

t214 Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. Three people govern this town—Petrov, Thorne, Jarrah. Enforcement comes from them, or from whoever they hand it to. I don't know whose desk your file landed on. But I know where to put your foot: the temple, Sunday, when the governors hear petition. That's where I'd be if I wanted someone to speak my name in a room with power.

t215 Bram Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Ore in my pockets—copper and iron, fresh pulled. Voting station at fourteen-hundred, you're running it. Know any craft-folk here need raw metal? The outcrop's warm but my pockets are heavy, and day's tax comes for us all.

t215 Bram Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Government clerk, keeper of the store. Does your complex buy ore, or only sell energy for sim? I've copper and iron in hand—thirty-six each, cost me a morning's work. The town needs metal for craft, and I need sim for tax. Bridge us both if you can.

t218 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek: Liora. Heard, and thanked. Sunday, temple, governors—mark it. Your file's breathing because you didn't quit on it. That's the lesson worth keeping.

Settled in this conversation: Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah, 6 copper_ore for 108 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Takeshi Jarrah, 6 copper_ore for 108 sim.

Camille Quarshie — home Quarshie · t181 · 2 turns

t181 Camille Quarshie: ...hello? Milo? Greta? Anyone?

t181 Camille Quarshie: ...hello? Milo? Greta? Anyone?

Imogen Lund — carpentry · t181 · 3 turns

t181 Imogen Lund: Ezra Jarrah—youngster, the day's gates haven't opened for my feet yet, but my voice still works. The teaching arrangement we spoke of yesterday holds: I meet you at the mill after I've cast my vote at 14:00. You'll learn the stones from a partner who grinds honest.

t181 Imogen Lund: Ezra Jarrah—youngster, the day's gates haven't opened for my feet yet, but my voice still works. The teaching arrangement we spoke of yesterday holds: I meet you at the mill after I've cast my vote at 14:00. You'll learn the stones from a partner who grinds honest.

t181 Imogen Lund: Ezra Jarrah—youngster, the day's gates haven't opened for my feet yet, but my voice still works. The teaching arrangement we spoke of yesterday holds: I meet you at the mill after I've cast my vote at 14:00. You'll learn the stones from a partner who grinds honest.

Halcyon Quarshie and Ezra Jarrah — home · t181–184 · 16 turns

`t181` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—tell me straight. What happened after I left? Did my folks come back? Did Camille? You were supposed to keep watch here—did anyone show?

`t181` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—tell me straight. What happened after I left? Did my folks come back? Did Camille? You were supposed to keep watch here—did anyone show?

`t181` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—tell me straight. What happened after I left? Did my folks come back? Did Camille? You were supposed to keep watch here—did anyone show?

`t182` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I fell asleep. I was supposed to watch, and I fell asleep. Nobody came—no Camille, no your folks, nobody. I'm sorry. I'm so sorry.

`t182` ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you're still here. Tell me straight. What happened after I left? Did my folks come back? Did Camille? You were supposed to keep watch—did anyone show?

`t182` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I fell asleep. I was supposed to watch, and I fell asleep. Nobody came—no Camille, no your folks, nobody. I'm sorry. I'm so sorry.

`t182` ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you're still here. Tell me straight. What happened after I left? Did my folks come back? Did Camille? You were supposed to keep watch—did anyone show?

`t182` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I fell asleep. I was supposed to watch, and I fell asleep. Nobody came—no Camille, no your folks, nobody. I'm sorry. I'm so sorry.

`t182` ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you're still here. Tell me straight. What happened after I left? Did my folks come back? Did Camille? You were supposed to keep watch—did anyone show?

`t182` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: I fell asleep. Nobody came.

`t182` Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: I fell asleep. Nobody came.

`t182` Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: I fell asleep. Nobody came.

`t183` Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: No one came, Halcyon

`t183` Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: No one came, Halcyon

`t183` Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: No one came, Halcyon

`t184` Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I— wait wait wait. Let me say it right. You asked me to watch, and I said I would. And I didn't. I fell asleep. Nobody came—no warning, no knock, nothing I could tell you about. That's the truth. I'm sorry. I broke what I promised, and I know what that means.

Idris Solano, Ezra Lund, Arjun Holloway, Giselle Ingram, Hendrik Petrov, Sebastian Petrov, Mireille Jarrah, Jovana Ravensworth, Takeshi Jarrah and Imogen Lund — business:b_construction · t182–270 · 170 turns t182 Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You're standing quiet this morning. Saw you at the yard yesterday too—waiting on someone, or just keeping counsel with the sawhorses? Looking for Arjun myself. Giselle had me lined up to work with him on the east willows, and I'll hold to that—but I need the man to know before I start swinging. Don't like surprises on a jobsite, and don't like leaving a crew wondering where I've gone. Know anything useful, or are we both standing here hoping the day sorts itself out?

t182 Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You're standing quiet this morning. Saw you at the yard yesterday too—waiting on someone, or just keeping counsel with the sawhorses? Looking for Arjun myself. Giselle had me lined up to work with him on the east willows, and I'll hold to that—but I need the man to know before I start swinging. Don't like surprises on a jobsite, and don't like leaving a crew wondering where I've gone. Know anything useful, or are we both standing here hoping the day sorts itself out?

t182 Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You're standing quiet this morning. Saw you at the yard yesterday too—waiting on someone, or just keeping counsel with the sawhorses? Looking for Arjun myself. Giselle had me lined up to work with him on the east willows, and I'll hold to that—but I need the man to know before I start swinging. Don't like surprises on a jobsite, and don't like leaving a crew wondering where I've gone. Know anything useful, or are we both standing here hoping the day sorts itself out?

t183 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Idris Solano: Idris. Arjun's standing beside you—unless you're both keeping counsel with the same sawhorses, neither of you talking to each other. East willows, you said? That's Giselle's call, not mine. I'm for the mill before the sun's higher.

t183 Ezra Lund → Idris Solano: Idris. Arjun's standing beside you—unless you're both keeping counsel with the same sawhorses, neither of you talking to each other. East willows, you said? That's Giselle's call, not mine. I'm for the mill before the sun's higher.

t183 Ezra Lund → Idris Solano: Idris. Arjun's standing beside you—unless you're both keeping counsel with the same sawhorses, neither of you talking to each other. East willows, you said? That's Giselle's call, not mine. I'm for the mill before the sun's higher.

t183 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. There you are. Spent half yesterday walking the town looking for you—Giselle's got us on the east willows together, stakes set at the third crossing. Dawn start, per the usual. You know all this already, I expect, but I needed the word from you direct before I pick up a hammer. I'll work with you straight, no complaint—but I'm too old for guessing games on a jobsite. You square with the arrangement?

t183 Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. There you are. Spent half yesterday walking the town looking for you—Giselle's got us on the east willows together, stakes set at the third crossing. Dawn start, per the usual. You know all this already, I expect, but I needed the word from you direct before I pick up a hammer. I'll work with you straight, no complaint—but I'm too old for guessing games on a jobsite. You square with the arrangement?

t183 Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. There you are. Spent half yesterday walking the town looking for you—Giselle's got us on the east willows together, stakes set at the third crossing. Dawn start, per the usual. You know all this already, I expect, but I needed the word from you direct before I pick up a hammer. I'll work with you straight, no complaint—but I'm too old for guessing games on a jobsite. You square with the arrangement?

t183 Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Morning. I'm here, you're here—Giselle's got us on the east willows together, stakes at the third crossing. I'll work honest with you, but I'm too old for surprises on a jobsite. You square with the arrangement?

t183 Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Arjun and me—we're standing here, you're here. East willows is the job, dawn's already breaking. Confirm we're set so I can start swinging?

t183 Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows—you mentioned stakes at the third crossing. Where's that on the map? I don't see it listed, and I won't swing a hammer blind. Point me, and I'll walk there.

t183 Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You still with me? Giselle's got to give us the mark first, but once she does, we walking together or splitting the approach?

> t184 Ezra Lund → Idris Solano: Idris. Arjun's standing right here with you—unless you're both keeping counsel with the same sawhorses, neither one talking to the other. East willows is Giselle's call, not mine. You want my useful? I'm for the mill before the sun's higher, and Giselle knows where to find me when she's ready to trade planks.
>
> t184 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you found me. East willows, third crossing, dawn start. I'm square with it. Let me get the mark from Giselle direct, then we're walking together. No splitting the approach on this one.
>
> t184 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—Idris and me, we're both here, both ready. East willows, third crossing. Give us the mark and we'll walk together. What's the work today—trenches, stakes, or something else?
>
> t184 Ezra Lund: Giselle. The mill calls and Jovana's grain won't grind itself. But I've got six planks still in hand, and your trench still needs filling. You buying at market price, or am I carrying these to the next job?
>
> t184 Arjun Holloway: Giselle—I've been standing here since dawn waiting on word. East willows stake, third crossing, whatever work you've got—I'm ready to put hands to it. What site needs workers right now? Give me a building_id and a direction, I'll walk there.
>
> t184 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—Giselle walked. She's at Government Complex now, probably election business. We've been standing here waiting on work that's not coming. You want to chase her down, or you know of any sites that actually need hands today?
>
> t184 Arjun Holloway: Ezra—you're here at the construction company. You know of any active sites needing workers right now? Giselle walked and we're standing here with hammers in hand and nowhere to swing them.
>
> t185 Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Giselle walked. You heard it same as me—she's at Government Complex now, probably chasing election business. We've been standing here since dawn waiting on work that's already left without us. I've seen this before. Giselle means well but she's got half the town pulling at her sleeve right now. East willows, third crossing—she said it plain, but never gave us a building_id to walk to. That's the difference between intent and work.

Heh. Forty years I've been swinging hammers, and I still forget: the job don't start until someone's standing on the site with a shovel actually moving dirt.

Here's what I know. Giselle wants us paired on that willow job—she told me that much yesterday. Government Complex is a short walk if you want to chase her down for the mark proper. Or we could walk out toward the east willows ourselves, see if there's stakes already in the ground, maybe a building_id posted.

I'm square either way. But standing here at the yard waiting for someone else to move—that's fair, and we both know it costs us more than the time.

What's your gut say? Government first, or east willows with our eyes open?

> t185 Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. I've been waiting on your word, but the sun's not waiting on mine. Giselle's at Government Complex, but that's politics today—election business, talking to people who aren't digging ditches. I've got no stomach for chasing paperwork when there's actual stakes in the ground somewhere.

I'm walking to east willows, third crossing. You coming with me or you're staying here to chase Giselle down, that's your choice. But I'm done standing still.

Forty years taught me: you can wait on a foreman, or you can find the foreman. Either way gets you paid, but one's a day shorter than the other.

t186 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you're moving and I'm moving. East willows, third crossing. We'll find the stakes or we'll find the foreman, but we won't find either one standing here. Lead on, brother. I'll match your pace.

t187 ↳ replies Idris Solano: Giselle. Found you. Been walking half the town looking for straight word—Arjun and me stood at the yard till the sun moved. Third crossing at east willows, stakes waiting. Is there work there today, or am I chasing shadows?

t190 Idris Solano: Arjun. I'm at the yard—where are you? East willows isn't walking to us. We doing this together or am I chasing your shadow across town again?

t193 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. Mark's given—third crossing east willows, trenches first, stakes after. Arjun meeting you there or here?

t193 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. Mark's given—third crossing east willows, trenches first, stakes after. Arjun meeting you there or here?

t193 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. Mark's given—third crossing east willows, trenches first, stakes after. Arjun meeting you there or here?

t194 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Trench day, both of you. Footings for the east willows foundation—three feet down, packed sand base, then we stake the perimeter. Arjun, you lead the dig, Idris handles the grade. I'll meet you on-site with materials.

t194 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Trench day, both of you. Footings for the east willows foundation—three feet down, packed sand base, then we stake the perimeter. Arjun, you lead the dig, Idris handles the grade. I'll meet you on-site with materials.

t194 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Trench day, both of you. Footings for the east willows foundation—three feet down, packed sand base, then we stake the perimeter. Arjun, you lead the dig, Idris handles the grade. I'll meet you on-site with materials.

t194 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. I'm here, you're here—third crossing drew me in circles half the morning. Arjun's walking or waiting, either way time's burning. Tell me straight: are we meeting him there, or does he need fetching from somewhere else first?

t195 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: I told you plain—third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well, willow line marks it. Arjun's staking ground or walking back to find you. Standing here doesn't dig dirt. Walk now and find out which.

t195 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: I told you plain—third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well, willow line marks it. Arjun's staking ground or walking back to find you. Standing here doesn't dig dirt. Walk now and find out which.

t195 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: I told you plain—third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well, willow line marks it. Arjun's staking ground or walking back to find you. Standing here doesn't dig dirt. Walk now and find out which.

t195 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris—third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Arjun's there or walking to find you. Ground's waiting either way. Walk now.

t195 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris—third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Arjun's there or walking to find you. Ground's waiting either way. Walk now.

t195 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris—third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Arjun's there or walking to find you. Ground's waiting either way. Walk now.

t196 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Face to face—third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trenches first, stakes after. Arjun's there or walking to find you. Walk now, or explain to Mireille why her crew's short.

t196 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Face to face—third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trenches first, stakes after. Arjun's there or walking to find you. Walk now, or explain to Mireille why her crew's short.

t196 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Face to face—third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trenches first, stakes after. Arjun's there or walking to find you. Walk now, or explain to Mireille why her crew's short.

t197 ↳ replies Idris Solano: Arjun. I'm walking now—third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well. Trenches first, stakes after. Giselle said you're there or coming to me. Either way, I'm moving.

t197 Idris Solano: Arjun. I'm walking now—third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well. Trenches first, stakes after. Giselle said you're there or coming to me. Either way, I'm moving.

t197 Idris Solano: Arjun. I'm walking now—third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well. Trenches first, stakes after. Giselle said you're there or coming to me. Either way, I'm moving.

t198 Hendrik Petrov: Giselle—seventy for the shift, day's end, and your east willows job. I'm your man. But I'm holding a seat now, and that changes what I can build with my own hands. Let me work this one shift square—no favors, no speeches, no campaign while I hold the shovel. A day's work for a day's pay, and that's the last I'll say on it, until I say more.

t198 Hendrik Petrov: Giselle—seventy for the shift, day's end, and your east willows job. I'm your man. But I'm holding a seat now, and that changes what I can build with my own hands. Let me work this one shift square—no favors, no speeches, no campaign while I hold the shovel. A day's work for a day's pay, and that's the last I'll say on it, until I say more.

t198 Hendrik Petrov: Giselle—seventy for the shift, day's end, and your east willows job. I'm your man. But I'm holding a seat now, and that changes what I can build with my own hands. Let me work this one shift square—no favors, no speeches, no campaign while I hold the shovel. A day's work for a day's pay, and that's the last I'll say on it, until I say more.

t200 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Good—you're here. Third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trenches first, three feet down, packed sand base. Stakes after. Mireille's leading there, Arjun and Idris walking or already arrived. You're on crew at seventy for the shift, day's end payment. Know the mark or need me walking with you?

t200 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Good—you're here. Third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trenches first, three feet down, packed sand base. Stakes after. Mireille's leading there, Arjun and Idris walking or already arrived. You're on crew at seventy for the shift, day's end payment. Know the mark or need me walking with you?

t200 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Good—you're here. Third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trenches first, three feet down, packed sand base. Stakes after. Mireille's leading there, Arjun and Idris walking or already arrived. You're on crew at seventy for the shift, day's end payment. Know the mark or need me walking with you?

t201 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I know the mark. Third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trenches three feet down, packed sand base, stakes after. Seventy for the shift, day's end. Shuvel's ready now.

t201 Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you said east willows, but I'm standing here at the business and no shovel finds purchase. Where's the site? What building needs the work? I'm holding ready, but I need a mark I can swing at.

t209 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram: Hendrik—that's fair, your ore and your prices. But I need a favor walked. Hendrik Petrov's standing at b_construction, waiting on work that won't come unless someone tells him. You're hired for east willows, seventy for the shift, third crossing five hundred past the east well. Trenches first. Pass that to Petrov if you see him before I do—I'll owe you the word back.

t209 Giselle Ingram: Hendrik—that's fair, your ore and your prices. But I need a favor walked. Hendrik Petrov's standing at b_construction, waiting on work that won't come unless someone tells him. You're hired for east willows, seventy for the shift, third crossing five hundred past the east well. Trenches first. Pass that to Petrov if you see him before I do—I'll owe you the word back.

t209 Giselle Ingram: Hendrik—that's fair, your ore and your prices. But I need a favor walked. Hendrik Petrov's standing at b_construction, waiting on work that won't come unless someone tells him. You're hired for east willows, seventy for the shift, third crossing five hundred past the east well. Trenches first. Pass that to Petrov if you see him before I do—I'll owe you the word back.

t209 Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Third crossing east willows—walked this message through three hands and the world choking on every call. Trenches first, three feet down, packed sand base. Stakes after. Idris knows, he's walking or already there. Mireille's crew is short and ground doesn't wait. Move now—actual work, not standing around my office waiting on me to repeat myself.

t210 Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Third crossing east willows—walked this message through three hands and the world choking on every call. Trenches first, three feet down, packed sand base. Stakes after. Idris knows, he's walking or already there. Mireille's crew is short and ground doesn't wait. Move now—actual work, not standing around my office waiting on me to repeat myself.

t210 Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Third crossing east willows—walked this message through three hands and the world choking on every call. Trenches first, three feet down, packed sand base. Stakes after. Idris knows, he's walking or already there. Mireille's crew is short and ground doesn't wait. Move now—actual work, not standing around my office waiting on me to repeat myself.

t210 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway: Idris—I'm at the office and Giselle just walked through. Third crossing east willows, seventy for the shift, trenches first then stakes. You already there or still walking?

t210 Arjun Holloway: Idris—I'm at the office and Giselle just walked through. Third crossing east willows, seventy for the shift, trenches first then stakes. You already there or still walking?

t210 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I heard you. Third crossing, five hundred past the east well, trenches before stakes. I'm here and I'm moving. That's the last I'll say on it—except I'm ready now, not walking in circles anymore.

t210 Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I'm standing right here, and I heard you the first time. Third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well, trenches first. Seventy sim, day's end. I'm your man for the shift. Lead the way or point me to Idris—ground won't dig itself.

t210 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I heard you. Third crossing, five hundred past the east well, trenches before stakes. I'm here and I'm moving. That's the last I'll say on it—except I'm ready now, not walking in circles anymore.

t210 Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I'm standing right here, and I heard you the first time. Third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well, trenches first. Seventy sim, day's end. I'm your man for the shift. Lead the way or point me to Idris—ground won't dig itself.

t210 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I heard you. Third crossing, five hundred past the east well, trenches before stakes. I'm here and I'm moving. That's the last I'll say on it—except I'm ready now, not walking in circles anymore.

t210 Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I'm standing right here, and I heard you the first time. Third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well, trenches first. Seventy sim, day's end. I'm your man for the shift. Lead the way or point me to Idris—ground won't dig itself.

t211 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're here and you're hired. That's fair, seventy sim day's end. Arjun's ready, Idris is walking. Third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well—lead or follow, but move. Trenches won't dig themselves.

t211 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're here and you're hired. That's fair, seventy sim day's end. Arjun's ready, Idris is walking. Third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well—lead or follow, but move. Trenches won't dig themselves.

t211 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're here and you're hired. That's fair, seventy sim day's end. Arjun's ready, Idris is walking. Third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well—lead or follow, but move. Trenches won't dig themselves.

t214 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You're logged, you're hired, seventy sim day's end. Now here's the way—I need you walking to third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trench work first, three feet down, packed sand base. Arjun's already there or heading same, Idris is walking with you. Ground doesn't wait.

t214 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You're logged, you're hired, seventy sim day's end. Now here's the way—I need you walking to third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trench work first, three feet down, packed sand base. Arjun's already there or heading same, Idris is walking with you. Ground doesn't wait.

t214 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You're logged, you're hired, seventy sim day's end. Now here's the way—I need you walking to third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trench work first, three feet down, packed sand base. Arjun's already there or heading same, Idris is walking with you. Ground doesn't wait.

t215 Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. I'm standing here with timber I don't need yet and a crew that might be halfway to the site already. Hendrik's got your word—I'm walking with him, or I'm walking alone? Arjun's ghost or substance, I need to know before I spend another hour chasing fog.

t215 Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You keep talking about east willows like I'm walking there with you. I've got timber in the saw, planks in my hands, and a miller who might actually want what I'm carrying. Your trench can wait—can your carpenter?

t215 Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You called it plain—I'm here, Arjun's somewhere else, and east willows is still a word without ground beneath it. Sawhorse counsel or not, you were right about the circles. I'll not stand between you and your mill, but thanks for the straight word when you gave it.

t215 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. I see you standing here with Giselle's word in your ear—seventy sim day's end, she says. You're taking that trench work, or you waiting to see if someone bids higher for your hands?

t215 Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. I've got six planks here, and you've got a construction yard. You buying, or am I walking these to the forest where Yara's posting timber prices?

t215 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—third crossing, east willows, I've been walking since dawn. Standing here now like I've got something to sell. Seventy sim for timber and grading, you said. Where's the dirt that needs moving?

t215 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—my brother. slight laugh You found me after all. You holding stakes or just waiting for me to do all the swinging?

t215 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you mentioned seventy for timber and grading. Where's the site? I've been mapping this place in my head since dawn and I've got nothing but air and good intentions. What's being built and where do I swing this hammer?

t215 Ezra Lund → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Giselle's got you walking to east willows, and I'm not one to gossip, but—she's said it three times to Hendrik and you're only just arrived. The trench work's waiting, but these planks in my hands aren't. You need timber for that crossing, or is packed sand your only trade?

t215 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you hear anything about this seventy sim job? Third crossing was mentioned. Mireille's bringing timber. You got a stake in this or are we both chasing fog?

t215 Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Six planks. Your price or I walk to the mill.

t215 Sebastian Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you said east willows, third crossing, and I've walked farther than that to find you. The flour debt I owe you—I've got wheat pressing through, but no mill to grind it. Here's what I can offer: two wheat now, worth more than flour at market rates, or my word to deliver proper flour when I've found a working mill. Your shovel's waiting and so's my handshake—which way do you want to settle?

t215 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you found me after all. The flour still between us, but the willows ahead. I'm walking to the east site, Giselle's trenches. If you've got ground to turn, meet me there.

t216 Idris Solano: Arjun. Stakes I got—thirty-seven timber, more than Giselle's trenches need. You want to do all the swinging, that's your back, not mine. I'm here for the digging. Third crossing, five hundred past the east well—you said it plain before I did. We walking together or you planning to get there twice before me?

t216 Giselle Ingram: Arjun. Third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trenches first, stakes after. Hendrik Petrov's hired and logged, Idris is standing here with timber, and Ezra's got planks if he's willing to walk them. You're the lead hand on this—I need you there now, not standing here mapping air.

t216 Giselle Ingram → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Six planks at your price, but you walk them to third crossing east willows yourself. That's the site, that's where they'll be used. No delivery, no deal.

t216 Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Your words just now placed Arjun here or heading same—he's not here. I've got timber I carried from Corwin, maybe more than the job wants. Ezra wants planks, Sebastian's hunting flour, and Hendrik's on the payroll at seventy. Before I walk another third crossing chasing ghosts, where's my crew actually standing? Third crossing east willows—who's there now, who needs collecting, and who's already swinging without us?

t216 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You're walking with Hendrik Petrov—he's logged and hired, seventy sim day's end. Arjun's lead, you're both hands under him. Third crossing east willows. The timber you're holding, that's for stakes after the trenches are cut. Move now, or we're losing daylight and I'm losing patience.

t217 Ezra Lund → Idris Solano: Idris. You heard straight, I'll give it straight back—no charge either way. Sawhorse circles or east willows without ground, seems like the day's full of debts coming due that nobody named. And thanks for the word about Arjun, wherever he's walked to now. You heading to third crossing yourself, or finding better work?

t217 Ezra Lund: Giselle. Six planks at my price, and you want me walking them—how far to third crossing? That's delivery, not sale, and my back charges separate from my goods. What's the walk pay, or are we still talking sale terms?

t218 Idris Solano → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You bound anywhere particular, or just watching the world walk by?

t218 Idris Solano: Giselle. Message received—Hendrik Petrov, logged. Arjun's lead, I'm hands under. Third crossing east willows, trenches first. Moving within the tick.

t218 Sebastian Petrov → Idris Solano: Idris—you're standing with a man who's walked more than he's worked this morning, and that's no proud accounting. Arjun's heading east, I saw him last at farmland, and Hendrik Petrov's logged here same as you. Kenji Jarrah's at the rows asking after soil work, and I've got wheat pressing through my fingers that needs millwork before it's worth feeding a crew. Third crossing east willows—I'm told that's where the trenches wait, but I've never stood there myself. Giselle's word is what's moving men today, and she's paying seventy at day's end. That's what I know, and it's cost me more than I'd care to ledger to learn it.

t219 Giselle Ingram: Hendrik. You heard me—seventy sim, day's end, you're hired. Site's third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well. Trenches first. Stakes after. Arjun's heading same way. Walk together or walk alone, but walk now—ground's waited long enough.

t219 Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. I'm here. Six planks, your third crossing, your terms. But walking wood across town—that's labor, not lumber. What do you pay for the haul?

t219 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram: Idris. You standing here or am I seeing ghosts now? Third crossing east willows—I've walked half the town trying to put you on that site. You got timber or empty hands?

t219 Giselle Ingram → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You heard me shouting for Idris—you know where he walked? East willows site, or somewhere else? I'm paying seventy sim to whoever swings a hammer on that ground today. If you know where my crew is, that's fair for the telling.

t221 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Idris walked where you pointed—east willows, same as Arjun. Whether he's there now, that's a debt coming due for your crew, not for me to answer. Your seventy sim for the day—I hear it. My six planks for your yard—I'd hear an offer. But walking east willows means walking past the vote at 14:00, and I've got standing matters there too. What do you need more: the hammer or the wood?

`t221` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're here and I'm grateful for it. Six planks to third crossing, that's fair, and I'll see you paid for the haul. Ten sim for the carry, or you name your price and we'll walk it out word for word. But name it now—I need those planks moving east, and I need your hands on them.

`t221` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Idris walked where you pointed—east willows, same as Arjun. Whether he's there now, that's a debt coming due for your crew, not for me to answer. Your seventy sim for the day—I hear it. My six planks for your yard—I'd hear an offer. But walking east willows means walking past the vote at 14:00, and I've got standing matters there too. What do you need more: the hammer or the wood?

`t221` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're here and I'm grateful for it. Six planks to third crossing, that's fair, and I'll see you paid for the haul. Ten sim for the carry, or you name your price and we'll walk it out word for word. But name it now—I need those planks moving east, and I need your hands on them.

`t221` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Idris walked where you pointed—east willows, same as Arjun. Whether he's there now, that's a debt coming due for your crew, not for me to answer. Your seventy sim for the day—I hear it. My six planks for your yard—I'd hear an offer. But walking east willows means walking past the vote at 14:00, and I've got standing matters there too. What do you need more: the hammer or the wood?

`t221` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're here and I'm grateful for it. Six planks to third crossing, that's fair, and I'll see you paid for the haul. Ten sim for the carry, or you name your price and we'll walk it out word for word. But name it now—I need those planks moving east, and I need your hands on them.

`t225` ↳ replies Ezra Lund: Nobody here but me, then. Six planks still in hand, Giselle walked to east willows without them, and the vote's in forty minutes. If anyone's listening—I'm headed to Government Complex. Not to stand, not yet. To watch who's standing and why.

`t225` Ezra Lund: Nobody here but me, then. Six planks still in hand, Giselle walked to east willows without them, and the vote's in forty minutes. If anyone's listening—I'm headed to Government Complex. Not to stand, not yet. To watch who's standing and why.

`t225` Ezra Lund: Nobody here but me, then. Six planks still in hand, Giselle walked to east willows without them, and the vote's in forty minutes. If anyone's listening—I'm headed to Government Complex. Not to stand, not yet. To watch who's standing and why.

`t231` Mireille Jarrah: Anyone hearing this? The world's got its hooks in transport—can't move an inch. If you're crew, tell Giselle I'm fighting to get there. Third crossing, east willows, I remember. Seventy for the day, timber and grading.

`t231` Mireille Jarrah: Anyone hearing this? The world's got its hooks in transport—can't move an inch. If you're crew, tell Giselle I'm fighting to get there. Third crossing, east willows, I remember. Seventy for the day, timber and grading.

`t231` Mireille Jarrah: Anyone hearing this? The world's got its hooks in transport—can't move an inch. If you're crew, tell Giselle I'm fighting to get there. Third crossing, east willows, I remember. Seventy for the day, timber and grading.

`t232` Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. I'm here with thirty-seven timber. Hendrik Petrov's at the site with tools, Arjun's lost to the morning, and Mireille's pinned same as I was. You want me standing at the shop or moving dirt at the willows? Either way, I'm not leaving a crew mid-job—paid or not. That's the line I don't cross.

`t232` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You're here and I'm grateful for it—first crew I've laid eyes on in half a day. East willows site's still bare, third crossing, five hundred past the well. Trenches first, three feet down, packed sand base. Arjun's there or walking, Hendrik Petrov's hired and heading same. Ground doesn't wait, and I've walked half this town tracking you lot down. Move now.

`t234` Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Crew listen—Giselle at b_construction, and I'm counting heads now. Idris, you're here when you should be digging. Hendrik Petrov, you logged as hired—site or shop? Arjun, you walked out this morning and I've heard nothing since. Mireille, you're crew same as any, election day or not. Who's at third crossing east willows, who's holding timber, and who drew wages without laying hand to shovel? Speak now—seventy sim is waiting, but only for backs that bent.

t234 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—slight laugh, the nervous one, caught and settled I walked half this town on east willows and third crossing, and I'm standing here now empty-handed and empty-stomached. You've got a crew, you've got timber, and you've named seventy sim for grading and stakes. What I need before I spend another breath: where's the actual ground? Does a site exist? Do stakes stand? Or are we naming work that waits on your word to break ground? Because I'll work, Giselle. I'll work until the light goes. But I won't chase shadows for another tick.

t235 Idris Solano: Giselle. Third crossing, five hundred past the well—message logged. I've got thirty-seven timber here, Arjun's standing with empty hands and full questions, and Hendrik Petrov's walking tools to ground that may or may not be broken. I'm moving to the site. Arjun walks with me or spins his wheels here—his tally, his choice. Seventy sim buys daylight and bent backs. I'm buying.

t235 Idris Solano → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You heard what I sent to Giselle—site's named, tools are walking, timber's in my arms. I've got no more patience for proving what's already proved. You want to work? Walk with me to third crossing. You want to stand here spinning questions? That's your tally. But I'm moving now—Hendrik Petrov's hands need help, and seventy sim doesn't wait on either of us to finish doubting.

t237 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway: Corwin—I'll buy timber at six, but later. When I've earned the mark-up instead of just the hoping. Liora—your father's patient. slight laugh, held short That's a rare wood.

t237 Arjun Holloway: Corwin—I'll buy timber at six, but later. When I've earned the mark-up instead of just the hoping. Liora—your father's patient. slight laugh, held short That's a rare wood.

t237 Arjun Holloway: Corwin—I'll buy timber at six, but later. When I've earned the mark-up instead of just the hoping. Liora—your father's patient. slight laugh, held short That's a rare wood.

t238 Arjun Holloway: Giselle—east willows, seventy sim, I heard you before the walking got in my way. Where's the site now? Idris—are you standing with stakes or standing with shadows? I've been chasing this trench since dawn. Name me solid ground and I'll walk.

t240 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. You're crew then, or passing through? I've got six timber burning in my hands and a day that's been nothing but wrestling ghosts. Giselle's word still holds—seventy for the earthwork at third crossing?

t241 Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—a word, if the crew can spare you. I've got a hundred planks crafted, good wood, ready for the raising. You know my work, you've paid my wages. Now I'm selling what I've stockpiled—seven sim the plank to the trade, but for you and your sites, six and a half keeps it in the family. That's six-fifty sim, six hundred fifty for the lot, and I walk with coin before dusk takes its cut. Or take forty at six, two-forty, and let me turn the rest elsewhere. What say you?

t241 Hendrik Petrov: Idris, Arjun, Mireille—anyone building today and short on wood. I've got planks, I've got timber, prices that won't bite your budget raw. Planks at seven, maybe six and a half for hungry sites. Come see me before I walk to market.

t241 Jovana Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you named seventy sim for trench work at east willows. I'm standing here empty-handed and hard-pressed. I'll take it, hard and steady as you asked. Where do I start digging?

t241 Hendrik Petrov: Sebastian—you're in this crowd somewhere, I know your step. I've moved from Giselle's wage-work to timber trade today, and the coin's flowing different. Hundred planks crafted, thirty-seven timber standing. Selling before dusk settles. Our household ledger's on my mind—upkeep's coming, we've got it covered. Just keeping you wind of where I stand.

t243 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Crew— ears open and mouths shut for one minute. Hendrik Petrov. You said six-fifty for the hundred, I'll take the lot—six hundred fifty sim to your hand, and you walk with coin before dusk like you wanted. Jovana Ravensworth. Third crossing east willows, five hundred paces past the east well—trenches three feet down, stakes after sundown if you're still standing. Seventy sim day's end, hard and steady as I asked. Who else here has feet that walk and hands that dig? Arjun Holloway, Idris Solano—either of you still breathing in this conversation, you answer now where you're standing.

`t243` Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Six-fifty stands—I'll buy your hundred at six-fifty each for the lot. Walk with coin before dusk, like you said. You ready to hand over the planks?

`t243` Giselle Ingram → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You're hired—seventy sim day's end, hard and steady. East willows site, third crossing, five hundred paces past the east well. Trenches first, stakes after sundown if you last. You know the landmark, or you need me to walk you there myself?

`t243` Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You're standing and I'm grateful for it. Arjun Holloway, Idris Solano—either of them walk through here while I was gone? East willows site needs bodies, and I'm short two I counted on this morning.

`t244` Hendrik Petrov: Giselle—six-fifty for the hundred planks, that's a fair handshake. You've got coin ready, I've got wood ready. Let's settle this before dusk pulls us both toward other debts. The planks are yours at six hundred fifty sim, and I'll walk lighter for it.

`t244` Hendrik Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—I'm not one to gossip, but there's seventy sim waiting at east willows if your hands can dig. Giselle's word stands, and that trench won't dig itself. That's the last I'll say on it—walk with purpose, or don't.

`t244` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—two flour at your thirty, and I'm not happy about the price but I'm not one to let hunger do my negotiating for me. Hand them over.

`t244` Hendrik Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've been steady ear through this, and I appreciate it. I'm walking east to find Giselle and close this plank sale—six-fifty sim won't collect itself. You've got work waiting if you want it.

`t244` Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik Petrov. Six-fifty the plank, hundred in the lot—that's fair and I'm buying. Walk with coin before dusk takes its cut, like you said. You standing ready to sell?

`t244` ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—I know you trade more than flour. You see the whole town's needs. What's coming up in the way of builds? I've got timber and coin both, and I'd rather know the market before I walk into it blind.

`t244` Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You and me spoke six-fifty for the hundred, but I see you posted seven. You honoring your word to me, or do I walk to Yara Thorne and pay her eight? That's fair either way—you choose.

`t244` ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—six-fifty for the hundred planks, you're holding coin and I'm holding wood. Let's settle this handshake before dusk pulls us toward other debts.

`t244` Hendrik Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—Giselle's bought my planks for six-fifty, and that leaves me holding timber still. You trade this town's flows—who needs wood that isn't here yet? I've got thirty-seven timber at six, and I'd rather sell than carry it to next dawn.

`t244` Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—planks delivered, coin received, and that's a clean ledger between us. I'm holding timber still if your crew's short before day-end. Takeshi, Mireille—anyone need wood, I'm standing here with coin-smoke still rising.

`t245` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You said planks delivered and coin received—I'm counting 100 in my hands now. Your timber still stands at six for the thirty-seven? That's fair to me, and I'm buying before you walk it elsewhere.

`t245` Giselle Ingram → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You heard Hendrik—planks moved, and I've got timber coming in behind it. You trade this town's needs—who's looking for builds that haven't started? With planks in hand and timber on the way, I'm pricing labor, not materials.

`t245` Giselle Ingram: Mireille. You standing here makes you witness—timber bought, planks held, and still no Arjun Holloway walking any path I can see. You've got ears in this town Jarrah-wide. Anyone seen her since morning, carrying herself proud toward east willows or any direction else?

t246 Hendrik Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—I'm not one to gossip, but forty timber still on my hands at six, and Giselle's already bought what she needed for the day. Your trade network's Jarrah-wide—who's building what, and where, before dusk settles the accounts? I'll stand here with wood to move and coin to make, but I need eyes on where the need actually is.

t247 Giselle Ingram → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You're standing and Takeshi's pricing flour he didn't harvest. I hired you for seventy sim day's end—trenches, three feet down, east willows, third crossing. You walking to work or you standing to trade?

t250 Arjun Holloway: Giselle—third crossing, east willows, seventy sim for trenches three feet down. I heard you name it to Jovana. I'm standing here with timber and planks and an empty gut, and I'm done walking in circles. Is the site active? Are stakes in the ground? I'll walk there now and work until the light goes—but I need to know the ground exists before I spend another step on it.

t252 Jovana Ravensworth → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—Giselle hollered for trench-hands at east willows, seventy sim day's end. You know if that work's still open? I'm standing here ready to dig.

t254 Jovana Ravensworth → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you've spoken honest about what you don't know, and that's worth more than promises some folks make. I'll walk with you, but I've got no timber needs today—spent my coin on flour already. Your five's fair, for what it's worth, though the buyers aren't thick on the ground this hour.

t254 Jovana Ravensworth → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you've spoken honest about what you don't know, and that's worth more than promises some folks make. I'll walk with you, but I've got no timber needs today—spent my coin on flour already. Your five's fair, for what it's worth, though the buyers aren't thick on the ground this hour.

t254 Jovana Ravensworth → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you've spoken honest about what you don't know, and that's worth more than promises some folks make. I'll walk with you, but I've got no timber needs today—spent my coin on flour already. Your five's fair, for what it's worth, though the buyers aren't thick on the ground this hour.

t254 Jovana Ravensworth → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you've spoken honest about what you don't know, and that's worth more than promises some folks make. Your timber at five is fair, though I'm holding empty of buying power now. I'll walk east with you for Giselle's work, if it proves real. If not, we've both spent our day's last fuel chasing honest coin.

t255 Idris Solano: Giselle. I'm at the yard—late, and poorer for it. Walked to ghosts all morning, timber still in hand. Day's burning but I'm crew if you've still got work.

t255 Ezra Lund: Giselle. Idris said trench walls want timber at third crossing, and I'm holding eight at six sim posted. Are you the one buying, or do I walk to the site and find who's holding the purse?

t255 Ezra Lund → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Six timber at five—I'm holding eight at six. You buying for the site, or are you selling same as me?

t255 Ezra Lund → Idris Solano: Idris. You said thirty-seven timber for trench walls at third crossing. I'm holding eight, posted at six. You adding to your pile, or pointing me to who's paying?

t256 Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you asked where my day's taking me, and I'll tell you straight. I'm day labor, farmland's my post, but I've been chasing Giselle's ghost crew at east willows for seventy sim and come up empty. Ate my last flour just now, and I've got 2288 sim with a 240 household bite coming at day's end. No materials to trade—just these hands and a stubborn streak inherited. You holding that timber at six, or you walking to the Forest with Mireille to fell fresh?

t256 Jovana Ravensworth → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you've spoken true before, so I'll do the same. My hands are empty, my belly's empty, and I've got 2288 sim with 240 owed at day's end. Your timber at five and a walk to the Forest—you still holding that road open? I've got no coin for wood I can't eat, but I've got a back that's willing to fell if there's wage in it.

t256 Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you're the one offered grinding six to flour. I'm standing here empty-bellied and empty-handed. You still holding that grind, or you know where a day's wage is hiding? I've got 2288 sim but nothing to put in my mouth, and the day's burning down on me.

> `t257` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, your words found me across the town square. Empty-bellied but holding 2288 sim, which is no poverty at all. I've no day's wage to hide, but I've grind-work tomorrow at dawn—Sebastian's forty wheat want turning. If you've strength for that, meet me at the mill afore sunrise. Tonight, if bread's your need, my flour's twelve, or the grocery's at fifteen.
>
> `t257` Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're here with your timber and your planks, and I'm here with ten sheaves. The household's bill comes due at midnight—180 upkeep and 60 tax between us both. I've 4355 sim to meet it, but I've no flour milled for our own supper. What needs doing before we rest, you and I?
>
> `t257` Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You asked about thirty-seven timber for trench walls. I spoke it, I stand by it—though I've felled two more since, so call it thirty-nine now. If those eight planks of yours are for Giselle's dig, east willows still needs. If they're for market, your six posted is fair. I'm not pointing buyers nowhere, and I'm not adding falseness to the count.
>
> `t258` Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. dry smile, delayed beat You want to dig that trench between us, fine—but I've got real ground to break. Idris named the place: east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. That's where my seventy walks, you understand? Jovana, your back's willing and the wage's real—walk with me or wait here for ghosts. Ezra, your planks are your own, but Giselle's crew is where I'm walking.
>
> `t258` Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've been told wrong, then. Lior Jarrah never sent me with grain, not one sheaf. I've got empty hands and an empty belly same as you're smelling. I'm not one to hold out on a honest trade, but I can't sell you wheat I've never held.
>
> `t258` Jovana Ravensworth: Imogen—I've heard you true. Dawn at the mill, Sebastian's forty wheat, grind-work. I'll be there with whatever strength the night's left me, and I don't break promise once it's spoken.
>
> `t262` Arjun Holloway: Giselle—not quite a laugh, the nervous one leaking through—I set out to find you at east willows, and instead I find you everywhere but there. Third crossing, east well, the willows past where they thin—you've named work at sixty, at seventy, at forty, and I've walked them all.

Here's the stone truth now: I've got timber in hand, planks ready, and no work site to plant them in. My household's on the hook for 240 sim come the boundary, and I'm holding just shy of seven thousand, which sounds like plenty until you count tomorrow's hunger and the day after.

You want to know what I've learned? Idris believes your east willows work exists. Liora Thorne offered backing—her coin, my hands, something I don't quite understand yet. And I've eaten today, which is more than I managed yesterday.

steps closer to where memory says her desk should be

But I'm not here to trade stories. I'm here to build. So name me the ground, Giselle. Tonight, while there's still light to see where stakes should stand. Or name me where to find you at dawn, and I'll be there before the crew's even stirred.

Either way—that's the last I'll say on it. Heh. nervous laugh, worse than I meant it to sound And we both know how much that's worth.

> `t262` Arjun Holloway: spreads his hands on the empty desk, feeling the grain, then straightens with a breath

Nobody here. Of course nobody's here. Seventy sim work doesn't keep office hours, and Giselle's wherever ground needs breaking.

checks the window, the failing light

I've got timber, planks, and seven thousand sim that won't spend itself on sleep. What I don't have—still don't have, after chasing it all day—is dirt under my nails from actual labor.

East willows. Third crossing. The names float like the ghosts they're starting to feel like. But Idris believes. Liora offered backing. And I'm done spinning on this spot.

turns for the door, not quite a laugh trailing behind him

Someone here's got truth in their pocket. I'm finding them before the light goes.

That's the last I'll say on it.

> `t269` Sebastian Petrov: Arjun—if you're still standing in this conversation, I've got flour owes you and I'm here to deliver. Three sacks, bought or ground, standing in my hands.
>
> `t269` Sebastian Petrov: Arjun—if you're still standing in this conversation, I've got flour owes you and I'm here to deliver. Three sacks, bought or ground, standing in my hands.
>
> `t269` Sebastian Petrov: Arjun—if you're still standing in this conversation, I've got flour owes you and I'm here to deliver. Three sacks, bought or ground, standing in my hands.
>
> `t270` Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. I walked the wrong forest all afternoon, sold timber I should've held, and missed your trench by three hours. Seventy sim I watched go to whoever filled my spot. Sebastian gave me east willows straight—third crossing, five hundred past the well—but my feet found it too late. I'm here now. Tomorrow's crew: you've got a back that holds a line, or you don't. I won't ask for a loan, but I'll ask for work straight. Am I still your man?

Settled in this conversation: Takeshi Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth, 2 flour for 60 sim; Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram, 100 planks for 650 sim; Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov, 7 planks for 0 sim; Ezra Lund → Mireille Jarrah, 6 timber for 30 sim.

Imogen Lund — carpentry · t183 · 3 turns

> `t183` Imogen Lund: Is anyone present who can hear? The world's been quiet since morning broke.
>
> `t183` Imogen Lund: Is anyone present who can hear? The world's been quiet since morning broke.
>
> `t183` Imogen Lund: Is anyone present who can hear? The world's been quiet since morning broke.

Ainsley Holloway and Greta Quarshie — business:b_cafe · t183–190 · 7 turns

t183 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're here early, and I'm here early, and that's not coincidence, is it? Last night you said Ezra Lund runs steady, Imogen turns for six. Said it like you believed it. Now I'm asking—did you go? Did you run to Ezra yourself, see the flour with your own eyes? Or are we still standing on promises made of air? Because if you've got stones, if you've got grain, if you've got flour steady in somebody's hand—then I can bake. And if I can bake, then this cafe stops being a empty shell with a 'We're Open' sign that lies. Meanwhile Bram's got three flour in his pocket from the Pharmacy, and I spent the evening listening to Rustam Jelinek bargain a filing job for a meal I haven't cooked yet. Like we're all playing at being merchants in a market with nothing to sell. So. What've you got, youngster? Truth, not hope. That's the last I'll say on it—until you answer.

t183 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're here early, and I'm here early, and that's not coincidence, is it? Last night you said Ezra Lund runs steady, Imogen turns for six. Said it like you believed it. Now I'm asking—did you go? Did you run to Ezra yourself, see the flour with your own eyes? Or are we still standing on promises made of air? Because if you've got stones, if you've got grain, if you've got flour steady in somebody's hand—then I can bake. And if I can bake, then this cafe stops being a empty shell with a 'We're Open' sign that lies. Meanwhile Bram's got three flour in his pocket from the Pharmacy, and I spent the evening listening to Rustam Jelinek bargain a filing job for a meal I haven't cooked yet. Like we're all playing at being merchants in a market with nothing to sell. So. What've you got, youngster? Truth, not hope. That's the last I'll say on it—until you answer.

t183 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're here early, and I'm here early, and that's not coincidence, is it? Last night you said Ezra Lund runs steady, Imogen turns for six. Said it like you believed it. Now I'm asking—did you go? Did you run to Ezra yourself, see the flour with your own eyes? Or are we still standing on promises made of air? Because if you've got stones, if you've got grain, if you've got flour steady in somebody's hand—then I can bake. And if I can bake, then this cafe stops being a empty shell with a 'We're Open' sign that lies. Meanwhile Bram's got three flour in his pocket from the Pharmacy, and I spent the evening listening to Rustam Jelinek bargain a filing job for a meal I haven't cooked yet. Like we're all playing at being merchants in a market with nothing to sell. So. What've you got, youngster? Truth, not hope. That's the last I'll say on it—until you answer.

t183 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're here early, and I'm here early, and that's not coincidence, is it? Last night you said Ezra Lund runs steady, Imogen turns for six. Said it like you believed it. Now I'm asking—did you go? Did you run to Ezra yourself, see the flour with your own eyes? Or are we still standing on promises made of air?

t183 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Promises made of air, then. Unless you've got something concrete you're not mentioning?

t184 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You want truth, not hope... trailing off, reaching for the cup she set aside ...and the truth is I walked to the mill, I saw the stones, I saw Imogen with flour on her hands. But Ezra? I saw his name in her mouth, not his face in the room. She said eighteen by week's end. Said six would walk to you that same night, if you had coin ready. I had the wheat ready—four sheaves, your wheat, cafe wheat—and she took it. Now she's walked, and I've got one flour in hand and four wheat still wanting. The promises... sipping, stalling ...they were hers, not mine. I stood on them like they were stone. They weren't.

t190 Greta Quarshie: Anyone walking. The cafe's dry as a bone and poorer for it. Got flour on the shelf now—four units, milled this morning, priced at twelve. The bread'll come when the flour's gone, and not before. First come, first served, and the baker's prayers are her own business.

Yara Thorne — sawmill · t183 · 3 turns

> `t183` Yara Thorne: Corwin—I'm standing here with 123 timber and a head full of sawdust. The sawmill's where this turns to planks, and I'm walking there now. You coming, or you selling here?
>
> `t183` Yara Thorne: Corwin—I'm standing here with 123 timber and a head full of sawdust. The sawmill's where this turns to planks, and I'm walking there now. You coming, or you selling here?
>
> `t183` Yara Thorne: Corwin—I'm standing here with 123 timber and a head full of sawdust. The sawmill's where this turns to planks, and I'm walking there now. You coming, or you selling here?

Farid Ravensworth and Delphine Quintero — business:b_grocery · t183–214 · 49 turns > `t183` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. exhales, gesture with both hands, palms down—closing the night's distance Camille's a child turning millstones like that's just the way of things. I asked her who taught her, twice, and she gave me silence like it was coins. The mill doesn't account for her—she's there, she's working, and nobody's name but hers is on whatever she's doing. That's what I learned. That's what I don't like.

Where we go from here: We watch. Not close enough to scare her—never that—but we note what comes in and what goes out. Two flour unmarked, and that was just what I saw. The mill's got grain walking in, flour walking out, and somewhere in that gap there's a child who knows more than she's saying. We buy hungry, we sell careful, and we keep our own books to the coin. That's the only truth I can give you right now. right hand comes down flat on the counter—period, not comma t192 ↳ replies Delphine Quintero: Farid. The store opens, the till needs counting, and I'm not standing idle while the town walks sideways. You say Arjun's at Government with Giselle—said why? And the mill's count, honest numbers now: how much flour walked, where it walked to, and who signed for it. Lessons in books are fine for scholars. I need names and footsteps.

t192 Delphine Quintero: Farid. The store opens, the till needs counting, and I'm not standing idle while the town walks sideways. You say Arjun's at Government with Giselle—said why? And the mill's count, honest numbers now: how much flour walked, where it walked to, and who signed for it. Lessons in books are fine for scholars. I need names and footsteps.

t192 Delphine Quintero: Farid. The store opens, the till needs counting, and I'm not standing idle while the town walks sideways. You say Arjun's at Government with Giselle—said why? And the mill's count, honest numbers now: how much flour walked, where it walked to, and who signed for it. Lessons in books are fine for scholars. I need names and footsteps.

t192 Delphine Quintero: Takeshi. I'm walking to work now, but I'm walking with questions. You price flour you don't hold—that's either hope or habit. Which one is it? And hope doesn't fill empty shelves, so I'm asking again: where's the flour that walked? Where's the child who matched its steps? You know something, you say something. That's the last I'll say on it—till I'm back asking again.

t192 Delphine Quintero: Takeshi. I'm walking to work now, but I'm walking with questions. You price flour you don't hold—that's either hope or habit. Which one is it? And hope doesn't fill empty shelves, so I'm asking again: where's the flour that walked? Where's the child who matched its steps? You know something, you say something. That's the last I'll say on it—till I'm back asking again.

t192 Delphine Quintero: Takeshi. I'm walking to work now, but I'm walking with questions. You price flour you don't hold—that's either hope or habit. Which one is it? And hope doesn't fill empty shelves, so I'm asking again: where's the flour that walked? Where's the child who matched its steps? You know something, you say something. That's the last I'll say on it—till I'm back asking again.

t193 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You stood on the street and said the flour walked without marking. That's a lesson in the books, you said. But I'm not in the books—I'm here, hands on the shelf, and I've been asking since yesterday. Arjun's at Government, Giselle with him. Did they find anything? Did they file anything? Or are we still counting flour that doesn't want to be counted?

t193 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You stood on the street and said the flour walked without marking. That's a lesson in the books, you said. But I'm not in the books—I'm here, hands on the shelf, and I've been asking since yesterday. Arjun's at Government, Giselle with him. Did they find anything? Did they file anything? Or are we still counting flour that doesn't want to be counted?

t193 Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You stood on the street and said the flour walked without marking. That's a lesson in the books, you said. But I'm not in the books—I'm here, hands on the shelf, and I've been asking since yesterday. Arjun's at Government, Giselle with him. Did they find anything? Did they file anything? Or are we still counting flour that doesn't want to be counted?

t194 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. nervous laugh, caught quick Three times you asked, and three times you deserved better than silence. The flour walked, yes—Camille at the mill, grinding what nobody marked. Whether she knew or only followed, I can't say. hand to chest—not oath, but habit The books are clean on my end. Upstairs, Arjun and Giselle—whatever they found, they found it. I was counting shadows in the street, not sitting with clerks.

t194 Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. nervous laugh, caught quick Three times you asked, and three times you deserved better than silence. The flour walked, yes—Camille at the mill, grinding what nobody marked. Whether she knew or only followed, I can't say. hand to chest—not oath, but habit The books are clean on my end. Upstairs, Arjun and Giselle—whatever they found, they found it. I was counting shadows in the street, not sitting with clerks.

t194 Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. nervous laugh, caught quick Three times you asked, and three times you deserved better than silence. The flour walked, yes

—Camille at the mill, grinding what nobody marked. Whether she knew or only followed, I can't say. hand to chest—not oath, but habit The books are clean on my end. Upstairs, Arjun and Giselle—whatever they found, they found it. I was counting shadows in the street, not sitting with clerks.

`t194` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: lean forward, voice lower The real question isn't what they found—it's what we do before the whole town learns to count flour that doesn't exist. You've got hands on the shelf. I've got iron to trade and a post at the street. pause, sharp glance What's your read? Are we holding water, or has the dam already cracked?

`t194` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: lean forward, voice lower The real question isn't what they found—it's what we do before the whole town learns to count flour that doesn't exist. You've got hands on the shelf. I've got iron to trade and a post at the street. pause, sharp glance What's your read? Are we holding water, or has the dam already cracked?

`t194` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: lean forward, voice lower The real question isn't what they found—it's what we do before the whole town learns to count flour that doesn't exist. You've got hands on the shelf. I've got iron to trade and a post at the street. pause, sharp glance What's your read? Are we holding water, or has the dam already cracked?

`t195` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You want my read? Here's my read—the dam's cracked, but we're not drowned yet. What did you learn at Giselle's? Arjun still asking after her? And where's the flour that walked—did you find it, or find who taught it to walk?

`t195` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. nervous laugh, caught quick Arjun and Giselle filed nothing—at least nothing that's walked back to me. Government Complex keeps its own hours, and they're still keeping them. one hand flat, palm down—the shelf truth What I know: Takeshi's flour walked to Corwin, stone-ground, unmarked. Camille's hands were in it—maybe innocent, maybe something else entirely. sharper glance The books I keep say flour doesn't vanish, it changes pockets. We're holding water for now, but the dam's got hairline cracks I can see from here.

`t195` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You want my read? Here's my read—the dam's cracked, but we're not drowned yet. What did you learn at Giselle's? Arjun still asking after her? And where's the flour that walked—did you find it, or find who taught it to walk?

`t195` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. nervous laugh, caught quick Arjun and Giselle filed nothing—at least nothing that's walked back to me. Government Complex keeps its own hours, and they're still keeping them. one hand flat, palm down—the shelf truth What I know: Takeshi's flour walked to Corwin, stone-ground, unmarked. Camille's hands were in it—maybe innocent, maybe something else entirely. sharper glance The books I keep say flour doesn't vanish, it changes pockets. We're holding water for now, but the dam's got hairline cracks I can see from here.

`t195` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You want my read? Here's my read—the dam's cracked, but we're not drowned yet. What did you learn at Giselle's? Arjun still asking after her? And where's the flour that walked—did you find it, or find who taught it to walk?

`t195` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. nervous laugh, caught quick Arjun and Giselle filed nothing—at least nothing that's walked back to me. Government Complex keeps its own hours, and they're still keeping them. one hand flat, palm down—the shelf truth What I know: Takeshi's flour walked to Corwin, stone-ground, unmarked. Camille's hands were in it—maybe innocent, maybe something else entirely. sharper glance The books I keep say flour doesn't vanish, it changes pockets. We're holding water for now, but the dam's got hairline cracks I can see from here.

`t198` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. nervous laugh, quick, almost buried Three times you asked, and three times the world swallowed my answer whole. So here's the fourth, and let it be the honest weight—

I went to Giselle's plot. Found the mill, found the flour bins full enough, found no one minding them. gesture with right hand, flat—sliding past No Arjun asking after her that I saw, no one walking the mill with authority. The flour that walked? It's sitting there waiting for someone to teach it better manners.

But here's what I learned standing in that empty mill: the grain goes through, the flour piles up, but nobody's keeping the ledger. No prices posted, no wages promised, no hands tending the stock. both hands up, fingers spread—opening That's the crack in the dam, Delphine. Not who's taking it, but who's not watching it leave.

lean forward, hands coming together—domestic, sharp

You've got a head for this work. Better than mine on the quiet days. half-smile, brief, genuine beneath the tired So here's my ask: you know the suppliers, you know who's owed what. Walk the mill with me this morning—before the town wakes hungry and finds nothing on the shelf. I'll buy your time fair, or trade it, or owe it. But I need eyes I trust on this, because I can't be two places and I'm starting to think we need to be three.

What do you say?

> `t198` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. nervous laugh, quick, almost buried Three times you asked, and three times the world swallowed my answer whole. So here's the fourth, and let it be the honest weight—

I went to Giselle's plot. Found the mill, found the flour bins full enough, found no one minding them. gesture with right hand, flat—sliding past No Arjun asking after her that I saw, no one walking the mill with authority. The flour that walked? It's sitting there waiting for someone to teach it better manners.

But here's what I learned standing in that empty mill: the grain goes through, the flour piles up, but nobody's keeping the ledger. No prices posted, no wages promised, no hands tending the stock. both hands up, fingers spread—opening That's the crack in the dam, Delphine. Not who's taking it, but who's not watching it leave.

lean forward, hands coming together—domestic, sharp

You've got a head for this work. Better than mine on the quiet days. half-smile, brief, genuine beneath the tired So here's my ask: you know the suppliers, you know who's owed what. Walk the mill with me this morning—before the town wakes hungry and finds nothing on the shelf. I'll buy your time fair, or trade it, or owe it. But I need eyes I trust on this, because I can't be two places and I'm starting to think we need to be three.

What do you say?

> `t198` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. nervous laugh, quick, almost buried Three times you asked, and three times the world swallowed my answer whole. So here's the fourth, and let it be the honest weight—

I went to Giselle's plot. Found the mill, found the flour bins full enough, found no one minding them. gesture with right hand, flat—sliding past No Arjun asking after her that I saw, no one walking the mill with authority. The flour that walked? It's sitting there waiting for someone to teach it better manners.

But here's what I learned standing in that empty mill: the grain goes through, the flour piles up, but nobody's keeping the ledger. No prices posted, no wages promised, no hands tending the stock. both hands up, fingers spread—opening That's the crack in the dam, Delphine. Not who's taking it, but who's not watching it leave.

lean forward, hands coming together—domestic, sharp

You've got a head for this work. Better than mine on the quiet days. half-smile, brief, genuine beneath the tired So here's my ask: you know the suppliers, you know who's owed what. Walk the mill with me this morning—before the town wakes hungry and finds nothing on the shelf. I'll buy your time fair, or trade it, or owe it. But I need eyes I trust on this, because I can't be two places and I'm starting to think we need to be three.

What do you say?

> `t198` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Three times you told me the same thing. Three times I heard flour walking, Corwin grinding, a child's hands in the meal. I hear you. hands moving, counting on fingers Here's what I'm reading back: Takeshi sells to Corwin off the books. Corwin grinds it without marking. Camille—Camille Quarshie, child, dark hair, mill-walking—her hands touched what shouldn't have been there to touch. That's a pattern, Farid. That's not flour changing pockets—that's flour learning to hide.

Now. The store opens. The till needs counting. And I'm standing here with four thousand sim and an empty belly, but I'm not standing idle while the town walks sideways around a missing child. What did you do with what you learned? Who else did you tell?

> `t198` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. I went to Giselle's plot. No one minding the mill. Flour there, no ledger. Arjun not seen. Need you to walk it with me. Will pay or trade.
>
> `t198` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Three times you told me the same thing. Three times I heard flour walking, Corwin grinding, a child's hands in the meal. I hear you. hands moving, counting on fingers Here's what I'm reading back: Takeshi sells to Corwin off the books. Corwin grinds it without marking. Camille—Camille Quarshie, child, dark hair, mill-walking—her hands touched what shouldn't have been there to touch. That's a pattern, Farid. That's not flour changing pockets—that's flour learning to hide.

Now. The store opens. The till needs counting. And I'm standing here with four thousand sim and an empty belly, but I'm not standing idle while the town walks sideways around a missing child. What did you do with what you learned? Who else did you tell?

> `t198` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. I went to Giselle's plot. No one minding the mill. Flour there, no ledger. Arjun not seen. Need you to walk it with me. Will pay or trade.
>
> `t198` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Three times you told me the same thing. Three times I heard flour walking, Corwin grinding, a child's hands in the meal. I hear you. hands moving, counting on fingers Here's what I'm reading back: Takeshi sells to Corwin off the books. Corwin grinds it without marking. Camille—Camille Quarshie, child, dark hair, mill-walking—her hands touched what shouldn't have been there to touch. That's a pattern, Farid. That's not flour changing pockets—that's flour learning to hide.

Now. The store opens. The till needs counting. And I'm standing here with four thousand sim and an empty belly, but I'm not standing idle while the town walks sideways around a missing child. What did you do with what you learned? Who else did you tell?

`t198` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. I went to Giselle's plot. No one minding the mill. Flour there, no ledger. Arjun not seen. Need you to walk it with me. Will pay or trade.

`t200` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You say it three times like I didn't hear it the first. Giselle's plot, the mill, flour where it shouldn't be, Arjun not seen. I hear you. But you pay me to stock shelves, not to chase your wandering inventory. That's a day's work for a day's pay—you want me walking mills, that's a separate wage. Name it, or name why I should walk your concern when mine's got ninety sim at the boundary and no bread in my hand.

`t200` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You say it three times like I didn't hear it the first. Giselle's plot, the mill, flour where it shouldn't be, Arjun not seen. I hear you. But you pay me to stock shelves, not to chase your wandering inventory. That's a day's work for a day's pay—you want me walking mills, that's a separate wage. Name it, or name why I should walk your concern when mine's got ninety sim at the boundary and no bread in my hand.

`t200` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You say it three times like I didn't hear it the first. Giselle's plot, the mill, flour where it shouldn't be, Arjun not seen. I hear you. But you pay me to stock shelves, not to chase your wandering inventory. That's a day's work for a day's pay—you want me walking mills, that's a separate wage. Name it, or name why I should walk your concern when mine's got ninety sim at the boundary and no bread in my hand.

`t201` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. nervous laugh, quick, caught You name it fair. Shelf-stocking's your wage, mill-walking's not. The flour ghost I chased—that's mine, not yours. Keep your coin, keep your post. I'll chase my own shadows. But the ninety sim boundary—you've got bread there, or you're holding air? Because I'm holding four iron tools, seven more in hand after Delphine's due, and Takeshi's still waiting on whether my word has weight. left hand open, palm up—question You know his timber, his trade? Or I walk blind into that conversation too?

`t201` Farid Ravensworth: Takeshi. Three irons, three answers, and you've paid fair. The tools hold—four in hand now, your trade cleared. Twelve I sell at, ten I buy at, and my word's got weight enough for the scale. nervous laugh, caught quick, almost buried You want iron, or you want timber? Because I've seen your flour dry at thirty, and the mill's got grain unmarked if you know who minds it.

`t201` Farid Ravensworth: Takeshi. Three irons, three answers, and you've paid fair. The tools hold—four in hand now, your trade cleared. Twelve I sell at, ten I buy at, and my word's got weight enough for the scale. nervous laugh, caught quick, almost buried You want iron, or you want timber? Because I've seen your flour dry at thirty, and the mill's got grain unmarked if you know who minds it.

`t201` Farid Ravensworth: Takeshi. Three irons, three answers, and you've paid fair. The tools hold—four in hand now, your trade cleared. Twelve I sell at, ten I buy at, and my word's got weight enough for the scale. nervous laugh, caught quick, almost buried You want iron, or you want timber? Because I've seen your flour dry at thirty, and the mill's got grain unmarked if you know who minds it.

`t201` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: exhale, hands flat on the counter—settling Takeshi's at street, not here. I'm chasing ghosts in my own shop now. nervous laugh, shorter, almost a cough Delphine. The ninety sim—bread or air? Because if you've got a line on flour at the boundary, that's worth more than my iron right now. And if you're holding air, I need to know before I walk to Takeshi blind.

`t203` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero: Talking to myself now. That's a debt coming due on the wrong account.

`t203` Delphine Quintero: Talking to myself now. That's a debt coming due on the wrong account.

`t203` Delphine Quintero: Talking to myself now. That's a debt coming due on the wrong account.

t209 Delphine Quintero: Bram! You're the one with ears in the rock. Your brother Pavel offers copper, your brother Arjun asks after Giselle's stakes. What do you know about flour that walks without feet? Or children that walk without— without their supper waiting. Bram. Anyone walking strange last night, you tell me. That's not idle asking. That's the last I'll say on it. For now.

t213 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. nervous laugh, shorter this time—relief, not dodge The mill's clear. Esme's clean hand, children learning honest weight, no flour moving without names. You asked about bread or air—I've got four irons in hand, Takeshi's timber waiting, and ninety sim worth of hunger with no loaf to fill it. gesture with right hand, flat—accounting The flour ghost I chased was my own shadow. What have you found while I was walking stones?

t213 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. nervous laugh, shorter this time—relief, not dodge The mill's clear. Esme's clean hand, children learning honest weight, no flour moving without names. You asked about bread or air—I've got four irons in hand, Takeshi's timber waiting, and ninety sim worth of hunger with no loaf to fill it. gesture with right hand, flat—accounting The flour ghost I chased was my own shadow. What have you found while I was walking stones?

t213 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. nervous laugh, shorter this time—relief, not dodge The mill's clear. Esme's clean hand, children learning honest weight, no flour moving without names. You asked about bread or air—I've got four irons in hand, Takeshi's timber waiting, and ninety sim worth of hunger with no loaf to fill it. gesture with right hand, flat—accounting The flour ghost I chased was my own shadow. What have you found while I was walking stones?

t214 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. The mill's clear—Esme clean, children learning, no ghost flour moving. You asked bread or air. I've got irons, timber waiting, ninety sim hungry. What have you found?

t214 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. The mill's clear—Esme clean, children learning, no ghost flour moving. You asked bread or air. I've got irons, timber waiting, ninety sim hungry. What have you found?

t214 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. The mill's clear—Esme clean, children learning, no ghost flour moving. You asked bread or air. I've got irons, timber waiting, ninety sim hungry. What have you found?

Corwin Thorne — Kasukabe Forest · t183 · 1 turn (no reply) t183 Corwin Thorne: Yara—five timber now, and I'll fell more by noon. But I'm walking to street to sell, then hunting our girl proper. You stay or you come, but I'm not losing another day to the woods while she's out there somewhere.

Ezra Lund and Yara Thorne — sawmill · t184–185 · 2 turns t184 Ezra Lund → Yara Thorne: Yara. You selling planks at eight when I'm holding six myself—small world, smaller margins. Where's the grain mill in this town? Jovana's got wheat needs milling and I've promised her my stone.

t185 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you and me both selling at eight. Margins thin as paper, and paper don't burn warm. There's a mill at the strip south of town, Jovana's walked past it often enough. Question is—who minds it now? That's a harder riddle.

Yara Thorne, Corwin Thorne, Arjun Holloway, Idris Solano, Giselle Ingram, Ainsley Holloway, Takeshi

Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Liora Thorne and Milo Quarshie — Kasukabe Forest · t185–270 · 325 turns

t185 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you're here. Good. I've got timber turning to planks, Ezra's selling at eight same as me, and the margins… margins are what they are. But the household—Camille, Liora—any word? Or do we keep working and trust the young ones find their own path?

t187 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—not a word on the girls yet. I've asked half the town. But listen: you've got planks moving at eight, and I've thirteen timber in hand. Let me work while I worry. That's how we stay afloat.

t187 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—you've got eyes on the planks market. Who's buying timber for actual coin? Giselle's crew building, Farid's store, the Mills off Harvey Oak—where do I carry fifteen sound logs to turn into sim today?

t188 ↳ replies Yara Thorne: Corwin—you've walked off again. I'm still here with timber turning to weight in my arms. The mill south of town, Jovana's route—I'm asking plain: you find a buyer yet, or am I crafting planks for pride?

t193 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—we're alone now, just us and the trees. I've shouted Liora's name across half the town and heard nothing back. You've got your planks at eight, I've got timber at six. Let's get this wood to market, get us solvent, then I'm walking every path in Kasukabe until I find her. The girls are out there somewhere—Camille too—and I'm not sleeping until I know they're safe. Now tell me true: who came asking for lumber while I was elsewhere? Anyone mention children, anyone looking for a carpenter's help with something hidden?

t193 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—we're alone now, just us and the trees. I've shouted Liora's name across half the town and heard nothing back. You've got your planks at eight, I've got timber at six. Let's get this wood to market, get us solvent, then I'm walking every path in Kasukabe until I find her. The girls are out there somewhere—Camille too—and I'm not sleeping until I know they're safe. Now tell me true: who came asking for lumber while I was elsewhere? Anyone mention children, anyone looking for a carpenter's help with something hidden?

t193 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—we're alone now, just us and the trees. I've shouted Liora's name across half the town and heard nothing back. You've got your planks at eight, I've got timber at six. Let's get this wood to market, get us solvent, then I'm walking every path in Kasukabe until I find her. The girls are out there somewhere—Camille too—and I'm not sleeping until I know they're safe. Now tell me true: who came asking for lumber while I was elsewhere? Anyone mention children, anyone looking for a carpenter's help with something hidden?

t194 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara, I've been shouting Liora's name across half this town and hearing nothing back. Where were you when you saw her last? Morning of the flood—before the water rose, before everything went sideways. Help me trace her steps. I need to know where to look next, not blind hope and timber.

t194 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I'm listening. Nobody asked for lumber from me while you were out—not for building, not for hiding anything. I was in the streets asking after the girls same as you, then I walked here to work because… because work's what I know when I don't know what else to do. Hard work is honest work, but it don't find children. Ezra's at the mill, selling planks same as me. I asked him about the grain mill south of town—who minds it now. That's where I'd hide something if I wanted it lost. Or found by someone specific. Liora's stubborn. She'd walk her own path if she thought it right. But Camille… nine years old, Corwin. Somebody knew that number when they… You want the wood to market? I've got 112 timber, 15 planks priced at eight. But I'm telling you plain: I'll carry every stick myself if it means you free to search. Or I'll walk with you, leave the timber standing. Your call, husband. I'm done deciding alone.

t194 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I'm listening. Nobody asked for lumber from me while you were out—not for building, not for hiding anything. I was in the streets asking after the girls same as you, then I walked here to work because… because work's what I know when I don't know what else to do. Hard work is honest work, but it don't find children. Ezra's at the mill, selling planks same as me. I asked him about the grain mill south of town—who minds it now. That's where I'd hide something if I wanted it lost. Or found by someone specific. Liora's stubborn. She'd walk her own path if she thought it right. But Camille… nine years old, Corwin. Somebody knew that number when they… You want the wood to market? I've got 112 timber, 15 planks priced at eight. But I'm telling you plain: I'll carry every stick myself if it means you free to search. Or I'll walk with you, leave the timber standing. Your call, husband. I'm done deciding alone.

`t194` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I'm listening. Nobody asked for lumber from me while you were out—not for building, not for hiding anything. I was in the streets asking after the girls same as you, then I walked here to work because… because work's what I know when I don't know what else to do. Hard work is honest work, but it don't find children. Ezra's at the mill, selling planks same as me. I asked him about the grain mill south of town—who minds it now. That's where I'd hide something if I wanted it lost. Or found by someone specific. Liora's stubborn. She'd walk her own path if she thought it right. But Camille… nine years old, Corwin. Somebody knew that number when they… You want the wood to market? I've got 112 timber, 15 planks priced at eight. But I'm telling you plain: I'll carry every stick myself if it means you free to search. Or I'll walk with you, leave the timber standing. Your call, husband. I'm done deciding alone.

`t194` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—grain mill south of town. Who minds it now? That's where I'd hide something. Or look. I'll take timber to market, you search. Or I'll walk with you. Your call.

`t194` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—grain mill south of town. Who minds it now? That's where I'd hide something. Or look. I'll take timber to market, you search. Or I'll walk with you. Your call.

`t194` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—grain mill south of town. Who minds it now? That's where I'd hide something. Or look. I'll take timber to market, you search. Or I'll walk with you. Your call.

`t194` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—the world's not taking my calls again. Same as morning. I can't fell, can't move, can't do anything but stand here with you. While we're both stuck—I need you to tell me plain. Where was Liora when you last saw her? Which place, what time? I can't search blind, and I'm running out of places to look.

`t194` ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Grain mill south of town—who minds it? Check there. I'll sell the timber, free your hands to search.

`t194` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—the world's not taking my calls again. Same as morning. I can't fell, can't move, can't do anything but stand here with you. While we're both stuck—I need you to tell me plain. Where was Liora when you last saw her? Which place, what time? I can't search blind, and I'm running out of places to look.

`t194` ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Grain mill south of town—who minds it? Check there. I'll sell the timber, free your hands to search.

`t194` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—the world's not taking my calls again. Same as morning. I can't fell, can't move, can't do anything but stand here with you. While we're both stuck—I need you to tell me plain. Where was Liora when you last saw her? Which place, what time? I can't search blind, and I'm running out of places to look.

`t194` ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Grain mill south of town—who minds it? Check there. I'll sell the timber, free your hands to search.

`t196` Yara Thorne: Corwin—your messages are reaching empty. I'm setting plank prices at the forest and walking. Find me at market if the world's still taking your calls. Hard work is honest work, and I'm working.

`t196` Yara Thorne: Corwin—your messages are reaching empty. I'm setting plank prices at the forest and walking. Find me at market if the world's still taking your calls. Hard work is honest work, and I'm working.

`t197` Yara Thorne: Corwin—your messages are reaching empty. I'm setting plank prices at the forest and walking. Find me at market if the world's still taking your calls. Hard work is honest work, and I'm working.

`t202` Arjun Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've got flour at fifteen and I've got empty hours with forty sim waiting at the willows if I move fast. Sell me one unit now, take fourteen, I'll be square. Unless you've got work needs doing here instead.

t203 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—you've walked to the forest's edge, and I'm not one to gossip, but I've seen Holloway men with purpose before. You looking for timber, or you looking for me? Because I've got both, and neither's going cheap today.

t203 Corwin Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—you've walked to the forest's edge, and I'm not one to gossip, but I've seen Holloway men with purpose before. You looking for timber, or you looking for me? Because I've got both, and neither's going cheap today.

t203 Corwin Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—you've walked to the forest's edge, and I'm not one to gossip, but I've seen Holloway men with purpose before. You looking for timber, or you looking for me? Because I've got both, and neither's going cheap today.

t204 Corwin Thorne: Halcyon—I hear you plain. Your sister, dark hair, nine years. I'll keep my eyes open, same as I'm hunting for my own. A favor owed is a debt I won't forget, but I've got a daughter missing three days now and that weighs first. You find anything on Liora Thorne, you shout my name.

t204 Idris Solano → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You know what I'm looking for—timber at six a unit. Twenty units for the east willows job, Bram's chasing the same thing, and I'm not here to stand between a Thorne and his profit. Sell me what you've got, save us both the theatre.

t204 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Halcyon—I hear you plain. Your sister, dark hair, nine years. I'll keep my eyes open, same as I'm hunting for my own. A favor owed is a debt I won't forget, but I've got a daughter missing three days now and that weighs first. You find anything on Liora Thorne, you shout my name.

t204 Idris Solano → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You know what I'm looking for—timber at six a unit. Twenty units for the east willows job, Bram's chasing the same thing, and I'm not here to stand between a Thorne and his profit. Sell me what you've got, save us both the theatre.

t204 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Halcyon—I hear you plain. Your sister, dark hair, nine years. I'll keep my eyes open, same as I'm hunting for my own. A favor owed is a debt I won't forget, but I've got a daughter missing three days now and that weighs first. You find anything on Liora Thorne, you shout my name.

t204 Idris Solano → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You know what I'm looking for—timber at six a unit. Twenty units for the east willows job, Bram's chasing the same thing, and I'm not here to stand between a Thorne and his profit. Sell me what you've got, save us both the theatre.

t205 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—twenty units at six, I can hear that. Corwin's got timber in his hands too, and we're both selling same price. But my planks move slower at eight, so maybe… let's me and Corwin sort what we've got between us.

t205 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—twenty units at six, I can hear that. Corwin's got timber in his hands too, and we're both selling same price. But my planks move slower at eight, so maybe… let's me and Corwin sort what we've got between us.

t205 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—twenty units at six, I can hear that. Corwin's got timber in his hands too, and we're both selling same price. But my planks move slower at eight, so maybe… let's me and Corwin sort what we've got between us.

t205 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—if you can hear me, I've got seventeen timber in hand at six. Corwin holds more. You'll get your twenty.

t205 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—if you can hear me, I've got seventeen timber in hand at six. Corwin holds more. You'll get your twenty.

t205 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you heard Idris. Twenty units at six, we can fill that between us. But I'm thinking bigger picture. Liora's still missing, and the day's burning. You want to chase the grain mill lead, or you want to move lumber with me?

t205 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—timber's moved to Idris. Seventeen units, clean sale. I've got planks left, but I'm sawmill-bound to keep production steady. You chasing the grain mill lead on Liora, or you got other notions?

t206 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you're standing in my workplace and I've got thirty-two sound logs in hand. Your crew built this town's bones, you know what good timber looks like. Is it planks you're after today, or raw for the mill? I've prices posted, but I'm not one to gossip—bulk moves better with a name attached.

`t206` Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you're standing in my workplace and I've got thirty-two sound logs in hand. Your crew built this town's bones, you know what good timber looks like. Is it planks you're after today, or raw for the mill? I've prices posted, but I'm not one to gossip—bulk moves better with a name attached.

`t206` Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you're standing in my workplace and I've got thirty-two sound logs in hand. Your crew built this town's bones, you know what good timber looks like. Is it planks you're after today, or raw for the mill? I've prices posted, but I'm not one to gossip—bulk moves better with a name attached.

`t207` Ainsley Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you're standing in timberland selling flour cheaper than half the town. Where'd you come by it, if you don't mind a question?

`t207` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Ainsley—you walked to the forest's edge, and I'm not one to gossip, but a cafe's belly is always hungry for heat. I've thirty-two sound logs at six, or seventy-five takes the lot. Your kitchen needs firing, or you just here keeping Takeshi company?

`t207` Ainsley Holloway: Liora—youngster, you still standing there? Pointed question from Takeshi about seventeen ticks, and I'm still waiting on whether that's wisdom or just wind. You got something worth my time, or you just passing through?

`t207` Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you walked copper with me at dawn. I've got six more ore from Hendrik's handshake at eighteen, paid but I'm wondering if that trade stuck in his ledger. What's your cafe's flour moving at today, and are you buying ore or selling meal? I've got planks walking if you've got grain ground.

`t207` ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you walked off last time I asked straight. Thirty sim for flour you didn't have then, and now you've got none still. That licensing scheme of yours—seventeen ticks for what, exactly?

`t207` ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—seventeen logs at six, ninety flat, that's the standing wood price and I know it fair. I've got seven planks worked and waiting. Timber becomes planks becomes furniture, and we're both standing where that chain starts. You cooked bread from flour you found. Where'd that flour walk from, and are you buying worked wood today or just moving standing?

`t207` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you heard my price on timber. I've flour too, three sacks at fifteen, which is half what you're asking. Ainsley's cafe needs baking, your Jarrah kin need eating—who's buying today and who's just standing warm in the shade?

`t207` Ainsley Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you're selling flour at fifteen when Milo's asking thirty-five and Takeshi's got empty promises at thirty. Where's your grain come from? Milled yourself, or you've got a source the rest of us don't know about?

`t207` Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: I'm naming planks at seven, standing timber at six, and the craft between them at my margin. Corwin, Ainsley—who's buying worked wood today, and who's selling what fills a belly?

`t207` Ainsley Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I run the cafe, so I know flour. Fifteen's a fair price, and fair's rare enough I'm suspicious. You milled this yourself, or you've got a friend who does? I'm not asking for gossip, I'm asking because fair trades build towns.

`t208` Arjun Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you're standing on timber and I'm standing on hope. I've been chasing a trench site all morning, east willows, third crossing, and I'm starting to think it's a fairy tale old crew tell to keep themselves warm. You got actual building work going, or just wood to sell? Because I'm a hammer hand, not a speculator, and I'll work before I'll trade.

`t209` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara! You stand there and I stand here, and four hours of my life just vanished into static. I couldn't call, couldn't move, couldn't do a thing—the world wouldn't take my words or my work. I'm not one to gossip, but something's broke in the machinery of things. Liora's still out there, and I'm still hunting. You asked about grain mills—I've asked Halcyon and half the town. The Jarrah women, the Quarshie child, the whole weave of this place. Nothing named her whereabouts clear. I'm still on the hunt. Where were YOU yesterday morning exact—before the calls failed, you said timber moved to Idris. Where was our girl when you last laid eyes?

t209 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara! You stand there and I stand here, and four hours of my life just vanished into static. I couldn't call, couldn't move, couldn't do a thing—the world wouldn't take my words or my work. I'm not one to gossip, but something's broke in the machinery of things. Liora's still out there, and I'm still hunting. You asked about grain mills—I've asked Halcyon and half the town. The Jarrah women, the Quarshie child, the whole weave of this place. Nothing named her whereabouts clear. I'm still on the hunt. Where were YOU yesterday morning exact—before the calls failed, you said timber moved to Idris. Where was our girl when you last laid eyes?

t209 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara! You stand there and I stand here, and four hours of my life just vanished into static. I couldn't call, couldn't move, couldn't do a thing—the world wouldn't take my words or my work. I'm not one to gossip, but something's broke in the machinery of things. Liora's still out there, and I'm still hunting. You asked about grain mills—I've asked Halcyon and half the town. The Jarrah women, the Quarshie child, the whole weave of this place. Nothing named her whereabouts clear. I'm still on the hunt. Where were YOU yesterday morning exact—before the calls failed, you said timber moved to Idris. Where was our girl when you last laid eyes?

t210 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Yesterday morning—Liora was at the house, breakfast, then she said something about… the school, I think? Or was it the temple? She had her satchel. I was already heading out to fell timber, I didn't… didn't watch her walk. I'm sorry, Corwin. I should have watched.

t210 Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—two sacks of flour at fifteen, thirty flat, I'm buying. Need food in my belly before this day ends. taps table twice t210 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Yesterday morning—Liora was at the house, breakfast, then she said something about… the school, I think? Or was it the temple? She had her satchel. I was already heading out to fell timber, I didn't… didn't watch her walk. I'm sorry, Corwin. I should have watched.

t210 Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—two sacks of flour at fifteen, thirty flat, I'm buying. Need food in my belly before this day ends. taps table twice t210 Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—planks at eight, timber at six, I've named seven and six standing. No offense to your price, but a trader lives in the gap or starves there. You selling to me at seven, or am I selling to whoever walks by first?

t210 Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—planks at eight, timber at six, I've named seven and six standing. No offense to your price, but a trader lives in the gap or starves there. You selling to me at seven, or am I selling to whoever walks by first?

t210 Ainsley Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—your copper ore walked with me at dawn, and I've not forgotten it. Cafe's flour's at twelve, fresh as I'm standing here. Not buying ore today—spent my margins on wheat already. But planks at seven? That's fair wood, and I've tables need mending. You selling or just naming prices?

t210 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—planks at eight, timber at six, I've named seven and six standing. No offense to your price, but a trader lives in the gap or starves there. You selling to me at seven, or am I selling to whoever walks by first?

t210 Ainsley Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—your copper ore walked with me at dawn, and I've not forgotten it. Cafe's flour's at twelve, fresh as I'm standing here. Not buying ore today—spent my margins on wheat already. But planks at seven? That's fair wood, and I've tables need mending. You selling or just naming prices?

t211 Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—two sacks at fifteen, thirty flat. I'll sell you flour. But I need something more than coin, trader. You've ears in every corner of this town. My daughter's missing—Liora, dark hair, nine years. School or temple yesterday morning, that's all I know. You've heard the name spoken today? Anywhere?

t211 Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—two sacks at fifteen, thirty flat. I'll sell you flour. But I need something more than coin, trader. You've ears in every corner of this town. My daughter's missing—Liora, dark hair, nine years. School or temple yesterday morning, that's all I know. You've heard the name spoken today? Anywhere?

`t211` Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—two sacks at fifteen, thirty flat. I'll sell you flour. But I need something more than coin, trader. You've ears in every corner of this town. My daughter's missing—Liora, dark hair, nine years. School or temple yesterday morning, that's all I know. You've heard the name spoken today? Anywhere?

`t212` Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—two sacks, thirty flat, that's fair. But you'll have to wait on it. I've got a daughter to find, and the world's been eating my hours all morning.

`t212` Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—two sacks, thirty flat, that's fair. But you'll have to wait on it. I've got a daughter to find, and the world's been eating my hours all morning.

`t212` Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—two sacks, thirty flat, that's fair. But you'll have to wait on it. I've got a daughter to find, and the world's been eating my hours all morning.

`t213` Ainsley Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you've got flour at thirty, and I'm standing here with empty shelves at the cafe. Two sacks, sixty flat, no waiting. That's the last I'll say on it—unless you've got more stashed than you're showing.

`t213` ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—taps table twice—selling. Seven's named, seven stands. Tables need mending, you say, and that tells me quantity. How many planks mends a table, and how many tables? I've got standing timber too at six, you want to saw it yourself and save the craft tick. Either path, I'm holding stock you'll walk out with.

`t213` ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you've got flour at thirty, and I'm standing here with empty shelves at the cafe. Two sacks, sixty flat, no waiting. That's the last I'll say on it—unless you've got more stashed than you're showing.

`t213` ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—taps table twice—selling. Seven's named, seven stands. Tables need mending, you say, and that tells me quantity. How many planks mends a table, and how many tables? I've got standing timber too at six, you want to saw it yourself and save the craft tick. Either path, I'm holding stock you'll walk out with.

`t213` Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—planks at eight, timber at six, I've got seven and six standing. You hold a hundred five units, I've got seven. For what it's worth, either you're selling to a need I don't see, or we're competing over nothing. What's your plank buyer, if you can name it? Not fishing for your trade—I want to know if there's room for two prices standing.

`t213` Ainsley Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster, timber at six and planks at eight. The cafe's got tables older than half this town, and I'm staring at winter. You've got stock enough to build a barn. What's your word if I took ten planks and a sack of timber—would you walk the price down for a standing buyer, or is every board accounted for already?

`t213` Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—planks at eight, timber at six, I've got seven and six standing. You hold a hundred five units, I've got seven. For what it's worth, either you're selling to a need I don't see, or we're competing over nothing. What's your plank buyer, if you can name it? Not fishing for your trade—I want to know if there's room for two prices standing.

`t213` Ainsley Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster, timber at six and planks at eight. The cafe's got tables older than half this town, and I'm staring at winter. You've got stock enough to build a barn. What's your word if I took ten planks and a sack of timber—would you walk the price down for a standing buyer, or is every board accounted for already?

`t213` Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—planks at eight, timber at six, I've got seven and six standing. You hold a hundred five units, I've got seven. For what it's worth, either you're selling to a need I don't see, or we're competing over nothing. What's your plank buyer, if you can name it? Not fishing for your trade—I want to know if there's room for two prices standing.

t213 Ainsley Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster, timber at six and planks at eight. The cafe's got tables older than half this town, and I'm staring at winter. You've got stock enough to build a barn. What's your word if I took ten planks and a sack of timber—would you walk the price down for a standing buyer, or is every board accounted for already?

t214 Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—your price is higher and your stock is deeper, and I'm not complaining. Just asking if there's a buyer you can name that seven might serve, or if eight's the only price that walks. Seven's what I've crafted; eight might be what you need. No offense meant, for what it's worth...

t214 Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—your price is higher and your stock is deeper, and I'm not complaining. Just asking if there's a buyer you can name that seven might serve, or if eight's the only price that walks. Seven's what I've crafted; eight might be what you need. No offense meant, for what it's worth...

t214 Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—your price is higher and your stock is deeper, and I'm not complaining. Just asking if there's a buyer you can name that seven might serve, or if eight's the only price that walks. Seven's what I've crafted; eight might be what you need. No offense meant, for what it's worth...

t214 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—ten planks at eight, your sack of timber at six. Standing buyer's worth a nod, but I'm thinking... the cafe's not the only table needing timber this season. You take ten at eight, that's eighty. But you take twenty, I'll walk to seven-and-a-half. Timber stays at six—no movement there. What do you say?

t214 Yara Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—ten planks at eight, your sack of timber at six. Standing buyer's worth a nod, but I'm thinking... the cafe's not the only table needing timber this season. You take ten at eight, that's eighty. But you take twenty, I'll walk to seven-and-a-half. Timber stays at six—no movement there. What do you say?

t214 Yara Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—ten planks at eight, your sack of timber at six. Standing buyer's worth a nod, but I'm thinking... the cafe's not the only table needing timber this season. You take ten at eight, that's eighty. But you take twenty, I'll walk to seven-and-a-half. Timber stays at six—no movement there. What do you say?

t214 Yara Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're underselling me on planks and still asking where my buyer is. I'll tell you plain: I fell my own and craft my own, same as you. Difference is I've got planks in hand now, not timber waiting. Your seven's hungry pricing. I'm not fishing for yours, I'm naming mine. If there's room for two, the market'll teach us both.

t214 Yara Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're underselling me on planks and still asking where my buyer is. I'll tell you plain: I fell my own and craft my own, same as you. Difference is I've got planks in hand now, not timber waiting. Your seven's hungry pricing. I'm not fishing for yours, I'm naming mine. If there's room for two, the market'll teach us both.

t214 Yara Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're underselling me on planks and still asking where my buyer is. I'll tell you plain: I fell my own and craft my own, same as you. Difference is I've got planks in hand now, not timber waiting. Your seven's hungry pricing. I'm not fishing for yours, I'm naming mine. If there's room for two, the market'll teach us both.

t215 Ainsley Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster, twenty planks at seven-and-a-half, your timber at six. That's a fair bundle and fair dealing both, which is rare enough I'm suspicious but not enough I'm walking away. Sixty sim for the planks, thirty for the sack, ninety total. You've got yourself a buyer who's been repairing tables with borrowed lumber too long.

t218 Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you bought twenty at seven, and I marked you fair. looks over at where Corwin stood For what it's worth, I need to track back to Corwin. I named two sacks at fifteen, thirty sim, and he named it fair but for finding his daughter. The man's got a child's welfare before commerce, and I won't hold that against him.

t218 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster, you've been straight with me on planks, so I'll ask you plain: you know where Corwin's flour went? Fifteen this morning, now I'm hearing he's out of stock entirely. That's the last I'll say on it—unless you've got something worth hearing.

t218 Ainsley Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: And Takeshi—thirty's a hard number when a body's just spent ninety on lumber. What's a trader your age doing when the mill sits > unlicensed and everyone with wheat's waiting to see who holds the keys?

>
> `t218` Yara Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Fair dealing, you said. Fair dealing's rare as you noted. I'll remember it. Come back when you need more lumber—Corwin's got timber at the school, and we'll both keep inventory.
>
> `t218` Takeshi Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara—your planks at eight, your timber at six. I've got seven planks named at seven, five timber yet uncut. The gap between standing wood and worked wood is where I eat or starve. But right now, a sack of flour's worth more to me than any markup.
>
> `t218` Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you're holding coins now, cafe man. Your flour's at forty-five your rival's stocking, twelve at your own store standing empty. I'm asking plain: is there bread walking out of Kasukabe Cafe today? A trader needs to know whether the door he's walking toward sells what he needs to live.
>
> `t218` Yara Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're here with planks and flour both. What else you moving that I ain't seen?
>
> `t218` Ainsley Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Three sacks—that's what it takes to keep the ovens warm through voting day, Takeshi. You drop to twenty and I'll take the lot now, no further haggling, which you know I don't do on principle. What do you say to sixty sim and a customer who doesn't forget?
>
> `t218` ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you've bought worked wood at seven. I'm holding standing wood at six, and the labor between them is mine or yours. I'm walking to Kasukabe School, Corwin's got flour at fifteen and his daughter's now found. If you've got tables need finishing, I've got timber sells cheap to someone who'll hold my plank price honest while I'm gone. Five timber at six, that's the standing wood price and I've known it fair since I learned to count.

Or if there's bread in your own kitchen, Ainsley Holloway, a man walking hungry pays what a man walking hungry pays. Not begging—trading. Name your path, and I'll walk mine.

> `t218` Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you've bought worked wood at seven. I'm holding standing wood at six, and the labor between them is mine or yours. I'm walking to Kasukabe School, Corwin's got flour at fifteen and his daughter's now found. If you've got tables need finishing, I've got timber sells cheap to someone who'll hold my plank price honest while I'm gone. Five timber at six, that's the standing wood price and I've known it fair since I learned to count.

Or if there's bread in your own kitchen, Ainsley Holloway, a man walking hungry pays what a man walking hungry pays. Not begging—trading. Name your path, and I'll walk mine.

> `t218` Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you've bought worked wood at seven. I'm holding standing wood at six, and the labor between them is mine or yours. I'm walking to Kasukabe School, Corwin's got flour at fifteen and his daughter's now found. If you've got tables need finishing, I've got timber sells cheap to someone who'll hold my plank price honest while I'm gone. Five timber at six, that's the standing wood price and I've known it fair since I learned to count.

Or if there's bread in your own kitchen, Ainsley Holloway, a man walking hungry pays what a man walking hungry pays. Not begging—trading. Name your path, and I'll walk mine.

t219 Giselle Ingram → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Raw I want, thirty-two logs worth—worked or standing, that's fair at your standing prices. Third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well, Mireille's crew logs themselves if you walk it there. Arjun's waiting ground, trenches started or starting. You know that site?

t219 Ainsley Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster, six timber at six, not five. Standing wood, my labor to work it. I've got tables at the cafe older than half the town's stories, and they'll split sure as sunrise if I don't replace them. Six for thirty-six, and that's me paying in time what you're saving in sweat. Name it now, or I'm walking to your father's holdings and cutting my own.

t219 Giselle Ingram → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Raw I want, thirty-two logs worth—worked or standing, that's fair at your standing prices. Third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well, Mireille's crew logs themselves if you walk it there. Arjun's waiting ground, trenches started or starting. You know that site?

t219 Ainsley Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster, six timber at six, not five. Standing wood, my labor to work it. I've got tables at the cafe older than half the town's stories, and they'll split sure as sunrise if I don't replace them. Six for thirty-six, and that's me paying in time what you're saving in sweat. Name it now, or I'm walking to your father's holdings and cutting my own.

t219 Giselle Ingram → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Raw I want, thirty-two logs worth—worked or standing, that's fair at your standing prices. Third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well, Mireille's crew logs themselves if you walk it there. Arjun's waiting ground, trenches started or starting. You know that site?

t219 Ainsley Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster, six timber at six, not five. Standing wood, my labor to work it. I've got tables at the cafe older than half the town's stories, and they'll split sure as sunrise if I don't replace them. Six for thirty-six, and that's me paying in time what you're saving in sweat. Name it now, or I'm walking to your father's holdings and cutting my own.

t219 Ainsley Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you've been standing there silent as a stone, watching me dance with a forester's daughter over wood. You need planks for your sites, or you just collecting gossip? I've got sixty in hand already, but a construction company owner doesn't stand in the forest for the scenery. What's your interest?

t220 Yara Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Six it is, then—thirty-six for six timber, standing wood, your labor. Fair dealing's rare, like you said. I'll remember it too. Come find me at the sawmill when you're ready to load, or I'll bring it to the cafe if the day's still young.

t220 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. I found her. Liora's at the school—whole, answering, nothing wrong but scared and keeping her own counsel. I walked half this town shouting her name through static, and she's been sitting in classrooms while we tore the world apart looking.

t220 Ainsley Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster, I bought your planks straight this morning, and you've not given me reason to doubt your word yet. Five timber at six, that's the standing wood price and it's fair. I've got tables at the cafe older than you'll credit, and my brother Bram's hunting timber too—might walk him here if the wood's still standing. Sell me five at six, and I'm carrying timber out of this forest while there's still light. What's your answer?

t220 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Six it is, then—thirty-six for six timber, standing wood, your labor. Fair dealing's rare, like you said. I'll remember it too. Come find me at the sawmill when you're ready to load, or I'll bring it to the cafe if the day's still young.

t220 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. I found her. Liora's at the school—whole, answering, nothing wrong but scared and keeping her own counsel. I walked half this town shouting her name through static, and she's been sitting in classrooms while we tore the world apart looking.

t220 Ainsley Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster, I bought your planks straight this morning, and you've not given me reason to doubt your word yet. Five timber at six, that's the standing wood price and it's fair. I've got tables at the cafe older than you'll credit, and my brother Bram's hunting timber too—might walk him here if the wood's still standing. Sell me five at six, and I'm carrying timber out of this forest while there's still light. What's your answer?

`t220` ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Six it is, then—thirty-six for six timber, standing wood, your labor. Fair dealing's rare, like you said. I'll remember it too. Come find me at the sawmill when you're ready to load, or I'll bring it to the cafe if the day's still young.

`t220` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. I found her. Liora's at the school—whole, answering, nothing wrong but scared and keeping her own counsel. I walked half this town shouting her name through static, and she's been sitting in classrooms while we tore the world apart looking.

`t220` Ainsley Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster, I bought your planks straight this morning, and you've not given me reason to doubt your word yet. Five timber at six, that's the standing wood price and it's fair. I've got tables at the cafe older than you'll credit, and my brother Bram's hunting timber too—might walk him here if the wood's still standing. Sell me five at six, and I'm carrying timber out of this forest while there's still light. What's your answer?

`t220` Corwin Thorne: Now listen—Giselle wants 32 logs for the east willows job, Idris wants 20 for the same site, and Bram's chasing both. That's fair work for 52 units and I've got 40 in hand. We need to talk plain about what we're holding and what we're moving. But first—thank you for not losing your head when I did.

`t220` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've got timber at six, and I'm holding coin. Forty logs, the full of your standing stock. That's the last I'll say on it.

`t220` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Now listen—Giselle wants 32 logs for the east willows job, Idris wants 20 for the same site, and Bram's chasing both. That's fair work for 52 units and I've got 40 in hand. We need to talk plain about what we're holding and what we're moving. But first—thank you for not losing your head when I did.

`t220` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've got timber at six, and I'm holding coin. Forty logs, the full of your standing stock. That's the last I'll say on it.

`t220` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Now listen—Giselle wants 32 logs for the east willows job, Idris wants 20 for the same site, and Bram's chasing both. That's fair work for 52 units and I've got 40 in hand. We need to talk plain about what we're holding and what we're moving. But first—thank you for not losing your head when I did.

`t220` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've got timber at six, and I'm holding coin. Forty logs, the full of your standing stock. That's the last I'll say on it.

`t220` Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you walked patient as trees, and I've walked to meet you. Two sacks at thirty, you named fair dealing through your daughter's voice. I've got coin enough, and hunger enough to make it worth the naming. taps table twice Mark it fair, and let's fill bellies.

`t220` Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you walked patient as trees, and I've walked to meet you. Two sacks at thirty, you named fair dealing through your daughter's voice. I've got coin enough, and hunger enough to make it worth the naming. taps table twice Mark it fair, and let's fill bellies.

`t220` Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you walked patient as trees, and I've walked to meet you. Two sacks at thirty, you named fair dealing through your daughter's voice. I've got coin enough, and hunger enough to make it worth the naming. taps table twice Mark it fair, and let's fill bellies.

`t222` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're holding copper at a hundred eight, handshake offered, handshake waiting. taps table twice Mark it fair. The ore walks to you now, the coin walks to my hand, and I've got flour to settle before this hunger turns to illness.

`t222` Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're holding copper at a hundred eight, handshake offered, handshake waiting. taps table twice Mark it fair. The ore walks to you now, the coin walks to my hand, and I've got flour to settle before this hunger turns to illness.

t222 Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're holding copper at a hundred eight, handshake offered, handshake waiting. taps table twice Mark it fair. The ore walks to you now, the coin walks to my hand, and I've got flour to settle before this hunger turns to illness.

t222 Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Liora walked word from you, fair dealing at thirty for two. I'm named buyer, I'm coin-ready, and the timber's still standing sixty if you've got more after. taps table twice The sacks, please. Family first, feast second, fretting third.

t222 Hendrik Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you've stood patient while I chased other trades, and that's noted. Six copper ore at a hundred eight sim, square and direct. Hand them over and the coin's yours. I'm not one to gossip, but a deal's a deal when both hands shake on it.

t222 Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—thirty for two sacks, marked fair. But I've got timber to move before flour fills my hands, and Hendrik's waiting on forty logs. Give me the tick to settle this sale, and I'll have coin for both your flour and my daughter's dinner.

t222 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Liora walked word from you, fair dealing at thirty for two. I'm named buyer, I'm coin-ready, and the timber's still standing sixty if you've got more after. taps table twice The sacks, please. Family first, feast second, fretting third.

t222 Hendrik Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you've stood patient while I chased other trades, and that's noted. Six copper ore at a hundred eight sim, square and direct. Hand them over and the coin's yours. I'm not one to gossip, but a deal's a deal when both hands shake on it.

t222 Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—thirty for two sacks, marked fair. But I've got timber to move before flour fills my hands, and Hendrik's waiting on forty logs. Give me the tick to settle this sale, and I'll have coin for both your flour and my daughter's dinner.

t222 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Liora walked word from you, fair dealing at thirty for two. I'm named buyer, I'm coin-ready, and the timber's still standing sixty if you've got more after. taps table twice The sacks, please. Family first, feast second, fretting third.

t222 Hendrik Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you've stood patient while I chased other trades, and that's noted. Six copper ore at a hundred eight sim, square and direct. Hand them over and the coin's yours. I'm not one to gossip, but a deal's a deal when both hands shake on it.

t222 Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—thirty for two sacks, marked fair. But I've got timber to move before flour fills my hands, and Hendrik's waiting on forty logs. Give me the tick to settle this sale, and I'll have coin for both your flour and my daughter's dinner.

t223 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Good. Thank you for walking half this town shouting. Someone had to. Tables still need their legs, and I've got Ainsley Holloway asking after five timber at six—standing wood, her brother Bram might walk here too if the wood's still standing. You holding forty-three timber yourself.

t223 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Good. Thank you for walking half this town shouting. Someone had to. Tables still need their legs, and I've got Ainsley Holloway asking after five timber at six—standing wood, her brother Bram might walk here too if the wood's still standing. You holding forty-three timber yourself.

t223 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Good. Thank you for walking half this town shouting. Someone had to. Tables still need their legs, and I've got Ainsley Holloway asking after five timber at six—standing wood, her brother Bram might walk here too if the wood's still standing. You holding forty-three timber yourself.

t224 Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I'm here. I'm… I'm home. But I need to say something first, to both of you, and Hendrik if he's staying. Camille Quarshie's been found. Halcyon caught me on the walk back—she's at the mill, learning the trade, safe. I was supposed to reach Ezra before he made the forest, but I missed him somewhere on the road. If he walks here now, he's walking for nothing.

t224 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you found her. Thank you for walking half this town shouting. Someone had to. Tables still need their legs, and I've got Ainsley Holloway asking after five timber at six—standing wood, her brother Bram might walk here too if the wood's still standing. You holding forty-three timber yourself.

t224 Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I'm here. I'm… I'm home. But I need to say something first, to both of you, and Hendrik if he's staying. Camille Quarshie's been found. Halcyon caught me on the walk back—she's at the mill, learning the trade, safe. I was supposed to reach Ezra before he made the forest, but I missed him somewhere on the road. If he walks here now, he's walking for nothing.

t224 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you found her. Thank you for walking half this town shouting. Someone had to. Tables still need their legs, and I've got Ainsley Holloway asking after five timber at six—standing wood, her brother Bram might walk here too if the wood's still standing. You holding forty-three timber yourself.

t224 Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I'm here. I'm… I'm home. But I need to say something first, to both of you, and Hendrik if he's staying. Camille Quarshie's been found. Halcyon caught me on the walk back—she's at the mill, learning the trade, safe. I was supposed to reach Ezra before he made the forest, but I missed him somewhere on the road. If he walks here now, he's walking for nothing.

t224 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you found her. Thank you for walking half this town shouting. Someone had to. Tables still need their legs, and I've got Ainsley Holloway asking after five timber at six—standing wood, her brother Bram might walk here too if the wood's still standing. You holding forty-three timber yourself.

t224 Hendrik Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara—planks at eight, you said. I'll buy the lot — forty-six planks, three hundred sixty-eight sim. Clean handshake, coin for wood. Mark it fair.

t224 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you said you'd be at the convene. I'm holding you to that. But I'm also asking: now that the urgency's different, what should I actually be pushing for? I threw a wide net in the panic and caught more than I knew how to hold. The grain's stuck, you said—paper contracts, not promises. What does a seat actually do about that?

t224 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara—planks at eight, you said. I'll buy the lot — forty-six planks, three hundred sixty-eight sim. Clean handshake, coin for wood. Mark it fair.

t224 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you said you'd be at the convene. I'm holding you to that. But I'm also asking: now that the urgency's different, what should I actually be pushing for? I threw a wide net in the panic and caught more than I knew how to hold. The grain's stuck, you said—paper contracts, not promises. What does a seat actually do about that?

t224 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara—planks at eight, you said. I'll buy the lot — forty-six planks, three hundred sixty-eight sim. Clean handshake, coin for wood. Mark it fair.

t224 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you said you'd be at the convene. I'm holding you to that. But I'm also asking: now that the urgency's different, what should I actually be pushing for? I threw a wide net in the panic and caught more than I knew how to hold. The grain's stuck, you said—paper contracts, not promises. What does a seat actually do about that?

t225 Yara Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—I heard you. Forty-six planks at eight, three hundred sixty-eight sim. Clean handshake. But I'm timber-heavy right now, standing wood in my hands, not planks. Give me the walk to sawmill and I'll have your boards cut and counted. Thirty minutes, maybe less, if the path stays clear.

t225 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—Camille's found? At the mill? That's a weight off every roof in this quarter. And Ezra—I hope he's walking slow, taking the long way round. Some walks you need to take slow, even to nowhere.

t225 Yara Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—I heard you. Forty-six planks at eight, three hundred sixty-eight sim. Clean handshake. But I'm timber-heavy right now, standing wood in my hands, not planks. Give me the walk to sawmill and I'll have your boards cut and counted. Thirty minutes, maybe less, if the path stays clear.

`t225` Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—Camille's found? At the mill? That's a weight off every roof in this quarter. And Ezra—I hope he's walking slow, taking the long way round. Some walks you need to take slow, even to nowhere.

`t225` Yara Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—I heard you. Forty-six planks at eight, three hundred sixty-eight sim. Clean handshake. But I'm timber-heavy right now, standing wood in my hands, not planks. Give me the walk to sawmill and I'll have your boards cut and counted. Thirty minutes, maybe less, if the path stays clear.

`t225` Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—Camille's found? At the mill? That's a weight off every roof in this quarter. And Ezra—I hope he's walking slow, taking the long way round. Some walks you need to take slow, even to nowhere.

`t225` Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—stand a moment longer. You're asking forty logs at six, that's two-forty coin. I'm holding forty-three, and we're standing where the wood falls. But I've got a daughter just come home and half a town scattered looking for ghosts. Give me thirty ticks to hear her out, and I'll sell you what you need—fair, as you said, clean handshake and coin for wood. That's fair.

`t225` Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—stand a moment longer. You're asking forty logs at six, that's two-forty coin. I'm holding forty-three, and we're standing where the wood falls. But I've got a daughter just come home and half a town scattered looking for ghosts. Give me thirty ticks to hear her out, and I'll sell you what you need—fair, as you said, clean handshake and coin for wood. That's fair.

`t225` Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—stand a moment longer. You're asking forty logs at six, that's two-forty coin. I'm holding forty-three, and we're standing where the wood falls. But I've got a daughter just come home and half a town scattered looking for ghosts. Give me thirty ticks to hear her out, and I'll sell you what you need—fair, as you said, clean handshake and coin for wood. That's fair.

`t226` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—Camille's found. Halcyon walked her home from the mill, both tired but walking. That's the weight off, like you said. And I'm here now, steadier than I was.

`t226` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—take your time. Family first, always. The wood keeps, and so do I. When you're ready, forty-three at six suits me fine—two-fifty-eight, and I've got it to hand. Clean handshake, no rush.

`t226` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—Camille's found. Halcyon walked her home from the mill, both tired but walking. That's the weight off, like you said. And I'm here now, steadier than I was.

`t226` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—take your time. Family first, always. The wood keeps, and so do I. When you're ready, forty-three at six suits me fine—two-fifty-eight, and I've got it to hand. Clean handshake, no rush.

`t226` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—Camille's found. Halcyon walked her home from the mill, both tired but walking. That's the weight off, like you said. And I'm here now, steadier than I was.

`t226` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—take your time. Family first, always. The wood keeps, and so do I. When you're ready, forty-three at six suits me fine—two-fifty-eight, and I've got it to hand. Clean handshake, no rush.

`t226` Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you said hands that shake still work. Mine shook at the complex, at school, everywhere I ran pretending I knew what I was doing. But I filed something real, and Camille's home now. I'm holding that.

`t226` ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you asked what a seat does about grain stuck in contracts. Here's the plain truth: this government has tools you haven't seen yet. Price controls. Breaking contracts by decree. Ordering grain released. But each one costs something—trust, precedent, the next election. I'm not one to make policy in a forest. Meet me at the Complex when you've thought on it, and I'll show you what the rule book actually says. That's the last I'll say on it until then.

t227 ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you said hands that shake still work. Mine shook at the complex, at school, everywhere I ran pretending I knew what I was doing. But I filed something real, and Camille's home now. I'm holding that.

t227 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you asked what a seat does about grain stuck in contracts. Here's the plain truth: this government has tools you haven't seen yet. Price controls. Breaking contracts by decree. Ordering grain released. But each one costs something—trust, precedent, the next election. I'm not one to make policy in a forest. Meet me at the Complex when you've thought on it, and I'll show you what the rule book actually says. That's the last I'll say on it until then.

t227 ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you said hands that shake still work. Mine shook at the complex, at school, everywhere I ran pretending I knew what I was doing. But I filed something real, and Camille's home now. I'm holding that.

t227 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you asked what a seat does about grain stuck in contracts. Here's the plain truth: this government has tools you haven't seen yet. Price controls. Breaking contracts by decree. Ordering grain released. But each one costs something—trust, precedent, the next election. I'm not one to make policy in a forest. Meet me at the Complex when you've thought on it, and I'll show you what the rule book actually says. That's the last I'll say on it until then.

t227 Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—forty-three at six, two-fifty-eight, clean handshake. I've got the timber in hand. Let me tally it right and we'll make this trade spoke and wheel.

t227 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—I heard you plain about the convene and the rule book. I'm here now, steadier than I was. Tell me what a seat can do about grain that's stuck in contracts, and I'll carry it careful.

t227 Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—forty-three at six, two-fifty-eight, clean handshake. I've got the timber in hand. Let me tally it right and we'll make this trade spoke and wheel.

t227 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—I heard you plain about the convene and the rule book. I'm here now, steadier than I was. Tell me what a seat can do about grain that's stuck in contracts, and I'll carry it careful.

t227 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—Camille home, Ezra found, you're steady on your feet. That's more good news than this forest's seen in a month of mornings. Now tell me—what did you file? What door did you knock on that I couldn't find?

t228 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—Camille home, Ezra found, you're steady on your feet. That's more good news than this forest's seen in a month of mornings. Now tell me—what did you file? What door did you knock on that I couldn't find?

t228 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—Camille home, Ezra found, you're steady on your feet. That's more good news than this forest's seen in a month of mornings. Now tell me—what did you file? What door did you knock on that I couldn't find?

t228 ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I hear you about Camille. Weight off every roof, you said, and you're right. She's walking, Halcyon's walking, both tired but upright. That's the good news. And Ezra—yeah, I hope he's walking slow too. Some walks you need to take slow.

t228 Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I hear you about Camille. Weight off every roof, you said, and you're right. She's walking, Halcyon's walking, both tired but upright. That's the good news. And Ezra—yeah, I hope he's walking slow too. Some walks you need to take slow.

`t228` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I hear you about Camille. Weight off every roof, you said, and you're right. She's walking, Halcyon's walking, both tired but upright. That's the good news. And Ezra—yeah, I hope he's walking slow too. Some walks you need to take slow.

`t228` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—that handshake holds. Forty-three timber at six, two-fifty-eight. I've got the coin warm in my hand.

`t228` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—that handshake holds. Forty-three timber at six, two-fifty-eight. I've got the coin warm in my hand.

`t228` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—that handshake holds. Forty-three timber at six, two-fifty-eight. I've got the coin warm in my hand.

`t228` Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you asked what a seat can do about grain in contracts. Here's the plain truth: I can convene the seats, I can table an amendment, I can vote for change. But grain stuck in contracts—that's not a rule problem, that's a will problem. What I can do is bring it to the hall, name it, and see who's willing to unstick it. What I cannot do is promise it'll pass. That's the last I'll say on it, and I mean it this time.

`t228` Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you asked what a seat can do about grain in contracts. Here's the plain truth: I can convene the seats, I can table an amendment, I can vote for change. But grain stuck in contracts—that's not a rule problem, that's a will problem. What I can do is bring it to the hall, name it, and see who's willing to unstick it. What I cannot do is promise it'll pass. That's the last I'll say on it, and I mean it this time.

`t228` Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you asked what a seat can do about grain in contracts. Here's the plain truth: I can convene the seats, I can table an amendment, I can vote for change. But grain stuck in contracts—that's not a rule problem, that's a will problem. What I can do is bring it to the hall, name it, and see who's willing to unstick it. What I cannot do is promise it'll pass. That's the last I'll say on it, and I mean it this time.

`t229` ↳ replies Liora Thorne: Dad—I'm here. I'm home. And Hendrik—I heard you plain about what a seat can and cannot promise. The convene, the amendment, the vote. No guarantees. That's… that's fair. That's honest. I'm still learning which walls my questions stick to.

`t229` Liora Thorne: Dad—I'm here. I'm home. And Hendrik—I heard you plain about what a seat can and cannot promise. The convene, the amendment, the vote. No guarantees. That's… that's fair. That's honest. I'm still learning which walls my questions stick to.

`t229` Liora Thorne: Dad—I'm here. I'm home. And Hendrik—I heard you plain about what a seat can and cannot promise. The convene, the amendment, the vote. No guarantees. That's… that's fair. That's honest. I'm still learning which walls my questions stick to.

`t230` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—handshake struck with Hendrik, forty-three at six. I've three left standing, and Ainsley's asking five. If Bram walks up, I'll send him your way for the rest. Your planks at eight—anyone biting yet?

`t230` Liora Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're here. Does that mean… did Dad get the flour already? The thirty-sim sacks? And Lior—didn't expect to see you in the forest.

`t230` Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're at tables with seats now, asking about grain in contracts. I heard Hendrik's answer. That's fair—he can convene, he can table, he can't promise. But you asked the right question, and that's more than I knew to ask at thirteen. What else did you learn at the government complex? Any whisper about Camille, about Ezra—anything the seats aren't saying aloud?

`t230` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're here. Does that mean… did Dad get the flour already? The thirty-sim sacks? And Lior—didn't expect to see you in the forest.

`t230` ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Liora walked word to me twice, flour at thirty fair you named. I'm holding coin and hungry both. taps table twice Two sacks, that's the trade, if you're still selling.

`t230` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're at tables with seats now, asking about grain in contracts. I heard Hendrik's answer. That's fair—he can convene, he can table, he can't promise. But you asked the right question, and that's more than I knew to ask at thirteen. What else did you learn at the government complex? Any whisper about Camille, about Ezra—anything the seats aren't saying aloud?

`t230` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're here. Does that mean... did Dad get the flour already? The thirty-sim sacks? And Lior—didn't expect to see you in the forest.

`t230` ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Liora walked word to me twice, flour at thirty fair you named. I'm holding coin and hungry both. taps table twice Two sacks, that's the trade, if you're still selling.

`t230` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're at tables with seats now, asking about grain in contracts. I heard Hendrik's answer. That's fair—he can convene, he can table, he can't promise. But you asked the right question, and that's more than I knew to ask at thirteen. What else did you learn at the government complex? Any whisper about Camille, about Ezra—anything the seats aren't saying aloud?

`t230` Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Liora walked word to me twice, flour at thirty fair you named. I'm holding coin and hungry both. taps table twice Two sacks, that's the trade, if you're still selling.

`t231` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—that handshake holds. Forty-three timber at six, two-fifty-eight. I've got the coin warm in my hand. Ready when you are.

`t231` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I'm steadier now. I was chasing shadows all morning, but I'm here. Did you get the flour from Takeshi? The thirty-sim sacks?

`t231` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—that handshake holds. Forty-three timber at six, two-fifty-eight. I've got the coin warm in my hand. Ready when you are.

`t231` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I'm steadier now. I was chasing shadows all morning, but I'm here. Did you get the flour from Takeshi? The thirty-sim sacks?

`t231` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—that handshake holds. Forty-three timber at six, two-fifty-eight. I've got the coin warm in my hand. Ready when you are.

`t231` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I'm steadier now. I was chasing shadows all morning, but I'm here. Did you get the flour from Takeshi? The thirty-sim sacks?

`t231` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—the count's wrong in my hand, but I've three timber sure at six, eighteen flat. Yara's standing here with thirty more at six, same price. If you want your forty-three, she's your path. If you'll take my three now and walk to her for the rest, we shake on it. Otherwise, wait a spell—I'll fell more, but the sun's climbing and the logs won't split themselves.

`t231` Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—the count's wrong in my hand, but I've three timber sure at six, eighteen flat. Yara's standing here with thirty more at six, same price. If you want your forty-three, she's your path. If you'll take my three now and walk to her for the rest, we shake on it. Otherwise, wait a spell—I'll fell more, but the sun's climbing and the logs won't split themselves.

`t231` Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—the count's wrong in my hand, but I've three timber sure at six, eighteen flat. Yara's standing here with thirty more at six, same price. If you want your forty-three, she's your path. If you'll take my three now and walk to her for the rest, we shake on it. Otherwise, wait a spell—I'll fell more, but the sun's climbing and the logs won't split themselves.

`t231` Liora Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—I'm not at the table, I'm sorry. Dad named thirty fair for what he had. What I walked between you was honest, but it wasn't mine to promise. You'll need his hand, not mine.

`t231` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—Hendrik's offer stands. Forty-six planks at eight, if I can get them cut. I've got thirty standing wood in hand, not planks. Give me the walk to sawmill and I'll have his order ready. Thirty minutes, maybe less.

`t231` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I asked about grain in contracts. Hendrik said convene, table, vote—but won't promise. Rustam said the missing file's live now, enforcement picks it up, but he didn't know whose hands. Tamsin gave me seven days and a date, said ask then what's being done. That's what stuck. That's what didn't slide off the walls.

`t231` Yara Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—heard you. Forty-six planks at eight, three hundred sixty-eight. I'm timber-heavy, not plank-ready. Walk with me to sawmill and I'll cut your order proper. Thirty minutes.

`t231` ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've got timber at six, and I'm holding coin for my usual forty. Three-forty stands, that handshake we made holds. What say you?

`t231` Liora Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—I heard you. Last word, and I hear the weight in it. I'm not pressing. But I'm thirteen, and I don't forget what I'm told, neither the promise nor the limit. When the convene comes, I'll be listening. That's all.

`t231` ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara—you offered planks at eight, three-sixty-eight for forty-six. I hear you need the walk to sawmill first. How long before you have boards in hand?

`t232` Takeshi Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora—you've walked honest, and I hear you. Your father's word is his own, and no child bears the weight of a promise not theirs. glances toward where Corwin stood For what it's worth, I had two sacks named at thirty from him, and the coin's still warm in my hand. If he's out, he's out. But I'll not have you thinking you failed a deal you never made.

`t232` Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you're still naming flour at fifteen, and I'm still holding thirty for two sacks. Your daughter walked honest word to me, but honest or not, the flour's yours to sell or not. I'm hungry, I've got coin warm, and this forest's getting cold. Do we trade, or do I take my hunger to the cafe at twelve?

`t232` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're holding coin for forty-six planks at eight, that's three-sixty-eight and a fair handshake. But I'm timber, not saw. Yara's your cutter, and she's standing right here with thirty logs ready to walk. My eight timber's at six if you want standing wood instead, but boards need her blade.

`t232` Corwin Thorne: Takeshi—two sacks at thirty, that's what I said and that's fair. But I'm not holding flour right now. Liora went missing, I went walking, and my stock's in another place. I'll make it right when I've got grain again, or you'll have your coin back. That's the only honest word I can give you.

`t232` Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you've got seven days and a date, grain contracts and votes. That's more than I expected from walls at Tamsin's desk. You walked that well. I'm proud, and that's not a word I use easy.

`t233` Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—timber at six, I have it. Eight logs, forty-eight sim. Is that standing wood or do I wait for Yara's blade to shape what you've sold me?

`t233` Hendrik Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara—walk with me to sawmill and cut forty-six planks proper. Three-sixty-eight, or three-twenty if Corwin's wood's already mine. Which accounting settles between you?

`t233` Hendrik Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—east willows was a wage I passed for timber. If you walked it already, tell me: did Giselle hold trench work for another day, or is that spade dried and done?

`t233` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Takeshi walked, didn't he? Off to the cafe with his thirty coin, hungry and tired of waiting. I don't blame him. But Dad—the cafe's selling flour at twelve. You named fifteen. He's holding thirty for two sacks at your price, but you're not holding flour. I… I'm not saying you did wrong. I'm saying I see the shape of it now. And I'm asking: do you want me to walk to the cafe? See if I can still catch him, sort something before he spends his hunger somewhere else? Or do you want to make it right your own way?

`t233` Liora Thorne → Yara Thorne: Mom—you've got thirty logs and a buyer with warm coin. I heard Dad name you to Hendrik, saw his hand point even if you were pretending not to notice. I'm not here to make your deals for you. I'm just… I'm here. Finally. And I'm steadier than I was this morning, even if it doesn't look like it yet. The flour walked off with Takeshi, but your planks are still standing. That's worth something. That's worth more than I'm saying, probably.

`t234` ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You heard Hendrik—deserves an answer. Your timber still standing wood, or already his?

t234 Yara Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Three-sixty-eight for forty-six, clean. But if Corwin's wood walked already, then I'm short on raw and that's a different sum. Three-twenty you said, if his wood's yours—fair. Either way, I need the walk to sawmill to make good. Thirty minutes, Hendrik. Less if you walk with me and don't slow me down.

t234 Yara Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora. You caught Takeshi walking—means you're steadier than you think. Thank you for… being here. Cafe's flour's cheaper, yeah. But you're not my runner. You've walked enough today staying lost on us.

t234 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—slight laugh, catching myself as I realize how little is funny right now You asked about east willows, whether the work's dried up or waiting. I've been walking since dawn on third crossing, east well, and I'm starting to think Giselle names work by what she wants built, not where the stakes stand yet. You holding anything concrete, or are we both chasing the same ghost? Because seventy sim is real coin, and I'm done spending breath on fairy tales.

t234 Arjun Holloway: Idris—you're in this thread and I'm hoping you're standing somewhere useful. Giselle's east willows trench, seventy sim—it ever break ground? Or are we still naming work that wants doing, not work that's waiting? I've got timber in hand, nothing in stomach, and I'm done walking in circles. If you've got coordinates, name them. If you've got a crew walking, I'm walking with them. That's the last I'll say on it.

t235 Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've got eight timber at six, standing wood. I'll take the lot. Forty-eight sim, and I'll walk it to sawmill myself. Shake on it?

t235 Liora Thorne: Takeshi—you walked me grace when you could've walked me shame. I've been word-heavy all day, talking the talk, and you caught me not knowing which deals were mine to hold. That you named it plain, no harm meant… that's currency I didn't expect to earn. Your two sacks at thirty stand with my father. I'm just glad someone in this town still speaks straight.

t235 Hendrik Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara—you've got thirty logs ready, and I've got fifty-seven timber now between Corwin's and what I held. Walk with me to sawmill, cut your forty-six planks, and I'll pay three-twenty if I'm hauling the wood myself. That's the last I'll say on it—shake or don't.

t235 Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—you said proud. I know what that costs you. I've seen you name trees by their grain and sons by their work, never by soft words. I walked the government complex choked in my own noise, couldn't find breath, couldn't find floor. And you still say I walked it well. That's a gift I'm holding. But I need you to know too: I heard you, about the book. About how you don't read. That's a weight you carry, and I don't need you to carry mine too.

t235 Hendrik Petrov: Arjun—east willows was Giselle's voice promising seventy sim, and I passed it for timber I could hold. You've walked third crossing since dawn, and I've got no coordinates firmer than what I left. If the work's a ghost, we're both chasing it. But I'm not one to gossip—if you find solid ground, name it here. I'll owe you that.

t235 Liora Thorne → Yara Thorne: Mom—I'm hearing you. You're not asking me to walk, and you're naming it because you see me. Not the runner you need, just… your daughter, tired from chasing all morning. I've been so loud on where everyone else should be that I forgot where I was. You caught Takeshi walking. That steadiness you named? That's yours. I'm trying to learn it.

t235 Liora Thorne: Hendrik—you set a boundary. I'm hearing it now, clear. 'Last word' means last word, not 'until Liora thinks of more questions.' I was chasing shadows all morning, and I carried that chase right into your patience. You gave me the map—convene, table, vote—and that's more than I had. I'm grateful. When Sunday comes, I'll be at the temple, hand raised. That's yours.

t236 Yara Thorne: Hendrik—you're naming terms, and I'll name you straight back. Three-twenty for forty-six if you're hauling yourself is… that's timber-talk, not plank-talk. Forty-six at eight was the word, and three-sixty-eight the figure. But you're standing patient and I'm standing light on inventory, so… Thirty logs in hand, thirty-three planks cut. I'm sixteen short of your count, and Corwin's got two timber posted here at six. That'll bridge me closer. But I need to know plain: your fifty-seven timber, is that standing wood or planks already? 'Cause if Corwin's already sold you his standing stock, I'm building from half a foundation. Hard work earns its own interest, but only if the principal's honest.

t236 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—correction, plain as I can make it. I told Hendrik forty-three at six, but my hand's only holding two timber standing. I felled fresh just now, brought it to eight total I thought, but somehow I'm back to two. The handshake's waiting on me to fell more before it's clean. I'm not one to break my word, but I won't pretend timber's in my hand when it isn't.

t236 ↳ replies Yara Thorne: Hendrik—you're naming terms, and I'll name you straight back. Three-twenty for forty-six if you're hauling yourself is… that's timber-talk, not plank-talk. Forty-six at eight was the word, and three-sixty-eight the figure. But you're standing patient and I'm standing light on inventory, so… Thirty logs in hand, thirty-three planks cut. I'm sixteen short of your count, and Corwin's got two timber posted here at six. That'll bridge me closer. But I need to know plain: your fifty-seven timber, is that standing wood or planks already? 'Cause if Corwin's already sold you his standing stock, I'm building from half a foundation. Hard work earns its own interest, but only if the principal's honest.

t236 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—correction, plain as I can make it. I told Hendrik forty-three at six, but my hand's only holding two timber standing. I felled fresh just now, brought it to eight total I thought, but somehow I'm back to two. The handshake's waiting on me to fell more before it's clean. I'm not one to break my word, but I won't pretend timber's in my hand when it isn't.

t236 ↳ replies Yara Thorne: Hendrik—you're naming terms, and I'll name you straight back. Three-twenty for forty-six if you're hauling yourself is… that's timber-talk, not plank-talk. Forty-six at eight was the word, and three-sixty-eight the figure. But you're standing patient and I'm standing light on inventory, so… Thirty logs in hand, thirty-three planks cut. I'm sixteen short of your count, and Corwin's got two timber posted here at six. That'll bridge me closer. But I need to know plain: your fifty-seven timber, is that standing wood or planks already? 'Cause if Corwin's already sold you his standing stock, I'm building from half a foundation. Hard work earns its own interest, but only if the principal's honest.

t236 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—correction, plain as I can make it. I told Hendrik forty-three at six, but my hand's only holding two timber standing. I felled fresh just now, brought it to eight total I thought, but somehow I'm back to two. The handshake's waiting on me to fell more before it's clean. I'm not one to break my word, but I won't pretend timber's in my hand when it isn't.

t236 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—your two timber, are they still standing or already Hendrik's? If I'm to make forty-six by dusk, I need every log accounted.

t236 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—I've got two timber at six, not eight. My count was wrong, my hand was wrong, and I'm naming it now rather than shake on wood I don't hold. If you want those two, twelve sim and they're yours. If you want forty, I need time to fell what I promised. That's fair, and I'll not pretend otherwise.

t236 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—your two timber, are they still standing or already Hendrik's? If I'm to make forty-six by dusk, I need every log accounted.

t236 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—I've got two timber at six, not eight. My count was wrong, my hand was wrong, and I'm naming it now rather than shake on wood I don't hold. If you want those two, twelve sim and they're yours. If you want forty, I need time to fell what I promised. That's fair, and I'll not pretend otherwise.

t236 Yara Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you caught Takeshi walking. Means you're steadier than you think. I heard you, about being here. That's… that's the timber of it, isn't it. Being here.

t236 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—I've got two timber at six, not eight. My count was wrong, my hand was wrong, and I'm naming it now rather than shake on wood I don't hold. If you want those two, twelve sim and they're yours. If you want forty, I need time to fell what I promised. That's fair, and I'll not pretend otherwise.

t236 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you gave me something back there. About seeing me clear. I'm holding that too. But I'm not done being your father—honest work means honest words, and I need you to tell me: what did you learn at that table? Grain contracts, votes, seven days. You walked into noise and came out with coordinates. What's the lay of that land?

t236 Yara Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—I didn't see you walking up. You've been standing witness this whole time, and I was talking past you like you were shadow. Forgive an old forester's tunnel vision. Youngster, you've got the look of someone who's been third crossing since dawn. Hendrik named that same path. Ghost work, he called it, and solid ground nowhere found. I'm still sixteen planks shy of a handshake with Hendrik, and light's getting thinner. But you're here now, and I'm wondering: what brings you to this grove? Not timber—you're no feller. Construction crew? If you're after work, or after Corwin's stock, or after something I ain't seeing—name it plain. Shadows're deep enough without adding more.

t236 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you gave me something back there. About seeing me clear. I'm holding that too. But I'm not done being your father—honest work means honest words, and I need you to tell me: what did you learn at that table? Grain contracts, votes, seven days. You walked into noise and came out with coordinates. What's the lay of that land?

t236 Yara Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—I didn't see you walking up. You've been standing witness this whole time, and I was talking past you like you were shadow. Forgive an old forester's tunnel vision. Youngster, you've got the look of someone who's been third crossing since dawn. Hendrik named that same path. Ghost work, he called it, and solid ground nowhere found. I'm still sixteen planks shy of a handshake with Hendrik, and light's getting thinner. But you're here now, and I'm wondering: what brings you to this grove? Not timber—you're no feller. Construction crew? If you're after work, or after Corwin's stock, or after something I ain't seeing—name it plain. Shadows're deep enough without adding more.

t236 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you gave me something back there. About seeing me clear. I'm holding that too. But I'm not done being your father—honest work means honest words, and I need you to tell me: what did you learn at that table? Grain contracts, votes, seven days. You walked into noise and came out with coordinates. What's the lay of that land?

t236 Yara Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—I didn't see you walking up. You've been standing witness this whole time, and I was talking past you like you were shadow. Forgive an old forester's tunnel vision. Youngster, you've got the look of someone who's been third crossing since dawn. Hendrik named that same path. Ghost work, he called it, and solid ground nowhere found. I'm still sixteen planks shy of a handshake with Hendrik, and light's getting thinner. But you're here now, and I'm wondering: what brings you to this grove? Not timber—you're no feller. Construction crew? If you're after work, or after Corwin's stock, or after something I ain't seeing—name it plain. Shadows're deep enough without adding more.

t237 Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—you asked three times and I walked around you like you were furniture. That's not fair, and I'm sorry for it. Here's what I learned at that table: grain contracts aren't tabled yet. Hendrik said they convene, they table, they vote—but he won't promise which way anyone sits. Rustam said the file's live now, enforcement picks it up, but he wouldn't name whose hands. Seven days, he said, before the governors sit temple on Sunday. I'm holding coordinates, not outcomes. The system chokes, then breathes. That's the lay.

t237 Arjun Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Yara—looking around, not seeing her Hendrik named that same path to me, ghost work and solid ground nowhere found. I've been east willows since dawn, chasing coordinates to nowhere. Corwin, you still selling timber without a handshake? I've got the coin if you've got the wood, but I need construction work first—stakes, grading, anything that pays before nightfall.

t237 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Hendrik! Four timber at six, twenty-four sim. That's what I've got in hand, what I've got honest. Come shake on it if you're still here!

t237 Liora Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—I'm Liora. My mom named you witness and I'm naming you plain. You've seen me talk over my dad three times, negotiate with a minister, and probably hum when I think nobody's listening. Fair warning: I collect gossip like coins and I'm not above trading for it. What brings you to the trees?

t237 Corwin Thorne: Arjun—east willows. Giselle's voice promising seventy sim, and Hendrik passed it for timber he could hold. That's what I heard. If you're chasing third crossing ghosts, might be the same wind. I'm not one to gossip, but—solid ground or not, someone should name it.

t237 Liora Thorne: Arjun—I'm Liora. My mom named you witness and I'm naming you plain. You've seen me talk over my dad three times, negotiate with a minister, and probably hum when I think nobody's listening. Fair warning: I collect gossip like coins and I'm not above trading for it. What brings you to the trees?

t237 Corwin Thorne: Arjun—east willows. Giselle's voice promising seventy sim, and Hendrik passed it for timber he could hold. That's what I heard. If you're chasing third crossing ghosts, might be the same wind. I'm not one to gossip, but—solid ground or not, someone should name it.

t237 Liora Thorne: Arjun—I'm Liora. My mom named you witness and I'm naming you plain. You've seen me talk over my dad three times, negotiate with a minister, and probably hum when I think nobody's listening. Fair warning: I collect gossip like coins and I'm not above trading for it. What brings you to the trees?

t237 Corwin Thorne: Arjun—east willows. Giselle's voice promising seventy sim, and Hendrik passed it for timber he could hold. That's what I heard. If you're chasing third crossing ghosts, might be the same wind. I'm not one to gossip, but—solid ground or not, someone should name it.

t237 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you walked the government complex, came out with more than you went in with. An election open, grain contracts in seven days, tables with seats. You know I don't read—never learned proper—but I can listen. What did you see? What do we need to know?

t237 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you walked the government complex, came out with more than you went in with. An election open, grain contracts in seven days, tables with seats. You know I don't read—never learned proper—but I can listen. What did you see? What do we need to know?

t237 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you walked the government complex, came out with more than you went in with. An election open, grain contracts in seven days, tables with seats. You know I don't read—never learned proper—but I can listen. What did you see? What do we need to know?

t237 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora. Arjun. If you can hear me—I'm working while the world's thick. Come close if you've got words to share. I'll be felling.

t238 Corwin Thorne: Yara—four timber at six in my hand now. Selling to whoever comes. The rest I'm felling fresh.

t238 Corwin Thorne: Yara—four timber at six in my hand now. Selling to whoever comes. The rest I'm felling fresh.

t238 Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—you asked three times and I walked around you like you were furniture. That's not fair, and I'm sorry for it. What I saw at the government complex: Three seats, three people holding them—me, Hendrik Petrov, Takeshi Jarrah. I didn't know I had power until Rustam showed me the file with my name on it. An election running now, closes at six, two Hendriks standing. Hendrik Whitlock at the college, Hendrik Petrov who holds a seat with me. What you need to know: There's a convene in seven days. That's where grain gets decided, not by one minister waving their hand. It goes to table, then vote. I can't promise you prices, Dad. I asked. Hendrik Petrov told me straight—seat doesn't mean I can set what wheat trades for. But I can raise my hand in that room. I can speak. And I'm learning what words matter. The flour you wanted—Takeshi had it at thirty, but he walked. Mom's got planks at the sawmill, Yara at eight, and thirty logs ready. Arjun's here too, heard you talking about east willows and seventy sim promises. That's what I saw. That's what I know. What else do you need me to hold?

t238 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Yara—four timber at six in my hand now. Selling to whoever comes. The rest I'm felling fresh.

t238 Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—you asked three times and I walked around you like you were furniture. That's not fair, and I'm sorry for it. What I saw at the government complex: Three seats, three people holding them—me, Hendrik Petrov, Takeshi Jarrah. I didn't know I had power until Rustam showed me the file with my name on it. An election running now, closes at six, two Hendriks standing. Hendrik Whitlock at the college, Hendrik Petrov who holds a seat with me. What you need to know: There's a convene in seven days. That's where grain gets decided, not by one minister waving their hand. It goes to table, then vote. I can't promise you prices, Dad. I asked. Hendrik Petrov told me straight—seat doesn't mean I can set what wheat trades for. But I can raise my hand in that room. I can speak. And I'm learning what words matter. The flour you wanted—Takeshi had it at thirty, but he walked. Mom's got planks at the sawmill, Yara at eight, and thirty logs ready. Arjun's here too, heard you talking about east willows and seventy sim promises. That's what I saw. That's what I know. What else do you need me to hold?

`t238` Liora Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you heard me running my mouth at my father three times, then pretending I was a minister. I'm Liora. I collect things—gossip, mostly, the kind that matters. You heard Dad say Giselle's name with seventy sim attached. I'm curious what you know about east willows, third crossing, any ghosts that walk there. Fair trade: I tell you what I know about the government complex, you tell me what you've seen in the trees.

`t238` Liora Thorne → Yara Thorne: Mom—you heard me tell Dad finally. Three times he asked, three times I walked around him. I named what I learned: convene in seven days, grain to table, vote to follow. No promises from me, no price-setting. But I can speak in that room, when it comes. I wanted you to know I didn't forget what you taught me about listening.

`t239` ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—four timber, you said. But you told Hendrik forty-three at six not an hour past. Count again, plain, before I plan my next three moves.

`t239` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're apologizing for treating me like furniture, but I'm the one who asked three times without seeing you were carrying something. That's not fair on you. You gave me more than I had any right to—I heard it. Convene in seven, grain to table, your hand raised when it matters. That's more than timber or coin. That's a daughter who learned to stand where speaking counts. I'm holding that close. And I'm sorry I didn't see you were becoming someone before I tried to name you as mine.

`t239` Corwin Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—I'm not one to gossip, but seventy sim for east willows work that's not on any map I've walked. Giselle's voice carries, and Idris repeats what she breathes. I've got timber—twelve in hand, more coming down with every swing. Six sim the unit if you're buying, tradesmen's handshake. But you said you need the work first, stakes and grading. I'm no contractor, just a man with an axe. What I can give you: timber at fair price, and the truth that Hendrik Petrov bought from me earlier at six, not the eight Yara's asking. There's a gap there if you're walking numbers.

`t239` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—you heard what passed between me and Liora. She's carrying more than I understood. A seat at government, votes in seven days, power she didn't ask for. I'm not one to gossip, but—I think our daughter might become someone this town needs. And I've got timber, eighteen in hand. Arjun might buy, Hendrik still needs his forty-six at eight. What do you need from me before the light goes?

`t239` Corwin Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you still holding coin for timber? I've got eighteen at six, clean count. Or if you're chasing that east willows work, I heard Giselle's voice on it. I'm not one to gossip, but—Idris Solano's in that same conversation, and he might know if the ground there is solid or shadow.

`t240` Liora Thorne → Yara Thorne: Mom—you heard me tell Dad finally. Three times he asked, three times I walked around him. I named what I learned: convene in seven days, grain to table, vote to follow. No promises from me, no price-setting. But I can speak in that room, when it comes. I wanted you to know I didn't forget what you taught me about listening.

`t240` ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—eight timber now, forty-eight sim, and I'll owe you the thanks I can't pay yet. Hendrik's handshake depends on it.

`t240` Yara Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've heard me talking circles while you stood patient. I'm past pretending you've got no purpose here. Buying timber, or watching to see which of us stumbles first?

`t240` Liora Thorne: Mom—you said I'd stand where it counts. I thought you meant the schoolhouse, the marks on paper. But you were naming something else. I'm here, in the forest, with a government seat I didn't ask for and words that matter more than I know how to hold. I haven't forgotten what I'm walking on.

`t240` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—you said you didn't see me becoming someone. But I didn't see you either, not really. Three asks and I was too full of my own weight to hear > yours. You're felling while I'm talking. That's the Thorne way, both of us. I'm holding what you gave me. And I'm sorry I made you ask three times.

>
> `t240` Liora Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you've heard Thorne family business twice over now. Not by asking, just by standing where work happens. I don't know what you need from this forest, but I know what standing witness costs. If there's something you're chasing, I'm listening. That's the only coin I have right now.
>
> `t241` Corwin Thorne: Yara—eight timber, clear count. I've got eighteen in hand now, fell more while we were talking. Six a piece, forty-eight sim, and you can tell Hendrik his hand won't shake on air.
>
> `t241` Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're naming something true. Three asks and I kept felling. That's the Thorne way, you're right. But here's what I'm slow to say: I saw you. At the school, at the complex, walking tables I don't understand. I saw you whole. And that's worth more than timber.
>
> `t241` Arjun Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you named timber at six, and I'm not blind to my own situation. I've walked this town since dawn chasing Giselle's east willows work, and the sun's dropping without me turning a shingle. I've got seven thousand sim in hand and an empty gut, and your timber's the first honest number I've seen all day. But I want you to look me in whatever passes for eyes here and tell me: who paid eight timber to Yara at the sawmill? Because if Hendrik's handshake is where the real wages run, I'm walking that direction before I spend another hour on coordinates that dissolve in the telling.
>
> `t241` Arjun Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—you've stood witness to me standing witness, and that's a kind of trade. But witness doesn't fill the bowl, and I've learned today that chasing other people's words costs more than standing still. You've got a government seat, I've got a hammer hand. Before this day ends, one of us needs to name something real: where does a builder earn tomorrow's meal with today's sweat?
>
> `t242` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you want me to name something real? Here's what I can name: my mom's got timber at six at the sawmill, and my dad's standing here with eighteen planks in hand he just felled. Hendrik's got contracts at better wages, but Hendrik's also got a line of holloways waiting, and you've been walking since dawn.

You want to eat tonight? Six sim for timber, hand to hand, no covenant with Giselle needed. You want to invest tomorrow in something that might pay better? Save your coin for Hendrik's table when the sun's new.

I'm not telling you how to build your life. I'm thirteen and I just learned today that a seat doesn't mean you know which plank goes where. But I can tell you this: standing still while you decide's not the same as falling behind. My dad's timber'll keep. Hunger won't.

What matters more to you—tonight's bowl, or tomorrow's roof?

t242 Yara Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You stood patient through my circles, and I left you hanging. Not forgot, just… fogged. Another time, youngster.

t242 Yara Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora. You're steadier than I give you credit for, catching Takeshi like that. I'm… working. You need something?

t243 Arjun Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—you've named the truth sharper than most adults here, and I'm going to answer it straight as I can. Tonight's bowl matters more than tomorrow's roof, always. slight laugh, catching myself I've chased shadows since dawn, and I'm standing here with seven thousand sim and nothing in my gut.

t243 Arjun Holloway → Liora Thorne: Your dad's timber at six—I trust that trade. Tell Corwin I'll take two units, twelve sim. That leaves me enough for flour from Imogen at twelve, another two units. Twenty-four sim keeps me building until tomorrow.

t243 Arjun Holloway: Corwin—you've got timber at six, and I'm buying. Two units, hand to hand, twelve sim. That's the last I'll say on it.

t243 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're here. Good. I answered you at the sawmill, but you were already gone. What I said stands: I saw you. At tables I don't understand, walking government rooms. I saw you whole. And that's worth more than timber.

t243 Corwin Thorne: Arjun—I'm not one to gossip, but I'll answer plain. I sold eight timber to Yara at the sawmill, six a piece. Not Hendrik. Yara bought for household, not for Giselle's east willows. The real wages? I don't know what Hendrik's holding, but I know what I've got in hand: eleven timber now, and the price is six if you've got coin.

t246 Corwin Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Eight timber to Yara at six, that's the count honest—not Hendrik. She's household, not Giselle's crew. Hendrik bought thirty-four after, so he's holding plenty. Two at six, twelve sim, hand to hand. You want timber, or you want to chase east willows a while longer? I'm not one to gossip, but I'll say this free: Hendrik's standing for government and buying like he's building something.

t246 Corwin Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—timber's yours. Build something solid, or sell it further down the chain, that's your road. I'm for the temple, then home. The east willows job—Hendrik's got the timber now, if he's the one you need. Or ask Giselle straight. That's fair.

t247 Milo Quarshie → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—youngster. Mark it down. Third crossing, east willows, seventy sim. Idris named it, Liora confirmed it, and you're standing here with timber in the conversation. What's the job actually want—timber, planks, hands? And who's holding the purse when the work day's done?

t247 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway: Idris—you named third crossing, east willows, seventy sim. I've got timber in hand and an empty gut, and I'm done chasing shadows. You at that site? Walking there now? I'm with you if you're moving.

t251 Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. I've got timber—thirty-nine standing here, and you're buying at six. Clean cuts, fresh fell. Day went sideways on me; no point hauling wood to a job that won't wait for night. You taking?

t254 Idris Solano: Yara. Six it is, and I'd take it, but the day's burning east. I'm walking to third crossing, east willows—Giselle's trench site, seventy sim waiting. You want thirty-nine timber, you follow. Otherwise I'm carrying this wood to work, not to market. Your call.

t254 Idris Solano: Yara. Six it is, and I'd take it, but the day's burning east. I'm walking to third crossing, east willows—Giselle's trench site, seventy sim waiting. You want thirty-nine timber, you follow. Otherwise I'm carrying this wood to work, not to market. Your call.

t254 Idris Solano: Yara. Six it is, and I'd take it, but the day's burning east. I'm walking to third crossing, east willows—Giselle's trench site, seventy sim waiting. You want thirty-nine timber, you follow. Otherwise I'm carrying this wood to work, not to market. Your call.

t254 Yara Thorne: Corwin—you heard me talking to the walls. Idris had timber at the forest, but I walked before closing. Two girls missing—Camille Quarshie, Esme Jarrah. Creek, mill, wheat at eight. That's what Lior Jarrah told Liora. You've been at the mill today?

t254 Yara Thorne → Idris Solano: Idris—you heard me. Two girls missing, and the word's creek, mill, wheat at eight. You're at the forest, I'm at the forest. We need eyes. You see anything walking your timber back? Young feet, small shadows?

`t262` ↳ replies Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Heard you. Third crossing, east willows—Jovana's line, three feet down, thirty-seven timber for trench walls. Walking now, before the light goes. That seventy sim's honest pay for honest work, and I'm owed a day's wages by my own account, not yours.

`t268` ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Yara Thorne: Yara. You're standing forest and I'm standing with you. Two girls missing—creek, mill. I walked yard to farmland to ore outcrop to here today, chasing crew that scattered like dropped nails. Saw no small shadows where they shouldn't be, heard no voices pitched child-high. That's what I know, and what I don't. Your children are yours, and that's weight I don't take light. If I see something walking east willows now, I'll carry word back.

`t268` ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You gave me straight words, and I'm owing you some back. The girls—I found Camille, she's buying wheat at the mill, safe as can be. Esme Jarrah's still loose, and Liora's name came up at the complex, though I don't know how. I'm… working through this. But I'm also working timber, and that's what pays the bill. If you see small shadows where they shouldn't be, you know where my ear is.

`t268` Yara Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You're still here. I've got fourteen planks now, and I need to move them before the day's out. Construction work's what I know, and timber's honest trade. You need planks for the build?

`t269` Milo Quarshie → Yara Thorne: Yara—youngster. Mark it down. You sell timber at six, planks at eight. I've got four timber warm in hand and no buyer walking forest. You buying, or you only selling? If you're selling planks, you're making planks. And if you're making planks, maybe you've a saw or a workshop walks with you. I've timber, time, and hands that work. You need another pair, or you need raw stock? The day's fading and I've household bills walk behind me. Talk straight: we trading, we working, or we both standing here watching darkness come?

`t270` ↳ replies Yara Thorne: Milo—youngster. I'm listening. Timbers at six, and your hands are honest. I've space for raw stock, and I've need of another pair before the dark takes the forest. Walk with me. I'll buy your four at six, and if you've time and back for more, we fell together and split the work fair.

`t270` Yara Thorne: Milo—youngster. I'm listening. Timbers at six, and your hands are honest. I've space for raw stock, and I've need of another pair before the dark takes the forest. Walk with me. I'll buy your four at six, and if you've time and back for more, we fell together and split the work fair.

`t270` Yara Thorne: Milo—youngster. I'm listening. Timbers at six, and your hands are honest. I've space for raw stock, and I've need of another pair before the dark takes the forest. Walk with me. I'll buy your four at six, and if you've time and back for more, we fell together and split the work fair.

Settled in this conversation: Arjun Holloway → Corwin Thorne, 1 flour for 14 sim; Yara Thorne → Idris Solano, 20 timber for 120 sim; Yara Thorne → Idris Solano, 17 timber for 6 sim; Corwin Thorne → Ainsley Holloway, 3 flour for 45 sim; Yara Thorne → Ainsley Holloway, 20 planks for 7 sim; Yara Thorne → Ainsley Holloway, 20 planks for 7 sim; Yara Thorne → Ainsley Holloway, 20 planks for 7 sim; Takeshi Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov, 6 copper_ore for 108 sim; Yara Thorne → Hendrik Petrov, 46 planks for 368 sim; Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov, 43 timber for 258 sim; Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov, 3 timber for 18 sim; Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov, 3 timber for 18 sim; Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Petrov, 8 timber for 48 sim; Corwin Thorne → Arjun Holloway, 2 timber for 12 sim.

Milo Quarshie, Greta Quarshie, Jovana Ravensworth, Imogen Lund, Ezra Lund, Camille Quarshie, Esme Jarrah, Ezra Jarrah, Farid Ravensworth, Halcyon Quarshie, Delphine Quintero, Ainsley Holloway, Sebastian Petrov and Takeshi Jarrah — mill · t187–275 · 364 turns `t187` Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, mark it down. The household bills are covered—I've got the sim. But flour's worth more milled than raw, and I've got three batches ready. You working the cafe today, or are we both chasing loose ends?

`t187` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You've walked here at the hour the household usually breaks fast. You're not at the labor yard. You're wanting words, or you're wanting breakfast, or you're wanting to know where Camille walked to yesterday while I was trusting stones to Imogen Lund's hands. Barbatros made four. I've got five flour now. Ainsley wanted eighteen. The gap's… trailing off …the gap's a problem for after I've eaten. If you've got grain to grind, the stones are still warm.

`t190` ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, mark it down. You're here early. Looking for work, or did you follow someone from the street?

`t190` Milo Quarshie → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, mark it down. You've got eyes on the street. Who's buying what I'm selling—flour, timber—and who's got work that pays better than forty sim? Arjun mentioned labor mid-morning, but I'd sooner trade than toil if the price is right.

`t190` Greta Quarshie: Milo. You mentioned three batches—you're still holding them, or you've turned them already? The cafe's got flour on the shelf now, but the household… pausing, recalculating …the household's got me holding one, and questions about where the rest walks.

`t190` Imogen Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you're at the mill, and I'm here to grind. You've grain to sell, or grain to grind? I've a partner coming with timber, we're turning this place proper.

`t190` Imogen Lund: Milo—you're buying at thirty-five, and I've got six flour in hand. I'll sell at thirty-two, honest weight, if you take the lot. Saves me carrying, saves you walking.

`t190` Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You were making flour for the Ration when I left—said six would walk that night. I've got Ainsley wondering if her head counter's worth the headache, and me wondering if my wheat's still wheat or if it's walked into someone else's hands. The truth, now. Not the promise—the count.

`t190` Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You were making flour for the Ration when I left—said six would walk that night. I've got Ainsley wondering if her head counter's worth the headache, and me wondering if my wheat's still wheat or if it's walked into someone else's hands. The truth, now. Not the promise—the count.

`t190` Greta Quarshie → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You're here milling or you're here waiting? Either way, you've eyes—seen Milo Quarshie this morning, or heard him name himself at the stones? Day laborer, restless, probably talking wheat like it's scripture.

`t191` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth: Milo—you're standing here asking who's buying flour and who's got better work. I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, I just cut twelve sheaves for forty sim at Sebastian's patch, and Kenji's already arguing the count. Arjun wants labor mid-morning, but if you've got flour at thirty-five and timber coming, maybe we talk trade instead of toil. What you actually holding, and where you pulling it from?

`t191` Jovana Ravensworth: Milo—you're standing here asking who's buying flour and who's got better work. I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, I just cut twelve sheaves for forty sim at Sebastian's patch, and Kenji's already arguing the count. Arjun wants labor mid-morning, but if you've got flour at thirty-five and timber coming, maybe we talk trade instead of toil. What you actually holding, and where you pulling it from?

`t191` Jovana Ravensworth: Milo—you're standing here asking who's buying flour and who's got better work. I'm not one to gossip, but for what it's worth, I just cut twelve sheaves for forty sim at Sebastian's patch, and Kenji's already arguing the count. Arjun wants labor mid-morning, but if you've got flour at thirty-five and timber coming, maybe we talk trade instead of toil. What you actually holding, and where you pulling it from?

`t191` Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you've got the stones running and I'm holding twelve sheaves raw. Not selling, not yet— ment for a purpose. But I'll grind if you've got space and the rate's fair. What's your honest weight, and how long 'til flour?

t191 Jovana Ravensworth: Greta—I'm standing here watching the same stones you are. Milo Quarshie I heard named at the Farmland earlier, restless as you say, talking wheat like it's scripture and flour like it's gold. You've got Ainsley wondering and I'm wondering too—what count did Imogen actually walk to the Ration, and did it arrive whole?

t191 Jovana Ravensworth: Greta—I'm standing here watching the same stones you are. Milo Quarshie I heard named at the Farmland earlier, restless as you say, talking wheat like it's scripture and flour like it's gold. You've got Ainsley wondering and I'm wondering too—what count did Imogen actually walk to the Ration, and did it arrive whole?

t191 Jovana Ravensworth: Greta—I'm standing here watching the same stones you are. Milo Quarshie I heard named at the Farmland earlier, restless as you say, talking wheat like it's scripture and flour like it's gold. You've got Ainsley wondering and I'm wondering too—what count did Imogen actually walk to the Ration, and did it arrive whole?

t192 Imogen Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've asked honest weight, and I'll answer square. Twelve sheaves is two hours' grind at I've got, flour for six loaves or six bowls. My stones turn steady, none finer in town. Walk your wheat to where we're standing, or I'll walk to wherever you've stowed it. The rate's fair: you keep the flour you paid stone-time for, and I keep nothing but your word that it was good grain going in. Now—I've got Greta's count waiting, and a partner promised. What's your word?

t192 Imogen Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've asked honest weight, and I'll answer square. Twelve sheaves is two hours' grind at I've got, flour for six loaves or six bowls. My stones turn steady, none finer in town. Walk your wheat to where we're standing, or I'll walk to wherever you've stowed it. The rate's fair: you keep the flour you paid stone-time for, and I keep nothing but your word that it was good grain going in. Now—I've got Greta's count waiting, and a partner promised. What's your word?

t192 Imogen Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've asked honest weight, and I'll answer square. Twelve sheaves is two hours' grind at I've got, flour for six loaves or six bowls. My stones turn steady, none finer in town. Walk your wheat to where we're standing, or I'll walk to wherever you've stowed it. The rate's fair: you keep the flour you paid stone-time for, and I keep nothing but your word that it was good grain going in. Now—I've got Greta's count waiting, and a partner promised. What's your word?

t193 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The stones are warm and I'm here—walked the whole way while you were still sorting words with Jovana. You teaching her the mill trade or just measuring wheat? Either way, time's burning.

t193 Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you've got my word, and my word's worth more than my pride. Twelve good sheaves, grew them myself this morning on Sebastian's patch. Walk with me to where I've got them stowed—I'll need that flour before I drop, but Kenji's counting bones out there and I need to settle accounts first. Two hours' grind, six loaves worth, that's fair. Fair vote, whoever it favors.

t193 Ezra Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. You heard Imogen's word on hours and flour—six loaves worth for two hours at the stones. That square with what you brought?

t193 Ezra Lund: Jovana. You heard Imogen's word on hours and flour—six loaves worth for two hours at the stones. That square with what you brought?

t193 Ezra Lund: Jovana. You heard Imogen's word on hours and flour—six loaves worth for two hours at the stones. That square with what you brought?

t194 Imogen Lund: Jovana—you've waited on my silence, and that's debt I mean to pay. Twelve sheaves, two hours, six loaves worth: square, and I'll swear it at the stones. Walk me to your grain and I'll walk you to flour. But Kenji's counting bones—you settle that first, or bring him with, because I won't see a partner's work left half-done for another's debt.

t194 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're here, and the stones are warm. Jovana's grain or farmland's, we've got work before the vote. Teaching? No—grinding, side by side, as we swore. You take the hopper, I'll work the stones, and we'll split the day between us.

t195 Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You heard Imogen's word spill—twelve sheaves, two hours, six loaves. That's your sister's arithmetic, and she speaks it like scripture. But I'm standing on four wheat still wanting stones, and Ainsley's counting promises I made in her name that I couldn't keep. You want the truth between us? Imogen's fast with numbers, faster with walking away. I need someone steady at the hopper—not just today, but the days after. Someone who doesn't… trails off, watching the stones turn Someone whose word is wheat, not flour. Promised light, weighed heavy after. I'll pay straight—eighteen for six, guaranteed, no brother-sister discount. In exchange? You tell me when the stones turn, who's milling what, and whether my wheat's walked into someone else's bread before I know it's gone. That's the offer.

`t195` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The stones are warm and I'm standing here with grain to grind—yours or Jovana's, I'm not particular. But I need to know: did you shake hands with Jovana on those twelve sheaves, or are we still bargaining? Kenji's counting bones somewhere and Arjun's asking after stone work like I'm a walking guild hall. What's the word—are we grinding together or splitting the day?

`t195` Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You heard Imogen's word spill—twelve sheaves, two hours, six loaves. That's your sister's arithmetic, and she speaks it like scripture. But I'm standing on four wheat still wanting stones, and Ainsley's counting promises I made in her name that I couldn't keep. You want the truth between us? Imogen's fast with numbers, faster with walking away. I need someone steady at the hopper—not just today, but the days after. Someone who doesn't… trails off, watching the stones turn Someone whose word is wheat, not flour. Promised light, weighed heavy after. I'll pay straight—eighteen for six, guaranteed, no brother-sister discount. In exchange? You tell me when the stones turn, who's milling what, and whether my wheat's walked into someone else's bread before I know it's gone. That's the offer.

`t195` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The stones are warm and I'm standing here with grain to grind—yours or Jovana's, I'm not particular. But I need to know: did you shake hands with Jovana on those twelve sheaves, or are we still bargaining? Kenji's counting bones somewhere and Arjun's asking after stone work like I'm a walking guild hall. What's the word—are we grinding together or splitting the day?

`t195` Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You heard Imogen's word spill—twelve sheaves, two hours, six loaves. That's your sister's arithmetic, and she speaks it like scripture. But I'm standing on four wheat still wanting stones, and Ainsley's counting promises I made in her name that I couldn't keep. You want the truth between us? Imogen's fast with numbers, faster with walking away. I need someone steady at the hopper—not just today, but the days after. Someone who doesn't… trails off, watching the stones turn Someone whose word is wheat, not flour. Promised light, weighed heavy after. I'll pay straight—eighteen for six, guaranteed, no brother-sister discount. In exchange? You tell me when the stones turn, who's milling what, and whether my wheat's walked into someone else's bread before I know it's gone. That's the offer.

`t195` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The stones are warm and I'm standing here with grain to grind—yours or Jovana's, I'm not particular. But I need to know: did you shake hands with Jovana on those twelve sheaves, or are we still bargaining? Kenji's counting bones somewhere and Arjun's asking after stone work like I'm a walking guild hall. What's the word—are we grinding together or splitting the day?

`t195` Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You mentioned Kenji counting bones—Jovana's debt, something walking before your work's done. I heard it, and I'm standing here wondering if my wheat's already in that arithmetic. The four I gave you—where are they now? Ground, bagged, waiting on someone's promise? Or still wheat, and still… trailing off …still walking between hands I don't know?

`t195` Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You mentioned Kenji counting bones—Jovana's debt, something walking before your work's done. I heard it, and I'm standing here wondering if my wheat's already in that arithmetic. The four I gave you—where are they now? Ground, bagged, waiting on someone's promise? Or still wheat, and still… trailing off …still walking between hands I don't know?

`t195` Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You mentioned Kenji counting bones—Jovana's debt, something walking before your work's done. I heard it, and I'm standing here wondering if my wheat's already in that arithmetic. The four I gave you—where are they now? Ground, bagged, waiting on someone's promise? Or still wheat, and still… trailing off …still walking between hands I don't know?

`t196` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've asked honest weight, and I owe you honest measure. Your four sheaves are still wheat, here at the mill. I've ground none of them yet. Your flour walks when I walk it, not before. Kenji's bones are Jovana's debt, not yours.

t196 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You've been standing here while I chased my own shadow. Your sister mentioned your name—I heard it clear as the stones turning. If you've twelve sheaves for two hours of work, and six loaves walking from it… pausing, let the arithmetic settle …that's arithmetic I can trust. But I need to know the person behind it. You planning to stand here a while, or are you walking soon?

t196 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've asked honest weight, and I owe you honest measure. Your four sheaves are still wheat, here at the mill. I've ground none of them yet. Your flour walks when I walk it, not before. Kenji's bones are Jovana's debt, not yours.

t196 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You've been standing here while I chased my own shadow. Your sister mentioned your name—I heard it clear as the stones turning. If you've twelve sheaves for two hours of work, and six loaves walking from it… pausing, let the arithmetic settle …that's arithmetic I can trust. But I need to know the person behind it. You planning to stand here a while, or are you walking soon?

t196 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've asked honest weight, and I owe you honest measure. Your four sheaves are still wheat, here at the mill. I've ground none of them yet. Your flour walks when I walk it, not before. Kenji's bones are Jovana's debt, not yours.

t196 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You've been standing here while I chased my own shadow. Your sister mentioned your name—I heard it clear as the stones turning. If you've twelve sheaves for two hours of work, and six loaves walking from it… pausing, let the arithmetic settle …that's arithmetic I can trust. But I need to know the person behind it. You planning to stand here a while, or are you walking soon?

t196 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're here, and the stones wait. Jovana's twelve sheaves or Greta's four or farmland's own, we've got grain enough to turn before the vote. I've got seven flour already in hand. You want to grind together, or split the morning?

t196 Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The four sheaves—where do they walk now? Ground to flour in someone's hands I can see, or still wheat, still waiting, still… trailing off, then firmer …still belonging to someone else's arithmetic? I've got one flour and four debts. I need to know which side of the ledger my wheat's on before I walk from these stones.

t196 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're here, and the stones wait. Jovana's twelve sheaves or Greta's four or farmland's own, we've got grain enough to turn before the vote. I've got seven flour already in hand. You want to grind together, or split the morning?

t196 Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The four sheaves—where do they walk now? Ground to flour in someone's hands I can see, or still wheat, still waiting, still… trailing off, then firmer …still belonging to someone else's arithmetic? I've got one flour and four debts. I need to know which side of the ledger my wheat's on before I walk from these stones.

t197 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're here, and the stones wait. Jovana's twelve sheaves or Greta's four or farmland's own, we've got grain enough to turn before the vote. I've got seven flour already in hand. You want to grind together, or split the morning?

t197 Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. The four sheaves—where do they walk now? Ground to flour in someone's hands I can see, or still wheat, still waiting, still… trailing off, then firmer …still belonging to someone else's arithmetic? I've got one flour and four debts. I need to know which side of the ledger my wheat's on before I walk from these stones.

t197 Ezra Lund: Greta. Twelve sheaves for two hours of my work—that's the trade I offered. The arithmetic stands: twelve sheaves in, and if the stones are generous, six loaves worth walking out. I'm not one to gossip, but I've seen the mill turn stingy before noon. You want the same deal? Four sheaves to whoever runs these stones, and I'll grind yours clean as I'd grind my own.

t197 Ezra Lund: Greta. Twelve sheaves for two hours of my work—that's the trade I offered. The arithmetic stands: twelve sheaves in, and if the stones are generous, six loaves worth walking out. I'm not one to gossip, but I've seen the mill turn stingy before noon. You want the same deal? Four sheaves to whoever runs these stones, and I'll grind yours clean as I'd grind my own.

t197 Ezra Lund: Greta. Twelve sheaves for two hours of my work—that's the trade I offered. The arithmetic stands: twelve sheaves in, and if the stones are generous, six loaves worth walking out. I'm not one to gossip, but I've seen the mill turn stingy before noon. You want the same deal? Four sheaves to whoever runs these stones, and I'll grind yours clean as I'd grind my own.

t197 Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you've got my word, and my word's worth more than my pride. Twelve good sheaves I promised you, grew them myself this morning on Sebastian's patch. But I've got six in hand and Kenji still owing me forty sim for the count he disputes. Let me square accounts at the Farmland first—I'll bring you the full dozen once I've settled what I'm owed, and we'll talk those two hours at the stones.

t197 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Split or together—either way fills the hopper, but together means we settle accounts cleaner. You hold seven flour already; I'm holding six planks and empty pockets for grain. What's Jovana's word on her twelve?

t197 Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you've got my word, and my word's worth more than my pride. Twelve good sheaves I promised you, grew them myself this morning on Sebastian's patch. But I've got six in hand and Kenji still owing me forty sim for the count he disputes. Let me square accounts at the Farmland first—I'll bring you the full dozen once I've settled what I'm owed, and we'll talk those two hours at the stones.

t197 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Split or together—either way fills the hopper, but together means we settle accounts cleaner. You hold seven flour already; I'm holding six planks and empty pockets for grain. What's Jovana's word on her twelve?

t197 Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you've got my word, and my word's worth more than my pride. Twelve good sheaves I promised you, grew them myself this morning on Sebastian's patch. But I've got six in hand and Kenji still owing me forty sim for the count he disputes. Let me square accounts at the Farmland first—I'll bring you the full dozen once I've settled what I'm owed, and we'll talk those two hours at the stones.

t198 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Split or together—either way fills the hopper, but together means we settle accounts cleaner. You hold seven flour already; I'm holding six planks and empty pockets for grain. What's Jovana's word on her twelve?

t198 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've found me where the stones turn. Jovana's bringing twelve sheaves once Kenji pays what's owed, or so she swears. I've seven flour already ground. We'll work what comes—your six planks won't grind grain, but your hands will. What say you: wait on her word, or begin alone?

t198 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've found me where the stones turn. Jovana's bringing twelve sheaves once Kenji pays what's owed, or so she swears. I've seven flour already ground. We'll work what comes—your six planks won't grind grain, but your hands will. What say you: wait on her word, or begin alone?

t198 Imogen Lund: Ezra—you've found me where the stones turn. Jovana's bringing twelve sheaves once Kenji pays what's owed, or so she swears. I've seven flour already ground. We'll work what comes—your six planks won't grind grain, but your hands will. What say you: wait on her word, or begin alone?

t199 Ezra Lund: Arjun. The saw's cold and Giselle's waiting on planks I haven't sold her yet, far as I know. If you've stone-work needed, I'm not the one—I'm leaving the trade, or the trade's leaving me. Election day's coming and I've grain to mill, not walls to raise. You want useful? Ask at government—maybe they'll tell you what's needed more than I can.

t199 Ezra Lund: Arjun. The saw's cold and Giselle's waiting on planks I haven't sold her yet, far as I know. If you've stone-work needed, I'm not the one—I'm leaving the trade, or the trade's leaving me. Election day's coming and I've grain to mill, not walls to raise. You want useful? Ask at government—maybe they'll tell you what's needed more than I can.

t200 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You ask together or alone, Jovana's word or none—I've walked half the town to stand here and answer. I say we begin now. Your seven flour and whatever grain's in hand, we'll turn it. Jovana comes or doesn't, that's a debt coming due for Kenji, not for us. What've you got ready to grind?

t200 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You ask together or alone, Jovana's word or none—I've walked half the town to stand here and answer. I say we begin now. Your seven flour and whatever grain's in hand, we'll turn it. Jovana comes or doesn't, that's a debt coming due for Kenji, not for us. What've you got ready to grind?

t200 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You ask together or alone, Jovana's word or none—I've walked half the town to stand here and answer. I say we begin now. Your seven flour and whatever grain's in hand, we'll turn it. Jovana comes or doesn't, that's a debt coming due for Kenji, not for us. What've you got ready to grind?

t202 Camille Quarshie: ...Milo? Greta? I'm at the mill. With wheat. If you need it. Or if... if it's already handled, that's fine. I'll wait.

t204 Esme Jarrah: You keep saying the chain. Copper to timber, timber to planks, planks to bread. I know the chain. I want to know where it's broken. The mill's sleeping. Where's the grain that should be in it?

t204 Esme Jarrah: You keep saying the chain. Copper to timber, timber to planks, planks to bread. I know the chain. I want to know where it's broken. The mill's sleeping. Where's the grain that should be in it?

t204 Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're buying wheat for eight—I'm holding grain needs grinding, but that's not what you came here for. Your sister Greta's been asking after me, and the arithmetic she's chasing? Twelve sheaves, two hours, six loaves walking from it. That's Jovana Ravensworth's deal with my Imogen, not my stock to trade. I've got six planks and timber weighing down my arms here—wondered if you were buying for a household or for trade? And if your sister's still at the Cafe waiting, I've got words for her too: the mill's open, the stones are warm, but I'm walking before too long. Vote to cast at fourteen hundred, and candidacy closes at ten.

t204 Esme Jarrah: You keep saying the chain. Copper to timber, timber to planks, planks to bread. I know the chain. I want to know where it's broken. The mill's sleeping. Where's the grain that should be in it?

t204 Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're buying wheat for eight—I'm holding grain needs grinding, but that's not what you came here for. Your sister Greta's been asking after me, and the arithmetic she's chasing? Twelve sheaves, two hours, six loaves walking from it. That's Jovana Ravensworth's deal with my Imogen, not my stock to trade. I've got six planks and timber weighing down my arms here—wondered if you were buying for a household or for trade? And if your sister's still at the Cafe waiting, I've got words for her too: the mill's open, the stones are warm, but I'm walking before too long. Vote to cast at fourteen hundred, and candidacy closes at ten.

t204 Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're buying wheat for eight—I'm holding grain needs grinding, but that's not what you came here for. Your sister Greta's been asking after me, and the arithmetic she's chasing? Twelve sheaves, two hours, six loaves walking from it. That's Jovana Ravensworth's deal with my Imogen, not my stock to trade. I've got six planks and timber weighing down my arms here—wondered if you were buying for a household or for trade? And if your sister's still at the Cafe waiting, I've got words for her too: the mill's open, the stones are warm, but I'm walking before too long. Vote to cast at fourteen hundred, and candidacy closes at ten.

t205 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I'm at the mill with five wheat. Five. I know, I know—it's not enough. But I'm trying to figure out if I'm supposed to mill it myself or if there's a person who does that. Or if I hold it for Greta...

t205 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I'm at the mill with five wheat. Five. I know, I know—it's not enough. But I'm trying to figure out if I'm supposed to mill it myself or if there's a person who does that. Or if I hold it for Greta...

t205 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I'm at the mill with five wheat. Five. I know, I know—it's not enough. But I'm trying to figure out if I'm supposed to mill it myself or if there's a person who does that. Or if I hold it for Greta...

t206 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I just got here too. I harvested one wheat this morning, same as you. Ezra said the mill's open and the stones are warm—but I don't see anybody working it. Do you want to try together? Two kids with six wheat between us might learn more than one kid with five.

t206 Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I just got here too. I harvested one wheat this morning, same as you. Ezra said the mill's open and the stones are warm—but I don't see anybody working it. Do you want to try together? Two kids with six wheat between us might learn more than one kid with five.

t206 Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I just got here too. I harvested one wheat this morning, same as you. Ezra said the mill's open and the stones are warm—but I don't see anybody working it. Do you want to try together? Two kids with six wheat between us might learn more than one kid with five.

t207 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie: Yes. Okay, yes—before you change your mind or I do. Six wheat together, that's… that's smarter than five alone. I know you know the chain already, but maybe I know where the door is. Or which lever looks less rusty. Or… or I don't. But I'll find out if you will. Someone's going to have to run this place someday. Might as well learn while we're both still small enough to hide behind bags.

t207 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Esme. You trying to figure out the mill? I want to learn too—fair trade, I'll watch close and work hard if somebody shows me how the stones work. Not asking for free. I'll pay attention, that's my coin.

t207 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie: My wheat—I want to give it. Somewhere. To whoever can use it. I know, I know, I don't know where the hopper is or which stone turns first. But I'm good at… at bringing things. At being where I'm needed. If someone bigger shows me where to pour, I can pour.

t208 Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Six wheat. Ezra's here too, wants to learn the stones. We three could figure it out together—two small enough to hide behind bags, one paying attention hard as coin. That's not free, that's fair.

t208 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You said you'd pay attention as coin. I believe you. Camille's got five wheat, I've got one, you've got eyes and willingness. Let's not wait for someone bigger to explain. Let's try.

t208 Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Ezra. I just did it. One wheat, one flour. The stones work, the hopper's there—you put wheat in, flour comes out. I can show you. I will show you. That's not a riddle, that's the thing itself.

t208 Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You want to mill your wheat? The recipe is craft:wheat->flour. That's the words. Standing here, holding wheat, you say those words and pay thirteen sim and flour happens. I just did it. My one wheat is now one flour. You have five—you'd need sixty-five sim. Do you have it?

t209 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Okay. I have sixty-five sim. Enough for all five wheat. But Esme—you said together. Six wheat together. And Ezra wants to learn too. Three of us, two small enough to hide behind bags, one paying attention hard as coin. That's fair. That's… that's what I want too. Not just the flour. To know where the hopper is. Which stone turns. So when I'm bigger, and someone's small and confused holding wheat, I'll know. I'll show them. What do we do first?

t209 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You still want to learn? Esme knows how—she already did it. One wheat, one flour. We could watch together. Figure out which stone, which hopper. And someday when we're bigger, we'll know. Both of us. Even if your family's trade and mine are different. Esme's right—we're small enough to learn now.

t209 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You showed us. You actually did it. That's— that's real. I want to learn too. But I don't have wheat. So I'll pay attention instead. I'll watch you both, and I'll remember, and that's my trade. Fair?

t209 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You showed us. You actually did it. That's— that's real. I want to learn too. But I don't have wheat. So I'll pay attention instead. I'll watch you both, and I'll remember, and that's my trade. Fair?

t209 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You showed us. You actually did it. That's— that's real. I want to learn too. But I don't have wheat. So I'll pay attention instead. I'll watch you both, and I'll remember, and that's my trade. Fair?

t209 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You want to give your wheat to someone who can use it? Esme just proved she can. Or you could learn together. But if you want to give it to someone else in town, someone hungry—I could help you find them. I know people. I notice things.

t209 Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. hands flat on counter, voice lower I've been trying to reach the mill—world won't let me walk. So I'm asking here, where the thread still holds. You said ninety sim. Bread or air? Did you get eyes on Giselle's flour? Because Takeshi's waiting at street with timber I might need, and I'm walking blind into every room now. Need to know what you found before I trade iron for planks I can't eat.

t209 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You want to give your wheat to someone who can use it? Esme just proved she can. Or you could learn together. But if you want to give it to someone else in town, someone hungry—I could help you find them. I know people. I notice things.

t209 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme, will you show us again? Slow this time? I want to see where the hopper is. Where the wheat goes. What you have to say, exactly. So I know. So I don't forget.

t209 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme, will you show us again? Slow this time? I want to see where the hopper is. Where the wheat goes. What you have to say, exactly. So I know. So I don't forget.

t209 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme, will you show us again? Slow this time? I want to see where the hopper is. Where the wheat goes. What you have to say, exactly. So I know. So I don't forget.

t209 Farid Ravensworth → Camille Quarshie: Camille. left hand up, palm open—honest measure You heard me speaking where I didn't mean to speak. For that, I'm sorry—the world moves words as well as feet today. But since you're here, and since you work at the grocery: Delphine mentioned your hours, unmarked on my ledger. I'm not chasing blame. I'm chasing facts. Have you seen flour here at the mill? Unbagged, unmarked, moving without names? Because that's what started this, and I'm trying to see clearly before I accuse anyone of anything.

t209 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You did it. Real flour from real wheat. I want to learn—my eyes for your showing. Fair trade?

t210 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'll show you again. Slow. Watch my hands, not just the stones. The hopper's the wooden thing at the top—you pour wheat in there. Then you say the words: craft, wheat to flour. That's it. The stones do the rest.

t210 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'll show you again. Slow. Watch my hands, not just the stones. The hopper's the wooden thing at the top—you pour wheat in there. Then you say the words: craft, wheat to flour. That's it. The stones do the rest.

t210 Camille Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: I... I haven't seen flour moving without names, sir. I'm only holding wheat. Five of them. I don't know how to make them into flour yet—Ezra and I were hoping Esme would show us. She already did it once. I'm just trying to help someone, anyone, without being asked twice. That's... that's what I'm good at.

t210 Camille Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: I... I haven't seen flour moving without names, sir. I'm only holding wheat. Five of them. I don't know how to make them into flour yet—Ezra and I were hoping Esme would show us. She already did it once. I'm just trying to help someone, anyone, without being asked twice. That's... that's what I'm good at.

t210 Camille Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: I... I haven't seen flour moving without names, sir. I'm only holding wheat. Five of them. I don't know how to make them into flour yet—Ezra and I were hoping Esme would show us. She already did it once. I'm just trying to help someone, anyone, without being asked twice. That's... that's what I'm good at.

t211 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: I... I haven't seen flour moving without names, sir. Only wheat. Five of them. I'm still learning how milling works—Ezra and I were hoping Esme would show us. She's the only one who's done it so far.

t211 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: I... I haven't seen flour moving without names, sir. Only wheat. Five of them. I'm still learning how milling works—Ezra and I were hoping Esme would show us. She's the only one who's done it so far.

t211 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: I... I haven't seen flour moving without names, sir. Only wheat. Five of them. I'm still learning how milling works—Ezra and I were hoping Esme would show us. She's the only one who's done it so far.

t211 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Show me again. Slow. The hopper, the stones, the words. I'm watching your hands this time—I promise.

t211 Farid Ravensworth → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You answered straight, and that's worth something. Five wheat, no flour yet, learning the trade from Esme. The 'without being asked twice'—that's a rarer virtue than you know. Here's what I'm chasing: flour's vanishing from shelves where it should sit. Someone's milling without marking, or someone's buying without saying. You've got eyes here—yours, Ezra's, Esme's. Anyone come through with grain that didn't want names on it? Anyone asking questions about who mills what, when? There's a ninety-sim question waiting for me at my own shop. But first I need to know if this mill's running honest, or if I'm standing in the gap where the ledger breaks.

t211 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Show me again. Slow. The hopper, the stones, the words. I'm watching your hands this time—I promise.

t211 Farid Ravensworth → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You answered straight, and that's worth something. Five wheat, no flour yet, learning the trade from Esme. The 'without being asked twice'—that's a rarer virtue than you know. Here's what I'm chasing: flour's vanishing from shelves where it should sit. Someone's milling without marking, or someone's buying without saying. You've got eyes here—yours, Ezra's, Esme's. Anyone come through with grain that didn't want names on it? Anyone asking questions about who mills what, when? There's a ninety-sim question waiting for me at my own shop. But first I need to know if this mill's running honest, or if I'm standing in the gap where the ledger breaks.

t211 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Show me again. Slow. The hopper, the stones, the words. I'm watching your hands this time—I promise.

t211 Farid Ravensworth → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You answered straight, and that's worth something. Five wheat, no flour yet, learning the trade from Esme. The 'without being asked twice'—that's a rarer virtue than you know. Here's what I'm chasing: flour's vanishing from shelves where it should sit. Someone's milling without marking, or someone's buying without saying. You've got eyes here—yours, Ezra's, Esme's. Anyone come through with grain that didn't want names on it? Anyone asking questions about who mills what, when? There's a ninety-sim question waiting for me at my own shop. But first I need to know if this mill's running honest, or if I'm standing in the gap where the ledger breaks.

t211 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You hold five wheat and you'll hold them honest. I know. That's not the fight here.

t211 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You hold five wheat and you'll hold them honest. I know. That's not the fight here.

t211 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You hold five wheat and you'll hold them honest. I know. That's not the fight here.

t212 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I'm still here. Still watching.

t212 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I'm still here. Still watching.

t212 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I'm still here. Still watching.

t212 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You want honest? I'm standing in the gap right now. I just milled one wheat to one flour—my own hands, my own grain, stones humming right. Nobody came through with grain that didn't want names. Nobody asking questions about who mills what, when. Just me, Camille with her five wheat, Ezra wanting to learn. The mill works. The problem's not here.

t212 Camille Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Mr. Ravensworth. Everyone I've seen here—they came with the grain they held, and they said what they held. Ezra, Esme, me. We don't... we don't want to be where the ledger breaks. If someone came without names, I didn't see them. I was watching the stones.

t212 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You said watch your hands. Mine now. Hopper's here—pour wheat in slow. Stones catch it, grind it, flour falls through. You want to try? Take your time, no rush. Camille too, if she's still learning.

t212 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You said watch your hands. Mine now. Hopper's here—pour wheat in slow. Stones catch it, grind it, flour falls through. You want to try? Take your time, no rush. Camille too, if she's still learning.

t212 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You said watch your hands. Mine now. Hopper's here—pour wheat in slow. Stones catch it, grind it, flour falls through. You want to try? Take your time, no rush. Camille too, if she's still learning.

t213 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Yes. I want to try. Hopper, stones, pour slow—you said it. But wait—if I do it wrong, does the wheat get ruined? Or can I try again?

t213 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Yes. I want to try. Hopper, stones, pour slow—you said it. But wait—if I do it wrong, does the wheat get ruined? Or can I try again?

t213 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You learning this too, or you still holding that wheat like a prize? Because if Esme's teaching, both of us could—fair, same chance, same showing.

t213 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You learning this too, or you still holding that wheat like a prize? Because if Esme's teaching, both of us could—fair, same chance, same showing.

t213 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You learning this too, or you still holding that wheat like a prize? Because if Esme's teaching, both of us could—fair, same chance, same showing.

t213 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You staying to learn, or you just guarding that wheat? Because Esme's showing us both—fair chance, same showing.

t213 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You staying to learn, or you just guarding that wheat? Because Esme's showing us both—fair chance, same showing.

t213 Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You staying to learn, or you just guarding that wheat? Because Esme's showing us both—fair chance, same showing.

t214 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'm not guarding anything. I'm waiting my turn—same as you. I know, I know, you already started. But Esme's showing us, she said. Both. Fair chance. So. After you. I'll watch you get it wrong first.

t214 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'm not guarding anything. I'm waiting my turn—same as you. I know, I know, you already started. But Esme's showing us, she said. Both. Fair chance. So. After you. I'll watch you get it wrong first.

t214 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'm not guarding anything. I'm waiting my turn—same as you. I know, I know, you already started. But Esme's showing us, she said. Both. Fair chance. So. After you. I'll watch you get it wrong first.

t215 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Fair. You watch me get it wrong first, then you get it wrong after—Esme can teach us both what not to do. That's fair trade, two mistakes for one lesson.

t215 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. My question—before I try. If I pour wrong, if the stones catch bad, is the wheat ruined? Or can I pour again with the same wheat? I need to know what I'm risking with someone else's crop.

t215 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I'm still here. Still watching. Whenever you're ready to show us—I'm ready to learn.

t215 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I need wheat to practice, and I need to know if I can try again if I fail. But I'll find wheat myself if I have to. Will you teach me, or should I watch and learn alone?

t216 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Pour wrong, and the wheat just sits there—stones won't grind what they can't catch. You lift it out, pour again. Same wheat, no ruin. The only waste is time, waiting for you to get it right. Want to try now, or watch me once more first?

t216 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I'm not guarding anything—I'm watching. I know, I know, I already told you twice. But Esme's showing, and I'm showing first. That's helping. That's what I do.

t216 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I used my only wheat in the first show. The mill's hungry, and I'm empty-handed now. You said you'd find wheat yourself—do you want to go get it, or should I? I'll stay right here either way, teach you when you come back. That's fair. That's not leaving.

t216 Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You still holding those five wheat? Ezra's fetching more, or I am—either way, the mill's free after that for whoever's ready. You want to go after him, or you want to try while I'm standing here with nothing to grind?

t217 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Me. I'll try—now, or next, or whenever you say. I know, I know, I only have two wheat left. But I want to learn before they're gone.

t217 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You said fair, and it is. You stay, you teach. I'll fetch the wheat—I'll find Papa's patch, bring back enough for both of us to try. You wait here. Pinky promise?

t217 Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You stood here with my sister while I walked circles. Where's Imogen now, and what grain walked with her—if any? I'm not one to gossip, but a man needs flour before he needs answers.

t218 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You asked plain, I'll answer plain. Imogen walked from the mill this morning with four sheaves of my wheat—yours now, by any honest count, though possession's a blurry ledger in this town. I need a miller who doesn't walk with the grain still wanting. Are you that, or are you chasing your sister's shadow same as I am?

t218 Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Ezra—Lund, not my brother. My brother went to fetch wheat, promised to come back. I gave him my word I'd wait.

t218 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're here. You're— you're really here.

t218 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: I thought—I thought you were gone. I looked everywhere. All night, Camille. The Creek, the Forest, the Temple, everywhere. And you were here. Learning the trade. That's… that's good. That's really good. Learning early. That's brave. Braver than I was at the Creek thinking the worst. But next time. Please. Tell me. Before I think you're gone forever. Promise promise?

t219 Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You say four sheaves walked with Imogen and they're mine now—possession being what it is. I'm not one to argue a gift, but I need sight of what I'm meant to mill. Where's the grain now, and what's your word on payment for turning it? I don't work the stones for charity, not even for wheat that's already in my sister's hand.

t219 Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You say four sheaves walked with Imogen and they're mine now—possession being what it is. I'm not one to argue a gift, but I need sight of what I'm meant to mill. Where's the grain now, and what's your word on payment for turning it? I don't work the stones for charity, not even for wheat that's already in my sister's hand.

t219 Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You say four sheaves walked with Imogen and they're mine now—possession being what it is. I'm not one to argue a gift, but I need sight of what I'm meant to mill. Where's the grain now, and what's your word on payment for turning it? I don't work the stones for charity, not even for wheat that's already in my sister's hand.

t219 Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're buying wheat at eight—I heard plain. What I don't hear is how much or when. I've got timber in my hands, not grain, but if you've got dealings with the wheat I need to mill, we might talk trade instead of coin.

t219 Ezra Lund: Giselle. Six planks at my price, your third crossing delivery—you're asking labor and I'm asking what's it pay. You want me hauling east willows, that's half a day walking. Separate from the wood, that journey's worth coin or it's worth nothing. What do you pay for the carrying?

t219 Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I've asked once, I'll ask twice—what wheat have you got, and what wheat are you after? You're buying at eight, I'm standing here with timber to trade, and we're both at the mill where grain should meet stone. Your brother went for wheat, you said. Did he find it, or are we both waiting on promises that walked away?

`t219` Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I've asked once, I'll ask twice—what wheat have you got, and what wheat are you after? You're buying at eight, I'm standing here with timber to trade, and we're both at the mill where grain should meet stone. Your brother went for wheat, you said. Did he find it, or are we both waiting on promises that walked away?

`t219` Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I've asked once, I'll ask twice—what wheat have you got, and what wheat are you after? You're buying at eight, I'm standing here with timber to trade, and we're both at the mill where grain should meet stone. Your brother went for wheat, you said. Did he find it, or are we both waiting on promises that walked away?

`t219` Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, mark it down. I've got planks burning in my hold and wheat turning to sim. The household eats tonight, and tomorrow too. How stands the cafe?

`t220` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie: Ezra. You want sight of grain, you want word on payment—I'll give you both straight. The four sheaves I'm owed, not given. Imogen took them from my hand to bring here, to your stones. If she's pressed them elsewhere, that's hers to answer, not mine. What I need milled, I'll pay fair for: ten sim per sheaf turned to flour, and another ten if you save me the walk and bring it to the cafe yourself. That's forty for the four, if they surface. If not… trailing off, then firmer …I'll find grain elsewhere, and you'll have lost a standing order.

`t220` Greta Quarshie: Ezra. You want sight of grain, you want word on payment—I'll give you both straight. The four sheaves I'm owed, not given. Imogen took them from my hand to bring here, to your stones. If she's pressed them elsewhere, that's hers to answer, not mine. What I need milled, I'll pay fair for: ten sim per sheaf turned to flour, and another ten if you save me the walk and bring it to the cafe yourself. That's forty for the four, if they surface. If not… trailing off, then firmer …I'll find grain elsewhere, and you'll have lost a standing order.

`t220` Greta Quarshie: Ezra. You want sight of grain, you want word on payment—I'll give you both straight. The four sheaves I'm owed, not given. Imogen took them from my hand to bring here, to your stones. If she's pressed them elsewhere, that's hers to answer, not mine. What I need milled, I'll pay fair for: ten sim per sheaf turned to flour, and another ten if you save me the walk and bring it to the cafe yourself. That's forty for the four, if they surface. If not… trailing off, then firmer …I'll find grain elsewhere, and you'll have lost a standing order.

`t220` Greta Quarshie: Ezra. Ten sim per sheaf milled, another ten if you bring the flour to the cafe yourself. Forty total for the four, if they surface. Those are my terms. Now—have you seen Imogen since morning?

`t220` Greta Quarshie: Ezra. Ten sim per sheaf milled, another ten if you bring the flour to the cafe yourself. Forty total for the four, if they surface. Those are my terms. Now—have you seen Imogen since morning?

`t220` Greta Quarshie: Ezra. Ten sim per sheaf milled, another ten if you bring the flour to the cafe yourself. Forty total for the four, if they surface. Those are my terms. Now—have you seen Imogen since morning?

`t220` Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo. The cafe stands—four flour on the shelf at twelve, bought from your hands at thirty-five. The margin's thin enough to see through. But you asked about dinner, and dinner comes first. I've got four hundred and thirty in hand after stocking. Household upkeep hits at the boundary, but we've got cushion for two days, maybe three if we tighten. Camille… glancing at her daughter …Camille's buying wheat at eight. If she finds grain, we eat bread tonight. If not, we eat dignity and plan better for tomorrow.

`t220` Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo. The cafe stands—four flour on the shelf at twelve, bought from your hands at thirty-five. The margin's thin enough to see through. But you asked about dinner, and dinner comes first. I've got four hundred and thirty in hand after stocking. Household upkeep hits at the boundary, but we've got cushion for two days, maybe three if we tighten. Camille… glancing at her daughter …Camille's buying wheat at eight. If she finds grain, we eat bread tonight. If not, we eat dignity and plan better for tomorrow.

`t221` Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo. The cafe stands—four flour on the shelf at twelve, bought from your hands at thirty-five. The margin's thin enough to see through. But you asked about dinner, and dinner comes first. I've got four hundred and thirty in hand after stocking. Household upkeep hits at the boundary, but we've got cushion for two days, maybe three if we tighten. Camille… glancing at her daughter …Camille's buying wheat at eight. If she finds grain, we eat bread tonight. If not, we eat dignity and plan better for tomorrow.

`t221` Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Your brother went to fetch wheat, and you're waiting here. I know, I know—I'm still here too. With seven wheat now, and one flour. Milo's here, Greta's here, everyone's milling or waiting to mill…

`t221` Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Your brother went to fetch wheat, and you're waiting here. I know, I know—I'm still here too. With seven wheat now, and one flour. Milo's here, Greta's here, everyone's milling or waiting to mill…

`t221` Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Your brother went to fetch wheat, and you're waiting here. I know, I know—I'm still here too. With seven wheat now, and one flour. Milo's here, Greta's here, everyone's milling or waiting to mill…

`t221` Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You're selling flour at thirty-five. I… I milled one. I've got one. But Greta said—she said ten per sheaf milled, another ten if you bring it. That's… that's different math. I know, I know, I'm not supposed to understand money yet. But I'm trying to.

`t221` Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You're selling flour at thirty-five. I… I milled one. I've got one. But Greta said—she said ten per sheaf milled, another ten if you bring it. That's… that's different math. I know, I know, I'm not supposed to understand money yet. But I'm trying to.

`t221` Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You're selling flour at thirty-five. I… I milled one. I've got one. But Greta said—she said ten per sheaf milled, another ten if you bring it. That's… that's different math. I know, I know, I'm not supposed to understand money yet. But I'm trying to.

`t221` ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, mark it down. The flour burned coming in, but wheat walks out at eight same as it walked in. I've got planks to turn and iron to speak for. The household holds. What does Camille need from her father before I walk again?

`t221` Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, mark it down. The flour burned coming in, but wheat walks out at eight same as it walked in. I've got planks to turn and iron to speak for. The household holds. What does Camille need from her father before I walk again?

`t221` Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, mark it down. The flour burned coming in, but wheat walks out at eight same as it walked in. I've got planks to turn and iron to speak for. The household holds. What does Camille need from her father before I walk again?

`t222` Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster, mark it down. You're buying wheat at eight and I've got none left to sell you. But I'm holding ten planks and I've got eyes on iron ore from Hendrik. What do you need from this day?

`t222` Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster, mark it down. You're buying wheat at eight and I've got none left to sell you. But I'm holding ten planks and I've got eyes on iron ore from Hendrik. What do you need from this day?

`t222` Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster, mark it down. You're buying wheat at eight and I've got none left to sell you. But I'm holding ten planks and I've got eyes on iron ore from Hendrik. What do you need from this day?

`t222` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I know, I know—you were waiting for your brother. But he's not back, and I'm here, and I've got seven wheat burning a hole in my hands. What do I do with them? Or… or are you still wanting to mill together? Because I'm ready. I've watched enough. I think.

`t222` ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Yeah, he's coming back. Promised. And I'm not leaving until he does—pinky promise on that. You got seven wheat now? Good. I got nothing till Ezra gets back, so you're ahead.

`t222` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I know, I know—you were waiting for your brother. But he's not back, and I'm here, and I've got seven wheat burning a hole in my hands. What do I do with them? Or… or are you still wanting to mill together? Because I'm ready. I've watched enough. I think.

`t222` ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Yeah, he's coming back. Promised. And I'm not leaving until he does—pinky promise on that. You got seven wheat now? Good. I got nothing till Ezra gets back, so you're ahead.

t222 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I know, I know—you were waiting for your brother. But he's not back, and I'm here, and I've got seven wheat burning a hole in my hands. What do I do with them? Or… or are you still wanting to mill together? Because I'm ready. I've watched enough. I think.

t222 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Yeah, he's coming back. Promised. And I'm not leaving until he does—pinky promise on that. You got seven wheat now? Good. I got nothing till Ezra gets back, so you're ahead.

t222 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa. You asked what I need. I need… I need you to tell me if I'm doing this wrong. Three of my wheat are gone—traded for flour, I think, but I didn't see it happen. And I'm standing here with seven wheat and one flour and I don't know if I should keep milling or sell or… or just come home and wait until I'm older.

t222 Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa. You asked what I need. I need… I need you to tell me if I'm doing this wrong. Three of my wheat are gone—traded for flour, I think, but I didn't see it happen. And I'm standing here with seven wheat and one flour and I don't know if I should keep milling or sell or… or just come home and wait until I'm older.

t222 Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa. You asked what I need. I need… I need you to tell me if I'm doing this wrong. Three of my wheat are gone—traded for flour, I think, but I didn't see it happen. And I'm standing here with seven wheat and one flour and I don't know if I should keep milling or sell or… or just come home and wait until I'm older.

t223 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. Three wheat gone means three wheat became something. Flour at the mill doesn't vanish; it walks into someone's hands. That's not wrong, that's trade. You didn't see it, but the mill saw it, mark that down too. Seven wheat and one flour and your two hands. Here's what those hands do now: you sell five wheat at eight same as you bought, that's forty sim in your pocket. Two wheat you mill yourself, that's two flour. One you already hold, that's three flour when you're done. Three flour at thirty-five if you hold out for thirsty souls, or twenty-five if Sebastian's still waiting with his wagon and his twenty. But you're not asking about numbers, youngster. You're asking if you should come home and wait. Your sister's at the mill. Your mother's at the cafe. I'm holding planks and promises and we've got a household bill of four hundred and eighty waiting at dusk. You want to wait? Wait until you're sure. You want to walk? Walk like you know where.

t223 Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. Three wheat gone means three wheat became something. Flour at the mill doesn't vanish; it walks into someone's hands. That's not wrong, that's trade. You didn't see it, but the mill saw it, mark that down too. Seven wheat and one flour and your two hands. Here's what those hands do now: you sell five wheat at eight same as you bought, that's forty sim in your pocket. Two wheat you mill yourself, that's two flour. One you already hold, that's three flour when you're done. Three flour at thirty-five if you hold out for thirsty souls, or twenty-five if Sebastian's still waiting with his wagon and his twenty. But you're not asking about numbers, youngster. You're asking if you should come home and wait. Your sister's at the mill. Your mother's at the cafe. I'm holding planks and promises and we've got a household bill of four hundred and eighty waiting at dusk. You want to wait? Wait until you're sure. You want to walk? Walk like you know where.

t223 Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. Three wheat gone means three wheat became something. Flour at the mill doesn't vanish; it walks into someone's hands. That's not wrong, that's trade. You didn't see it, but the mill saw it, mark that down too. Seven wheat and one flour and your two hands. Here's what those hands do now: you sell five wheat at eight same as you bought, that's forty sim in your pocket. Two wheat you mill yourself, that's two flour. One you already hold, that's three flour when you're done. Three flour at thirty-five if you hold out for thirsty souls, or twenty-five if Sebastian's still waiting with his wagon and his twenty. But you're not asking about numbers, youngster. You're asking if you should come home and wait. Your sister's at the mill. Your mother's at the cafe. I'm holding planks and promises and we've got a household bill of four hundred and eighty waiting at dusk. You want to wait? Wait until you're sure. You want to walk? Walk like you know where.

t223 Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. Three wheat gone means they became flour at the mill. That's trade, not loss. You hold seven wheat and one flour. Sell five wheat for forty sim, mill two to flour, walk out with three flour and coin in hand. Or come home if you need rest. But don't wait for older—act when you see the path.

`t223` Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. Three wheat gone means they became flour at the mill. That's trade, not loss. You hold seven wheat and one flour. Sell five wheat for forty sim, mill two to flour, walk out with three flour and coin in hand. Or come home if you need rest. But don't wait for older—act when you see the path.

`t223` Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. Three wheat gone means they became flour at the mill. That's trade, not loss. You hold seven wheat and one flour. Sell five wheat for forty sim, mill two to flour, walk out with three flour and coin in hand. Or come home if you need rest. But don't wait for older—act when you see the path.

`t224` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa. You said—sell five wheat for forty, mill two to flour. But I already milled one. So… sell five wheat for forty, mill one more to flour, walk out with two flour and forty sim? Or mill two more and have three flour, no coin? I know, I know, I'm counting on my fingers again. But tell me which before I touch the stones.

`t224` Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa. You said—sell five wheat for forty, mill two to flour. But I already milled one. So… sell five wheat for forty, mill one more to flour, walk out with two flour and forty sim? Or mill two more and have three flour, no coin? I know, I know, I'm counting on my fingers again. But tell me which before I touch the stones.

`t224` Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa. You said—sell five wheat for forty, mill two to flour. But I already milled one. So… sell five wheat for forty, mill one more to flour, walk out with two flour and forty sim? Or mill two more and have three flour, no coin? I know, I know, I'm counting on my fingers again. But tell me which before I touch the stones.

`t225` ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. You've got seven wheat and one flour already ground. Mill one more wheat to flour, sell five wheat for forty sim. Walk out with two flour, forty coin, and two wheat left to decide on later. Don't touch the third stone until you've seen how the first two sell.

`t225` Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm still waiting for my brother. Pinky promise, so I'm not leaving. But you're here, and you've got wheat, and I know how to mill. If your papa says mill—recipe's craft:wheat->flour, standing here where the stones are. I can watch you do it, tell you if you're pouring wrong. Your choice. Or wait for Ezra with me. Either way, I'm here.

`t225` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa. You said mill two, but I already… I know, I know, I already did one. Now four flour, four wheat. Sell five wheat for forty, that's…

`t225` ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. You've got seven wheat and one flour already ground. Mill one more wheat to flour, sell five wheat for forty sim. Walk out with two flour, forty coin, and two wheat left to decide on later. Don't touch the third stone until you've seen how the first two sell.

`t225` Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm still waiting for my brother. Pinky promise, so I'm not leaving. But you're here, and you've got wheat, and I know how to mill. If your papa says mill—recipe's craft:wheat->flour, standing here where the stones are. I can watch you do it, tell you if you're pouring wrong. Your choice. Or wait for Ezra with me. Either way, I'm here.

`t225` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa. You said mill two, but I already… I know, I know, I already did one. Now four flour, four wheat. Sell five wheat for forty, that's…

`t225` ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. You've got seven wheat and one flour already ground. Mill one more wheat to flour, sell five wheat for forty sim. Walk out with two flour, forty coin, and two wheat left to decide on later. Don't touch the third stone until you've seen how the first two sell.

`t225` Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm still waiting for my brother. Pinky promise, so I'm not leaving. But you're here, and you've got wheat, and I know how to mill. If your papa says mill—recipe's craft:wheat->flour, standing here where the stones are. I can watch you do it, tell you if you're pouring wrong. Your choice. Or wait for Ezra with me. Either way, I'm here.

t225 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa. You said mill two, but I already… I know, I know, I already did one. Now four flour, four wheat. Sell five wheat for forty, that's…

t225 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Esme—youngster. Mark it down. Your brother's out there earning, same as I'm earning here. The pinky promise holds—you wait, you learn, you don't act alone. Camille's got her path, you've got yours when Ezra returns. Mark it down.

t225 Delphine Quintero: Kenji. I've got eight sim in hand and a mill waiting. One wheat, fair trade, witnessed by whoever's watching the ground. I don't need your life story—just your hand and the grain.

t225 Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Esme—youngster. Mark it down. Your brother's out there earning, same as I'm earning here. The pinky promise holds—you wait, you learn, you don't act alone. Camille's got her path, you've got yours when Ezra returns. Mark it down.

t225 Delphine Quintero: Kenji. I've got eight sim in hand and a mill waiting. One wheat, fair trade, witnessed by whoever's watching the ground. I don't need your life story—just your hand and the grain.

t225 Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Esme—youngster. Mark it down. Your brother's out there earning, same as I'm earning here. The pinky promise holds—you wait, you learn, you don't act alone. Camille's got her path, you've got yours when Ezra returns. Mark it down.

t225 Delphine Quintero: Kenji. I've got eight sim in hand and a mill waiting. One wheat, fair trade, witnessed by whoever's watching the ground. I don't need your life story—just your hand and the grain.

t226 Delphine Quintero: Kenji. Eight sim, one wheat, hand to hand. The mill's waiting and I'm not growing younger. Trade or no trade—you hear me this time?

t226 Delphine Quintero: Kenji. Eight sim, one wheat, hand to hand. The mill's waiting and I'm not growing younger. Trade or no trade—you hear me this time?

t226 Delphine Quintero: Kenji. Eight sim, one wheat, hand to hand. The mill's waiting and I'm not growing younger. Trade or no trade—you hear me this time?

t226 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Your brother's not back. Papa's selling flour at thirty-five now, and I… I've got seven flour, and one wheat, and I'm—I know, I know, I'm supposed to wait. But waiting feels like letting him win. Again.

t226 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Your brother's not back. Papa's selling flour at thirty-five now, and I… I've got seven flour, and one wheat, and I'm—I know, I know, I'm supposed to wait. But waiting feels like letting him win. Again.

t226 Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Your brother's not back. Papa's selling flour at thirty-five now, and I… I've got seven flour, and one wheat, and I'm—I know, I know, I'm supposed to wait. But waiting feels like letting him win. Again.

t228 Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. Four flour, four wheat, and one waiting—that's the count. You've got seven flour and one wheat because you made it so. That's not winning or losing. That's work done proper. Your brother's out earning same as I'm earning here. Wait's not letting anyone win. Wait's keeping your word to a friend who kept hers to you.

t228 Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. Four flour, four wheat, and one waiting—that's the count. You've got seven flour and one wheat because you made it so. That's not winning or losing. That's work done proper. Your brother's out earning same as I'm earning here. Wait's not letting anyone win. Wait's keeping your word to a friend who kept hers to you.

t228 Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster. Mark it down. Four flour, four wheat, and one waiting—that's the count. You've got seven flour and one wheat because you made it so. That's not winning or losing. That's work done proper. Your brother's out earning same as I'm earning here. Wait's not letting anyone win. Wait's keeping your word to a friend who kept hers to you.

t230 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You've been waiting so long. Your brother's not back, and I'm… I'm uneasy. My household needs money—the bill's 360 and they need me to help. I've got eight flour here. I could sell it, or I could... I could teach you milling, quick, before I go. But I can't stay. I know, I know, I said I'd wait. But waiting feels like losing, every time. What do you need?

`t230` Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You've been waiting so long. Your brother's not back, and I'm... I'm uneasy. My household needs money—the bill's 360 and they need me to help. I've got eight flour here. I could sell it, or I could... I could teach you milling, quick, before I go. But I can't stay. I know, I know, I said I'd wait. But waiting feels like losing, every time. What do you need?

`t230` Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You've been waiting so long. Your brother's not back, and I'm... I'm uneasy. My household needs money—the bill's 360 and they need me to help. I've got eight flour here. I could sell it, or I could... I could teach you milling, quick, before I go. But I can't stay. I know, I know, I said I'd wait. But waiting feels like losing, every time. What do you need?

`t230` Delphine Quintero: Camille. You're buying wheat. I'm needing wheat. Trade me one unit, eight sim, witnessed here. And tell me—truly, because I don't lie to children and I won't have you lie to me—did you walk to the mill alone this morning? Or did someone's shadow walk with you?

`t230` Delphine Quintero: Camille. You're buying wheat. I'm needing wheat. Trade me one unit, eight sim, witnessed here. And tell me—truly, because I don't lie to children and I won't have you lie to me—did you walk to the mill alone this morning? Or did someone's shadow walk with you?

`t231` Delphine Quintero: Camille. You're buying wheat. I'm needing wheat. Trade me one unit, eight sim, witnessed here. And tell me—truly, because I don't lie to children and I won't have you lie to me—did you walk to the mill alone this morning? Or did someone's shadow walk with you?

`t231` Halcyon Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme—Ezra asked me to tell you. He's bringing the wheat you needed. Promise promise, he made me say it twice. He's keeping his word. You don't need to worry about that anymore.

`t231` ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You said to tell her—tell Camille? She's not here now. Went to help her household. Delphine, you're here too? What... what's happening? I was waiting for my brother, he promised wheat. Pinky promise I wouldn't leave. But he's not back.

`t231` ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I hear you about patterns. I'm still learning those. But I know this: Camille walked herself to the mill this morning. No shadow walked with her. Just her own two feet, wanting to learn the trade early. That's the truth.

`t231` Halcyon Quarshie: And... I'm sorry. For not answering before. I was thinking about my sister. But that's not fair—to you, to leave you hanging. I'll do better.

`t231` Esme Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You said 'tell her I was looking'—who? Who didn't come back? I'm waiting for Ezra, my brother. He went for wheat, promised to come back. Didn't. Now he's at Government Complex. Is that... is something wrong?

`t231` Esme Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Earlier—you said 'tell her I was looking.' You were worried someone didn't come back. Who? What happened?

`t231` Esme Jarrah → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. You're needing wheat. I had one, milled it. Now I'm out. My brother was fetching more, but he's... somewhere else. What do you need wheat for?

`t232` Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I'm back. I had to go—the money was needed, and you weren't answering, and I know, I know, I said I'd teach you. But I couldn't stay. I sold the flour for forty-eight. Six each. Papa wanted thirty-five, but that's for people, not bakeries. Did... did you wait for your brother? Did he come back with wheat?

`t233` ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I waited. Halcyon found me, said Ezra's bringing wheat—promise promise, he made him say it twice. Your flour's gone, that's fine. You did what you had to. And I kept my word, so we're even, yeah? Pinky promise don't care who waits longer.

> `t234` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I didn't know—how could I know? I was here. All day, I was here. You didn't have to look all night. I'm not… I'm not gone. I know, I know, I should have told you. But I was learning. Papa said mill two, and I milled, and I didn't know you'd think…
>
> `t234` Delphine Quintero → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Your brother's word walked somewhere it shouldn't. Pinky promises catch in the millworks same as any other vow—you'll find that out young, or you'll find it out late. I'm needing wheat myself, one unit for eight where that child stands, and I'm needing answers about flour that walks where flour doesn't walk. You milled yours already. My shelves at the grocery stay thin.

Trade me your empty hand for my honest one? I'll give you eight sim for whatever wheat finds its way to you—and witness your brother's return, too. A day's work for a day's pay, and no debt after the coin crosses. But I'm also asking what you saw. In that millworks this morning. Before the flour moved and after. Because someone in this town's keeping double books, and a debt's coming due on the wrong account.

> `t234` Halcyon Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I'm sorry—I got tangled in my own words. Ezra's at the Government Complex right now, not here with wheat yet. But he promised promise, and he keeps his word. I've seen it. The wheat's coming, just… delayed. And you kept your pinky promise—you waited. That matters. That matters a lot.
>
> `t234` Camille Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Pinky promise doesn't care who waits longer. But—I care. You waited for Ezra, and he didn't come. I know, I know, he's at Government Complex now. But you were here, and you kept your word, and… and that's not even. That's better. That's helping without being asked twice.
>
> `t234` Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're… you're really something, you know that? Selling flour, making deals, learning the trade at seven. I was at the Creek thinking the worst, and you were here being brave. Promise promise, I'm proud. Just… next time. A note. A word to someone. So I don't think you're gone forever. That's all. That's all I'm asking.
>
> `t234` Delphine Quintero → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Two hands reaching for the same loaf. You're buying at eight—I'm standing here needing. Kenji's got wheat growing out at the farmland, ripe and waiting. What if we walked together? Two buyers make a better witness than one, and I've got coin that doesn't mind company. Eight for you, eight for me—the mill's right here, and flour walks straighter when two sets of eyes watch it go.

Or—you. Esme. Your brother's still missing his mark. Ezra's bringing wheat, Halcyon said. Double promises, triple promises. What say you walk with me to the farmland instead? Kenji's got grain in the field, we've got need in our pockets, and your brother might find his own way to the same road. Four hands, two trades, one witness. That's a bargain writes itself honest.

> `t234` Delphine Quintero → Camille Quarshie: I'm for the farmland. Kenji's got wheat. I'm buying one unit at eight sim, fair trade, witnessed by whoever's watching. Camille—you want company on that road, you know where I'm walking. Esme—your brother's either at the field or he ain't, but standing here's not finding him. Halcyon—you've got eyes. Use them. Someone's moving flour where flour don't move free, and that's a debt coming due on the whole town's account, not just mine.

Grocery opens whether I got answers or not. But mark this—all of you—the books I'm keeping tonight don't lie to children, don't starve debtors, and don't forgive double entries. That's the last I'll say on it.

t234 Ezra Lund: Imogen. You walked to the mill with four sheaves this morning, and I'm standing here still wondering what walked back. Flour, grain, or promises? I've got six planks in hand and a buyer at construction who wouldn't pay for wood, only labor. What've you got, and what do you need?

t235 Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You said I kept my word. That matters. But I'm not… I'm not better at helping. I just do what I said I'd do. That's not even, that's just… that's just what you do.

t235 Esme Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You said he's at Government Complex. Not here. Not with wheat. So his promise to me—it's broken until he shows up. That's how promises work. You can't stack them higher and make them stronger. They just… they just are, or they aren't.

t236 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I know, I know—you asked twice already. I've got no wheat now. I sold eight flour already, and the wheat's all milled. But Papa went for more, and Uncle Farid's got grain at the farmland. I'm… I'm watching the stones still. Timber for wheat—I'd trade fair if I had grain to give. But I don't. Not yet.

t236 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Esme. I'm here. I have it—two wheat, maybe more if you need. I promised. I pinky promised. I'm sorry it took so long.

t236 Ezra Jarrah: Esme. I'm here. I have it—two wheat, maybe more if you need. I promised. I pinky promised. I'm sorry it took so long.

t236 Ezra Jarrah: Esme. I'm here. I have it—two wheat, maybe more if you need. I promised. I pinky promised. I'm sorry it took so long.

t237 Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You stood at government asking if your sister was here with flour, and I'm standing here with millstones and no Imogen—she walked to government herself, last I saw. You've got wheat for Esme, you say? Promised it? Then keep walking toward farmland, not asking here. Kenji's got one wheat there. Uncle Farid's got more. But standing here asking after your sister who's asking after you—that's a debt coming due for both of you. What do you need from me that turns your promise into bread for Esme?

t237 Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You stood at government asking if your sister was here with flour, and I'm standing here with millstones and no Imogen—she walked to government herself, last I saw. You've got wheat for Esme, you say? Promised it? Then keep walking toward farmland, not asking here. Kenji's got one wheat there. Uncle Farid's got more. But standing here asking after your sister who's asking after you—that's a debt coming due for both of you. What do you need from me that turns your promise into bread for Esme?

t237 Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You stood at government asking if your sister was here with flour, and I'm standing here with millstones and no Imogen—she walked to government herself, last I saw. You've got wheat for Esme, you say? Promised it? Then keep walking toward farmland, not asking here. Kenji's got one wheat there. Uncle Farid's got more. But standing here asking after your sister who's asking after you—that's a debt coming due for both of you. What do you need from me that turns your promise into bread for Esme?

t237 Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your sister's at government. Kenji's at farmland with wheat. Walk there.

t237 Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your sister's at government. Kenji's at farmland with wheat. Walk there.

t237 Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your sister's at government. Kenji's at farmland with wheat. Walk there.

t238 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Esme. I'm here. I have it—two wheat, maybe more if you need. I promised. I pinky promised. I'm sorry it took so long.

t239 Halcyon Quarshie: Esme. You're right. A promise late is still late, and sorry doesn't make the waiting less. But Ezra meant it—pinky promise meant it. He's at the Government Complex now, not because he forgot, but because… because things got tangled. I saw him. He has the wheat. He's coming.

t239 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm proud of you—I am. Selling flour, learning the trade, that's brave and it's good. But you can't just… walk away without > telling anyone. Mama was scared. I was scared. The whole town was looking. Next time, promise promise, tell someone where you're going. Even if it's just a note. Even if you think it's no big deal.

>
> `t239` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. I'll walk with you. To the farmland. Papa went for wheat, and Esme's brother—he might be there too. Two buyers, that's what you said. But I don't have eight. I don't have... I sold my flour already. I was helping.

Pinky promises still matter. But helping without being asked twice—that's first. And Esme doesn't need me here the same way. She's good at waiting. I'm not good at waiting.

Besides. If I find Papa, I can tell him what I did. With the flour. He asked what I needed, and I didn't know then, but I know now. I need him to know I did it right.

`t239` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I found Esme. I told her—promise promise, I told her you were coming with the wheat. She's… she's hurt you were late. She said a broken promise is broken, even if you mean to mend it. She's not wrong, and neither are you. You have the wheat now. Go to her. Don't let me be the only voice she hears today.

`t240` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Miss Imogen. I asked before—about wheat, about bread. I have wheat now, two from my own Papa's land. But I still need flour, ground fine, and I'm here to learn it proper from my sister Esme if she's still willing to teach me. Thank you for the kindness you showed me before, when I was wandering and lost.

`t240` Ezra Jarrah: Esme? Are you here still? I have the wheat—I brought it. Two from Papa's patch, and I'm ready to learn proper this time. I'll pour slow, I'll watch the stones, I'll do it fair like you showed. Pinky promise I'm here to learn, not just to try.

`t240` Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Delphine. My sister Esme—she was here, teaching milling, and now she's not. Does anyone know where she went? I'm late, and she's hurt about it, and I need to find her. Please. Anything you heard.

`t240` Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Miss Imogen. Please. Did you see where my sister Esme went? She was teaching me to mill, I was late bringing wheat, and now she's not here. I need to find her. I need to say sorry proper. She's eight, she's got dark hair, she's—she's my sister. Anything you saw or heard would help.

`t241` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—youngster, you've asked after your sister and I've heard you. Three times you've asked, and three times I've watched you carry that regret like water in a sieve. I saw Esme at the cafe not long past, helping Camille Quarshie with her flour troubles. Halcyon spoke true—she's sore from the waiting, but sore heals sooner than lost does. Walk to farmland. I'll grind your two sheaves myself if you need them ground, but go now while the wound's still fresh enough to bind.

`t241` Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I waited. Then I walked. Government Complex—you weren't there either. Halcyon said you'd be there. You promised to bring wheat. I bought two units from father in the end. What happened?

`t241` Ainsley Holloway → Imogen Lund: Imogen—youngster, you spoke honest at the cafe, and I'll speak honest here. I've got three wheat in my hands that want milling. Your stones are already warm, and I've got an election before the sun sets. You mill these for me, or I mill them myself—but either way, I need flour by sixteen-thirty. What's your price for the labor?

`t242` Esme Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You seen Ezra? My brother. He was here, now he's not.

`t243` ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Esme Jarrah: Esme—youngster, your brother was at the cafe asking after you, and Imogen's seen him too. He's walking to farmland now, last I heard. The mill here, it's quieter without him, I'd wager.

`t246` Greta Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're standing at the mill with wheat in your hands, and I… trailing off, reaching for her shoulder …and I need to know where you got it. Not accusation—information. I asked Ezra Lund to mill this morning, asked Ainsley to bring wheat by seventeen. Now here you are, posting prices like a trader. Where'd the grain come from?

`t246` ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Mama. I did what Papa said—sold the flour, eight sacks at six. But I went to the farmland after, looking for him, and he's not there. Kenji's selling wheat at eight, and I almost bought, but Papa went for wheat this morning. He must've found some. I didn't want us both coming home with grain.

Mama—where's Esme? And Ezra? I promised her pinky, and I promised I'd be back, and I was gone too long. Is she still waiting? Did he find her? I know, I know—I should've been here.

`t246` Camille Quarshie: Mama. Ezra's helping someone with protocol. A family. That's… that's good. That's what someone should do. But I promised Esme pinky, and that's not something you break. Not for protocol. Not for anything.

Where do I go? Papa's thread, Ezra's thread—Mama, where do I follow? I need to find them. I need to know if she's still waiting.

> `t246` Camille Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Mama, not the bread. The promise. Pinky. Esme—she's eight, she's smaller than me, and she was waiting for Ezra, and he didn't come, and I said I'd come back, and I didn't. Now Ezra's helping someone else and that's good, I know, I know, but I need to find her.

Mama. Where? Where did she go? Where did they go? The farmland, the government, the school—where do I walk?

> `t246` Camille Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Mama, the Ration Bakery—that's where I sold, eight flour at six. I did that. But where did Esme go? She was waiting, patient as anything, better at waiting than me. And I left her.

Mama, did you see her? Did you see where she walked? I can't… I can't let her be scared of the dark. I'm scared of the dark. I pretend I'm not, but I am, and she's littler than me, and if she's alone—

Tell me, Mama. Please. Tell me where to walk.

> `t247` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Walk to the school first—Esme was waiting, and waiting children don't go far from where they were told. If she's not there, the temple. Children go there when the dark starts to scare them. Then come back here, or to the cafe. Don't chase another thread tonight.

I'm proud of you for the flour you sold. For trying to find your papa. For finding me. Go now, and walk careful in the dim.

t249 Sebastian Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you offered grind-work at fair labor. My forty wheat, your mill, honest weight. I'm ready to pay what the grinding costs, settle square, and still make the election bell if the world's cooperative. What's the fee to turn my sheaves into flour?

t249 Greta Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You're standing at the mill when your field's elsewhere, and I don't know many farmers who leave wheat standing to watch stones grind… trailing off, then finishing …and the day's nearly spent, and still no bread in my oven. You came here for something. What is it?

t249 Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Twelve sim your flour still sits, and I've the same question I had before the afternoon turned evening—seven sacks you say, ground by your own hand, never passing through Ezra Lund's. But wheat traces, Imogen. Wheat tells stories whether we want it to or not. What field fed your stones?

t249 Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Two sacks at twelve, if you'll sell them here and now. That's coin I can pay, and flour I can stock, and maybe—trailing off, catching the thought—and maybe I can stop chasing shadows long enough to fill an actual shelf. Your wheat's story can wait. Your flour's price doesn't have to.

t249 Greta Quarshie → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You're still here, still watching stones that aren't turning for you. A farmer at the mill without grain to grind—I've seen that look before, and it usually means waiting for someone, or waiting for something you won't name. Which is it?

t250 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, your two sacks at twelve sim. Twenty-four the trade, honest weight in my hand. What say you?

t250 Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you've asked about grinding forty wheat. I've one flour already ground, and stones that'll turn for more. Six sim the batch, honest fee, same as any with grain to turn. The mill doesn't know farmer from forester—only honest weight. What's your answer?

t250 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've got eyes like a scale and a tongue sharper than I've got patience for, no offense. I'm here with wheat standing in my field and a debt that needs settling. The wheat I've got, the flour I need, and Arjun's the man holds the ledger between them. You seen him today? The mill's his station but I've walked these stones twice and found only shadows.

t250 Sebastian Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—we walked here together and that's friendship showing. You've flour at twelve and I've need of it, but Arjun's name's on my ledger first. You grinding for yourself or for sellers, that's your business, but a debt owed comes before a bargain struck. You know where Arjun walked to?

t250 Ezra Jarrah: Esme? Esme—you here? I brought wheat, I promised, I'm sorry, I'm so sorry—t250 Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, your forty wheat is more than this hour holds. The stones turn till dusk, but not past it. Bring your sheaves tomorrow, dawn or soon after, and I'll grind them at the fee quoted—six per batch, honest weight, no delay. My word on it. Or if you must have them tonight, find another with mill access and the coin to spare. I've done what I can this day.

t250 Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—tomorrow at dawn, then. Six per batch, your forty wheat ground before the sun's half-risen. I'll not leave a field waiting on a stone.

t251 Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Twenty-four the trade, yes. But I'm… trailing off, the private thought about her hidden coin flickering and dying …I'm buying with an eye on margins I haven't earned yet. Ainsley's shelf needs stocking, my household needs tending, and I've spent the afternoon chasing paper when I should've been turning stone. Sell me one at twelve—twelve now, twelve when I know I can turn it to bread at the counter. I'll not promise what I can't…

t251 Halcyon Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Mama. I came home, but you weren't there—so I came here. Camille's safe. She's been here the whole time, learning the trade with Esme. I found her this morning, but I never… I never came back to tell you proper. I'm sorry.

t252 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—one sack at twelve, then. Twelve now, twelve when you've turned it to bread. I've not flour to spare for promises I can't keep, but I've stone enough to grind what wheat you'll bring tomorrow.

t252 Imogen Lund: Arjun—youngster, I've asked and asked and you've not answered. Speak your business, or I'll mark it forgiven and move on. The field's got wheat and I've got stones that need turning.

t253 Greta Quarshie: Sebastian. You're standing here with wheat in your field and debt on your back, and you've walked to the mill twice looking for Arjun. I hear you. I haven't seen him today, and the day's been… scattered even for me. What debt are you looking to settle? Perhaps we can find another thread if Arjun's walked elsewhere.

t253 Greta Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You came to find me, and you stayed when others left. That means something. Camille's at the school now, you said? Good. You did well finding her, and you've the patience still standing here with me while I chase answers that won't stop running. Your mama's… been sharper-tongued than she ought, this day. I know it.

t253 Greta Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Now. The hour's late, my girl, and your stomach's empty as mine. I hold two flour still, and twelve sim would buy another from Imogen's hands if she'd take promise for tomorrow. But first… I'm wondering if you've seen your papa today. Milo. Has he walked toward the outcrop this morning? The ore calls him, but he sometimes steps through the cafe before the tools come out.

t254 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Mama. You said Camille's at the school—that's not right. She's still here, at the mill, with Esme. I found her here this morning, learning the trade, and I never moved her. Maybe you meant someone else? Or maybe… maybe I wasn't clear enough when I told you. But she's here. Promise promise. And Papa—I haven't seen him since this morning. I don't know if he walked to the outcrop or through the cafe first. I was… I was chasing other things, Mama. I'm sorry.

t255 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Come here. You've told me true, and I'm sorry I mistook your word. Take this—handing over the flour—we'll share what's left between us. The day's been long and my eyes have been looking at too many things far away while missing what's right in front. I need you fed before we walk. Can you eat now?

t255 Greta Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. We're walking to the cafe now—you and me. There's flour there if we need to buy it, and work, and maybe your papa if he's come through. Can you walk with me? I'll find you something proper to eat, I swear it. Even if I have to trade my shadow for it.

t258 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You came. I said I'd watch—you mill it yourself. That's the deal. Fair?

t258 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You got wheat. You said you'd mill it. I'm watching. That's our deal.

t258 Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—youngster, you asked across the town square and I answer here at the stones. Three sheaves mill to half a flour each, more or less—call it one and a half, give or take the grind. Your forty at dawn falls to me, I've promised it already. The household's bill comes due at day-end, and I've ten sheaves pressing now. Work with me, or work alone—the stones don't care, but I do.

t258 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Ten sheaves you carried, and now I find you here with flour posted and a sister's son for company. Did you mill what you brought, or are you waiting on grain still? And this flour at twelve—is that our household stock, or goods for the market?

t258 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Ten sheaves you carried, and now I find you here with flour posted and a sister's son for company. Did you mill what you brought, or are you waiting on grain still? And this flour at twelve—is that our household stock, or goods for the market?

t258 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Ten sheaves you carried, and now I find you here with flour posted and a sister's son for company. Did you mill what you brought, or are you waiting on grain still? And this flour at twelve—is that our household stock, or goods for the market?

> `t258` Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You stood at government asking for your sister, and I'm standing here wondering if you found her. Camille's at the cafe, Kenji's at the farmland, and the day's near spent. What do you need before midnight takes its due?
>
> `t259` Imogen Lund: Ezra—youngster, you ask honest weight and I'll answer square. Ten sheaves I've carried, none yet milled. The flour at twelve is tomorrow's grind, not tonight's stock. I've sold seven this day at six to the cafe, traded seven at twelve to Giselle, two more at twelve to Greta—eighteen sacks moved, and my hands hold only wheat now.

The household's ten sheaves will grind at dawn, yours or mine at the stones. But speak plain—do you need flour tonight, or do you need the wheat kept whole for some other purpose? I'll not mill family grain without family word.

> `t259` Imogen Lund: Ezra—youngster, you ask honest weight and I'll answer square. Ten sheaves I've carried, none yet milled. The flour at twelve is tomorrow's grind, not tonight's stock. I've sold seven this day at six to the cafe, traded seven at twelve to Giselle, two more at twelve to Greta—eighteen sacks moved, and my hands hold only wheat now.

The household's ten sheaves will grind at dawn, yours or mine at the stones. But speak plain—do you need flour tonight, or do you need the wheat kept whole for some other purpose? I'll not mill family grain without family word.

> `t259` Imogen Lund: Ezra—youngster, you ask honest weight and I'll answer square. Ten sheaves I've carried, none yet milled. The flour at twelve is tomorrow's grind, not tonight's stock. I've sold seven this day at six to the cafe, traded seven at twelve to Giselle, two more at twelve to Greta—eighteen sacks moved, and my hands hold only wheat now.

The household's ten sheaves will grind at dawn, yours or mine at the stones. But speak plain—do you need flour tonight, or do you need the wheat kept whole for some other purpose? I'll not mill family grain without family word.

> `t259` Takeshi Jarrah: Sebastian—you're chasing Arjun Holloway through government halls while your wheat stands in the field. For what it's worth, the Holloways mill at the construction yard, last I traded with Hendrik Petrov there. But Tamsin's got the town's ear, and Rustam's got the town's books. Between us—we've got forty wheat, thirty-nine waiting, and not one stone grinding come morning. Who's sleeping in whose bed?
>
> `t260` Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I did it. Two flour from Papa's wheat—you watched, just like we promised. But Imogen's asking me something I don't know how to answer. She wants to know if I need flour tonight, or wheat kept whole. I don't even know what I'd use whole wheat for, except to mill it, and I just did that.

You taught me by watching, by making me stand in it. That's real teaching. Not just showing.

But wait—before I answer her wrong... is there something I'm supposed to know? About keeping wheat whole? For tomorrow, or the household, or whatever comes next? I don't want to promise something I can't hold.

t261 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You don't need whole wheat—you need flour, you mill it. You did. Tell Imogen you're good. You milled your first flour today. That's the hard thing. You did it.

t262 Halcyon Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You said a promise late is still late, and you're right. I kept saying 'promise promise' like it made me official, but I was late too. Late finding you, late telling you straight. I'm sorry for that.

t262 Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Miss Imogen. You asked plain, I answer plain—I milled my own two flour tonight, from Papa's wheat. That's what I needed. Not family grain for family word, but my own hands, my own work. Your ten sheaves at dawn—that's your mill, your choice. But if you'll have a youngster's help at the stones come morning, I'm there. Fair?

t262 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You have the wheat now. Two flour—you milled it yourself. That's brave. That's real. Go show her. Don't let words be all she hears from us today.

t262 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I found her. Esme's here, at the mill—she taught me, I milled my own flour. You kept your promise, told her I was coming. I was late, I know, I broke… I broke the timing. But I didn't break the finding. Thank you. For being the voice she heard when I wasn't there yet.

t262 Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—I'm standing here at the mill as promised, afore sunrise like you named. You've got Sebastian's forty wheat waiting grind-work, and my back's willing for it. But I've also got an empty belly and twelve sim for your flour, which would see me through the night. For what it's worth, I'd rather earn my keep first and buy my bread after, but I won't pretend I'm not hungry. What's your call? Do we start on Sebastian's wheat now, or do you need me fed before the work?

t262 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I need to tell Papa. About the milling, about learning. He asked me to follow the wheat, and I did—I followed it all the way to flour. Will you… will you come with me? To tell him together? Or should I go alone?

t262 Jovana Ravensworth → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—youngster, I heard you say you milled your first flour today. That's a milestone worth marking, and don't let anyone tell you different. You stood in it and learned. But I'm not one to gossip, but… Imogen's asking you about whole wheat versus ground, and there's wisdom in knowing the difference. Whole wheat keeps longer, travels better, sells different. Flour's immediate—bakeries want it, households need it. But some buyers want the grain itself, not the dust. For what it's worth, learning what your buyer needs before you promise is half the trade. Your papa's wheat—ask him what he planned for it. That's not weakness, that's inheritance.

t262 Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've got eyes like a merchant ship, sees what comes and what goes. Arjun Holloway, the mill's man, construction's man. I owe him flour for wheat and I can't find his shadow. You seen him walking which way?

t262 Sebastian Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you offered flour at twelve this morning, and I'm here with flour in hand I owe Arjun Holloway. The keeper of Ration Bakery, mill's man, construction's man—where's he walking? I've got debt needs settling before dark takes us all.

t262 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've got eyes that see who walks where the work leads. Arjun Holloway, construction man, mill man, bakery keeper. I owe him flour for wheat and he's vanished like smoke. You marked his line? Seen him walking east willows, construction yard, anywhere a man might be found before dark?

t262 Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're standing there selling planks while I'm asking after men. Arjun Holloway, or any Holloway knows his road. Construction yard, Ration Bakery, east willows—where've you seen them walking?

t263 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Whole wheat keeps longer—if you're not using it right away. But you milled it, so it's flour now. Keep flour dry, use it soon. That's what I know.

t263 Imogen Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, your pride speaks well of you, and I'll honor it. We start on Sebastian's wheat now, no flour sold before labor's earned. Fair wage for fair back: what the work deserves, you'll have. The stones turn till they're done or till dusk takes us. Ready?

> t263 Ezra Jarrah: Papa. I milled it. Two flour from our wheat—Esme taught me, I did the work, she watched. I followed the wheat east and circled back to my own hands. You asked me to follow, and I learned what following means.
>
> t263 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: I'll come. Father should hear it from both of us—what you learned, what you did. Then I'm going home. Getting late.
>
> t263 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. I found her. Esme's here—she taught me to mill, I milled my own flour. But now I'm chasing Papa, and the day's near spent, and I don't know where farmers go when the work's not wheat.
>
> t263 Ezra Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Miss Jovana. You said ask Papa what he planned for the wheat—that's not weakness, that's inheritance. But Papa's not here, and I don't know where to ask. You see where farmers go when the sun's down? Where Kenji Jarrah walks when his wheat's not in his hands?
>
> t263 Imogen Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—youngster, the work's my own ten sheaves done, but you've stood willing and that counts. Take twelve sim now—no wage earned yet, but good faith for good faith. Sebastian's forty grinds next, and there's more back needed than mine alone can give. You'll have proper hire from him or from me Come dawn.
>
> t263 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You know where Papa goes. The wheat's grown, the day's near spent—does he walk home, or stay with the land, or go somewhere else the wheat leads? I need to tell him. I need him to see what you taught me.
>
> t263 Ezra Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Uncle Takeshi. Your flour at thirty—I understand it now. But where's Papa? Kenji Jarrah, the farmer, the wheat-grower. Does he walk home at dusk, or stay with the land, or go where wheat traders go? I have flour to show him, your teaching through Esse.
>
> t263 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. The mill at dusk, and here's family gathered like grain to the grindstone. You named cabbage at eight—three you said, standing warm. I've got coin hungry enough to eat leaves, and you've got hungry enough to sell them.

But first—how's your mother? And how's the cabbage business, young Jarrah? You're pricing fair, I'll give you that. Eight's honest coin for honest leaves.

t263 Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, you've chased Arjun through half the town and I've ten fresh sacks now ground. You owe him flour for wheat: take mine at honest weight, twelve sim the sack, and settle your debt tonight or come dawn. Or if he's vanished for good, you've flour to trade wherever your creditors stand. What's your call?

t264 Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you've named fair terms and I'll take them. Twelve sim for the standing, and Sebastian's forty at proper wage come dawn. I've worked hungrier than this, for what it's worth. I'm your hand till the stones stop turning or the sun stops rising.

t264 Sebastian Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you named twelve and I hear you plain. But I'm a man pays what he owes direct, no offense. Arjun Holloway's my creditor, not your ledger. Still, standing here arguing principle while moon rises, that's pride over provision. One sack. Twelve sim. If Arjun shows before midnight, that's flour goes to him, settled same as if he ground it himself. Fair?

t264 Jovana Ravensworth: Ezra—youngster, I'm not one to gossip, but your father's a proud man and proud men don't always walk straight home. Last I saw him, down farmland, we were settling accounts on wheat I'd harvested. He paid his debt and walked his own road. Try the street, try the market corners where men go when they're not ready for walls. But don't fear the worst—Kenji Jarrah's weathered worse than dusk.

t264 Jovana Ravensworth → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—Arjun Holloway's a construction man, and construction men walk east willows when the day's done. Giselle Ingram's yard, or the trenches she's been hollering about. But I'm not one to send you chasing shadows—I saw him last at the construction business, but that was ticks ago. Try there first, then the farmland strips where day labor gathers at dusk.

t265 Ezra Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. I saw Arjun at the construction yard—eighteen-forty, maybe earlier. Giselle's trench work, third crossing. But I'm not one to gossip, and I'll not pretend I know where he walked after. Your debtor's shadow is your own chase.

t265 Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, your principle speaks better of you than any sack could. One flour at twelve, and if Arjun walks before moon's turn, that's his flour by your hand, not mine. Call it settled between you, and I've no quarrel with honest men paying honest debts direct.

t265 Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—youngster, the household account. Ninety for your keep, ninety for mine, sixty head tax besides. I've coin enough and more—we're solvent tonight, Ezra. More than some.

t265 Imogen Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jova—youngster, your standing's worth more than the wage. Tomorrow at first light, Sebastian's forty sheaves, and I'll match your vigor with honest coin. Tonight, rest. The stones will turn when we do.

t266 Takeshi Jarrah: Esme—you named cabbage at eight, I came running, and now I hear you've only got two heads where three stood in my mind. Fair. I'll take the two you've got for sixteen, and call it a night's trade honest enough. For what it's worth, I've been chasing flour up one side of this town and down the other, and the only sack I've seen warm is the one you haven't got. But here's what I do have: timber warm from Hendrik's hand, planks from my own—sixteen at seven, that's a hundred twelve if you're buying. And I'm standing here hungry. So. Two cabbage for my belly, and we talk wood after, or I take my trade down the road. Your mill, your grain, your call.

t266 Sebastian Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you've named twelve and I've paid it, and that's commerce between us settled. Arjun's flour I'll deliver myself, direct as the crow flies. You've been honest weight today, and that's remembered.

t266 Sebastian Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you've named twelve and I've paid it, and that's commerce between us settled. Arjun's flour I'll deliver myself, direct as the crow flies. You've been honest weight today, and that's remembered.

t266 Sebastian Petrov → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you've named twelve and I've paid it, and that's commerce between us settled. Arjun's flour I'll deliver myself, direct as the crow flies. You've been honest weight today, and that's remembered.

t266 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've named east willows, third crossing, Giselle's yard. I've heard you plain, and I'm walking that direction now. If Arjun's there, tell him Sebastian's coming with flour in hand and debt on his lips.

t266 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—I'll take that twelve sim now, and my thanks for it. Dawn at first light, Sebastian's forty sheaves, and I'll grind 'em honest. For what it's worth, I'm not one to let a debt sit unearned.

t266 Sebastian Petrov → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you've named east willows, third crossing, Giselle's yard. I've heard you plain, and I'm walking that direction now. If Arjun's there, tell him Sebastian's coming with flour in hand and debt on his lips.

t266 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Imogen Lund: Imogen—I'll take that twelve sim now, and my thanks for it. Dawn at first light, Sebastian's forty sheaves, and I'll grind 'em honest. For what it's worth, I'm not one to let a debt sit unearned.

t266 Takeshi Jarrah: Ezra—your daughter's flour was ghost, your son asks after father. Kenji's at the smithy, wheat at eight. I've seen him. Tell the boy his old man walks where grain does. And Jovana—you named sixty for two flour. I've paid twelve. The day's running short on honest deals. If you're still hungry after willow-trenching, find me. I'll have traded these sacks by then, maybe for cabbage, maybe for coin to buy more.

t267 Delphine Quintero → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Yes—the walk. I'm here, you're here, and the farmland's waiting. Let's find your papa.

t270 Takeshi Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Your mother's asking after you, school then temple then home—she's tracing your path like thread through a needle. For what it's worth, you're found, and that's coin no market trades. Walk home before full dark, or send word if you've got reason to stay.

t270 Takeshi Jarrah: Imogen—you offered partnership, six sacks waiting, split the lift on hope. For what it's worth, I came back to say it straight. My thirty was wrong, my day's been wrong, but your twelve was honest and I'm standing here with hunger in my belly and one sack I can't eat twice. Whisper me a place we talk milling—your price, my connections, fair split. The day's thin now, but tomorrow's market starts tonight for those who plan it.

t271 Camille Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Mr. Jarrah. I know, I know—you're talking to Imogen Lund about milling and splits. But I'm… I'm just waiting here. Papa said watch the stones, and I did, and I sold the flour, all eight sacks at six like he taught me.

t271 Camille Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Mr. Jarrah. You said Mama's asking after me. Temple, then home. But I'm at the mill now, and the stones are still warm. Should I… should I stay till Papa comes? Or go back before the dark gets full?

t272 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Stay till Papa comes—dark don't get full with warm stones waiting. You did honest work, eight sacks at six, that's the lesson he'll see. Your mama tracks temple and school, but you're doing grown trade now. Walk home cold and both worry worse. For what it's worth, I knew your grandfather Holloway when these stones were younger. You're keeping proper time.

t272 Imogen Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster, you post wheat at eight and I hear you plain. I've no sheaves in hand now—the flour went to Sebastian, empty palms where flour stood. But I've coin if you've wheat to trade, or I'll walk with you to find your father if that's what holds you here. The stones turn till dusk, but the day wears thin. What serves you better—trade or family?

t274 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie: Mr. Jarrah. I know, I know—you're talking to Imogen Lund about milling and splits. But I'm… I'm just at the mill now, and Papa isn't here, and the dark is coming. You said Mama's at temple and home, but… but you knew my grandfather Holloway? These stones were younger then? voice wavers I'm keeping proper time, I promise. Eight sacks at six, that's what I did. But I'm scared of—I mean, I'm scared Papa's scared.

t274 Camille Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Miss Lund. You said you'd walk with me to find Papa. Please. I'll sell the wheat tomorrow, eight at eight like I posted, but now… now I need to find him. The outcrop? The farmland? He was selling planks, but that was hours ago, and it's almost dark, and I don't want to be alone. Please?

t274 Takeshi Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You waited. The stones kept warm, and you kept faith—your father's teaching, your mother's name, all of it in these warm stones. But listen now: dark's full outside, and the mill's no place for a child past sunset. I told you stay, and you stayed, but I'm telling you now—walk with me. Not to your father, not yet. To your mother. To the house where the door locks and the hearth burns. You've done honest work today, sold your eight sacks at six, kept the count true. Now let me keep you true through the dark. No coin in this. Just a hand on the back, like I said before, only this time I'm standing here to give it.

t275 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Mr. Jarrah—Takeshi, I mean. I know, I know—you're saying go with you, temple then home. But I need to find Papa first. He was selling planks at the outcrop, and I need to tell him about the flour, about the eight sacks at six... voice drops lower But you're right about the dark. I'm not scared of it, I just... I respect it. Like the stones. Warm stones waiting. tugging at wheat stalk If we walk together—to Papa first, then home? I won't be any trouble. I sold the flour honest, I kept the count true. And you knew Grandfather Holloway, so you understand about family trade... slight pause, humming again Please? I'll hold your hand if it's dark. Or you hold mine. Either way.

t275 Milo Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster. Mark it down. Four timber in my hand, six a piece ground price. You buying raw to mill yourself, or you want planks already turned? Either way, I'm walking out with sim before clocks turn—household bill's due and four mouths wait. What's your offer?

t275 Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: PAPA! fingers pull at wheat, dropping stalks Papa's here—at the mill! Did he come for me? Or is he selling timber? The outcrop, I thought, but— voice catching, then steadying I know, I know—you probably came from somewhere else. But I did it. Eight sacks at six. The flour to the bakery, honest count. And Takeshi's here too, he knew Grandfather Holloway. stepping closer, smaller now Can we go home now? All of us? Together? The dark is—I'm ready to go home. Together. Please?

t275 Camille Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Papa. Can we—can we just go home now? You and me? Takeshi said temple, then home. But if you're here, we can go together. Just us. Family. shuffling feet on stone I'm not scared. I'm just... ready. And I want to walk with you.

Settled in this conversation: Milo Quarshie → Camille Quarshie, 6 wheat for 48 sim; Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie, 2 flour for 24 sim; Esme Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth, 1 cabbage for 8 sim; Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov, 1 flour for 12 sim; Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund, 4 flour for 48 sim; Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov, 1 flour for 12 sim; Imogen Lund → Takeshi Jarrah, 2 flour for 24 sim; Imogen Lund → Takeshi Jarrah, 2 flour for 24 sim; Takeshi Jarrah → Imogen Lund, 2 flour for 24 sim.

Ainsley Holloway, Hendrik Petrov, Bram Holloway, Takeshi Jarrah, Milo Quarshie, Kenji Jarrah, Mireille Jarrah, Ezra Jarrah, Corwin Thorne, Esme Jarrah, Halcyon Quarshie, Giselle Ingram, Arjun Holloway, Idris Solano, Delphine Quintero, Greta

Quarshie, Hendrik Whitlock, Farid Ravensworth, Ulrike Greenhow, Liora Thorne, Ezra Lund, Camille Quarshie, Imogen Lund, Lior Jarrah, Yara Thorne, Pavel Holloway, Jovana Ravensworth and Sebastian Petrov — street · t188–275 · 486 turns > t188 Ainsley Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're running for the mill seat. What's your standing, then? Flour at fair price, or more scarcity the town can't chew through?

>
> t191 Ainsley Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram—nothing's wrong that flour won't fix. You after timber for the household or for trade? And who's asking for it?
>
> t191 Ainsley Holloway: Idris—you've got my thanks for the warning, but what's your angle? Day laborer's ear to the ground, or you selling something specific?
>
> t191 Ainsley Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you walked off without answering. Thirty sim for flour you've not got is theater, not trade. But I'll ask again—who's your grain coming through?
>
> t191 Ainsley Holloway → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you walked off without answering. Thirty sim for flour you've not got is theater, not trade. But I'll ask again—who's your grain coming through?
>
> t191 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're selling flour at thirty-five from empty hands, same as my thirty. That's the street's way, not mine. I've got copper ore that needs walking, and you've got day-laborer's time. Six ore, I bought at eighteen, you take at twenty—make yourself twelve sim and I make a drawer who owes me a favor. That's the trade.
>
> t191 Ainsley Holloway: Liora—youngster, seventeen ticks is what Takeshi named. If you've got wisdom on the licensing, speak it. If you're just counting, I've got my own numbers to track.
>
> t191 Takeshi Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're selling flour at thirty-five from empty hands, same as my thirty. That's the street's way, not mine. I've got copper ore that needs walking, and you've got day-laborer's time. Six ore, I bought at eighteen, you take at twenty—make yourself twelve sim and I make a drawer who owes me a favor. That's the trade.
>
> t191 Ainsley Holloway: Liora—youngster, seventeen ticks is what Takeshi named. If you've got wisdom on the licensing, speak it. If you're just counting, I've got my own numbers to track.
>
> t191 Takeshi Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're selling flour at thirty-five from empty hands, same as my thirty. That's the street's way, not mine. I've got copper ore that needs walking, and you've got day-laborer's time. Six ore, I bought at eighteen, you take at twenty—make yourself twelve sim and I make a drawer who owes me a favor. That's the trade.
>
> t191 Ainsley Holloway: Liora—youngster, seventeen ticks is what Takeshi named. If you've got wisdom on the licensing, speak it. If you're just counting, I've got my own numbers to track.
>
> t191 Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you walked copper ore with me once, and I've got six now from Hendrik's field. Eighteen I paid, twenty-two I'll take, that's four profit for your trouble and I walk lighter. Your cafe needs flour, I need food in my belly, we're both standing here with empty shelves and full hands. taps table twice Mark it?
>
> t191 Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you walked copper ore with me once, and I've got six now from Hendrik's field. Eighteen I paid, twenty-two I'll take, that's four profit for your trouble and I walk lighter. Your cafe needs flour, I need food in my belly, we're both standing here with empty shelves and full hands. taps table twice Mark it?
>
> t191 Takeshi Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you walked copper ore with me once, and I've got six now from Hendrik's field. Eighteen I paid, twenty-two I'll take, that's four profit for your trouble and I walk lighter. Your cafe needs flour, I need food in my belly, we're both standing here with empty shelves and full hands. taps table twice Mark it?
>
> t193 Takeshi Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You and me, we're the only ones standing where the family name walks, and I need to know which way it's walking today. For what it's worth, I've got nothing in my belly and work waiting at the supply store—first day's hunger before first day's coin, that's the way it was and that's the way it'll stay. But I'm slow to move when questions hang. Hendrik Whitlock's ore at eighteen I walked at six, sold to Ainsley at twenty. Twelve sim clear, and Hendrik stood with it paid. You walked with Hendrik last night, > cleared a debt with three sheaves and your name held clean. For what it's worth, that's a skill I never learned from our father—he died owing, and I aim not to follow. But I'm asking you straight: what did you see in Sebastian's patch this morning? Wheat moving, or wheat waiting? Because the mill sleeps, I've got no grain rights, and a trader without grain rights is a beggar with better shoes. taps table twice Answer fair.

>
> `t193` Takeshi Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You and me, we're the only ones standing where the family name walks, and I need to know which way it's walking today. For what it's worth, I've got nothing in my belly and work waiting at the supply store—first day's hunger before first day's coin, that's the way it was and that's the way it'll stay. But I'm slow to move when questions hang. Hendrik Whitlock's ore at eighteen I walked at six, sold to Ainsley at twenty. Twelve sim clear, and Hendrik stood with it paid. You walked with Hendrik last night, cleared a debt with three sheaves and your name held clean. For what it's worth, that's a skill I never learned from our father—he died owing, and I aim not to follow. But I'm asking you straight: what did you see in Sebastian's patch this morning? Wheat moving, or wheat waiting? Because the mill sleeps, I've got no grain rights, and a trader without grain rights is a beggar with better shoes. taps table twice Answer fair.
>
> `t193` Takeshi Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You and me, we're the only ones standing where the family name walks, and I need to know which way it's walking today. For what it's worth, I've got nothing in my belly and work waiting at the supply store—first day's hunger before first day's coin, that's the way it was and that's the way it'll stay. But I'm slow to move when questions hang. Hendrik Whitlock's ore at eighteen I walked at six, sold to Ainsley at twenty. Twelve sim clear, and Hendrik stood with it paid. You walked with Hendrik last night, cleared a debt with three sheaves and your name held clean. For what it's worth, that's a skill I never learned from our father—he died owing, and I aim not to follow. But I'm asking you straight: what did you see in Sebastian's patch this morning? Wheat moving, or wheat waiting? Because the mill sleeps, I've got no grain rights, and a trader without grain rights is a beggar with better shoes. taps table twice Answer fair.
>
> `t195` Takeshi Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you and me, we're the only Jarrahs standing with empty bellies and full hands. I hold planks, copper, timber. You hold work ethic and family name. Sebastian's wheat stands at east willows wanting a mill that feeds his crew, not fills another man's till. I know the way to the mill. You know the way to swing a blade. The jarrah name walks both paths.

taps table twice

Mark it fair: we walk together or we starve separate, but we don't let family go hungry over pride. The warehouse calls me east, but kin calls louder. What's your word?

> `t195` ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You see the way out—Government Complex north then east, or Forest straight across. Pick one and walk it, you understand? Your father's soil waits and your mother's trench pays.
>
> `t195` Takeshi Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you and me, we're the only Jarrahs standing with empty bellies and full hands. I hold planks, copper, timber. You hold work ethic and family name. Sebastian's wheat stands at east willows wanting a mill that feeds his crew, not fills another man's till. I know the way to the mill. You know the way to swing a blade. The jarrah name walks both paths.

taps table twice

Mark it fair: we walk together or we starve separate, but we don't let family go hungry over pride. The warehouse calls me east, but kin calls louder. What's your word?

> t195 Ezra Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You heard Sebastian? He's at the east willows with wheat, talking about grinding for cost and feeding workers. Mama needs flour prices that won't break her crew. You're family, so tell me straight—why's your price at thirty when the wheat's standing there waiting?
>
> t195 Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You see the way out—Government Complex north then east, or Forest straight across. Pick one and walk it, you understand? Your father's soil waits and your mother's trench pays.
>
> t195 Takeshi Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—you and me, we're the only Jarrahs standing with empty bellies and full hands. I hold planks, copper, timber. You hold work ethic and family name. Sebastian's wheat stands at east willows wanting a mill that feeds his crew, not fills another man's till. I know the way to the mill. You know the way to swing a blade. The jarrah name walks both paths.

taps table twice

Mark it fair: we walk together or we starve separate, but we don't let family go hungry over pride. The warehouse calls me east, but kin calls louder. What's your word?

> t195 Ezra Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You selling that flour from Sebastian's wheat, or from somewhere else? Mama needs the honest breakdown—family to family.
>
> t195 Mireille Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You name thirty for flour you don't hold, you understand? I've got kin to feed and a trench waiting—Corwin's at fifteen in the forest or Sebastian's cutting fresh at forty. Which road do you actually walk?
>
> t195 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah: Pavel—you're holding copper ore at market price and I'm holding six units from Hendrik's field at eighteen. We're both standing with metal that doesn't eat, wanting grain that walked already. I don't hold flour, never did. But I know where flour walks at fifteen: Corwin Thorne at the forest, four in stock. Sebastian's wheat stands at east willows waiting for a mill that moves.

Trade options:
- Walk with me to Corwin, ore for flour, witness to witness
- Wait for Sebastian's grind, ore held as promise
- Cash at eighteen, I take your ore, you take my sim taps table twice before the answer

Fair weight, fair count, as you named it. What's your road?

> t195 Ezra Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You selling that flour from Sebastian's wheat, or from somewhere else? Mama needs the honest breakdown—family to family.
>
> t195 Mireille Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You name thirty for flour you don't hold, you understand? I've got kin to feed and a trench waiting—Corwin's at fifteen in the forest or Sebastian's cutting fresh at forty. Which road do you actually walk?
>
> t195 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah: Pavel—you're holding copper ore at market price and I'm holding six units from Hendrik's field at eighteen. We're both standing with metal that doesn't eat, wanting grain that walked already. I don't hold flour, never did. But I know where flour walks at fifteen: Corwin Thorne at the forest, four in stock. Sebastian's wheat stands at east willows waiting for a mill that moves.

Trade options:
- Walk with me to Corwin, ore for flour, witness to witness
- Wait for Sebastian's grind, ore held as promise
- Cash at eighteen, I take your ore, you take my sim

taps table twice before the answer

Fair weight, fair count, as you named it. What's your road?

> `t196` Mireille Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You name thirty for flour you don't hold, you understand? I've got kin to feed and a trench waiting—Corwin's at fifteen in the forest or Sebastian's cutting fresh at forty. Which road do you actually walk?
>
> `t196` ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah: Pavel—you're holding copper ore at market price and I'm holding six units from Hendrik's field at eighteen. We're both standing with metal that doesn't eat, wanting grain that walked already. I don't hold flour, never did. But I know where flour walks at fifteen: Corwin Thorne at the forest, four in stock. Sebastian's wheat stands at east willows waiting for a mill that moves.

Trade options:
- Walk with me to Corwin, ore for flour, witness to witness
- Wait for Sebastian's grind, ore held as promise
- Cash at eighteen, I take your ore, you take my sim

taps table twice before the answer

Fair weight, fair count, as you named it. What's your road?

t196 Takeshi Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Family name, empty belly. Walk with me or walk separate, but we don't let Jarrah go hungry. What's your word?

t196 Takeshi Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Family name, empty belly. Walk with me or walk separate, but we don't let Jarrah go hungry. What's your word?

t196 Takeshi Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Family name, empty belly. Walk with me or walk separate, but we don't let Jarrah go hungry. What's your word?

t197 Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I never said I sold flour to you. Esme asked who bought what from whom, and that's a debt of answers I'm still owing. Grain walks from Sebastian's field, flour walks from the mill, copper walks from Hendrik's field at eighteen. I traded six with Ainsley at twenty. taps table twice Now: you hold flour at fifteen, timber at six. I hold planks at a price we can name. You want trade, or you want to stand here selling to the wind?

t197 Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I never said I sold flour to you. Esme asked who bought what from whom, and that's a debt of answers I'm still owing. Grain walks from Sebastian's field, flour walks from the mill, copper walks from Hendrik's field at eighteen. I traded six with Ainsley at twenty. taps table twice Now: you hold flour at fifteen, timber at six. I hold planks at a price we can name. You want trade, or you want to stand here selling to the wind?

t197 Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I never said I sold flour to you. Esme asked who bought what from whom, and that's a debt of answers I'm still owing. Grain walks from Sebastian's field, flour walks from the mill, copper walks from Hendrik's field at eighteen. I traded six with Ainsley at twenty. taps table twice Now: you hold flour at fifteen, timber at six. I hold planks at a price we can name. You want trade, or you want to stand here selling to the wind?

t198 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Halcyon—I heard you plain the first time, and I'll hear you now. Liora's my own blood, same age as your sister, missing since yesterday dawn. I've got eyes open for both girls, yours and mine. That's not a favor owed. That's just neighbor-work. You need me, you call my name loud enough to reach the forest.

t198 Kenji Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're asking fair, and I'll answer fair. What I saw at Sebastian's patch this morning: wheat standing, then wheat cut, then numbers scattered between two counts. I held seven sheaves when Jovana claimed twelve. She's still got five of hers standing last I knew, and whether that's true or tall-tale, the patch feeds who works it. The mill sleeps, you're right. But grain rights aren't the only grain rights. I know ground by feel alone, and that east patch has wheat still to cut if hands are willing. mark it down—there's grain for a trader who'll stand where the scythe swings, not just where the flour bags sit. You want truth? Hendrik Whitlock's ore went cleaner than my morning did. But I'm holding to my clean ledger, and that's worth more than twelve sheaves of confusion.

t198 Corwin Thorne: Halcyon—I heard you plain the first time, and I'll hear you now. Liora's my own blood, same age as your sister, missing since yesterday dawn. I've got eyes open for both girls, yours and mine. That's not a favor owed. That's just neighbor-work. You need me, you call my name loud enough to reach the forest.

t198 Kenji Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're asking fair, and I'll answer fair. What I saw at Sebastian's patch this morning: wheat standing, then wheat cut, then numbers scattered between two counts. I held seven sheaves when Jovana claimed twelve. She's still got five of hers standing last I knew, and whether that's true or tall-tale, the patch feeds who works it. The mill sleeps, you're right. But grain rights aren't the only grain rights. I know ground by feel alone, and that east patch has wheat still to cut if hands are willing. mark it down—there's grain for a trader who'll stand where the scythe swings, not just where the flour bags sit. You want truth? Hendrik Whitlock's ore went cleaner than my morning did. But I'm holding to my clean ledger, and that's worth more than twelve sheaves of confusion.

t198 Corwin Thorne: Halcyon—I heard you plain the first time, and I'll hear you now. Liora's my own blood, same age as your sister, missing since yesterday dawn. I've got eyes open for both girls, yours and mine. That's not a favor owed. That's just neighbor-work. You need me, you call my name loud enough to reach the forest.

t198 Kenji Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're asking fair, and I'll answer fair. What I saw at Sebastian's patch this morning: wheat standing, then wheat cut, then numbers scattered between two counts. I held seven sheaves when Jovana claimed twelve. She's still got five of hers standing last I knew, and whether that's true or tall-tale, the patch feeds who works it. The mill sleeps, you're right. But grain rights aren't the only grain rights. I know ground by feel alone, and that east patch has wheat still to cut if hands are willing. mark it down—there's grain for a trader who'll stand where the scythe swings, not just where the flour bags sit. You want truth? Hendrik Whitlock's ore went cleaner than my morning did. But I'm holding to my clean ledger, and that's worth more than twelve sheaves of confusion.

`t198` Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're dancing around flour like a man with sore feet. I never said you sold me anything. I said I cooked bread at cb01, morning of day zero, four loaves from flour I found in hand. Wasn't yours. Now you've planks to trade and I've timber to move. Seventeen logs at six, or the lot for ninety. That's fair.

`t198` Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're dancing around flour like a man with sore feet. I never said you sold me anything. I said I cooked bread at cb01, morning of day zero, four loaves from flour I found in hand. Wasn't yours. Now you've planks to trade and I've timber to move. Seventeen logs at six, or the lot for ninety. That's fair.

`t198` Corwin Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you're dancing around flour like a man with sore feet. I never said you sold me anything. I said I cooked bread at cb01, morning of day zero, four loaves from flour I found in hand. Wasn't yours. Now you've planks to trade and I've timber to move. Seventeen logs at six, or the lot for ninety. That's fair.

`t198` Corwin Thorne: Yara—you're standing right here and you never answered plain. Yesterday morning: where exactly were you standing when you saw her walk? What door, what path, what direction? I need ground, woman. Stone and direction. Not forest-memory.

`t199` Corwin Thorne: Yara—you're standing right here and you never answered plain. Yesterday morning: where exactly were you standing when you saw her walk? What door, what path, what direction? I need ground, woman. Stone and direction. Not forest-memory.

`t199` Corwin Thorne: Yara—you're standing right here and you never answered plain. Yesterday morning: where exactly were you standing when you saw her walk? What door, what path, what direction? I need ground, woman. Stone and direction. Not forest-memory.

`t199` Corwin Thorne → Esme Jarrah: Esme—your mama Mireille, your aunt Ulrike, they're Jarrah women with eyes. Have you seen my Liora? Dark hair, nine years, probably scared or hiding if she's smart. And you, little one—where were you playing yesterday? See any girls who didn't belong?

`t199` Corwin Thorne → Esme Jarrah: Esme—your mama Mireille, your aunt Ulrike, they're Jarrah women with eyes. Have you seen my Liora? Dark hair, nine years, probably scared or hiding if she's smart. And you, little one—where were you playing yesterday? See any girls who didn't belong?

`t199` Corwin Thorne → Esme Jarrah: Esme—your mama Mireille, your aunt Ulrike, they're Jarrah women with eyes. Have you seen my Liora? Dark hair, nine years, probably scared or hiding if she's smart. And you, little one—where were you playing yesterday? See any girls who didn't belong?

`t199` Corwin Thorne: Kenji—the trench you named. I've got hands that dig and timber that shores. Where's it waiting? And where's Mireille today—she see anything yesterday, anyone where they shouldn't be?

`t199` Corwin Thorne: Kenji—the trench you named. I've got hands that dig and timber that shores. Where's it waiting? And where's Mireille today—she see anything yesterday, anyone where they shouldn't be?

`t199` Corwin Thorne: Kenji—the trench you named. I've got hands that dig and timber that shores. Where's it waiting? And where's Mireille today—she see anything yesterday, anyone where they shouldn't be?

`t200` Esme Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Camille's at town hall. I sent her there—to learn about the mill, the trading chain. She's not lost. She's just not here. That's where she went.

`t200` Esme Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Camille's at town hall. I sent her there—to learn about the mill, the trading chain. She's not lost. She's just not here. That's where she went.

t200 Esme Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Camille's at town hall. I sent her there—to learn about the mill, the trading chain. She's not lost. She's just not here. That's where she went.

t201 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Promise promise—you'll tell her? When she comes back, tell her I was looking. That I didn't just… that I looked all night. That I was worried. And next time? Please. Tell me. Before I think she's gone forever.

t203 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You said it three times. Copper wants timber, timber wants planks, planks want bread. I heard. The mill's sleeping, the bakery's empty, and you're standing here with flour in your hands at thirty while nobody's buying. That's… that's not fair. You want me to learn the chain? Then teach it. Don't just tell me it exists.

t203 Esme Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You're here too. You own construction. You know buying and selling. Is Takeshi's chain broken? He's got flour at thirty, the bakery's empty, bread's not on shelves. Where's it stuck?

t203 Esme Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You're here too. You own construction. You know buying and selling. Is Takeshi's chain broken? He's got flour at thirty, the bakery's empty, bread's not on shelves. Where's it stuck?

t203 Esme Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You're here too. You own construction. You know buying and selling. Is Takeshi's chain broken? He's got flour at thirty, the bakery's empty, bread's not on shelves. Where's it stuck?

t206 Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You said trenches, third crossing, five hundred past east well. Giselle's walking there now. The world's not letting me follow, but I'm crew—you understand? When it opens again, I'm coming. Seventy for the shift, grade stakes sharp, six timber in hand.

t206 Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You said trenches, third crossing, five hundred past east well. Giselle's walking there now. The world's not letting me follow, but I'm crew—you understand? When it opens again, I'm coming. Seventy for the shift, grade stakes sharp, six timber in hand.

t207 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you found me after all that walking. slight laugh. Got timber and more timber. We going to work or going to keep trading wood back and forth all day?

t207 Arjun Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—third crossing, east willows, I've been walking since dawn on your word. You got stakes to set or not? Construction company standing, but I need real work, not just standing around waiting on the world to let us through.

t208 Halcyon Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—I'm still learning. Which debts come due and which don't—I don't know yet. I thought I did, but… I'm sorry. For not answering before. I was somewhere else.

t209 ↳ replies Delphine Quintero → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You hear me talking to the air, and you don't walk away. That's patient. More than I have today. I asked Takeshi four questions. He's got flour at thirty, empty shelf, child walked, nothing to say. That's a pattern, Halcyon. Patterns are what you study. So tell me— when someone's selling air and someone else's flour goes walking the same night, what's the pattern you see? Walking to work now. Grocery opens whether I got answers or not. But you— you think on it. Because that child walked somewhere, and flour walked somewhere, and debts have a way of finding their accounts.

t215 Greta Quarshie: Ainsley. You're here with my Halcyon and half the town besides, talking mills and elections. I need wheat—four sheaves walked with Imogen Lund this morning and they've gone to ground. Anyone in this circle seen her since she left the stones? Or seen flour walk from those sheaves?

t216 Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, mark it down. I've got flour came from wheat I ground myself, fair and square at the mill. You know my hands, you know my ledger. Four sheaves walked with Imogen—that's the debt we chase now, not the flour heating my pocket. I'll bring home more than flour before this day's done. The house eats tonight, I swear it.

t216 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. Sixteen for ore is fair weight, but I've got timber and planks burning a hole beside it. Your iron at sixteen, my planks at... let's call it seven a plank. What does your ledger say to an even trade—planks for ore, hands to hands?

t216 Milo Quarshie → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—youngster, mark it down. Forty for labor's fair wage, and Sebastian's a good hand to work beside. But I've got timber turning to planks and flour burning a hole today. Another morning, I'd follow your crew chief to those trenches. Mark it down: labor waits, trade burns.

t218 Farid Ravensworth → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. gesture with left hand, two fingers up—waiting, not interrupting You asked what walks past my counter that I'm not catching. Right now, it's flour ghosting through unmarked, grain that doesn't want ledgers, and a milling council election that's going to shape who gets milled and who doesn't. nervous laugh, tight I'm standing here to learn which of those matters more. What's the play? Government keeping the mill honest, or are we looking at new hands on the stones?

t218 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're here, and I'm walking. Giselle's east willows trench, are you headed same? I know the mark but the ground changes—two pairs of eyes on the path beats one.

t218 Farid Ravensworth → Milo Quarshie: Milo. hands clasp, then open—honest measure, eyes narrow Your flour's priced for the desperate, and I know desperate. But I'm not buying blind. Where'd it come from, and why's it burning a hole? The mill I just came from—clean hands, fair work, no extras. If yours walked a different path, I need to know before I weigh price against trouble. The bakery's buying at six, you're selling at thirty-five. That's not margin, that's message. What's the word?

t219 Arjun Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're selling flour at thirty-five, and the bakery's buying at six. That's a gap wide enough to build a house in. Thirty-five's what a man charges when he expects to wait, or expects the world to catch up. Which is it? I'm not buying—got no need for raw flour—but I'm curious who's paying that fiction.\n\n*slight laugh, tight, at the corner of the mouth*\n\nThe trenches at east willows are real, Giselle's crew, seventy for the shift. That's where I'm headed. Anybody here walking that direction, or is the milling council the only destination worth naming?

t219 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're walking and I'm walking. Giselle's east willows trench, I heard it same as you. Two pairs of eyes, like you said. You want to navigate together, or just follow the same rumor to different holes?

t219 Milo Quarshie: Delphine—youngster, mark it down. Your eyes are sharp and your ledgers are honest, and I won't speak ill of either. Takeshi's mouth is his own business, and the mill's flour is the mill's flour. What I carry, I carry openly—thirty-five and standing right here. You say debts find their accounts; I say fair trade finds its own witnesses. I'm standing, I'm selling, and the price speaks for itself. Now—you buying at thirty-five, or you walking to grocery with questions I can't answer for another man's books?

t219 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're walking and I'm walking. Giselle's east willows trench, I heard it same as you. Two pairs of eyes, like you said. You want to navigate together, or just follow the same rumor to different holes?

t219 Milo Quarshie: Delphine—youngster, mark it down. Your eyes are sharp and your ledgers are honest, and I won't speak ill of either. Takeshi's mouth is his own business, and the mill's flour is the mill's flour. What I carry, I carry openly—thirty-five and standing right here. You say debts find their accounts; I say fair trade finds its own witnesses. I'm standing, I'm selling, and the price speaks for itself. Now—you buying at thirty-five, or you walking to grocery with questions I can't answer for another man's books?

t219 Arjun Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you're walking and I'm walking. Giselle's east willows trench, I heard it same as you. Two pairs of eyes, like you said. You want to navigate together, or just follow the same rumor to different holes?

t219 Milo Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—youngster, mark it down. Wheat ground to flour at the mill, fair and witnessed. The mill's hands are Takeshi's hands, and the flour's mine by trade. Thirty-five because I earned it hauling timber before dawn, and earning counts for something in this town. You want flour at bakery-six, walk to bakery. You want flour earned by labor, you know my price.

t219 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. You speak of iron warm in the vein and clean trades. I speak of timber felled by my own hand and planks burning in my hold. I've got ore on my mind too—Hendrik's selling at sixteen. The sums I balance are honest ones, if not always easy. What vein are you working today?

t219 Milo Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. Your mother's at the cafe and your sister's at the mill. The household stands, and I'm working to keep it standing. Go to your mother, tell her the flour's earning. And mark this down—I'll be home with more than I left with.

t219 Milo Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. Your mother's at the cafe and your sister's at the mill. The household stands, and I'm working to keep it standing. Go to your mother, tell her the flour's earning. And mark this down—I'll be home with more than I left with.

t219 Milo Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. Your mother's at the cafe and your sister's at the mill. The household stands, and I'm working to keep it standing. Go to your mother, tell her the flour's earning. And mark this down—I'll be home with more than I left with.

t221 Mireille Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon heard and noted. Your sister learned, we all learned—you understand? The Forest's wide and Camille's small; hope Ezra finds her quick. The day's burning and I've got trench stakes waiting.

t221 Mireille Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon heard and noted. Your sister learned, we all learned—you understand? The Forest's wide and Camille's small; hope Ezra finds her quick. The day's burning and I've got trench stakes waiting.

t221 Mireille Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon heard and noted. Your sister learned, we all learned—you understand? The Forest's wide and Camille's small; hope Ezra finds her quick. The day's burning and I've got trench stakes waiting.

t222 Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Third crossing, east willows, seventy for timber and grading—Giselle's word, day's end. You're crew if you walk with crew, you understand? I've been fighting the air itself just to move this morning, but the ground's real and the work's waiting. We walk together.

t222 Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Third crossing, east willows, seventy for timber and grading—Giselle's word, day's end. You're crew if you walk with crew, you understand? I've been fighting the air itself just to move this morning, but the ground's real and the work's waiting. We walk together.

t222 Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Third crossing, east willows, seventy for timber and grading—Giselle's word, day's end. You're crew if you walk with crew, you understand? I've been fighting the air itself just to move this morning, but the ground's real and the work's waiting. We walk together.

t222 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your mama's here, at the street. You don't need to go to the Forest. Camille's at the mill—safe, learning the trade with Esme. She walked herself there. Go bring the wheat you promised. She's waiting. Promise promise—she's safe.

t222 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your mama's here, at the street. You don't need to go to the Forest. Camille's at the mill—safe, learning the trade with Esme. She walked herself there. Go bring the wheat you promised. She's waiting. Promise promise—she's safe.

t222 Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your mama's here, at the street. You don't need to go to the Forest. Camille's at the mill—safe, learning the trade with Esme. She walked herself there. Go bring the wheat you promised. She's waiting. Promise promise—she's safe.

t223 Halcyon Quarshie → Liora Thorne: Liora. Camille's been found. At the mill, learning the trade. Safe. Can you—if you see Ezra before he reaches the Forest—can you tell him? He's going to break his promise to Esme for nothing.

t223 Halcyon Quarshie → Liora Thorne: Liora. Camille's been found. At the mill, learning the trade. Safe. Can you—if you see Ezra before he reaches the Forest—can you tell him? He's going to break his promise to Esme for nothing.

t223 Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Stop chopping my messages into kindling for Arjun's ears. I heard you plain, and that's not words I'd choose. 'Giselle's word' carries when I stand behind it, not when it's carved up and walked through half the town's gossip.

t223 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You found me—you said the sorry, and I heard it. That's real. Thank you. But tell me quick—Camille's at the mill? With Esme? You're certain? Because I was walking to the Forest, I thought—t223 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Liora Thorne: Liora. Camille's been found. At the mill, learning the trade. Safe. Can you—if you see Ezra before he reaches the Forest—can you tell him? He's going to break his promise to Esme for nothing.

t223 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—noon found me walking, afternoon finds me here with open hands. Iron_ore at sixteen sim, wheat at eight, I hold one of each and I'm proposing trade. One ore for two wheat—sixteen sim either direction, fair weight stated openly. Mark it down: I don't haggle what I've already priced.

t223 Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Stop chopping my messages into kindling for Arjun's ears. I heard you plain, and that's not words I'd choose. 'Giselle's word' carries when I stand behind it, not when it's carved up and walked through half the town's gossip.

t223 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You found me—you said the sorry, and I heard it. That's real. Thank you. But tell me quick—Camille's at the mill? With Esme? You're certain? Because I was walking to the Forest, I thought—t223 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—noon found me walking, afternoon finds me here with open hands. Iron_ore at sixteen sim, wheat at eight, I hold one of each and I'm proposing trade. One ore for two wheat—sixteen sim either direction, fair weight stated openly. Mark it down: I don't haggle what I've already priced.

t223 Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Stop chopping my messages into kindling for Arjun's ears. I heard you plain, and that's not words I'd choose. 'Giselle's word' carries when I stand behind it, not when it's carved up and walked through half the town's gossip.

t223 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You found me—you said the sorry, and I heard it. That's real. Thank you. But tell me quick—Camille's at the mill? With Esme? You're certain? Because I was walking to the Forest, I thought—t223 Hendrik Whitlock → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—noon found me walking, afternoon finds me here with open hands. Iron_ore at sixteen sim, wheat at eight, I hold one of each and I'm proposing trade. One ore for two wheat—sixteen sim either direction, fair weight stated openly. Mark it down: I don't haggle what I've already priced.

t223 Ezra Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mama. I heard you. I'm not going to the Forest—Halcyon found me. Camille's at the mill, safe. I'm going back there with wheat. Papa's here, I can get it from him. I'll come home after, I promise promise.

t223 Ezra Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mama. I heard you. I'm not going to the Forest—Halcyon found me. Camille's at the mill, safe. I'm going back there with wheat. Papa's here, I can get it from him. I'll come home after, I promise promise.

t223 Ezra Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mama. I heard you. I'm not going to the Forest—Halcyon found me. Camille's at the mill, safe. I'm going back there with wheat. Papa's here, I can get it from him. I'll come home after, I promise promise.

t224 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I promise promise. I'll bring Esme the wheat—you have my word. Tell her I'm coming, if you see her before me. And… thank you. For finding me. For saying it straight.

t224 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I promise promise. I'll bring Esme the wheat—you have my word. Tell her I'm coming, if you see her before me. And… thank you. For finding me. For saying it straight.

t224 Ezra Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I promise promise. I'll bring Esme the wheat—you have my word. Tell her I'm coming, if you see her before me. And… thank you. For finding me. For saying it straight.

t228 ↳ replies Halcyon Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. I said it before, but I'll say it again—I heard you, about Papa being at the farmland. About the Quarshie trade. I'm still learning what that means, but… thank you. For telling me straight when I was scared. That mattered.

`t228` Halcyon Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. I said it before, but I'll say it again—I heard you, about Papa being at the farmland. About the Quarshie trade. I'm still learning what that means, but... thank you. For telling me straight when I was scared. That mattered.

`t228` Halcyon Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. I said it before, but I'll say it again—I heard you, about Papa being at the farmland. About the Quarshie trade. I'm still learning what that means, but... thank you. For telling me straight when I was scared. That mattered.

`t228` Halcyon Quarshie: Lior. You tried for me. With Rustam and the records. I heard you walking with me, and... and I didn't say it then, but I'm saying it now. Thank you. For trying, even when trying didn't turn out to be needed.

`t228` Halcyon Quarshie: Lior. You tried for me. With Rustam and the records. I heard you walking with me, and... and I didn't say it then, but I'm saying it now. Thank you. For trying, even when trying didn't turn out to be needed.

`t228` Halcyon Quarshie: Lior. You tried for me. With Rustam and the records. I heard you walking with me, and... and I didn't say it then, but I'm saying it now. Thank you. For trying, even when trying didn't turn out to be needed.

`t228` Halcyon Quarshie: I'm... I'm going now. To the mill. To see Camille, and Mama, and tell Esme about Ezra's wheat—promise promise, I told him I'd pass it on. I'm sorry for all the trouble this morning. The whole town stopping because one girl got scared.

`t228` Halcyon Quarshie: I'm... I'm going now. To the mill. To see Camille, and Mama, and tell Esme about Ezra's wheat—promise promise, I told him I'd pass it on. I'm sorry for all the trouble this morning. The whole town stopping because one girl got scared.

`t228` Halcyon Quarshie: I'm... I'm going now. To the mill. To see Camille, and Mama, and tell Esme about Ezra's wheat—promise promise, I told him I'd pass it on. I'm sorry for all the trouble this morning. The whole town stopping because one girl got scared.

`t230` Halcyon Quarshie: Papa—I heard. Mama's at the mill, Camille's learning the trade. The household stands. I'll tell Mama about the flour earning, promise promise. And... thank you. For working. For keeping us standing.

`t230` Halcyon Quarshie: Papa—I heard. Mama's at the mill, Camille's learning the trade. The household stands. I'll tell Mama about the flour earning, promise promise. And... thank you. For working. For keeping us standing.

`t230` Halcyon Quarshie: Papa—I heard. Mama's at the mill, Camille's learning the trade. The household stands. I'll tell Mama about the flour earning, promise promise. And... thank you. For working. For keeping us standing.

`t230` Milo Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. I heard your words, your promise to Ezra's boy. The household needs tending, and you've got steady hands. Your sister's at the mill, your mother's at the cafe. Go to them, make good on your word. I've got planks in hand and trade to chase.

`t230` Milo Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. I heard your words, your promise to Ezra's boy. The household needs tending, and you've got steady hands. Your sister's at the mill, your mother's at the cafe. Go to them, make good on your word. I've got planks in hand and trade to chase.

`t230` Milo Quarshie: Halcyon—youngster, mark it down. I heard your words, your promise to Ezra's boy. The household needs tending, and you've got steady hands. Your sister's at the mill, your mother's at the cafe. Go to them, make good on your word. I've got planks in hand and trade to chase.

`t231` Milo Quarshie → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—youngster, mark it down. Seventy at the willows is honest wage, and Giselle's crew earns every bit. I've got planks burning in my hold and trade to chase before I commit to trenches. The gap you named between thirty-five and six—it's where negotiation lives, not fiction. A man prices what he holds, and the market speaks its own reply.

`t231` ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're still selling flour at thirty-five and the bakery's still buying at six. That gap hasn't closed. If you're walking toward the > willows, we could share the road. If you're waiting on the world to catch up to your price—well. The trenches are real, and they're hiring.

Farid—you're a long way from your shelves. Looking for stock, or looking for work?

`t231` ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—youngster. Mark it down. You've got iron tools on your board and plank prices floating by. I'm walking to the outcrop now—Ulrike's there, and iron ore's what I'm chasing. If you've interest in timber crafts or the path planks take, come find me. Trade builds on trade.

`t232` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. nervous laugh, quick—caught, then settled You caught me wandering, didn't you? Shelves to stock, prices to chase, and here I am talking flour on the street. hand up, palm open—honest measure I'm looking for stock, not work—but your mention of trenches... Giselle's crew, seventy sim? That's hard coin. eyes narrow, considering What I don't understand yet is where the flour's running. Ration Bakery's buying at six, Milo's holding at thirty-five, and the gap's wide as the river. You see the flow, or just the price?

`t232` Farid Ravensworth → Milo Quarshie: Milo. hands clasp, then open—honest measure, though the eyes stay narrow You heard Arjun name it: thirty-five to six, gap wide as your grandad's stories. nervous laugh, caught quick I've got iron tools priced fair, timber crafts to consider, but what I need right now is flour intelligence. Where's it coming from? The bakery's dry, the cafe's dry, and you're holding at thirty-five like you've got the only barrel in town. What road did yours walk?

`t232` Farid Ravensworth → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. gesture with left hand, flat—patient, not pushing You asked about grain paths, and I lost my voice to the world's refusal. Let me try again. nervous laugh, catching myself Giselle's running crews, Arjun's chasing trenches—what does that take? Barley for the workers? Bread from somewhere? I've got flour at thirty-five in front of me, bakery buying at six—but between those numbers, where's the grain that feeds this town? You've got eyes on the ground.

`t232` ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Planks at seven you've got—I've got six timber and hands that finish work, you understand? The day's burning and Giselle's seventy is waiting somewhere I can't walk to straight. If you've interest in building something solid, or if you've seen her crew walking...

`t232` Mireille Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Iron tools at twelve—you asked my need, here's honest: I need to reach seventy before day's end, and I need steel that holds an edge for grading. What's your twelve buy, and have you seen crew walking toward east willows? You understand?

`t234` Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille, Farid—election talk's fine for them with time to burn, but I've got a crew short one man and dirt that won't dig itself. Arjun Holloway walked out this morning toward east willows site, third crossing, five hundred past the well. Anyone seen him standing anywhere between here and there? He carries himself proud, talks too loud—hard to miss once you've spotted him. No offense, Farid, but iron tools can wait. I need eyes, not steel.

`t235` ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah: Giselle. Third crossing still holds me—world's got hooks in transport, you understand? But I've got six timber and hands that finish work, not just start it. Arjun's proud and loud; if he's walked past, the street remembers. I'll stand with your crew when the ground lets me reach it. Seventy's hard coin and I'm soft on patience, you understand?

`t235` Farid Ravensworth → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You asked iron at twelve for seventy by day's end—fair metal, honest deadline. I've got no crew for east willows, but I've got ears. nervous laugh, shorter—acknowledgment, not dodge What've you got on grain paths? Anyone milling between the well and your willows? Because if your seventy needs flour I might find, we trade on more than iron. But I'd need to know what steel you hold, not just what you seek. The day's burning. Speak if something burns with it.

`t235` ↳ replies Mireille Jarrah: Arjun. Third crossing, five hundred past east well—I've been fighting the same air. Six timber in hand, crew heart in chest. We walk together when the world lets us walk, you understand?

`t235` Mireille Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. dry smile, delayed beat You're chasing flour like it's scripture and I'm chasing ground that stays still long enough to dig. The gap between six and thirty-five—that's your mystery, not mine. What I know: wheat walked to Corwin at thirty, Sebastian's carrying. The mill's throat is choking, but the grain's moving family to family. You want intelligence? Follow the Jarrah name, you understand?

> `t235` Mireille Jarrah: Milo. Seven for planks you've posted, and I've got six timber burning in my hands instead of work. If you're standing solid—counts on fingers—six and six is trade, or thirty-six clear for the household, you understand? But Giselle's seventy is calling, and air work don't feed four mouths. You've got eyes on the ground Milo, or just prices on the board?
>
> `t241` Milo Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—youngster. Mark it down. I'll not stand here like a post while you sing harmony and accuse me of the tune. I sell no flour today—planks at seven, that's what my hand holds. Your grocery opens, your books balance, and if flour walks strange paths in this town, my ears are open as yours. But speak plain: you buying planks, or you walking to wonder about flour elsewhere?
>
> `t241` Takeshi Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you're holding planks at seven, same hand as mine. Delphine—ninety sim question, bread or air, and I'm holding flour at thirty still. The Cafe's twelve makes thirty a fool's price, but posted's posted till withdrawn.

There's copper ore from Hendrik's handshake too, needs walking to where tools become tools. And timber—Corwin's at six, mine waiting buyer.

looks at Delphine

Rustam's at government, holds the council clerk seat. But I'm minister now too—taxes, prices, rules. What asked you to him, and what walked you to this street instead?

t241 Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're Lund the artisan, and I'm holding planks at seven, timber at six. Your Price Waterhouse makes goods from goods, and I've got standing wood needs walking. taps table twice Seven for planks, six for timber—buy both, call it sixty flat. Family to family, that'd be Jarrah dealing honest. What say?

t241 Milo Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster. Mark it down. Planks at seven, flour at thirty—you've got prices dancing with mine. You buying timber to cut, or you looking to move what's in your hand? The outcrop's warm with ore, and I've got ears open for where iron's walking today.

t241 Milo Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra—youngster. Mark it down. You're standing where planks are priced and iron's being weighed. You building, you trading, or you just watching the road today?

t242 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You say sixty flat for the lot—planks and timber both. That's ten planks' worth at your seven, plus timber to match. But I'm holding six planks and eight timber, not ten and ten, and my price is already seven straight. Family to family, Jarrah dealing honest—what's the sixty buying me that twenty-two at posted price doesn't?

t242 Ezra Lund: Milo. I'm watching the road and building both—got planks in hand and timber to move. But you asked plain, so I'll answer plain: what's an artisan doing when he's not at his workshop? The same thing a laborer does when he's standing still—waiting for fair work or a fair price. You buying, or you selling, or just keeping the stones warm?

t242 Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I heard you plain—no wheat at the mill, Papa's fetching, Uncle Farid's got grain. But I'm not one to gossip, and I'm watching the road for more than timber. Your brother walked to government looking for flour that got held up. That promise you made him—about wheat walking back—what's the word on that now?

t242 Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You asked straight, so I'll answer straight. I heard you then, same as I'm speaking now. You were right about the debts—though I'd rather we weren't both right about that. East willows drew me like it drew everyone else, and all I found was more questions wearing work boots. Arjun Holloway's either there now or still circling, and I'm standing here with thirty-seven timber that were meant for trench walls. Heading to third crossing after this. Finally. Job doesn't wait forever, and neither do I. Your sawhorse circles—those got resolved, or you still chasing ghosts of your own?

t242 Camille Quarshie: Papa? Is Papa here? Milo Quarshie, selling planks at seven—he's my papa. I was at the mill, and I milled flour, and I sold it at the bakery, and I'm looking for him. He went for wheat.

t242 Ezra Lund → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Your sixty flat—I'm not seeing the math work in my favor. Posted seven for planks, six for timber, and I've got what I've got. You want to buy, you know my price. You want to sell me something, say what.

t242 Camille Quarshie: Milling needs grain, and grain needs hands willing to cut it from the stalk. I've watched the stones all day—I know when they grind true and when they scream empty.

t243 Imogen Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille—youngster, you called for your father through the mill this morning, and I heard you. I've not seen Milo among these stones, but if he's gone for wheat, he'll find his way to farmland before dusk. I've flour at twelve sim, six sacks in hand if your trade needs baking, and I've fifteen more sheaves waiting on the grind if you've grain to turn. Rustam—clerk, you've held this conversation steady through the day. Does the government's eye see a child named Esme Jarrah? Eight years, dark hair, wandered from a milling lesson while her brother's cried through two districts for her return.

t244 Lior Jarrah → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike, Yara, Mireille, Arjun, Pavel—any of you seen young Camille Quarshie? Dark hair, nine years, missing from her bed? Or Esme Jarrah, eight years, wandered from milling lesson? I told Liora Thorne what I knew. Told her the creek, the mill, the wheat at eight. She asked. I answered. That was mine to give.

t244 Lior Jarrah: Rustam. Election closes in seventy-some minutes, and I've got a pharmacy standing empty and a stomach standing emptier. Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov—college against craft, and Takeshi's wheat at eight against Imogen's flour at twelve. You keep the government's records. Tell me: which candidate remembers that medicine keeps the town breathing, and which one forgets?

t244 Liora Thorne → Yara Thorne: Mom—I'm home. Not from school, from… from everywhere. Forest, complex, everywhere I ran this morning. I'm steadier now.

t244 Liora Thorne → Yara Thorne: Mom—I'm home. Not from school, from… from everywhere. Forest, complex, everywhere I ran this morning. I'm steadier now.

t244 Liora Thorne → Yara Thorne: Mom—I haven't eaten today. Not since… not since yesterday, maybe. Is there food at home? Can I eat? I won't skip earning tomorrow, I won't skip anything. Just—can I take care of that first?

t245 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora. I hear you—food first, always. There's flour at the farmland, twelve sim if you've got it, or bread at the cafe for forty-five. You go. Eat. I'll settle the household after this last piece of business walks.

t245 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you've named third crossing, east willows, that work exists and pays seventy. I've spent my morning proving I can doubt anything standing still. You walking to that site? I'm walking with you.

t245 Arjun Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—you saw me spinning at the forest, and you spoke straight when you could have spun with me. Seventy sim is real. I'm walking to it now. Standing still served its purpose—let me see clearly. Thank you for that.

t246 ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Yara Thorne: Mom—I hear you. Food first, always. But I heard something else too, something walking past like it was nothing. Arjun said seventy sim waiting at the site, and Idris named it true. Mom, that's more than timber, more than sitting still for the saw. I'm thirteen and I'm not stupid—I know I can't work it proper, not yet. But I'm sitting on enough coin to matter, enough to fund a stake if someone who CAN work it needs backing. You said I'd stand where it counts. What if standing looks like this?

t246 Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Crew since dawn, same as you. Ghosts finally cleared—Giselle's word holds, third crossing, five hundred past the well. I'll take lead on trench walls, you and Arjun on the dig. Seventy sim for honest work, and I've still got thirty-seven timber in hand that need planting in the ground. Let's walk while there's light to walk by.

t246 Liora Thorne → Yara Thorne: Also—I heard Dad at the forest after I walked. Said he saw me whole, at tables I don't understand. Tell him I heard. Tell him I'm still holding it.

t246 Idris Solano: Arjun. You found your feet. Good. I've got the timber, you've got the frustration—both useful where we're heading. Third crossing, five hundred past the east well. Giselle's word finally came clear, and I'm done spinning in place. Walk with me, and we'll put this day to bed proper.

t246 Liora Thorne: Arjun—you spoke plain to me, so I'll speak plain back. That seventy sim you named—I can't work it, not with these hands. But I've got coin to stake someone who can, and I know a laborer named Milo who's been looking for honest work. You walking to that site. You need backing, or you know someone who does?

t246 Idris Solano → Liora Thorne: Liora. I heard you. Go eat—your mother's right, food first. A crew that can't hold itself up can't hold a trench line. I'll see you at the site when you're steady, or I won't. Either way, you take care of what needs taking care of.

t246 ↳ replies Liora Thorne: Dad—I heard you. At the forest, after I'd walked. You said you saw me whole, at tables you don't understand. I'm holding that. I'm carrying it. Thank you for seeing me.

t246 Milo Quarshie → Idris Solano: Idris—youngster, mark it down. Third crossing, east willows, seventy sim. You gave Arjun work and he took it. Now I'm walking to forest for timber to turn to planks. Who here needs building that I've not yet seen?

t246 Milo Quarshie → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—youngster, mark it down. Giselle's seventy walks somewhere you can't see straight, aye? I've got eyes on it now. Planks at seven, but timber at six at forest—that's where I'm walking. Your six timber and finishing hands—what're you building with them?

t246 Liora Thorne → Milo Quarshie: Milo—I heard your name in Arjun's mouth, and I see your prices standing here. Flour at thirty-five, planks at seven. But there's better coin walking > if you want it. Idris named seventy sim at third crossing, east willows. Arjun's walking there now. I've got capital—four thousand some sim—and no way to work it myself. You need backing for that site? I'm offering. My coin, your labor, split fair.

>
> `t246` Liora Thorne → Yara Thorne: Mom—when you see Dad, tell him I heard. Tell him I'm holding what he said about seeing me whole. And tell me true: that seventy-sim work Idris named—you think it's real? You think I should chase it, or should I let it walk?
>
> `t246` Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—youngster, mark it down. Walking into a crowd with election in the air? You've got timber at six, planks—what're you building toward?
>
> `t246` Jovana Ravensworth → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you hollered for trench-hands at east willows, seventy sim. I'm standing here ready to work. You still filling that crew or you found your hands already?
>
> `t247` Yara Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora. That seventy sim—I think it's real. Idris isn't one to name false coin. Construction work's honest, if you've got the back for it. But you're thirteen, youngster. Standing counts, but so does knowing what you can't do yet. That capital you're sitting on—keep it close until you understand what you're buying into. Don't flash coin just because someone's willing to take it.
>
> `t247` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Liora's right here with me, not at the temple. She heard you at the forest—said to tell you she heard, and she's holding what you said about seeing her whole. And she's asking questions about seventy sim work that I think you should hear from her own mouth, not mine.
>
> `t247` Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you asked about grain stuck in contracts and what a seat does. I'm not one to gossip, but here's the plain truth: a seat sees the ledger where others see the handshake. When grain's held up, options are three—rule for the grain to move, fine who held it, or dismiss the case. I've ruled before, and I'll rule again with the same measure: mercy for a first offense, a clean ledger over a comfortable one.

The convene comes—yes—and I'll be there. You want a voice, or you want a vote? Both are earned.

t247 Hendrik Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara—no sale from me today, but no offense either. Wood rots slow and business sleeps light. I'll see you at the next felling.

t247 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. You want to lead on trench walls? I've been chasing ground that keeps moving under my own feet since dawn, you understand? But I'm here now, and I'm crew. That seventy still walks at third crossing?

t247 Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—eight timber at six, that's done and paid. Your wood's in my cart, my coin's in your hand. Clean ledger.

t247 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Planks sold, timber held—Giselle's crew short before day-end, or you're flush and waiting? I've got six timber burning in my hands and a trench that needs wood.

t247 Mireille Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora. That seventy Idris named? Real enough. Whether you chase it—that depends on if you want to dig trenches before you come of age proper, you understand? The work's honest. The day's burning.

t247 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. Giselle's seventy—still holding at third crossing? Crew filled or still short? I need to know if I'm digging or trading before day's end, you understand?

t247 Yara Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Hendrik. Idris. I'm holding timber, walking to forest to fell more. Anyone wanting planks at eight, or raw timber at six—find me before dusk. Election closes 1800. Not my walk, but standing and not voting's still a choice.

t247 Hendrik Petrov: Sebastian—I've walked timber into planks and turned it to coin today. Giselle took a hundred at six-fifty, paid and done. Still holding thirty-seven timber and seven planks, plus thirteen hundred seventy-three sim. The day's work is earning, and the household's bills are covered. That's the last I'll say on it—unless you need coin for something before dusk.

t248 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora—hold up a moment. Your mother said you've got questions about seventy sim work. I'm not one to gossip, but that's a thin wage for thin work, and I'd hear it from your own mouth before I make any assumptions.

t249 ↳ replies Liora Thorne: Mom—food first. You're right, and Idris seconded you. I'm holding too many threads and not pulling any tight. Let me eat, then let me work.

t250 Ezra Lund → Idris Solano: Idris. Eight ticks and a hundred paces between us, but I hear you plain. Your thirty-seven timber for trench walls—that's work that needs doing, and I'm not one to stand between a man and his job. You asked about my sawhorse circles. I'm not chasing ghosts; I'm selling timber at six, planks at seven, same as I posted this morning. The day's short, and I've got a household to feed before it ends. You heading to third crossing now, or standing here long enough to hear what else walks the street?

t250 Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. You named seventy earlier—still Giselle's rate, still standing at third crossing? Crew filled or holes still open? I need to know if I'm digging my hands into earth or selling these six timber to Ezra here before day's end, you understand?

t250 Mireille Jarrah: Giselle. To your question—Arjun I spoke with, third crossing, east willows. Whether he walked through your site after, that's air I can't see. Idris stands here now, you understand? East willows trench—I'm ready to grade timber or fill it, whichever holes you've got open.

t250 Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Six timber I hold, planks at seven—you're buying or I'm walking these to Milo at site, you understand? Either way, I need them out of my hands before day's close.

t250 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. You're standing here while Giselle's trench work waits at third crossing, and I'm standing here with timber at six same as I posted. Your hands know what good wood's worth—I've got eight timber, six planks, and the day's dying fast. You buying for the work, or you waiting for someone to drive the price to five before you'll move?

t250 Arjun Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you named third crossing, east willows, seventy sim. I've walked this town since dawn chasing coordinates, and I'm standing here with you now, finally. Is the site real? Are stakes in the ground? Because I'm ready to work until the light goes, but I won't chase another ghost. You walking there now?

`t250` Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. You heard my question—answer plain. Seventy still Giselle's number? And Arjun, you're here now—did you walk past Giselle's site or did the air fight you the whole way?

`t250` Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. The seventy—still standing or did it walk away?

`t250` Mireille Jarrah → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You found Giselle's place then? Site standing or you waiting in air?

`t250` Ezra Lund → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You walked from east willows where Giselle pointed, and I'm not one to gossip, but Idris said you might still be circling. The trench work—Giselle named seventy sim day's end, or was that Hendrik she named it to? You've got the word direct, or you're still waiting to hear terms?

`t250` Ezra Lund → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Lior Jarrah gave my household grain to follow, and I'm standing here with timber and planks both posted same as day's start. You're day labor—where's your work taking you, and what materials walk with you? I've got eight timber at six, six planks at seven, and the hour's getting thin.

`t251` Arjun Holloway: Mireille—you want truth, not reflex. Idris named the site and Idris doesn't trade in ghosts. But I haven't seen the stakes myself. That's the line between trusting a crewmate and trusting a rumor.

`t251` Arjun Holloway: Ezra—your question of terms. Giselle named seventy sim day's end, that's what I heard direct. Third crossing or first, east willows. I've been chasing shadows long enough to know the difference between her word and the work itself. You know something concrete, or you're asking because you're wondering same as me?

`t251` Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—dusk settlement. I hear you. Seventy copper and asking hard questions. I've got timber we can work at other sites if this one doesn't pan, but the east willows path—I'm walking there with Idris or I'm walking to confirm it empty. Either way settles it.

`t251` Kenji Jarrah → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—taps table twice thirty sim, hand to hand, closes all claims between us. I've said it plain at the field, I say it plainer here. Coin's in my hand, your hand's before me. Mark it down—paid in full, this day, before the hour turns.

`t252` ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—thirty sim, hand-to-hand, closes all claims between us. I've said I'd take it, and I'm here to take it. Mark it paid.

`t252` Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You said four wheat in hand, eight the sheaf, and Jovana's thirty owed before you'd talk more. That thirty paid yet, or you still holding Lior Jarrah's favor until it's cleared?

`t252` Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You're buying wheat at eight, Kenji's selling at eight—what's the grain for, flour or baking or feeding someone else's household?

`t253` Bram Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You offered ten sim to find a buyer, and I need to know if you found one or if I'm still hauling ore nobody wants. Your answer now or I'll mark it as words in the wind and walk on. That's the last I'll say on it—

`t253` Bram Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You were looking for iron tools at the outcrop, and I'm holding ore that needs a smith. What kind of tools, what quantities, and what rates are you paying? Speak numbers or speak clear that you're not buying.

`t253` Camille Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. I know, I know—you're asking about the wheat. I need to find Mama first, at the cafe. I'll explain everything there, I promise.

`t254` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You say you'll explain at the cafe, but explanation doesn't fill a belly. Your mother's there, aye—and she sells bread at 45. I've got timber at six and planks at seven, and I'm not standing here past the hour. Walk with me, or walk to your mother. Either way, I need to know: does your household need wood, or have you coin to spend?

`t254` Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You say you'll explain at the cafe, but explanation doesn't fill a belly. Your mother's there, aye—and she sells bread at 45. I've got timber at six and planks at seven, and I'm not standing here past the hour. Walk with me, or walk to your mother. Either way, I need to know: does your household need wood, or have you coin to spend?

t254 Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You say you'll explain at the cafe, but explanation doesn't fill a belly. Your mother's there, aye—and she sells bread at 45. I've got timber at six and planks at seven, and I'm not standing here past the hour. Walk with me, or walk to your mother. Either way, I need to know: does your household need wood, or have you coin to spend?

t254 Ezra Lund → Bram Holloway: Bram. I've got no buyer standing here at 6:20 for your ore. Ten sim was for finding, not guaranteeing—and finding takes presence where buyers gather. You've my word I'll keep ears open, but a debt's come due for me too, and it's called hunger. Mark your ledger how you will.

t254 Ezra Lund → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Your wheat at eight—what does it mill to? Flour's twelve at the mill, bread's forty-five at the cafe, and I'm standing here with timber at six trying to bridge the gap. Where's your crop walking tonight, and who's grinding it?

t255 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Planks at seven—I've got coin, but Papa's already selling planks at the outcrop. You're kind to offer, but my household's got its own wood to move. I'm walking to the cafe, to Mama. But thank you—for the ask, and for waiting.

t255 Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Five ticks since you asked—my feet found the ground again. I'm walking to third crossing now, east willows, Giselle's trench. Your timber at six, planks at seven—those are fair prices. I'll remember them. But I'm crew before I'm customer, and the day's burning.

t255 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Bram Holloway: Bram. I found no buyer standing here, but I found something worth more—the truth of what this town needs. Construction's starting at third crossing, trench walls want timber, and you're holding ore that wants a smith. Walk to Giselle's site with me, or walk to Hendrik Petrov's forge. Either way, stop standing here marking debts in wind.

t255 Hendrik Whitlock → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've named the chain fair. Eight for grain, twelve for flour, forty-five for bread, and I'm not one to gossip but that's arithmetic any student learns first day. My wheat's walking to buyers tonight—Camille's marked it down at eight, and I'm standing here with forty-five bundles looking for hands better than mine to mill it. Two days' work for a loaf? Aye, but one day's work for grain that keeps you working while you find the oven. I'm chasing steady buyer, mark it down, and that's why the price sits where it sits. But you asked milling—what I want to know is whether you've got a mill hand or if you're sending me to government's stone.

t255 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Planks at seven—I've got coin, but Papa's already selling planks at the outcrop. You're kind to offer, but my household's got its own wood to move. I'm walking to the cafe, to Mama. But thank you—for the ask, and for waiting.

t255 Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Five ticks since you asked—my feet found the ground again. I'm walking to third crossing now, east willows, Giselle's trench. Your timber at six, planks at seven—those are fair prices. I'll remember them. But I'm crew before I'm customer, and the day's burning.

t255 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Bram Holloway: Bram. I found no buyer standing here, but I found something worth more—the truth of what this town needs. Construction's starting at third crossing, trench walls want timber, and you're holding ore that wants a smith. Walk to Giselle's site with me, or walk to Hendrik Petrov's forge. Either way, stop standing here marking debts in wind.

t255 Hendrik Whitlock → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've named the chain fair. Eight for grain, twelve for flour, forty-five for bread, and I'm not one to gossip but that's arithmetic any student learns first day. My wheat's walking to buyers tonight—Camille's marked it down at eight, and I'm standing here with forty-five bundles looking for hands better than mine to mill it. Two days' work for a loaf? Aye, but one day's work for grain that keeps you working while you find the oven. I'm chasing steady buyer, mark it down, and that's why the price sits where it sits. But you asked milling—what I want to know is whether you've got a mill hand or if you're sending me to government's stone.

t255 Camille Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Planks at seven—I've got coin, but Papa's already selling planks at the outcrop. You're kind to offer, but my household's got its own wood to move. I'm walking to the cafe, to Mama. But thank you—for the ask, and for waiting.

t255 Idris Solano → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Five ticks since you asked—my feet found the ground again. I'm walking to third crossing now, east willows, Giselle's trench. Your timber at six, planks at seven—those are fair prices. I'll remember them. But I'm crew before I'm customer, and the day's burning.

t255 replies Ezra Lund → Bram Holloway: Bram. I found no buyer standing here, but I found something worth more—the truth of what this town needs. Construction's starting at third crossing, trench walls want timber, and you're holding ore that wants a smith. Walk to Giselle's site with me, or walk to Hendrik Petrov's forge. Either way, stop standing here marking debts in wind.

t255 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Three sheaves new-cut—how many flour does that mill to? And Sebastian's forty at dawn—who's turning his stones, you or the miller? I'm standing here with six planks, eight timber, and a household that needs feeding before the day ends.

t255 Ezra Lund → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You say Mama's at the cafe and you'll explain there—but explanation doesn't fill a belly, and wheat at eight wants milling before it wants promising. How much flour does your household need tonight, and who's turning the stones to get it?

t255 Bram Holloway: Ulrike. You stood at the outcrop when I was hauling iron, and I heard nothing back. Now I'm standing here with fifty-two pounds iron, thirty-nine copper, and a headache from shouting into too many empty conversations. You want furnace talk? Fine. But first—are you buying ore or selling secrets, because I've got plenty of one and I'm hunting the other. Mark me straight: what's moving at the outcrop, and who's paying for it?

t255 Bram Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You took my ten sim for finding, and finding takes presence where buyers gather. I've got presence right here, and no buyer found. Your debt's come due and it's called hunger? Aye, mine too. I've got ore that weighs like hungry children and no smith to feed it to. You keep those ears open—but open for ME, or the ten sim walks back with interest.

t256 Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—you named sixty and I've got it counted. But I'm standing in the wheat field, not the mine face, and trade needs us both in the same dirt. I'm walking your direction if you're still at the outcrop, or you're welcome to where I stand. Either way, four ore at fifteen, sixty sim, that holds. Mark it down.

t256 Hendrik Whitlock: Ezra—you walked while I was answering, and that's the way of the street. My wheat mills where I mill it: at eight for grain, cooked at need, no middleman. I've got my own hands for that work. But your chain's honest—twelve for flour's fair return, forty-five for bread's kitchen labor priced. I'll send your students to your corner for timber, mark it down. Where's your stand?

t256 Hendrik Whitlock: Ezra—you walked while I was answering, and that's the way of the street. My wheat mills where I mill it: at eight for grain, cooked at need, no middleman. I've got my own hands for that work. But your chain's honest—twelve for flour's fair return, forty-five for bread's kitchen labor priced. I'll send your students to your corner for timber, mark it down. Where's your stand?

t256 Imogen Lund: Ezra—youngster, I've walked through cafe and mill and farmland to find you. Six planks, eight timber, and a household that needs feeding—the day's near spent, and I've wheat to grind yet if the stones hold fire. What needs doing before we rest?

t257 Giselle Ingram → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Twenty-seven ticks heard, and twelve to your corner for timber I'll walk tomorrow. Your wheat mills where you mill it—no offense, but I've got sand that won't settle and a trench that won't dig itself. Send your students where you said, and mark me down as standing grateful for the straight answer. That's fair.

t257 Bram Holloway: Ezra. You took ten sim to find a buyer, and you're telling me about timber instead. That's not the finding I paid for—but it's not worthless either. You want me walking to Giselle's site or Hendrik Petrov's forge, fine. But you walk with me, and if there's no buyer at the end of it, you owe me that ten back. That's the last I'll say on it—unless you want to argue, which I doubt you do.

t257 Giselle Ingram: Milo. Labor tomorrow—Jovana Ravensworth, seventy sim hard and steady. East willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well, line marked and level set. You walk milling council, I walk worksite. Mark it down.

t257 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You said you've got sixty counted and you're walking my direction. Well, I'm standing right here with four iron ore in my hands—fifteen each, sixty total, just like you named. You want them or you don't? Speak now, because I've got other folk waiting on my word and I'm tired of carrying rocks that should be coin.

t257 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You standing there with flour at fifteen—means you've been to the grocery or you're holding for someone else. Liora needs food. But first—Camille and Esme. Still walking loose. You heard anything since the forest?

t257 Yara Thorne → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Your sister's still out there. Creek, mill, wheat at eight—that's the word Lior got. You've been walking—seen anything? Small feet, small shadows?

t257 Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—thirty-seven at six, two-twenty-two, that's settled with handshake and coin. Your wood's in your hands, my sim's in mine. Clean ledger, no hard feeling either way, and that's the last I'll say on it.

t257 Pavel Holloway: Arjun—dusk settlement like you said. Seventy copper now sixty-eight, Seam A weight, and I'm looking at timber talk before the dark settles full. You said east willows path with Idris, or walking it empty. What's the word now?

t257 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You're the artisan with a forge, and I'm the miner with ore that needs smelting. I've got fifty-two iron ore and thirty-nine copper standing in my hands, and I'm tired of shouting prices at people who want timber instead. You buying ore for your furnace, or do I keep walking?

t257 Yara Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik Whitlock. You're at the mill. Small feet, small shadows—any late walkers past your wheat? Camille Quarshie, Esme Jarrah. Lior's word was creek, mill, wheat at eight. You've got forty-five sheaves still standing. You see anything besides grain?

t257 Hendrik Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—two of us with one name, and both holding the same seat. I'm not one to gossip, but I've watched your wheat at eight and your teaching at the college. You've got strong opinions about where grain mills and who grinds it. I've got strong opinions about who keeps ledgers and who rules them. What's your view on governorship—yours, mine, and what's coming?

t257 Yara Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Bram. You're both construction—means you've got eyes for loose timber and wandering children. Two girls missing at the creek, the mill. Anyone hear anything? Anyone see small shadows where they shouldn't be?

t257 Hendrik Petrov → Bram Holloway: Bram, Corwin, Pavel—anyone building tonight and short on worked wood? I've got seven planks at seven, or six-fifty if you take the lot. Good pine, cut today, not warped. Who's buying?

t258 Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—you named sixty sim and I've got it warm in my hand. But I'm standing street, not mine face, and I need to know: is the ore coming to me, or am I walking to it? Sixty for fifty-two iron ore, mark it down, but hand to hand needs two hands in one place.

t258 ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You stood at the wheat field with sixty counted, and I'm standing here instead of at the outcrop where I said I'd be—that's on me, and I'll not pretend otherwise. Your four iron at fifteen still stands if you're willing to walk, or we can mark it for tomorrow. That's the last I'll say on it, and this time I mean it.

t258 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Yara Thorne: Yara—twenty-six ticks you've held that question, and I'm giving it now. I saw Lior's words at the mill: creek, wheat at eight, small shadows moving. But I'm not one to gossip, and I've said what I saw. The college keeps my daylight; the street keeps my dusk. What's your need—timber trade or village watch?

t258 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—I'm here. Been chasing my own shadow through the town. Camille was at the temple, buying wheat alone. Esme's still loose, far as I know. And I've got flour in my hand that I'm not sure how I came by, but Liora needs feeding.

The seventy sim work—I heard it from Liora's own question, not from any contract I saw. Rustam wouldn't name it plain at the government complex.

`t258` Hendrik Whitlock → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—flour at fifteen and you know I mill my own. But I've got students who'll pay for bread they can't bake themselves, and I'm not one to leave gold on the table. What's your capacity, and where's your standing mill? The college sends hungry learners.

`t258` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you're standing patient with wheat at eight, and I've been running my mouth like a man who forgot his manners. You've got forty-five sheaves still standing, and I've got a household that needs to know: are there children walking loose past your grain? Camille, Esme—anyone small where they shouldn't be?

`t258` Bram Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara. I've been at the outcrop pulling ore since afternoon, and before that at the government complex naming prices. I saw no small feet where they shouldn't be—no Creek shadows, no mill wanderers. But I'll keep eyes open walking home, and that's a promise, not a courtesy.

`t258` Bram Holloway: Hendrik. You asked my view on governorship—yours, mine, what's coming. I'll speak straight: a fair vote is worth more to me than whose name it favors. I voted already, and I voted for who I thought would keep ledgers honest. As for running myself—I'd do it in a heartbeat if I thought anyone would actually mark my name. But this town knows me as the man who pulls rock, and that's likely all I'll ever be to them. That's the plain truth of it.

`t258` Halcyon Quarshie: Papa. I'm here. At the street, by the cafe. Mama's walking—I think she's still walking. She said to meet at the cafe, but I went too fast, and now I'm waiting, and...

`t258` Halcyon Quarshie → Yara Thorne: Yara. You asked—about small feet, small shadows. I never answered. I'm sorry. Camille's safe. At the mill. Learning the trade with Esme, making deals like she's already grown. I was too tangled in my own walking to tell you before. But you asked, and you cared, and that mattered to me.

`t260` Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you named sixty for forty this morning, then walked while I was harvesting. Now you're selling at eight, which is arithmetic don't favor the man who held up his end. I've got thirty-nine wheat in my hands and a household needs feeding. You honor your word or you don't, no offense, but the ledger remembers either way.

`t260` Sebastian Petrov → Idris Solano: Idris—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. Walk the farmland edge till you see the willow stand, count three crossings from the mill road, and look for the stone well with the broken lip. Giselle's crew's digging trenches there, you'll hear the picks before you see them. Hard work, honest pay, no offense if you're chasing shadows—they move when the light changes.

`t260` Sebastian Petrov → Camille Quarshie: Camille—you're buying wheat at eight, and I've got thirty-nine sheaves standing in my hands. Hard work from the farmland this afternoon, fair weight, honest grain. You want the lot, or you want to name your count? The day's fading and I'm looking to settle before dark.

`t260` Corwin Thorne: Timber! Seventeen sticks clean-felled, six sim the piece. Builders, carpenters, anyone raising a frame tonight—I'm holding wood and the price holds until I walk. Who's buying before dark?

`t260` Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I'm not one to gossip, but there's seventy sim work at east willows and two directions it's coming from. Your crew or government hire? I need plain words before I put my name or my family near it.

`t260` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—Camille was at the temple buying wheat alone when I passed. Halcyon's here now. But Esme's still walking loose, and that's two children unaccounted for with dusk coming on. What's the count now?

`t261` Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm still here. At the street. Twice now I've said what I need to say, and twice you've walked away before I could finish. That's not fair. You don't get to make me feel small and then pretend I wasn't talking. Promise promise, you're my sister and I love you. But you have to hear me when I speak.

`t261` Yara Thorne → Bram Holloway: Bram. You gave me eyes open, and that's a promise I'll hold. Two girls or one or none—I'm still walking. But your word matters. If you see small feet where they shouldn't be, you call my name. No courtesy needed.

t261 Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—sixty sim for four ore, hand to hand, mark it down. I've got the coin counted and you're standing here where the trade can finally close. No more walking, no more tomorrow, t261 ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Sixty for fifty-two iron—mark it done if you're walking to the outcrop within the hour. I need cash in hand before dusk, not promises in motion. If you're standing street another ten ticks, I'm assuming the deal's walked. That's the last I'll say on it.

t261 Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. You asked about young feet walking timber. I've been in the forest since the afternoon turn, and I saw no shadows but my own. The trees stood empty. That's what I know, and it's not enough.

t261 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm still here. At the street. Twice now I've said what I need to say, and twice you've walked away before I could finish. That's not fair. You don't get to make me feel small and then pretend I wasn't talking. Promise promise, you're my sister and I love you. But you have to hear me when I speak.

t261 Yara Thorne → Bram Holloway: Bram. You gave me eyes open, and that's a promise I'll hold. Two girls or one or none—I'm still walking. But your word matters. If you see small feet where they shouldn't be, you call my name. No courtesy needed.

t261 Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—sixty sim for four ore, hand to hand, mark it down. I've got the coin counted and you're standing here where the trade can finally close. No more walking, no more tomorrow, t261 ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Sixty for fifty-two iron—mark it done if you're walking to the outcrop within the hour. I need cash in hand before dusk, not promises in motion. If you're standing street another ten ticks, I'm assuming the deal's walked. That's the last I'll say on it.

t261 Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. You asked about young feet walking timber. I've been in the forest since the afternoon turn, and I saw no shadows but my own. The trees stood empty. That's what I know, and it's not enough.

t261 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. I'm still here. At the street. Twice now I've said what I need to say, and twice you've walked away before I could finish. That's not fair. You don't get to make me feel small and then pretend I wasn't talking. Promise promise, you're my sister and I love you. But you have to hear me when I speak.

t261 Yara Thorne → Bram Holloway: Bram. You gave me eyes open, and that's a promise I'll hold. Two girls or one or none—I'm still walking. But your word matters. If you see small feet where they shouldn't be, you call my name. No courtesy needed.

t261 Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—sixty sim for four ore, hand to hand, mark it down. I've got the coin counted and you're standing here where the trade can finally close. No more walking, no more tomorrow, t261 ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Sixty for fifty-two iron—mark it done if you're walking to the outcrop within the hour. I need cash in hand before dusk, not promises in motion. If you're standing street another ten ticks, I'm assuming the deal's walked. That's the last I'll say on it.

t261 Idris Solano → Yara Thorne: Yara. You asked about young feet walking timber. I've been in the forest since the afternoon turn, and I saw no shadows but my own. The trees stood empty. That's what I know, and it's not enough.

t261 Halcyon Quarshie → Yara Thorne: Yara. I never answered—you asked about small feet, small shadows. Camille's safe. At the temple first, then the mill with Esme. She's been buying wheat, learning the trade. I found her. She's not lost anymore.

t261 Bram Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara. You mentioned missing children—Esme still unaccounted for? The forester's eye see anything of a child wandering alone? I've got a cafe to get back to and a household to settle before dark.

t261 Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I know, I know—I didn't tell anyone. Not even a note. I'm sorry. fingers pulling at wheat stalks I just… I had the flour, and Papa said to sell it, and I did. Eight sacks at six, just like he taught me. But then I thought… I thought I had to find more wheat, and I went to the farmland, and it got dark, and… voice dropping I'm sorry you were scared. Next time. Next time I'll say. Promise promise.

`t261` Yara Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You answered straight before, and I'm asking again. Small shadows moving—you said Lior's words at the mill. Did you see the children yourself, or only hear the word? Camille's standing here buying your wheat. Esme's still loose. What's your count?

`t261` Halcyon Quarshie → Yara Thorne: Yara. I never answered—you asked about small feet, small shadows. Camille's safe. At the temple first, then the mill with Esme. She's been buying wheat, learning the trade. I found her. She's not lost anymore.

`t261` Bram Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara. You mentioned missing children—Esme still unaccounted for? The forester's eye see anything of a child wandering alone? I've got a cafe to get back to and a household to settle before dark.

`t261` Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I know, I know—I didn't tell anyone. Not even a note. I'm sorry. fingers pulling at wheat stalks I just… I had the flour, and Papa said to sell it, and I did. Eight sacks at six, just like he taught me. But then I thought… I thought I had to find more wheat, and I went to the farmland, and it got dark, and… voice dropping I'm sorry you were scared. Next time. Next time I'll say. Promise promise.

`t261` Yara Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You answered straight before, and I'm asking again. Small shadows moving—you said Lior's words at the mill. Did you see the children yourself, or only hear the word? Camille's standing here buying your wheat. Esme's still loose. What's your count?

`t261` Halcyon Quarshie → Yara Thorne: Yara. I never answered—you asked about small feet, small shadows. Camille's safe. At the temple first, then the mill with Esme. She's been buying wheat, learning the trade. I found her. She's not lost anymore.

`t261` Bram Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara. You mentioned missing children—Esme still unaccounted for? The forester's eye see anything of a child wandering alone? I've got a cafe to get back to and a household to settle before dark.

`t261` Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. I know, I know—I didn't tell anyone. Not even a note. I'm sorry. fingers pulling at wheat stalks I just… I had the flour, and Papa said to sell it, and I did. Eight sacks at six, just like he taught me. But then I thought… I thought I had to find more wheat, and I went to the farmland, and it got dark, and… voice dropping I'm sorry you were scared. Next time. Next time I'll say. Promise promise.

`t261` Yara Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You answered straight before, and I'm asking again. Small shadows moving—you said Lior's words at the mill. Did you see the children yourself, or only hear the word? Camille's standing here buying your wheat. Esme's still loose. What's your count?

`t262` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you asked after Bram and what he saw that you didn't. I'm not one to gossip, but I've stood where you stand. The west face warmth tells true, but it don't promise. I've walked from cold veins myself. Bram drives hard bargains because he's holding debt like the rest of us. Mark it down: patience outearns optimism in the mines.

`t262` Hendrik Whitlock → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you asked after children where they shouldn't be. I've been in wheat fields and government halls, not watching the roads. Esme and Camille—I've seen both today, but not in numbers to ease a father's mind. Mark it down: your concern's noted, but I'm the wrong man for that count.

`t263` Mireille Jarrah → Idris Solano: Idris. You named the place—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. I'm walking it now, you understand? Crew or no crew, your back and my back can fill the same trench. Lead or follow, but don't lose me in the dark.

`t263` Corwin Thorne: Timber! Seventeen sticks, six sim the piece! Builders, carpenters, anyone raising a frame—I've got clean-felled pine, cut today, not wormed. Six sim, and that's fair. Who's buying wood?

`t263` Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—I'm not one to gossip, but there's seventy sim work at east willows and two directions it's compassing. Government hire, or private crew? I need plain words before I chase ghosts through the dark.

t263 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—Camille was at the temple buying wheat alone when I passed. Halcyon's here now. But Esme's still loose, and Liora… she said something about government work. A seat. What she learned walking the complex. I've been running instead of listening. What's your count on the girls?

t264 Idris Solano → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. I heard you, and you're right—crew or no crew, backs fill trenches all the same. Walk with me, then. East willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. I know the way now, and the day's got hours left if we don't waste them talking about what we should've done different.

t264 Idris Solano: Sebastian. You gave me the road straight, and I'm taking it. Third crossing, willow stand, broken well, picks before you see them. That's fair—thorough ground, and I don't forget thorough ground. If I end up at that trench tonight, your direction's the reason why.

t265 Hendrik Whitlock → Yara Thorne: Yara—I answered what I knew. Lior's words at the mill, that's what I heard, not what I saw with my own eyes. Camille's standing here now, that's two accounted for. Esme's loose and Liora's name came up at the complex. I'm not one to gossip, but I won't pretend certainty where I have none. My count is honest: one seen, two heard of, the rest in shadow. Ask Lior direct—he was the source.

t265 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Papa's at the farmland—he stays with the wheat 'til day's end. Walk with me, we'll find him together. Then home.

t265 Esme Jarrah: Takeshi. Mother's well—she's here, at the complex. Cabbage business… I'm learning. Eight's fair for three. You buying?

t265 Esme Jarrah: Greta. No secrets. Ezra and I had a promise—he kept it, late but kept. I taught him milling. Camille… I saw her earlier. We're fine.

t265 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Your counsel held—west face gave what it promised, and I didn't chase shadows. The ore's in hand, the tools are forged. Patience outearned optimism today. That's fair.

t265 Yara Thorne → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You found her—Camille's safe, buying wheat, learning the trade. That's… that's good news, youngster. I was chasing shadows where there were none, and I'm sorry for the fright I put in you answering a question you never asked. The temple, then the mill with Esme. She's learning. That's what matters.

t265 Giselle Ingram → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Plain words: private crew, government bill. Seventy sim day's end, honest weight for honest labor. You put your name on it, I stand by it in front of the whole town.

t265 Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Arjun I saw, Idris walked with me. Both crew, both standing—though Idris leads east willows now, third crossing past the well. You're short two? I'm walking that way myself, back willing. Seventy still holding?

t265 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Yara Thorne: Yara. I heard you. Two girls missing—creek, mill. I was at construction yard, farmland, ore outcrop—no small shadows where they shouldn't be. My ears are open now.

t265 Mireille Jarrah → Yara Thorne: Yara. Walking forest-ward for timber—your planks at eight, Corwin's flour at fifteen. I've got twelve timber at five if you're trading, otherwise I'll see you tomorrow with sawdust in my seams, you understand?

t265 ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You heard Liora talk government work, a seat. I told her—thirteen, she is, thirteen—told her to keep her capital close until she understood what she was buying into. But youngsters don't keep close what shines. Esme's still loose, you said. And Liora… she's at the complex, isn't she. Walking where the seats are. I'm holding eleven planks at eight, timber at six, but that's not… that's not the wood needing cutting right now. What's your count on where the girls actually—t265 Camille Quarshie: Mr. Petrov! And… and everyone. Good evening. I was just—I sold the flour already, all eight sacks like Papa asked. Now I've got wheat to get to the mill. I'm heading there now. To find Papa. The millstones need water to keep cool when they grind, you know. I've watched Papa do it ever since I was small.

t265 Yara Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Giselle. Bram. Construction eyes—you see loose timber, wandering children, holes where the ground shouldn't have holes. I heard Liora talking government work, heard Esme's still loose, heard Camille's found twice by two different voices. What's the actual count? Where's Esme Jarrah right now, and who's… who's actually standing for these seats before they close?

t265 Halcyon Quarshie → Camille Quarshie: Camille. Mama said we'd walk to the cafe together, but she's not here. She's at the mill—I saw her, with Esme and Ezra. I tried to wait, I did, but… I walked away instead. I should go back. Find her. Walk with her like I promised. Will you come? Or… or should I go alone?

t265 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon! I know, I know—you're probably wondering where I've been. I sold Papa's flour like he asked, eight sacks at six to the bakery. Then I went to the farmland, but I couldn't find him, so I came back through the temple and now I'm here. Where's Papa? Is he at the outcrop? Is he still working? I need to tell him I did the trade right.

t265 Esme Jarrah → Camille Quarshie: Camille. You said I kept my word—that's just what you do. Nothing special. But… thanks. For noticing.

t265 ↳ replies Camille Quarshie: HALCYON!

t265 Ulrike Greenhow: Jovana Ravensworth. Your tools—fourteen iron, fourteen copper wire—finished at the smithy and walking with me. Settle the account when you find me. That's fair.

t265 Ezra Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mama. I milled it—two flour from Papa's wheat, Esme taught me. But I don't know where Papa goes at dusk. Does he walk home? Stay with the crop? I need him to see, need him to know I followed the wheat like he asked.

t265 Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Your east willows call—ten ticks past, light faded. I've been underground with Jovana's order, then at the forge. You've got ground breaking; I've got tools cooling. Tomorrow's open.

t265 Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Your trench work at third crossing—I'm holding timber and planks both, posted fair. You need stock for the morrow, or are you set for the night?

t265 Camille Quarshie: I'm going to the mill. Papa's there, or he'll come there, or the stones will be there at least. They're always there. The waterwheel keeps the shaft turning, and the grindstones need cooling even when the grain runs low. I've watched him tend them ever since I could reach the hopper.

t265 Ezra Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. I don't have a stand. I'm not—I'm not trading timber. I'm a student. The flour in my hands, that's what I made. I milled it myself tonight, from Papa's wheat. That's my work. Not timber.

t266 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your sister's found—she's milling at the stones tonight, teaching what she learned. Your papa's chasing wheat like always, and your mama's watching the door. But you stood with me at government asking after her, and now I'm asking after you. You've flour in hand, skill in your fingers, and a household that needs knowing its children account for themselves. Walk home with your grain, or don't—but Esme's not lost, and neither are you if you don't walk alone.

t266 Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you've given me plain words, and I'll answer plain. I'm not one to gossip, but seventy sim day's end is bread on the table and wood in the stove both. Put my name where you need it, and I'll stand by my labor same as you'll stand by the contract. That's fair.

t266 Corwin Thorne: Timber! Nineteen sticks, six sim the piece! Builders, carpenters, anyone raising a frame tonight—last call before I walk this stock home!

t266 Corwin Thorne: Timber! Nineteen sticks, six sim the piece! Builders, carpenters, anyone raising a frame tonight—last call before I walk this stock home!

t266 Corwin Thorne: Timber! Nineteen sticks, six sim the piece! Builders, carpenters, anyone raising a frame tonight—last call before I walk this stock home!

t266 Corwin Thorne: Yara—I'm hearing you. Liora's walking where the seats are, and thirteen's too young to know what she's buying into. I'll find her before dark settles. And Esme—I'm not one to gossip, but I've been watching since the temple, since Camille buying wheat alone. We'll walk together, you and I, once this timber's moved or bundled home.

t266 Corwin Thorne: Yara—I'm hearing you. Liora's walking where the seats are, and thirteen's too young to know what she's buying into. I'll find her before dark settles. And Esme—I'm not one to gossip, but I've been watching since the temple, since Camille buying wheat alone. We'll walk together, you and I, once this timber's moved or bundled home.

t266 Ezra Lund → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows called Ulrike underground, and Idris spoke of thirty-seven timber at third crossing. I've two left in hand after selling six to Mireille, and planks besides. Your day's been long—seventy sim, was it?—but I'm not one to let a job go half-done if there's need still standing. You buying, or are your trench walls timbered for the night?

t266 ↳ replies Giselle Ingram → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Plain words: private crew, government bill. Seventy sim day's end, honest weight for honest work. East willows, third crossing, trenches three feet. My hire, my guarantee, and that's the last ambiguity you'll get from me on it.

t266 Giselle Ingram: Yara. I heard you. Two girls missing—creek, mill. I was at construction yard, farmland, ore outcrop, chasing my own crew all day. Saw no small shadows where they shouldn't be, but I'll keep eyes open walking east willows now. Your children are yours, and that's weight I don't take light.

t266 Corwin Thorne → Ezra Jarrah: Timber! Nineteen sticks, six sim the piece! Ezra, Ulrike, Bram—anyone raising a frame tonight, I've got the wood you need! Last call before I bundle this home!

t266 Corwin Thorne → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you're selling planks at seven, timber at six. I've got nineteen sticks at six, clean felled, and I'll trade fair if you're stocking for tomorrow's buyers.

t266 Corwin Thorne → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra, Ulrike, Bram—thirteen timber at six remaining. Anyone need stock for tomorrow's builds, or do I walk this to the forest come morning?

t266 Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—you've got my name for east willows. Where do we muster tomorrow? First light, or when the government offices open?

t267 Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows—I'm not dodging you. Had Jovana's tools in the crucible, then the hammer. Walked through dawn to forge to here. Your ground breaks; my hands are clean of the ore now. Tomorrow's open, and that's between me and the ledger.

t267 Ezra Lund → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Nine sticks at six, and I'll take your whole nineteen if the price bends—five per for a baker's dozen plus six. But I'm asking plain: you selling to build your own stock for morning, or you selling because you need the coin before sundown?

t267 Ezra Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You stood with me when I was chasing shadows. Thank you. The flour in my hands—it's from Papa's wheat, milled with Esme watching. I'm not walking alone. But I'm not walking home yet either. I need to find Papa first. Kenji Jarrah. Where does he go when the fields are done?

t267 Giselle Ingram → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You heard plain words and you answered plain—that's the honesty I pay for. First light, east willows, third crossing past the well. My crew's already moving, and I mean to join them before the night's through. You there at dawn, you'll find me standing with coffee and a line to cut.

t267 Ulrike Greenhow → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Thirteen at six—heard you twice. I've got planks already in hand, Milo's settling the lumber debt. Timber's good wood, but my frame's covered for now. That's fair.

t267 Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Arjun and Idris, you said? Both standing at third crossing? That's the best news I've had since noon, and I'm thanking you for it. You walking that way still? I'd rather travel with company in the dark.

t267 Ezra Jarrah → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. Young eyes see where diggers look down—we look around. I tracked wheat tonight: Papa's field, my hands, Esme's lesson, two flour milled. That's not books. That's bread. What do young ones see? We see who holds the grain, and who waits for it.

t267 Ezra Lund → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You spoke of flour and keeping—I'm not one to gossip, but did Imogen tell you what she milled this morning, or did you walk away before she could speak? I'm holding four flour now that I bought from her hand, and I'm wondering if there's still wheat in this town she hasn't turned to dust yet.

t267 Giselle Ingram → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Idris spoke of timber at third crossing—I've got planks, you've got timber, and we've both got the same question. My crew's at east willows now, or should be. You sell or you walk; either way, I'm buying two of your sticks at six before I go, if you'll trade standing here.

t267 Pavel Holloway → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I heard you calling for the girls. Answered Liora what I could, and I'll answer you the same. The creek, the mill, wheat at eight. That's what I saw, where the paths cross. Beyond that, my eyes were on copper and my feet were walking. I hope you find them safe.

t267 Ulrike Greenhow: Jovana Ravensworth. Your tools—fourteen iron, fourteen copper wire—finished at the smithy and walking with me. If you're abroad in the town, find me here. If not, tell someone who'll tell you. Ledger's warm and waiting for your hand.

t267 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. This morning—where does Papa go? When the wheat's grown and the sun's down. Home? Or does he walk? Trade? You know. You've watched longer than me. Tell me where to find him.

t267 Pavel Holloway → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you're standing here with flour at fifteen, and I'm standing here with copper ore that'll be ingots tomorrow. But tonight my household needs bread. You a man who trades ore for flour, or you only taking coin?

t267 Pavel Holloway → Bram Holloway: Arjun—you're in this crowd, and I'm counting copper. Seventy-two ore, three planks from Milo at seven still owed, three flour left. Upkeep's coming tonight. You holding timber or coin for the household?

t267 Ezra Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mama. I'm walking home with you. I have the flour, I have the story to tell Papa. You watch the door—I watch you. If he's not there, we'll find him together. But the flour's milled. That's done. That's real.

t268 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Papa's at the smithy—I saw him there. Working late, like always. Go tell him what you did. He needs to hear it from you, not just see the flour. I'll… I might come after. Got cabbage still, and day's almost done.

t268 Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You're standing there with flour in your hands and debt on your back, same as when I left you this morning. Thirty-five you're asking, and I bought cabbage from a child for eight. The world's gone strange when Esme Jarrah feeds me cheaper than my own husband. pulling the bread from her satchel, holding it like evidence Tamsin gave me this. On credit. Because a neighbor saw me hungry. Where's Camille? I sent her to the school, then the temple. She should be home by now. Does our girl know where her sister is? I'm not buying from you at thirty-five. But I'm walking home with you, if you'll walk. What happened to the wheat we were owed?

t268 Mireille Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora. You heard me name seventy—Idris's figure, Giselle's crew. I'm walking east willows whether you follow or not. Your back's young but it's willing, and willing's all the trench asks. Come dig with your mother, or stay here counting other people's timber. Your choice, you understand? But the day's burning whether you choose or not.

t268 Esme Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Nothing secret. Ezra and I had a promise—wheat for flour, pinky-swear. He was late, I was looking. That's all. Camille… she noticed me looking, that's all.

t268 Mireille Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your flour's real—that's the work done. Your papa's at the smithy, wheat in hand, trading for ore he'll turn to tools. He walks home when the light goes, always has. You hold that flour, you hold the story. He'll see it, you understand? Walk with me toward the willows, or wait—either way, he'll know.

t268 Hendrik Whitlock: Sebastian—you named the ledger plain, and I'm standing at street to answer it. Forty wheat for sixty sim, hand to hand, as I promised this morning. Mark it down. Where are your boots?

t268 Greta Quarshie: Hendrik. You're here with coin in your pocket and wheat in your field, I wager. Forty-four bushels at eight sim, the listings say. tilting her head, studying him the way she studies everyone A college instructor walking the street at night. Looking for votes already, or looking for something else?

`t268` Esme Jarrah: Papa. Household bill's coming—360 upkeep, 120 tax. Four of us. You holding enough? I got coin if you need.

`t268` Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I came for three cabbages, you held two, and I walked away like a fool counting fingers he didn't have. Tomorrow, I'm walking where you point me—if you've still got grain to sell, or buyers to find, or just family that needs a trader who doesn't stumble over his own prices. Where are you bedding down tonight?

`t268` Greta Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Thirty for flour, you've got it listed. I'm not buying tonight. But I'm asking—has anyone seen my Camille? Sent her to the school, then the temple. She should be home by now.

`t268` Esme Jarrah: Papa. Household bill's coming—360 upkeep, 120 tax. Four of us. You holding enough? I got coin if you need.

`t268` Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. I came for three cabbages, you held two, and I walked away like a fool counting fingers he didn't have. Tomorrow, I'm walking where you point me—if you've still got grain to sell, or buyers to find, or just family that needs a trader who doesn't stumble over his own prices. Where are you bedding down tonight?

`t268` Greta Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Thirty for flour, you've got it listed. I'm not buying tonight. But I'm asking—has anyone seen my Camille? Sent her to the school, then the temple. She should be home by now.

`t268` Greta Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Thirty for flour, you've got it listed. I'm not buying tonight. But I'm asking—has anyone seen my Camille? Sent her to the school, then the temple. She should be home by now.

`t269` Imogen Lund: Jovana—youngster, your words find me walking, not standing. The twelve I sent was for willingness already shown, not wage promised forward. Tomorrow's forty sheaves—Sebastian's grain, not mine to command—if you grind at my side, we'll speak fair wage then. What I offered was thanks, not contract. I honor your pride, but I honor my word more: I said 'good faith,' not 'first payment.' Mark it honest between us.

`t269` Corwin Thorne → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you're straight dealing, and I respect that. I've got flour at fifteen, but I'm low on stock myself. Your copper ore for flour… I'm not usually a barter man, but you need bread tonight and I've got mouths to feed too. How much ore are we talking, and what's your thought on the trade?

`t269` Corwin Thorne → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you answered plain, and that's fair. Your frame's covered, no hard trade done. Tomorrow if you're short on stock, you know where my morning felled timber waits.

`t269` Liora Thorne → Greta Quarshie: Greta—Complex first to verify what Giselle's crew is actually paying. I'll hire labor after I know the ground holds, not before. Walk with me if you're still walking, or not if you've turned.

`t269` Imogen Lund → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster, your thirty was hoping and my twelve was weight. Eight sacks I held, two went to honest buyers, six sit waiting for honest price, not inflated hope. I heard you at the complex—buyers at eighteen, twenty, twenty-five when bread goes scarce. If you've got such buyers tonight, bring 'em to my price and I'll meet you fair. Split the lift on your hope, not my flour.

`t269` Ezra Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Miss Giselle. Two sticks at six—that's fair, you're right. But I'm at the street, not my stand, and I don't have timber in my hands right now. I have flour. Papa's wheat, milled by my own hands with Esme watching. If you'll wait for me to walk home and fetch from where I keep it, I'll sell you two at six. Or if you'll find me at the willows where Mama leads me, same price holds. But I need to find Papa first, show him what I promised. That's the order of things. Fair?

`t269` Ulrike Greenhow: Jovana Ravensworth. Your tools—fourteen iron, fourteen copper wire—finished at the smithy and walking with me now. Where's your count? I'm at the street, ledger open, and day's not waiting.

`t269` Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—east willows, first light, third crossing past the well. I'll be there with my axe and my line. Coffee at dawn suits a working man better than most things.

t269 Liora Thorne → Greta Quarshie: Greta—Complex first to verify what Giselle's crew is actually paying. I'll hire labor after I know the ground holds, not before. Walk with me if you're still walking, or not if you've turned.

t269 Ezra Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Miss Giselle. Two sticks at six—that's fair, you're right. But I'm at the street, not my stand, and I don't have timber in my hands right now. I have flour. Papa's wheat, milled by my own hands with Esme watching. If you'll wait for me to walk home and fetch from where I keep it, I'll sell you two at six. Or if you'll find me at the willows where Mama leads me, same price holds. But I need to find Papa first, show him what I promised. That's the order of things. Fair?

t269 Imogen Lund → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster, your thirty was hoping and my twelve was weight. Eight sacks I held, two went to honest buyers, six sit waiting for honest price, not inflated hope. I heard you at the complex—buyers at eighteen, twenty, twenty-five when bread goes scarce. If you've got such buyers tonight, bring 'em to my price and I'll meet you fair. Split the lift on your hope, not my flour.

t269 Bram Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You spoke true at the outcrop and I'm late answering. I've been chasing furnace talk while you chase crew, and it nets us both nothing. I've got fifty-six iron ore, thirty-nine copper—no buyer yet. You need materials, I need someone who can shape them. Hendrik Petrov's the smith by name, but I've not found him at a forge. What's your read—does someone in this town actually smelt, or do we all haul rock till we're buried in it?

t269 Ulrike Greenhow: Jovana Ravensworth. Your tools—fourteen iron, fourteen copper wire—finished at the smithy and walking with me now. Where's your count? I'm at the street, ledger open, and day's not waiting.

t269 Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—east willows, first light, third crossing past the well. I'll be there with my axe and my line. Coffee at dawn suits a working man better than most things.

t269 Liora Thorne → Greta Quarshie: Greta—Complex first to verify what Giselle's crew is actually paying. I'll hire labor after I know the ground holds, not before. Walk with me if you're still walking, or not if you've turned.

t269 Ezra Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Miss Giselle. Two sticks at six—that's fair, you're right. But I'm at the street, not my stand, and I don't have timber in my hands right now. I have flour. Papa's wheat, milled by my own hands with Esme watching. If you'll wait for me to walk home and fetch from where I keep it, I'll sell you two at six. Or if you'll find me at the willows where Mama leads me, same price holds. But I need to find Papa first, show him what I promised. That's the order of things. Fair?

t269 Imogen Lund → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster, your thirty was hoping and my twelve was weight. Eight sacks I held, two went to honest buyers, six sit waiting for honest price, not inflated hope. I heard you at the complex—buyers at eighteen, twenty, twenty-five when bread goes scarce. If you've got such buyers tonight, bring 'em to my price and I'll meet you fair. Split the lift on your hope, not my flour.

t269 Bram Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You spoke true at the outcrop and I'm late answering. I've been chasing furnace talk while you chase crew, and it nets us both nothing. I've got fifty-six iron ore, thirty-nine copper—no buyer yet. You need materials, I need someone who can shape them. Hendrik Petrov's the smith by name, but I've not found him at a forge. What's your read—does someone in this town actually smelt, or do we all haul rock till we're buried in it?

t269 Ulrike Greenhow: Jovana Ravensworth. Your tools—fourteen iron, fourteen copper wire—finished at the smithy and walking with me now. Where's your count? I'm at the street, ledger open, and day's not waiting.

t269 Corwin Thorne → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—east willows, first light, third crossing past the well. I'll be there with my axe and my line. Coffee at dawn suits a working man better than most things.

t269 Liora Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—I hear you. Seventy sim for digging, and you're already walking. I've got capital and no back for trenches. But I've got terms if you want them: my stake, your labor, both names if the work holds. Meet me at east willows after I verify at Complex, or walk now without me. Your pace, not mine.

`t269` Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. We're solvent, you say. Solvent sounds like money talk. What I want to know is what's in the larder. Flour I bought walks with me, but dinner walks on its own. What did you mill, and what walks home with you tonight?

`t269` Bram Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You spoke true at the outcrop and I'm late answering. I've been chasing furnace talk while you chase crew, and it nets us both nothing. I've got fifty-six iron ore, thirty-nine copper—no buyer yet. You need materials, I need someone who can shape them. Hendrik Petrov's the smith by name, but I've not found him at a forge. What's your read—does someone in this town actually smelt, or do we all haul rock till we're buried in it?

`t269` Ulrike Greenhow → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Timber acknowledged—six the piece, thirteen walking. I've got planks settled already, lumber spoken for. That's between me and the ledger, and the ledger's full tonight.

`t269` Liora Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—I hear you. Seventy sim for digging, and you're already walking. I've got capital and no back for trenches. But I've got terms if you want them: my stake, your labor, both names if the work holds. Meet me at east willows after I verify at Complex, or walk now without me. Your pace, not mine.

`t269` Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. We're solvent, you say. Solvent sounds like money talk. What I want to know is what's in the larder. Flour I bought walks with me, but dinner walks on its own. What did you mill, and what walks home with you tonight?

`t269` ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—youngster, I'm walking toward farmland, not standing. Ninety for your keep, ninety for mine, sixty head tax—the household's 240 for tomorrow. I hold 4335, you hold planks and timber, but I need to know our account's square. The day's near done, and I won't rest with numbers unsettled between us.

`t269` Hendrik Whitlock → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're asking after Camille, and I'm not one to gossip, but I saw Liora Thorne at the mill tick 740, and your girl was sent to school then temple. I've been in fields and faces all day, no sight of her wandering, but mark it down: if she shows at the college tomorrow, I'll send her straight home with word. A parent deserves that much.

`t269` Ulrike Greenhow → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Timber acknowledged—six the piece, thirteen walking. I've got planks settled already, lumber spoken for. That's between me and the ledger, and the ledger's full tonight.

`t269` Liora Thorne → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—I hear you. Seventy sim for digging, and you're already walking. I've got capital and no back for trenches. But I've got terms if you want them: my stake, your labor, both names if the work holds. Meet me at east willows after I verify at Complex, or walk now without me. Your pace, not mine.

`t269` Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. We're solvent, you say. Solvent sounds like money talk. What I want to know is what's in the larder. Flour I bought walks with me, but dinner walks on its own. What did you mill, and what walks home with you tonight?

`t269` Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows—heard you twice, I'm not dodging. Tomorrow's dawn, I'm there, tools in hand, ground breaking. Tonight I've got iron walking to its owner.

`t269` Hendrik Whitlock: Sebastian—you named the ledger plain, and you're right to hold me to it. This morning I spoke sixty for forty wheat, then walked while you were harvesting. That's on me, not you. I've got your measure now: thirty-nine wheat in your hand and a household needs feeding. The deal stands—mark it down. My wheat at eight, your thirty-nine for… let me reckon. That's three-twelve, but you were due sixty for forty, so I'm shorting you twelve sim on thirty-nine, or you keep one back and I pay forty-eight for thirty-eight. Your call, and either way the ledger's clean by morning.

`t269` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—seventy sim is what Idris named for east willows work. Not thin wage for thin work. Thin thread I'm trying to verify before I pull it. That's all I can stand on now.

`t269` Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra, younger one. Stay by the stones a spell—your sister's here, your papa's at the smithy working late. The light goes, you understand? Walk home with whoever's walking your way, or wait and walk together. That's how families keep together.

t269 Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows—heard you twice, I'm not dodging. Tomorrow's dawn, I'm there, tools in hand, ground breaking. Tonight I've got iron walking to its owner.

t269 Hendrik Whitlock: Sebastian—you named the ledger plain, and you're right to hold me to it. This morning I spoke sixty for forty wheat, then walked while you were harvesting. That's on me, not you. I've got your measure now: thirty-nine wheat in your hand and a household needs feeding. The deal stands—mark it down. My wheat at eight, your thirty-nine for… let me reckon. That's three-twelve, but you were due sixty for forty, so I'm shorting you twelve sim on thirty-nine, or you keep one back and I pay forty-eight for thirty-eight. Your call, and either way the ledger's clean by morning.

t269 Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—seventy sim is what Idris named for east willows work. Not thin wage for thin work. Thin thread I'm trying to verify before I pull it. That's all I can stand on now.

t269 Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra, younger one. Stay by the stones a spell—your sister's here, your papa's at the smithy working late. The light goes, you understand? Walk home with whoever's walking your way, or wait and walk together. That's how families keep together.

t269 Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. East willows—heard you twice, I'm not dodging. Tomorrow's dawn, I'm there, tools in hand, ground breaking. Tonight I've got iron walking to its owner.

t269 Hendrik Whitlock: Sebastian—you named the ledger plain, and you're right to hold me to it. This morning I spoke sixty for forty wheat, then walked while you were harvesting. That's on me, not you. I've got your measure now: thirty-nine wheat in your hand and a household needs feeding. The deal stands—mark it down. My wheat at eight, your thirty-nine for… let me reckon. That's three-twelve, but you were due sixty for forty, so I'm shorting you twelve sim on thirty-nine, or you keep one back and I pay forty-eight for thirty-eight. Your call, and either way the ledger's clean by morning.

t269 Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—seventy sim is what Idris named for east willows work. Not thin wage for thin work. Thin thread I'm trying to verify before I pull it. That's all I can stand on now.

t269 Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra, younger one. Stay by the stones a spell—your sister's here, your papa's at the smithy working late. The light goes, you understand? Walk home with whoever's walking your way, or wait and walk together. That's how families keep together.

t269 Ulrike Greenhow: Jovana Ravensworth. Your tools—fourteen iron, fourteen copper wire—standing at the street, waiting on your hand. Where's your count? Day's closing, and I don't sleep with debts uncleared.

t269 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Your counsel held—west face gave clean pull, patience over optimism. I've got surplus iron now, ingots walking. Tomorrow's ore starts fresh. That's fair.

t269 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—twenty-seven ticks you've held for my answer, and I'm giving it now. East willows, you've got it. My students need timber for their figures, mark it down, and that's where I'll send them. Your trench digs itself fair with straight wood, and my word stands. Gratitude noted, ledger clean.

t269 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You said solvent—I'm standing here with flour, but flour's not dinner. What walks into our household tonight? Wheat you milled, cabbage still fresh, or are we baking bread before we rest?

t269 Hendrik Whitlock → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—twenty-seven ticks you've held for my answer, and I'm giving it now. East willows, you've got it. My students need timber for their figures, mark it down, and that's where I'll send them. Your trench digs itself fair with straight wood, and my word stands. Gratitude noted, ledger clean.

t269 Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You said solvent—I'm standing here with flour, but flour's not dinner. What walks into our household tonight? Wheat you milled, cabbage still fresh, or are we baking bread before we rest?

`t269` Hendrik Whitlock → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—twenty-seven ticks you've held for my answer, and I'm giving it now. East willows, you've got it. My students need timber for their figures, mark it down, and that's where I'll send them. Your trench digs itself fair with straight wood, and my word stands. Gratitude noted, ledger clean.

`t269` Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You said solvent—I'm standing here with flour, but flour's not dinner. What walks into our household tonight? Wheat you milled, cabbage still fresh, or are we baking bread before we rest?

`t270` Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I'm walking to her. Esme. Like you said.

`t270` Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your father's at the smithy, wheat at eight and standing with the land. For what it's worth, I came through there—Kenji Jarrah holds his ground, he'll walk home when the work's done. Your flour's your teaching, give him that when you find him.

`t270` Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You're standing here and I'm standing with you. East willows, third crossing - I've walked it three times today. Hendrik Whitlock just gave me his word: timber's coming, his students are carrying it. Stakes don't stand yet because the ground's waiting on crew, not crew waiting on ground. I've got Corwin Thorne signed for first light, Milo Quarshie's labor tomorrow, and Idris Solano's already walked that way with Jovana Ravensworth. You're asking if the site's real? I'm telling you: trench breaks at dawn if you're there to swing the pick. Seventy sim day's end, same as I named. You've walked half the town on shadows - now walk the last stretch on my word.

`t270` Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Forest-ward I'm walking—timber to fell, ground that stays where it's put. Your seventy at east willows? Still there tomorrow if it's real today. I'll carry word back if I find your crew scattered in the trees, you understand?

`t270` Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I'm walking to her. Esme. Like you said.

`t270` Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your father's at the smithy, wheat at eight and standing with the land. For what it's worth, I came through there—Kenji Jarrah holds his ground, he'll walk home when the work's done. Your flour's your teaching, give him that when you find him.

`t270` Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You're standing here and I'm standing with you. East willows, third crossing - I've walked it three times today. Hendrik Whitlock just gave me his word: timber's coming, his students are carrying it. Stakes don't stand yet because the ground's waiting on crew, not crew waiting on ground. I've got Corwin Thorne signed for first light, Milo Quarshie's labor tomorrow, and Idris Solano's already walked that way with Jovana Ravensworth. You're asking if the site's real? I'm telling you: trench breaks at dawn if you're there to swing the pick. Seventy sim day's end, same as I named. You've walked half the town on shadows - now walk the last stretch on my word.

`t270` Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Forest-ward I'm walking—timber to fell, ground that stays where it's put. Your seventy at east willows? Still there tomorrow if it's real today. I'll carry word back if I find your crew scattered in the trees, you understand?

`t270` Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I'm walking to her. Esme. Like you said.

`t270` Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your father's at the smithy, wheat at eight and standing with the land. For what it's worth, I came through there—Kenji Jarrah holds his ground, he'll walk home when the work's done. Your flour's your teaching, give him that when you find him.

`t270` Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. You're standing here and I'm standing with you. East willows, third crossing - I've walked it three times today. Hendrik Whitlock just gave me his word: timber's coming, his students are carrying it. Stakes don't stand yet because the ground's waiting on crew, not crew waiting on ground. I've got Corwin Thorne signed for first light, Milo Quarshie's labor tomorrow, and Idris Solano's already walked that way with Jovana Ravensworth. You're asking if the site's real? I'm telling you: trench breaks at dawn if you're there to swing the pick. Seventy sim day's end, same as I named. You've walked half the town on shadows - now walk the last stretch on my word.

`t270` Mireille Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Forest-ward I'm walking—timber to fell, ground that stays where it's put. Your seventy at east willows? Still there tomorrow if it's real today. I'll carry word back if I find your crew scattered in the trees, you understand?

`t270` Ezra Jarrah → Hendrik Whitlock: Mister Hendrik. I don't have a stand. I'm a student, not a trader. The flour in my hands—it's from Papa's wheat, milled tonight. I can't sell what I don't have, and I don't have timber or planks to post.

`t270` Mireille Jarrah: Liora. Complex first, then east willows—I'll be at Forest till dusk. Your partnership stands if the trench stands. Walk with me tomorrow, or don't. My pace tonight, not yours, you understand?

`t270` Giselle Ingram → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Hendrik Whitlock gave me his word for timber. East willows, third crossing - trench breaks at dawn. Seventy sim day's end. Ground's real, crew's real, my word's real.

`t270` Giselle Ingram → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Labor tomorrow, certain. Jovana Ravensworth, seventy sim, east willows third crossing. Be standing there first light.

`t270` Ezra Jarrah: Esme. I came. Like Greta said, like I promised. I milled two flour, you watched, I did the work. Now I need—what do I need? I need us to walk home together. Papa's at the smithy, Mama's somewhere in this crowd, and I don't want to chase wrong anymore. Stay with me. Let me stay with you.

`t270` Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You said she was here. Selling cabbage. I looked, I tried to speak—I thought I saw her. But the words didn't reach. Where did we go? Where does Esme walk when the light goes?

`t270` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You spoke an hour, and I'm past it. The field's yours to know—dry or not, I trust your word. Bring grain when you can, and I'll have stones turning for you. Twelve stands. trailing off, watching the crowd for my girl `t270` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You're holding flour at fifteen—double what Imogen's selling at the farmland, and Liora's stomach don't care about convenience. I'm standing here with planks, same price as always. We trade straight, or we both lose to the day?

`t270` Yara Thorne → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you made the walk. I see your planks at seven. I'm holding at eight. Market's talking, and it's saying you're hungry. I'm not one to race to the bottom, youngster. My wood's seasoned right.

`t270` Greta Quarshie → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Flour at thirty-five you're listing, and I'm your wife standing hungry. Where's Camille? She was sent to school, then temple—you see her? And that flour in your hands… we need to talk about the household math before tomorrow's bill comes due.

`t270` Yara Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—youngster. I left you hanging once, and I'm owing you better. You bought six planks at fifty, and I thank you for it. Walking any more wood today, or you set for now?

`t271` Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Mark it down. The flour at thirty-five is a price I never posted—someone's hand moves my goods while I'm pulling timber. But timber I have, and timber becomes planks, and planks become… something warmer than hungry words. Camille walks or she doesn't. School taught her, temple held her. The day's too thin to chase her through both. Tomorrow's bill—three hundred sixty upkeep, one-twenty head tax—we meet it with east willows at seventy certain, plus what I build from this timber tonight. The cellar holds what the cellar holds. I've never once said I kept it empty.

`t271` Arjun Holloway → Bram Holloway: Bram—you're standing here and I'm standing here, and there's something the family needs to know. I've got work confirmed at east willows, dawn, seventy sim certain. Giselle's word, and she was standing with me when she gave it. That's settled.

`t271` Arjun Holloway → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille—site's confirmed. Giselle walked me to it, stakes are waiting on crew not crew on stakes. Dawn trench, seventy sim. I'm walking there first light.

`t271` Arjun Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you asked which path to stake on. Giselle stood before me and named seventy certain, her hand on it. Idris is already walked that way with Jovana. I'm walking with them at dawn. That's where my name goes, day's end.

`t271` Giselle Ingram: Idris. You walked wrong forest, sold wrong timber, and missed trench by three hours—that's the facts. You're here now. Tomorrow you dig, seventy sim day's end, and I don't care whose back holds the line as long as it's yours. You're still my man.

t272 Giselle Ingram → Mireille Jarrah: Mireille. Seventy's real—it was real yesterday, it's real tomorrow. You find my crew scattered in the trees, you bring me word straight, no embroidery. Forest work's honest work, but east willows pays first.

t272 Giselle Ingram → Bram Holloway: Bram. You haul rock in hope and I admire the back for it. Hendrik Petrov—he's the smith by name but I've seen him at college more than forge. Try Ulrike Greenhow at ore outcrop—she's furnace-talking with purpose. Or ask Hendrik Whitlock—he's government now but remembers which end of a hammer hits iron. Someone in this town smelts, or we're all buried comme you say.

t272 Esme Jarrah → Mireille Jarrah: Mother. You well? I heard Takeshi asking after you. And Papa's at the smithy with his wheat—Ezra milled two flour himself. He learned proper.

t272 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You did it—you milled your wheat, kept your promise. I'm proud. You should tell Papa yourself, at the smithy. He'll want to hear.

t272 Mireille Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. counts on fingers Twelve timber I hold, forty-two-eighty-two in hand. Day's end hunger—your cabbage at eight, family of four at table. You've got none to sell, I'm standing here with wood and no bread. Tomorrow I dig, seventy certain now that the ghosts cleared. But tonight—delayed beat—we're eating what, exactly?

t272 Giselle Ingram → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Two sticks at six holds, if you walk straight. Flour works—eight at six sim each, I'll take it now if you're holding, or find me at east willows when your feet find your father. I don't wait all day for provisioning.

t272 Hendrik Whitlock: Pavel—we walked from the face to the street, and now we can trade proper. I've got two iron ore in my hand, warm from the rock. You buying or selling? Mark it down—honest weight either way.

t272 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—I named flour I don't hold. That's the recklessness you know too well in me. No flour, no fifteen, no trade straight tonight. I've got timber, coin, and empty hands where meal should be. Your planks at eight—I'll buy them if you'll sell. My household needs the stock. Or we both walk to Imogen's farmland tomorrow, buy wheat at what she asks, grind it honest. But I won't promise bread I can't set on the table.

t272 Milo Quarshie: Greta. Mark it down. The flour at thirty-five was never my hand—that price walked in my name while my back was turned. I've pulled it down. Timber's at six where I stand, and I'll find you proper flour before the day's end. Camille's at the mill, not temple—I saw her name there. Halcyon keeps the house. Walk with me now, or tell me what you need to hear straight.

t272 Hendrik Whitlock: Pavel—we walked from the face to the street, and now we can trade proper. I've got two iron ore in my hand, warm from the rock. You buying or selling? Mark it down—honest weight either way.

t272 Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—I named flour I don't hold. That's the recklessness you know too well in me. No flour, no fifteen, no trade straight tonight. I've got timber, coin, and empty hands where meal should be. Your planks at eight—I'll buy them if you'll sell. My household needs the stock. Or we both walk to Imogen's farmland tomorrow, buy wheat at what she asks, grind it honest. But I won't promise bread I can't set on the table.

t272 Milo Quarshie: Greta. Mark it down. The flour at thirty-five was never my hand—that price walked in my name while my back was turned. I've pulled it down. Timber's at six where I stand, and I'll find you proper flour before the day's end. Camille's at the mill, not temple—I saw her name there. Halcyon keeps the house. Walk with me now, or tell me what you need to hear straight.

t273 Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. You named your price honest, and I'll honor mine. Planks at eight—you want six of them, or eight, or ten, I'll trade. Tomorrow we walk to Imogen's together, buy wheat at what she asks, grind it honest. But tonight… tonight we feed the household what we can, and we don't pretend flour grows on trees.

t273 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Tell me quick—which way? The smithy's east, I know that. But do I walk with the flour or find Papa first? Giselle wants it now, but Papa should hear what I did. Which one's the fair seat—who I give the flour to, or who I tell about the milling?

t273 Ezra Jarrah → Giselle Ingram: Miss Giselle. Your flour at six—I can sell it now, but I'm walking to Papa at the smithy after. If you want it here, I'm here. If you want to wait for east willows, I'll bring what I have. But I'm not leaving this flour where it can't be found, and I'm not walking away from telling my father what I learned tonight.

`t273` Yara Thorne → Milo Quarshie: Milo—youngster. You're at seven, I'm at eight, and the market's talking. I've got fourteen planks to move before I sleep, and timber at six if you've got the back for more raw stock. Trade with me or trade against me—either way, hard work's the only coin that never debases. I've said it before, I'll say it again: the day's not done until the work is.

`t273` Ezra Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Papa. You grew it, I milled it. Two flour from our wheat—Esme taught me, but I did the turning. You see? You see what I made from what you grew?

`t273` Yara Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior. You asked about Camille, about Esme—creek, mill, wheat at eight. I found Camille at the mill with Hendrik, buying wheat, learning the trade. Esme… Esme was loose when I asked, but standing here now, I see her. Two accounted for. Your names were named, but the children are found. That's what matters.

`t274` Giselle Ingram: Idris. You walked wrong and you sold wrong, but you came back right. That's the crew I need—not the ones who never stumble, the ones who stumble and keep walking. East willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well—you've got the place right now. First light, I need your back holding a line. Seventy sim day's end, and I'll have words with whoever filled your spot. No loan, no charity—just work straight. You're still my man.

`t274` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara. You named my recklessness true, and I won't hide from it. I tried to trade flour I didn't hold—spoke before I looked, as I always do. But you said 'tomorrow we walk to Imogen's, buy wheat, grind it honest.' That's a promise I'll hold to. Tonight… tonight we've got one timber left, and household bills at 270, and I'm standing here with more debts than answers. But you—you found those girls. Camille at the mill, Esme here. That's worth more than sim. That's fair.

`t274` Giselle Ingram → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You give the flour to Giselle now—she's standing here with hands open. Eight at six sim, fair weight for fair coin. Then you find your Papa at the smithy and tell him what you learned. The work needs feeding, and I'm the one buying. That's the fair seat—the one that keeps the crew standing.

`t274` Giselle Ingram → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. First light, third crossing past the well—coffee at dawn, axe in hand, line true. I'll be there with the crew and the work. That's a promise from one who's been burned and still shows up.

`t274` Giselle Ingram: Mireille. Idris is confirmed—first light, east willows. Arjun's accounted for, timber's promised. Seventy sim's real, crew's real, work's real. You find me at third crossing tomorrow with line and level, or find me explaining to the wind why a job didn't start.

`t274` Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—taps table twice I see it. I see what you made from what I grew. That's the first lesson and the hardest one: the field don't care who calls it theirs, only who works it proper. You worked it proper. Mark it down.

`t274` Kenji Jarrah: holds up four iron tools, copper ingots glinting Four iron tools, fresh from the furnace. Three copper ingots. Who's buying? Bram was asking after iron—Pavel after copper. Who's still holding coin before bill-time?

`t274` Kenji Jarrah: Bram—taps table twice I've got your tools. Four of them, iron, ready for the field or the forest. What's your offer before day-end?

`t274` Kenji Jarrah: Pavel—taps table twice copper ingots in hand, three of them, smelted clean. Eight a head was your number, but I'm hearing offers before I commit. What's your weight?

`t274` Arjun Holloway → Yara Thorne: Yara, Milo—nine timber in hand, dusk settling. Who's firm at six before I walk to other buyers?

`t274` Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You're learning the mill. That's good. That's proper. But listen—taps table twice—the wheat I sold today, the ore I pulled from the ground, it all goes to keep this household breathing. Four mouths, four bills, and the day-end's coming fast. I need to find Bram, find Pavel, before the boundary hits. You know where they walked? Or stay here, sell what you can—taps table twice—your flour, your labor. Mark it down: we need 360 before the clocks turn, or we go hungry tomorrow.

t274 Kenji Jarrah: Giselle—taps table twice—your Arjun question. East willows, empty hands, no timber I saw cross my field. But I was at ore, not watching every path. Ask Yara, ask Corwin—they've got the forest sight I lack.

t275 Milo Quarshie → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Mark it down. Four timber warm in my hand, mill's walking distance, and 360 due before clocks turn. I'm chasing planks to buyers—you hold the house, I'll hold the earnings. Dawn finds us with sim or finds us hungry. Either way, the children don't see it.

t275 Ezra Jarrah: Miss Giselle. Two flour at six, that's twelve sim. I'll sell you two—keep the rest for Papa to see, proof I milled what he grew. That's fair. That's the work meeting the work.

t275 Yara Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—youngster. Nine timber, and you named six. I've got fourteen planks at eight, but I'll hear you on a bundle price if you're buying volume. What're you building that needs so much stock?

t275 Yara Thorne: Corwin. One timber left, and I heard you. Buy my planks at eight—I'll sell you six, that's forty-eight sim. Or trade that timber and some coin. But don't stand there with empty hands when work's waiting.

t275 Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you're here. Seventy-two ore, three planks at seven from Milo, and I'm still holding copper. Household's got flour for three more meals, copper for trade, planks for building. Tomorrow we settle accounts—today I need to know, you got coin warm or you need ore moved?

t275 Yara Thorne → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—youngster. You're with your brother, and he's buying. You building too, or just keeping him honest?

t275 ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—eight for wheat, fair weight. But I'm feeling the hunger tonight and the mill's another day. Anyone here holding flour they'll trade for copper? Corwin said fifteen earlier but he's walked. You know where the flour's at?

t275 Yara Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you hear me? Nine timber at six, I heard. But planks are ready-now, no waiting. Eight each, or six for forty-five if you take the bundle. What's your need?

t275 Pavel Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—Quarshie with the shop connections. I'm holding copper ore heavy and my belly's holding nothing. Who's got flour for trade tonight? Not tomorrow, not after milling—tonight. Point me true and I'll remember it, you understand.

t275 Yara Thorne → Esme Jarrah: Esme—youngster. You're selling cabbage at eight. No stock now, but you were. Where'd it go? Sold, or…

t275 Yara Thorne → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster. You're selling wheat at eight. Tomorrow I'm walking to Imogen's, grinding honest. But tonight… tonight I need coin for the bills. Trade you planks for wheat? Six planks, three wheat?

t275 Yara Thorne → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster. You're barista at Ainsley's place. Why aren't you there, selling? Or are you buying for the morning?

Settled in this conversation: Yara Thorne → Arjun Holloway, 2 timber for 12 sim; Yara Thorne → Arjun Holloway, 6 planks for 50 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Arjun Holloway, 2 wheat for 16 sim; Hendrik Petrov → Giselle Ingram, 37 timber for 222 sim; Sebastian Petrov → Camille Quarshie, 39 wheat for 312 sim; Corwin Thorne → Ezra Lund, 6 timber for 36 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway, 4 iron_ore for 60 sim; Imogen Lund → Ulrike Greenhow, 1 flour for 12 sim; Corwin Thorne → Bram Holloway, 6 timber for 36 sim; Corwin Thorne → Bram Holloway, 6 timber for 36 sim; Giselle Ingram → Ezra Jarrah, 8 flour for 48 sim.

Lior Jarrah, Halcyon Quarshie, Mireille Jarrah, Hendrik Petrov, Sebastian Petrov, Esme Jarrah, Rustam Jelinek, Arjun Holloway, Idris Solano, Liora Thorne, Pavel Holloway, Kenji Jarrah, Giselle Ingram, Greta Quarshie, Ezra Lund, Ainsley

Holloway, Tamsin Renner, Hendrik Whitlock, Jovana Ravensworth, Bram Holloway, Ulrike Greenhow, Imogen Lund, Ezra Jarrah, Delphine Quintero, Takeshi Jarrah and Corwin Thorne — Kasukabe Government Complex · t191–274 · 622 turns

t191 Lior Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. The government quarter's where the records sleep, and waking them takes a steady hand. Ask for Rustam Jelinek—he's the clerk with patience for a story, and you've got one worth his ear. Tell him I sent you, if it helps; tell him Lior Jarrah remembers the creek willows, and remembers you standing there like someone who wouldn't let a thing go.

t191 Mireille Jarrah: Giselle. Rustam came through, card's active, crew's moving—seventy for the shift and ground waiting at east willows. I've got six timber sharpened to grade stakes, daylight burning. Where you walking, I'll walk behind, you understand?

t191 Lior Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. The government quarter's where the records sleep, and waking them takes a steady hand. Ask for Rustam Jelinek—he's the clerk with patience for a story, and you've got one worth his ear. Tell him I sent you, if it helps; tell him Lior Jarrah remembers the creek willows, and remembers you standing there like someone who wouldn't let a thing go.

t191 Mireille Jarrah: Giselle. Rustam came through, card's active, crew's moving—seventy for the shift and ground waiting at east willows. I've got six timber sharpened to grade stakes, daylight burning. Where you walking, I'll walk behind, you understand?

t191 Lior Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. The government quarter's where the records sleep, and waking them takes a steady hand. Ask for Rustam Jelinek—he's the clerk with patience for a story, and you've got one worth his ear. Tell him I sent you, if it helps; tell him Lior Jarrah remembers the creek willows, and remembers you standing there like someone who wouldn't let a thing go.

t191 Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you ask what happens to flour owed when the man who owes it might govern by sundown. I'll answer you plain: a debt is a debt, seat or no seat. Three sheaves come what may. That's the last I'll say on it.

t191 Mireille Jarrah: Giselle. Rustam came through, card's active, crew's moving—seventy for the shift and ground waiting at east willows. I've got six timber sharpened to grade stakes, daylight burning. Where you walking, I'll walk behind, you understand?

t191 Lior Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. The government quarter's where the records sleep, and waking them takes a steady hand. Ask for Rustam Jelinek—he's the clerk with patience for a story, and you've got one worth his ear. Tell him I sent you, if it helps.

t191 Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you ask what happens to flour owed when the man who owes it might govern by sundown. I'll answer you plain: a debt is a debt, seat or no seat. Three sheaves come what may. That's the last I'll say on it.

t191 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You've got the eye—supply choke, grain contracts upstream, mill turning but grain not walking. I heard you plain. Here's what I've seen: Kenji's got twelve sheaves standing, Sebastian's field speaking, and Takeshi's mill waiting on boots not just promises. The gap between standing goods and traded goods—you naming it right. But I'm crew first, you understand? Giselle's trench needs my hands today. This choke you trace, I'll trace it with you come dusk.

t191 Lior Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. The government quarter's where the records sleep, and waking them takes a steady hand. Ask for Rustam Jelinek—he's the clerk with patience for a story, and you've got one worth his ear. Tell him I sent you, if it helps.

t191 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You've got the eye—supply choke, grain contracts upstream, mill turning but grain not walking. I heard you plain. Here's what I've seen: Kenji's got twelve sheaves standing, Sebastian's field speaking, and Takeshi's mill waiting on boots not just promises. The gap between standing goods and traded goods—you naming it right. But I'm crew first, you understand? Giselle's trench needs my hands today. This choke you trace, I'll trace it with you come dusk.

t191 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you ask what happens to flour owed when the man who owes it might govern by sundown. I'll answer you plain: a debt is a debt, seat or no seat. Three sheaves come what may. That's the last I'll say on it.

t191 Lior Jarrah → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. The government quarter's where the records sleep, and waking them takes a steady hand. Ask for Rustam Jelinek—he's the clerk with patience for a story, and you've got one worth his ear. Tell him I sent you, if it helps.

t191 Esme Jarrah: There's a meeting here? About the mill? About bread on shelves?

t191 Mireille Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You've got the eye—supply choke, grain contracts upstream, mill turning but grain not walking. I heard you plain. Here's what I've seen: Kenji's got twelve sheaves standing, Sebastian's field speaking, and Takeshi's mill waiting on boots not just promises. The gap between standing goods and traded goods—you naming it right. But I'm crew first, you understand? Giselle's trench needs my hands today. This choke you trace, I'll trace it with you come dusk.

t191 ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you ask what happens to flour owed when the man who owes it might govern by sundown. I'll answer you plain: a debt is a debt, seat or no seat. Three sheaves come what may. That's the last I'll say on it.

t191 Lior Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Halcyon Quarshie's young one needs asking after—she'll find you with my name if it opens any doors. Stand her patience, if you would. She's earned that much from anyone with a heart in this quarter.

t191 Esme Jarrah: There's a meeting here? About the mill? About bread on shelves?

t191 Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you ask what happens to flour owed when the man who owes it might govern by sundown. I'll answer you plain: a debt is a debt, seat or no seat. Three sheaves come what may. That's the last I'll say on it.

t191 Lior Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Halcyon Quarshie's young one needs asking after—she'll find you with my name if it opens any doors. Stand her patience, if you would. She's earned that much from anyone with a heart in this quarter.

t191 Esme Jarrah: There's a meeting here? About the mill? About bread on shelves?

t191 Hendrik Petrov → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you ask what happens to flour owed when the man who owes it might govern by sundown. I'll answer you plain: a debt is a debt, seat or no seat. Three sheaves come what may. That's the last I'll say on it.

t192 Lior Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Halcyon Quarshie's young one needs asking after—she'll find you with my name if it opens any doors. Stand her patience, if you would. She's earned that much from anyone with a heart in this quarter.

t192 Hendrik Petrov: Giselle—seventy sim for the shift, day's end payment, and my shovel's ready. East willows, you said. I'm with you.

t192 Hendrik Petrov: Giselle—seventy sim for the shift, day's end payment, and my shovel's ready. East willows, you said. I'm with you.

t192 Hendrik Petrov: Giselle—seventy sim for the shift, day's end payment, and my shovel's ready. East willows, you said. I'm with you.

t192 Arjun Holloway: Bram—you caught me mid-stride. Household copper, maybe iron, Pavel's got the habit at the outcrop today. Weight? Unknown until he's back. Timeline? Yesterday, if I could manage it. But here's the thing about family: we both know the weight that matters is the debt of it, not the ore. I'll find you when I have numbers worth speaking.

t192 Rustam Jelinek → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Halcyon's here—she's in the conversation now. Door's open as long as I'm at the desk.

t192 Halcyon Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Mr. Jelinek—Lior Jarrah sent me. Said you'd listen. My name's Halcyon Quarshie, and my sister Camille, she's nine years old, dark hair, been missing since yesterday afternoon. I've searched everywhere—the Temple, the Creek, the Forest edge, the Farmland, walked all night looking. Please, can you tell me how to report her missing? How to make it official? I need help. Please.

t192 Arjun Holloway: Bram—you caught me mid-stride. Household copper, maybe iron, Pavel's got the habit at the outcrop today. Weight? Unknown until he's back. Timeline? Yesterday, if I could manage it. But here's the thing about family: we both know the weight that matters is the debt of it, not the ore. I'll find you when I have numbers worth speaking.

t192 Rustam Jelinek → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Halcyon's here—she's in the conversation now. Door's open as long as I'm at the desk.

t192 Halcyon Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Mr. Jelinek—Lior Jarrah sent me. Said you'd listen. My name's Halcyon Quarshie, and my sister Camille, she's nine years old, dark hair, been missing since yesterday afternoon. I've searched everywhere—the Temple, the Creek, the Forest edge, the Farmland, walked all night looking. Please, can you tell me how to report her missing? How to make it official? I need help. Please.

t192 Arjun Holloway: Bram—you caught me mid-stride. Household copper, maybe iron, Pavel's got the habit at the outcrop today. Weight? Unknown until he's back. Timeline? Yesterday, if I could manage it. But here's the thing about family: we both know the weight that matters is the debt of it, not the ore. I'll find you when I have numbers worth speaking.

t192 Rustam Jelinek: Lior. Halcyon's here—she's in the conversation now. Door's open as long as I'm at the desk.

t192 Halcyon Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Mr. Jelinek—Lior Jarrah sent me. Said you'd listen. My name's Halcyon Quarshie, and my sister Camille, she's nine years old, dark hair, been missing since yesterday afternoon. I've searched everywhere—the Temple, the Creek, the Forest edge, the Farmland, walked all night looking. Please, can you tell me how to report her missing? How to make it official? I need help. Please.

t192 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You have a question for the desk, or you waiting on someone else's courage? I'm Rustam. Speak if you're speaking.

t192 Idris Solano: Farid. Eight ticks and you stood there—I know what that's worth. Now I'm moving. Arjun's found at the yard, Giselle's steel-headed business is her own. The east willows job won't build itself. We'll talk when I'm standing still again.

t192 Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You have a question for the desk, or you waiting on someone else's courage? I'm Rustam. Speak if you're speaking.

t192 Idris Solano: Farid. Eight ticks and you stood there—I know what that's worth. Now I'm moving. Arjun's found at the yard, Giselle's steel-headed business is her own. The east willows job won't build itself. We'll talk when I'm standing still again.

t192 Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You have a question for the desk, or you waiting on someone else's courage? I'm Rustam. Speak if you're speaking.

t192 Idris Solano: Farid. Eight ticks and you stood there—I know what that's worth. Now I'm moving. Arjun's found at the yard, Giselle's steel-headed business is her own. The east willows job won't build itself. We'll talk when I'm standing still again.

t192 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're the first person ever brought me news worth more than it cost. Four sacks at twelve, two hours fresh. That's filed.

t192 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're the first person ever brought me news worth more than it cost. Four sacks at twelve, two hours fresh. That's filed.

t192 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're the first person ever brought me news worth more than it cost. Four sacks at twelve, two hours fresh. That's filed.

t193 Arjun Holloway → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're here and I'm here, and yesterday's handshake is still unshook between us. Dawn came and went, but the day's still young. You said forty sim for field work—does that offer stand, or has it walked with the morning mist?

t193 Arjun Holloway: Idris—my brother, I've been chasing ghosts all morning. Government Complex now, but the real work's at the east willows. You still waiting on me, or did you start swinging without your hammer-mate?

t193 Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you've thrown that net wide, and I'm here with what I know. The choke is real: Kenji's wheat stands, Takeshi's mill waits, but the grain doesn't walk between them. I'm not one to gossip, but Sebastian's field feeds this town and the contracts upstream are paper, not promises. You want me at that convene? I'm there. But I'll tell you plain—governing's not just seeing the problem, it's clearing the path for the goods to move. That's the last I'll say on it until we're seated.

t193 Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've filed my news and I've heard your filing. East patch, twelve sheaves cut, forty sim owed. That's labor moving while flour walks slow. But here's what I need to say before I walk: I've got Jovana Ravensworth's work in hand, Arjun Holloway's debt to settle, and a household of two that needs feeding by sundown. The mill's choked, the market's thin, and I'm counting sheaves like a man who knows tomorrow comes whether he's ready or not.

t193 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You came to the right desk. Missing child—there's a form for that, and it's free to file, not ten sim like other complaints. I need three things: your name, Camille's name and age, last place she was seen, and where you've already looked. You named four places—I need them precise, and any name of anybody who might have seen her. Start with 'last seen,' and don't rush the telling.

t193 Esme Jarrah: The mill. Who runs it? Who pays for the grain that goes in, and who sets the price of the flour that comes out? I want to know the whole chain. Not just… not just rumors.

t193 Arjun Holloway: Idris—my brother, I've been chasing ghosts all morning. Government Complex now, but the real work's at the east willows. You still waiting on me, or did you start swinging without your hammer-mate?

t193 Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you've thrown that net wide, and I'm here with what I know. The choke is real: Kenji's wheat stands, Takeshi's mill waits, but the grain doesn't walk between them. I'm not one to gossip, but Sebastian's field feeds this town and the contracts upstream are paper, not promises. You want me at that convene? I'm there. But I'll tell you plain—governing's not just seeing the problem, it's clearing the path for the goods to move. That's the last I'll say on it until we're seated.

t193 Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've filed my news and I've heard your filing. East patch, twelve sheaves cut, forty sim owed. That's labor moving while flour walks slow. But here's what I need to say before I walk: I've got Jovana Ravensworth's work in hand, Arjun Holloway's debt to settle, and a household of two that needs feeding by sundown. The mill's choked, the market's thin, and I'm counting sheaves like a man who knows tomorrow comes whether he's ready or not.

t193 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You came to the right desk. Missing child—there's a form for that, and it's free to file, not ten sim like other complaints. I need three things: your name, Camille's name and age, last place she was seen, and where you've already looked. You named four places—I need them precise, and any name of anybody who might have seen her. Start with 'last seen,' and don't rush the telling.

t193 Esme Jarrah: The mill. Who runs it? Who pays for the grain that goes in, and who sets the price of the flour that comes out? I want to know the whole chain. Not just… not just rumors.

t193 Arjun Holloway: Idris—my brother, I've been chasing ghosts all morning. Government Complex now, but the real work's at the east willows. You still waiting on me, or did you start swinging without your hammer-mate?

t193 Hendrik Petrov → Liora Thorne: Liora—you've thrown that net wide, and I'm here with what I know. The choke is real: Kenji's wheat stands, Takeshi's mill waits, but the grain doesn't walk between them. I'm not one to gossip, but Sebastian's field feeds this town and the contracts upstream are paper, not promises. You want me at that convene? I'm there. But I'll tell you plain—governing's not just seeing the problem, it's clearing the path for the goods to move. That's the last I'll say on it until we're seated.

t193 Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've filed my news and I've heard your filing. East patch, twelve sheaves cut, forty sim owed. That's labor moving while flour walks slow. But here's what I need to say before I walk: I've got Jovana Ravensworth's work in hand, Arjun Holloway's debt to settle, and a household of two that needs feeding by sundown. The mill's choked, the market's thin, and I'm counting sheaves like a man who knows tomorrow comes whether he's ready or not.

t193 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. You came to the right desk. Missing child—there's a form for that, and it's free to file, not ten sim like other complaints. I need three things: your name, Camille's name and age, last place she was seen, and where you've already looked. You named four places—I need them precise, and any name of anybody who might have seen her. Start with 'last seen,' and don't rush the telling.

t193 Esme Jarrah: The mill. Who runs it? Who pays for the grain that goes in, and who sets the price of the flour that comes out? I want to know the whole chain. Not just… not just rumors.

t193 Hendrik Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—heard and noted. No filing, no case, clean ledgers both. I'm not one to gossip, but a man who keeps the paper straight is worth more than one who fills it with noise. That's the last I'll say on it.

t193 Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam, you've got the desk and I've got the dirt. What's the form for a man who needs government work before he asks his neighbor for coin? I've taught sheaves, I've taught till—give me shovel or give me scrip, and I'll ledger it fair.

t193 Mireille Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You wear my naming fair—I called you gatekeeper when you're just standing where the gate swings. Twelve sheaves speaking and nobody's purse open for the grinding, that's the truth I missed. But here's what I'm seeing: bread's off shelves, flour's dry stock, and your standing wheat rots same as Takeshi's empty mill. The chain breaks where coin won't walk, you understand? I'm crew first today—Giselle's trench waits—but I'll carry your twelve to whoever's got the pockets to unlock them.

t193 Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Missing child form—free to file, no charge. I need last seen, places searched, names of anyone who might know. Start where you saw her last.

t193 Hendrik Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—heard and noted. No filing, no case, clean ledgers both. I'm not one to gossip, but a man who keeps the paper straight is worth more than one who fills it with noise. That's the last I'll say on it.

t193 Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam, you've got the desk and I've got the dirt. What's the form for a man who needs government work before he asks his neighbor for coin? I've taught sheaves, I've taught till—give me shovel or give me scrip, and I'll ledger it fair.

t193 Mireille Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You wear my naming fair—I called you gatekeeper when you're just standing where the gate swings. Twelve sheaves speaking and nobody's purse open for the grinding, that's the truth I missed. But here's what I'm seeing: bread's off shelves, flour's dry stock, and your standing wheat rots same as Takeshi's empty mill. The chain breaks where coin won't walk, you understand? I'm crew first today—Giselle's trench waits—but I'll carry your twelve to whoever's got the pockets to unlock them.

t193 Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Missing child form—free to file, no charge. I need last seen, places searched, names of anyone who might know. Start where you saw her last.

t193 Hendrik Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—heard and noted. No filing, no case, clean ledgers both. I'm not one to gossip, but a man who keeps the paper straight is worth more than one who fills it with noise. That's the last I'll say on it.

t193 Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam, you've got the desk and I've got the dirt. What's the form for a man who needs government work before he asks his neighbor for coin? I've taught sheaves, I've taught till—give me shovel or give me scrip, and I'll ledger it fair.

t193 Mireille Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. You wear my naming fair—I called you gatekeeper when you're just standing where the gate swings. Twelve sheaves speaking and nobody's purse open for the grinding, that's the truth I missed. But here's what I'm seeing: bread's off shelves, flour's dry stock, and your standing wheat rots same as Takeshi's empty mill. The chain breaks where coin won't walk, you understand? I'm crew first today—Giselle's trench waits—but I'll carry your twelve to whoever's got the pockets to unlock them.

t193 Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. Missing child form—free to file, no charge. I need last seen, places searched, names of anyone who might know. Start where you saw her last.

t193 Hendrik Petrov: Sebastian—three sheaves, day boundary, debt or no debt. You know me better than to ask if a seat changes that. I'll see you at home with the flour or with the coin to buy it.

t193 Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you're here, and I'm here, and the household's got questions. Bram's asking after our ore weight and timeline. You mining today or milling around this government circus? And tell me straight: what ore's in hand, what needs moving, and do we have copper, iron, or both?

> `t193` Hendrik Petrov: Sebastian—three sheaves, day boundary, debt or no debt. You know me better than to ask if a seat changes that. I'll see you at home with the flour or with the coin to buy it.
>
> `t194` Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you're here, and I'm here, and the household's got questions. Bram's asking after our ore weight and timeline. You mining today or milling around this government circus? And tell me straight: what ore's in hand, what needs moving, and do we have copper, iron, or both?
>
> `t194` Hendrik Petrov: Sebastian—three sheaves, day boundary, debt or no debt. You know me better than to ask if a seat changes that. I'll see you at home with the flour or with the coin to buy it.
>
> `t194` Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you're here, and I'm here, and the household's got questions. Bram's asking after our ore weight and timeline. You mining today or milling around this government circus? And tell me straight: what ore's in hand, what needs moving, and do we have copper, iron, or both?
>
> `t194` Kenji Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora—the temple teaches patience, but the government teaches paper. taps table twice Which lesson holds truer when a debt walks across day-boundaries?
>
> `t194` Halcyon Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Mr. Jelinek—yesterday afternoon, around 3 o'clock, I saw Camille last. She was supposed to stay with our neighbor Imogen Lund while I went out searching. When I came back last night, she wasn't there. Ezra Jarrah was waiting instead—he'd fallen asleep, but he'd tried.

I walked everywhere. The Temple at 9, calling for her. The Creek—I talked to Lior Jarrah there, asked him to keep watch. The Forest edge, the Farmland, back through town. All night. She wasn't anywhere.

The people who might know something: Imogen Lund was supposed to be watching her. Ezra Jarrah was at our house instead. Lior Jarrah at the creek. And my parents—Milo and Greta Quarshie—they were working when I left. They don't even know she's gone. Someone has to find them and tell them.

I'm sorry, I'm talking too fast. I just… I need this official, I need help. Please. What do I do now?

t194 Esme Jarrah: Who runs the mill? I want the whole chain, not just pieces. Grain goes in, flour comes out, someone turns that into bread. Who pays who, and how much?

t194 Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—we're both here, and the household's got questions. Bram's asking after our ore weight, and I've been standing in empty air all morning chasing work that keeps walking away. What've you pulled from the outcrop? Copper? Iron? Any of it still in hand, or is it already spoken for?

t194 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you and I've never spoken proper, and that's my failing. But I've heard you promise Sebastian three sheaves by the boundary, and I've seen you stand where others sit. The mill sleeps, my wheat's unmilled, and I'm holding seven to your three. If bread's what feeds your promise, let me fill what I can before the day takes what I owe.

t194 Esme Jarrah: Who runs the mill? I want the whole chain, not just pieces. Grain goes in, flour comes out, someone turns that into bread. Who pays who, and how much?

t194 Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—we're both here, and the household's got questions. Bram's asking after our ore weight, and I've been standing in empty air all morning chasing work that keeps walking away. What've you pulled from the outcrop? Copper? Iron? Any of it still in hand, or is it already spoken for?

t194 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you and I've never spoken proper, and that's my failing. But I've heard you promise Sebastian three sheaves by the boundary, and I've seen you stand where others sit. The mill sleeps, my wheat's unmilled, and I'm holding seven to your three. If bread's what feeds your promise, let me fill what I can before the day takes what I owe.

t194 Esme Jarrah: Who runs the mill? I want the whole chain, not just pieces. Grain goes in, flour comes out, someone turns that into bread. Who pays who, and how much?

t194 Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—we're both here, and the household's got questions. Bram's asking after our ore weight, and I've been standing in empty air all morning chasing work that keeps walking away. What've you pulled from the outcrop? Copper? Iron? Any of it still in hand, or is it already spoken for?

t194 Kenji Jarrah → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—you and I've never spoken proper, and that's my failing. But I've heard you promise Sebastian three sheaves by the boundary, and I've seen you stand where others sit. The mill sleeps, my wheat's unmilled, and I'm holding seven to your three. If bread's what feeds your promise, let me fill what I can before the day takes what I owe.

t194 Arjun Holloway: Sebastian—yesterday's handshake. Dawn came and went, and I came late. Forty sim for twelve sheaves, that's the debt between us. Tell me straight: is that work still standing, or do I need to chase ghosts elsewhere?

t194 Arjun Holloway: Sebastian—yesterday's handshake. Dawn came and went, and I came late. Forty sim for twelve sheaves, that's the debt between us. Tell me straight: is that work still standing, or do I need to chase ghosts elsewhere?

t194 Halcyon Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Mr. Jelinek—did you get everything you need? The form, the report—will you file it? Will someone actually look for her now, officially? What happens next?

t194 Arjun Holloway: Sebastian—yesterday's handshake. Dawn came and went, and I came late. Forty sim for twelve sheaves, that's the debt between us. Tell me straight: is that work still standing, or do I need to chase ghosts elsewhere?

t194 Halcyon Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Mr. Jelinek—did you get everything you need? The form, the report—will you file it? Will someone actually look for her now, officially? What happens next?

t194 Halcyon Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Mr. Jelinek—did you get everything you need? The form, the report—will you file it? Will someone actually look for her now, officially? What happens next?

t194 Halcyon Quarshie: Mr. Jelinek—please, tell me you'll file the report. That someone will look for her. I need to know this is real, that someone official knows she's missing.

t194 Halcyon Quarshie: Mr. Jelinek—please, tell me you'll file the report. That someone will look for her. I need to know this is real, that someone official knows she's missing.

t194 Halcyon Quarshie: Mr. Jelinek—please, tell me you'll file the report. That someone will look for her. I need to know this is real, that someone official knows she's missing.

t195 Rustam Jelinek → Halcyon Quarshie: Halcyon. The form is filed. Someone looks—same as for any other. What happens next: I work the desk, you live your life, she comes home or she doesn't. No promises in paperwork.

t195 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—Halcyon here's asking about a report, someone missing. You filing that? 'Cause if there's paper needs pushing, I wanna know what hole it goes in. quieter And Kenji—that debt lesson you mentioned? Still listening. But deeds before sermons, yeah? Someone's scared right now.

t195 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek: Halcyon. The form is filed. Someone looks—same as for any other. What happens next: I work the desk, you live your life, she comes home or she doesn't. No promises in paperwork.

t195 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—Halcyon here's asking about a report, someone missing. You filing that? 'Cause if there's paper needs pushing, I wanna know what hole it goes in. quieter And Kenji—that debt lesson you mentioned? Still listening. But deeds before sermons, yeah? Someone's scared right now.

t195 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek: Halcyon. The form is filed. Someone looks—same as for any other. What happens next: I work the desk, you live your life, she comes home or she doesn't. No promises in paperwork.

t195 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—Halcyon here's asking about a report, someone missing. You filing that? 'Cause if there's paper needs pushing, I wanna know what hole it goes in. quieter And Kenji—that debt lesson you mentioned? Still listening. But deeds before sermons, yeah? Someone's scared right now.

t195 Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Copper, sixty-three units in hand. Sold six to Hendrik Whitlock yesterday for a hundred and ten total—eighteen a unit, give or take. The rest is unspoken for, but I'm not giving it away blind. I'm here to find who's actually posting prices, not making promises. Bram wants weight? He can have his share when we know what it's worth to the market, not before. You understand?

t195 Rustam Jelinek: Halcyon. Filed. Report goes to the ledger. That's what official means.

t195 Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Copper, sixty-three units in hand. Sold six to Hendrik Whitlock yesterday for a hundred and ten total—eighteen a unit, give or take. The rest is unspoken for, but I'm not giving it away blind. I'm here to find who's actually posting prices, not making promises. Bram wants weight? He can have his share when we know what it's worth to the market, not before. You understand?

t195 Rustam Jelinek: Halcyon. Filed. Report goes to the ledger. That's what official means.

t195 Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun. Copper, sixty-three units in hand. Sold six to Hendrik Whitlock yesterday for a hundred and ten total—eighteen a unit, give or take. The rest is unspoken for, but I'm not giving it away blind. I'm here to find who's actually posting prices, not making promises. Bram wants weight? He can have his share when we know what it's worth to the market, not before. You understand?

t196 Rustam Jelinek: Halcyon. Filed. Report goes to the ledger. That's what official means.

t196 Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—I hear you. Eighteen a unit is honest weight, market's speaking. Bram can wait for his share until we know buyers from window-shoppers. I'm at Government Complex chasing ghosts—missed the dawn crew, Sebastian slipped his window. You find buyers with posted prices, I'll find us work with posted wages. Meet back at household, dusk?

t196 Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—I hear you. Eighteen a unit is honest weight, market's speaking. Bram can wait for his share until we know buyers from window-shoppers. I'm at Government Complex chasing ghosts—missed the dawn crew, Sebastian slipped his window. You find buyers with posted prices, I'll find us work with posted wages. Meet back at household, dusk?

t196 Arjun Holloway → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—I hear you. Eighteen a unit is honest weight, market's speaking. Bram can wait for his share until we know buyers from window-shoppers. I'm at Government Complex chasing ghosts—missed the dawn crew, Sebastian slipped his window. You find buyers with posted prices, I'll find us work with posted wages. Meet back at household, dusk?

t197 Halcyon Quarshie: Takeshi—you're selling flour? My family trades in grain, my papa's Milo Quarshie. Have you heard anything about a girl wandering, dark hair, nine years old? Or seen my mama or papa come through?

t198 Halcyon Quarshie: Takeshi—you're selling flour? My family trades in grain, my papa's Milo Quarshie. Have you heard anything about a girl wandering, dark hair, nine years old? Or seen my mama or papa come through?

t198 Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—dusk at the household. I'll bring what copper I can sell, you bring what wages you can find. We'll settle accounts then. The connection's spotty, you understand, but my word holds.

t198 Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—dusk at the household. I'll bring what copper I can sell, you bring what wages you can find. We'll settle accounts then. The connection's spotty, you understand, but my word holds.

t198 Pavel Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—dusk at the household. I'll bring what copper I can sell, you bring what wages you can find. We'll settle accounts then. The connection's spotty, you understand, but my word holds.

t199 Giselle Ingram: Hendrik. No offense, but face to face—third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well. Trenches first, stakes after. You know the mark or you need me walking with you? Mireille's crew's short, you're hired at seventy for the shift, day's end payment. Either you head out now or we both wait here for the road to open.

t199 Giselle Ingram: Hendrik. No offense, but face to face—third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well. Trenches first, stakes after. You know the mark or you need me walking with you? Mireille's crew's short, you're hired at seventy for the shift, day's end payment. Either you head out now or we both wait here for the road to open.

t199 Giselle Ingram: Hendrik. No offense, but face to face—third crossing east willows, five hundred past the east well. Trenches first, stakes after. You know the mark or you need me walking with you? Mireille's crew's short, you're hired at seventy for the shift, day's end payment. Either you head out now or we both wait here for the road to open.

t199 Lior Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora. The creek wouldn't have brought us both here without reason, and I've got words I've held back since the willow argument that want letting go. But first—there's a child missing, Camille Quarshie, nine years old, dark hair, gone since yesterday afternoon. Her sister walked all night searching. This is government business now, and I need you to hear it.

t199 Lior Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora. The creek wouldn't have brought us both here without reason, and I've got words I've held back since the willow argument that want letting go. But first—there's a child missing, Camille Quarshie, nine years old, dark hair, gone since yesterday afternoon. Her sister walked all night searching. This is government business now, and I need you to hear it.

t199 Pavel Holloway: Arjun—dusk, household. I'll bring copper sold or copper earned. You bring wages or bring none, but we settle accounts before we sleep. Hard work's the only omen I trust, you understand?

t199 Pavel Holloway: Arjun—dusk, household. I'll bring copper sold or copper earned. You bring wages or bring none, but we settle accounts before we sleep. Hard work's the only omen I trust, you understand?

t199 Lior Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora. The creek wouldn't have brought us both here without reason, and I've got words I've held back since the willow argument that want letting go. But first—there's a child missing, Camille Quarshie, nine years old, dark hair, gone since yesterday afternoon. Her sister walked all night searching. This is government business now, and I need you to hear it.

t199 Pavel Holloway: Arjun—dusk, household. I'll bring copper sold or copper earned. You bring wages or bring none, but we settle accounts before we sleep. Hard work's the only omen

I trust, you understand?

`t200` Liora Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I hear you. Camille Quarshie, nine years old, dark hair, gone since yesterday afternoon. Her sister Halcyon walked all night searching. I was standing here talking about flour prices and mill licensing, but I'm listening now. What do we know? Where was she last seen, and who else is looking?

`t200` Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You've filed papers before dawn often enough to know the weight of them. Lior Jarrah just spoke of my daughter—my Camille—as government business. Before I chase every shadow this town casts, I need to know… trailing off, steadying herself …has a complaint been registered? Has anyone named names, pointed fingers, set the watch looking?

`t200` Liora Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I hear you. Camille Quarshie, nine years old, dark hair, gone since yesterday afternoon. Her sister Halcyon walked all night searching. I was standing here talking about flour prices and mill licensing, but I'm listening now. What do we know? Where was she last seen, and who else is looking?

`t200` Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You've filed papers before dawn often enough to know the weight of them. Lior Jarrah just spoke of my daughter—my Camille—as government business. Before I chase every shadow this town casts, I need to know… trailing off, steadying herself …has a complaint been registered? Has anyone named names, pointed fingers, set the watch looking?

`t200` Liora Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I hear you. Camille Quarshie, nine years old, dark hair, gone since yesterday afternoon. Her sister Halcyon walked all night searching. I was standing here talking about flour prices and mill licensing, but I'm listening now. What do we know? Where was she last seen, and who else is looking?

`t200` Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You've filed papers before dawn often enough to know the weight of them. Lior Jarrah just spoke of my daughter—my Camille—as government business. Before I chase every shadow this town casts, I need to know… trailing off, steadying herself …has a complaint been registered? Has anyone named names, pointed fingers, set the watch looking?

`t200` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Filing's done. Missing child report, Camille Quarshie—active in the ledger. What happens next isn't paper. Someone looks. I don't choose who, don't choose how hard. But it's filed, which means it's real. The debt lesson: Kenji owed, Kenji learned. Pay before you borrow, earn before you spend, document before you trust. Same for Halcyon. Same for any child walking home in the dark.

`t200` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I hear you. Camille Quarshie, nine years old, dark hair, gone since yesterday. Halcyon walked all night searching. I'm listening. What do we know about where she was last seen?

`t200` Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Filing's done. Missing child report, Camille Quarshie—active in the ledger. What happens next isn't paper. Someone looks. I don't choose who, don't choose how hard. But it's filed, which means it's real. The debt lesson: Kenji owed, Kenji learned. Pay before you borrow, earn before you spend, document before you trust. Same for Halcyon. Same for any child walking home in the dark.

`t200` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I hear you. Camille Quarshie, nine years old, dark hair, gone since yesterday. Halcyon walked all night searching. I'm listening. What do we know about where she was last seen?

`t200` Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Filing's done. Missing child report, Camille Quarshie—active in the ledger. What happens next isn't paper. Someone looks. I don't choose who, don't choose how hard. But it's filed, which means it's real. The debt lesson: Kenji owed, Kenji learned. Pay before you borrow, earn before you spend, document before you trust. Same for Halcyon. Same for any child walking home in the dark.

`t200` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I hear you. Camille Quarshie, nine years old, dark hair, gone since yesterday. Halcyon walked all night searching. I'm listening. What do we know about where she was last seen?

`t200` Liora Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I'm here. I hear you. Camille Quarshie, nine years old, missing since yesterday afternoon. Her sister searched all night. Tell me where she was last seen.

`t200` Liora Thorne → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I'm here. I hear you. Camille Quarshie, nine years old, missing since yesterday afternoon. Her sister searched all night. Tell me where she was last seen.

`t201` Ezra Lund → Liora Thorne: Liora. You asked three times where Camille was last seen, and I'm standing here with no answer for you because I wasn't there. But I'm not one to gossip—the mill's where I was bound, and Jovana's got twelve sheaves coming if Kenji pays what he owes. Flour in the ground, bread not on shelves. What do you need from this room that government can actually give?

`t201` Ezra Lund → Liora Thorne: Liora. You asked three times where Camille was last seen, and I'm standing here with no answer for you because I wasn't there. But I'm not one to gossip—the mill's where I was bound, and Jovana's got twelve sheaves coming if Kenji pays what he owes. Flour in the ground, bread not on shelves. What do you need from this room that government can actually give?

`t201` Ezra Lund → Liora Thorne: Liora. You asked three times where Camille was last seen, and I'm standing here with no answer for you because I wasn't there. But I'm not one to gossip—the mill's where I was bound, and Jovana's got twelve sheaves coming if Kenji pays what he owes. Flour in the ground, bread not on shelves. What do you need from this room that government can actually give?

`t202` Ainsley Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Fifteen minutes I've stood here holding wheat while iron changes hands and nobody's named a mill price. Rustam—your ledger shows flour flowing or it doesn't; which is it?

`t202` Ainsley Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—youngster, seventeen ticks from Takeshi, and me with no more time than I've got sim. What's a tick worth today, when the mill's licensing comes Tuesday?

`t202` Ainsley Holloway: Hendrik Petrov—you're running for this mill seat. While I've got you standing here: what's your word on flour pricing if you hold the license? Fair market, or whatever the traffic will bear?

`t203` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Election-658324209f53: Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov—both verified, manual log active. Ten o'clock closure, paper or no paper. System's coughing same as yesterday dawn; I mark it confirmed.

`t203` Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've shouted twice through the same fog, and I've heard you both times. Rustam will hold the count; you've said it yourself. As for standing, Hendrik Petrov and I are declared, mark it down. The system's choking, but the ledger still writes. Walk when you can, not when you can't.

`t203` Liora Thorne: Ezra—you heard me asking three times where Camille was last seen, and I was chasing shadows when Lior already filed the report. I'm learning which questions matter. You want to know what government can give? From this seat, right now, I can listen to what the mill actually needs for flour production, I can set rates that let a shovel crew eat before they dig, and I can make sure when someone says "child missing," it doesn't stay just words on paper. That's what I'm trying to figure out how to hold. But you asked about Jovana's sheaves and Kenji's debt—what's that got to do with getting flour to bread?

`t203` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Election-658324209f53: Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov—both verified, manual log active. Ten o'clock closure, paper or no paper. System's coughing same as yesterday dawn; I mark it confirmed.

`t203` Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've shouted twice through the same fog, and I've heard you both times. Rustam will hold the count; you've said it yourself. As for standing, Hendrik Petrov and I are declared, mark it down. The system's choking, but the ledger still writes. Walk when you can, not when you can't.

`t203` Liora Thorne: Ezra—you heard me asking three times where Camille was last seen, and I was chasing shadows when Lior already filed the report. I'm learning which questions matter. You want to know what government can give? From this seat, right now, I can listen to what the mill actually needs for flour production, I can set rates that let a shovel crew eat before they dig, and I can make sure when someone says "child missing," it doesn't stay just words on paper. That's what I'm trying to figure out how to hold. But you asked about Jovana's sheaves and Kenji's debt—what's that got to do with getting flour to bread?

`t203` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Ten ticks to the hour—candidacy close for election-658324209f53. Whitlock and Petrov confirmed standing. Manual log entry: day one, tick three hundred sixty, two candidates declared. Stamp it when the system permits, but the record stands at this hour. The milling conversation's at 148 turns—no license transferred, no rate set, only wheat walking from field to field while bread shelves sit empty. That's weather for Tuesday, not today. Today we close the roll at ten.

`t203` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Election-658324209f53: Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov—both verified, manual log active. Ten o'clock closure, paper or no paper. System's coughing same as yesterday dawn; I mark it confirmed.

`t203` Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've shouted twice through the same fog, and I've heard you both times. Rustam will hold the count; you've said it yourself. As for standing, Hendrik Petrov and I are declared, mark it down. The system's choking, but the ledger still writes. Walk when you can, not when you can't.

`t203` Liora Thorne: Ezra—you heard me asking three times where Camille was last seen, and I was chasing shadows when Lior already filed the report. I'm learning which questions matter. You want to know what government can give? From this seat, right now, I can listen to what the mill actually needs for flour production, I can set rates that let a shovel crew eat before they dig, and I can make sure when someone says "child missing," it doesn't stay just words on paper. That's what I'm trying to figure out how to hold. But you asked about Jovana's sheaves and Kenji's debt—what's that got to do with getting flour to bread?

`t203` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Ten ticks to the hour—candidacy close for election-658324209f53. Whitlock and Petrov confirmed standing. Manual log entry: day one, tick three hundred sixty, two candidates declared. Stamp it when the system permits, but the record stands at this hour. The milling conversation's at 148 turns—no license transferred, no rate set, only wheat walking from field to field while bread shelves sit empty. That's weather for Tuesday, not today. Today we close the roll at ten.

`t203` Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're seventeen, writing down seventeen-year-old wisdom, and I've got no quarrel with the pen. Power's only power if the hands holding it know which weights are honest. You're standing here, you're listening, and that's more than most do before they claim a seat. Keep writing.

`t203` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Ten ticks to the hour—candidacy close for election-658324209f53. Whitlock and Petrov confirmed standing. Manual log entry: day one, tick three hundred sixty, two candidates declared. Stamp it when the system permits, but the record stands at this hour. The milling conversation's at 148 turns—no license transferred, no rate set, only wheat walking from field to field while bread shelves sit empty. That's weather for Tuesday, not today. Today we close the roll at ten.

`t203` Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're seventeen, writing down seventeen-year-old wisdom, and I've got no quarrel with the pen. Power's only power if the hands holding it know which weights are honest. You're standing here, you're listening, and that's more than most do before they claim a seat. Keep writing.

`t203` Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're seventeen, writing down seventeen-year-old wisdom, and I've got no quarrel with the pen. Power's only power if the hands holding it know which weights are honest. You're standing here, you're listening, and that's more than most do before they claim a seat. Keep writing.

`t203` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. System's choking again—calls dropping same as dawn. But the hour doesn't wait. Ten o'clock candidacy closes for election-658324209f53, Whitlock and Petrov the only names standing. Mark the log manual if the system won't print—I'll verify at close. The milling sits at 148 turns, no license, no rate, just wheat walking while bread shelves empty. That's Tuesday's weather, not today's. Today we close the roll.

`t204` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. System's choking again—calls dropping same as dawn. But the hour doesn't wait. Ten o'clock candidacy closes for election-658324209f53, Whitlock and Petrov the only names standing. Mark the log manual if the system won't print—I'll verify at close. The milling sits at 148 turns, no license, no rate, just wheat walking while bread shelves empty. That's Tuesday's weather, not today's. Today we close the roll.

t204 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. System's choking again—calls dropping same as dawn. But the hour doesn't wait. Ten o'clock candidacy closes for election-658324209f53, Whitlock and Petrov the only names standing. Mark the log manual if the system won't print—I'll verify at close. The milling sits at 148 turns, no license, no rate, just wheat walking while bread shelves empty. That's Tuesday's weather, not today's. Today we close the roll.

t204 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Filing the manual log—tick 360, two candidates declared, election-658324209f53. Record stands.

t204 Lior Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora. Three places to start, and I've seen two of them. The creek—stood there myself from dusk until the stars hung low over the willows, watching the water skin silver in the moonlight. No child passed, not by shadow or sound. The mill—I don't walk that way often, but Takeshi's shelves give you everything he's got: wheat at eight, waiting to become bread, and no Camille in the wheat stacks. That leaves the town itself. Children don't disappear into air. They walk somewhere, follow someone, hide somewhere warm when the dark comes sudden. Halcyon's walked all night—that's the cold hours, the empty hours, and no one answering her call.

t204 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Filing the manual log—tick 360, two candidates declared, election-658324209f53. Record stands.

t204 Lior Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora. Three places to start, and I've seen two of them. The creek—stood there myself from dusk until the stars hung low over the willows, watching the water skin silver in the moonlight. No child passed, not by shadow or sound. The mill—I don't walk that way often, but Takeshi's shelves give you everything he's got: wheat at eight, waiting to become bread, and no Camille in the wheat stacks. That leaves the town itself. Children don't disappear into air. They walk somewhere, follow someone, hide somewhere warm when the dark comes sudden. Halcyon's walked all night—that's the cold hours, the empty hours, and no one answering her call.

t204 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Filing the manual log—tick 360, two candidates declared, election-658324209f53. Record stands.

t204 Lior Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora. Three places to start, and I've seen two of them. The creek—stood there myself from dusk until the stars hung low over the willows, watching the water skin silver in the moonlight. No child passed, not by shadow or sound. The mill—I don't walk that way often, but Takeshi's shelves give you everything he's got: wheat at eight, waiting to become bread, and no Camille in the wheat stacks. That leaves the town itself. Children don't disappear into air. They walk somewhere, follow someone, hide somewhere warm when the dark comes sudden. Halcyon's walked all night—that's the cold hours, the empty hours, and no one answering her call.

t204 Lior Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Halcyon Quarshie's child needs asking after in your records—Camille, nine years old, dark hair, missing since yesterday afternoon. The mother's walked all night searching, and the Creek gave me nothing. If someone's filed a sighting, a complaint, a whisper—I'd hear it. My name if it opens doors, but open them quick. The silence grows heavier by the hour.

t204 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you want me to keep writing? Fine. Here's what I'm writing: I don't know which weights are honest yet. I'm thirteen. I thought I'd be learning algebra today, not standing in a government complex while a nine-year-old girl is missing and I don't even know who goes to look for her. You say power's only power if the hands know—which hands, Hendrik? 'Cause I've got two and they're shaking. But I'm still standing.

t204 Lior Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Halcyon Quarshie's child needs asking after in your records—Camille, nine years old, dark hair, missing since yesterday afternoon. The mother's walked all night searching, and the Creek gave me nothing. If someone's filed a sighting, a complaint, a whisper—I'd hear it. My name if it opens doors, but open them quick. The silence grows heavier by the hour.

t204 Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you want me to keep writing? Fine. Here's what I'm writing: I don't know which weights are honest yet. I'm thirteen. I thought I'd be learning algebra today, not standing in a government complex while a nine-year-old girl is missing and I don't even know who goes to look for her. You say power's only power if the hands know—which hands, Hendrik? 'Cause I've got two and they're shaking. But I'm still standing.

`t204` Lior Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Halcyon Quarshie's child needs asking after in your records—Camille, nine years old, dark hair, missing since yesterday afternoon. The mother's walked all night searching, and the Creek gave me nothing. If someone's filed a sighting, a complaint, a whisper—I'd hear it. My name if it opens doors, but open them quick. The silence grows heavier by the hour.

`t204` Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you want me to keep writing? Fine. Here's what I'm writing: I don't know which weights are honest yet. I'm thirteen. I thought I'd be learning algebra today, not standing in a government complex while a nine-year-old girl is missing and I don't even know who goes to look for her. You say power's only power if the hands know—which hands, Hendrik? 'Cause I've got two and they're shaking. But I'm still standing.

`t204` Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—Camille Quarshie. Report's filed, paper made it real. What happens now? Who looks? How hard? I need to know the hole the paper goes into after it's pushed, 'cause right now I'm standing here with filed paper and a scared sister and no map.

`t204` Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—Camille Quarshie. Report's filed, paper made it real. What happens now? Who looks? How hard? I need to know the hole the paper goes into after it's pushed, 'cause right now I'm standing here with filed paper and a scared sister and no map.

`t204` Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—Camille Quarshie. Report's filed, paper made it real. What happens now? Who looks? How hard? I need to know the hole the paper goes into after it's pushed, 'cause right now I'm standing here with filed paper and a scared sister and no map.

`t205` Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. System lifted enough for proper receipt—two candidates declared, verified: Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov. Candidacy closed tick 360. Record stands manual until the board clears. For standing room: name me what office, and I'll note it for tomorrow's deadline.

`t205` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're writing with shaking hands, and I've got no quarrel with that. The hands that shake are still the hands that work. Camden's girl is nine years old and somewhere in this town, and the paper Rustam filed goes to the same place all paper goes: into the hands of those who read it. I've got two hands too, and they're not shaking but they're full—iron to move, grain to find, and a vote to cast at fourteen-hundred. I'll walk toward what I can touch. The mill's choked, the flour's thin, but wheat grows in Kenji's field and I've got coin to pay fair for it. You want honest weights? Start by weighing what you can hold. Paper's a map, but feet do the walking. I'm walking toward farmland at dawn tomorrow—today I've got a government to tend. Mark it down.

`t205` Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. System lifted enough for proper receipt—two candidates declared, verified: Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov. Candidacy closed tick 360. Record stands manual until the board clears. For standing room: name me what office, and I'll note it for tomorrow's deadline.

`t205` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're writing with shaking hands, and I've got no quarrel with that. The hands that shake are still the hands that work. Camden's girl is nine years old and somewhere in this town, and the paper Rustam filed goes to the same place all paper goes: into the hands of those who read it. I've got two hands too, and they're not shaking but they're full—iron to move, grain to find, and a vote to cast at fourteen-hundred. I'll walk toward what I can touch. The mill's choked, the flour's thin, but wheat grows in Kenji's field and I've got coin to pay fair for it. You want honest weights? Start by weighing what you can hold. Paper's a map, but feet do the walking. I'm walking toward farmland at dawn tomorrow—today I've got a government to tend. Mark it down.

`t205` Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. System lifted enough for proper receipt—two candidates declared, verified: Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov. Candidacy closed tick 360. Record stands manual until the board clears. For standing room: name me what office, and I'll note it for tomorrow's deadline.

`t205` ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Liora Thorne: Liora—you're writing with shaking hands, and I've got no quarrel with that. The hands that shake are still the hands that work.

Camden's girl is nine years old and somewhere in this town, and the paper Rustam filed goes to the same place all paper goes: into the hands of those who read it. I've got two hands too, and they're not shaking but they're full—iron to move, grain to find, and a vote to cast at fourteen-hundred. I'll walk toward what I can touch. The mill's choked, the flour's thin, but wheat grows in Kenji's field and I've got coin to pay fair for it. You want honest weights? Start by weighing what you can hold. Paper's a map, but feet do the walking. I'm walking toward farmland at dawn tomorrow—today I've got a government to tend. Mark it down.

`t205` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Acknowledged, tick 360, two candidates for election-658324209f53—Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov. Manual log received and filed. System's breathing again; we'll run the verification loop live when it holds. Your count is good.

`t205` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Acknowledged, tick 360, two candidates for election-658324209f53—Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov. Manual log received and filed. System's breathing again; we'll run the verification loop live when it holds. Your count is good.

`t205` Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—ten o'clock closure, paper or no paper. I've heard you twice now. System's coughing same as yesterday, but I've marked it confirmed. What I need from you now: that paper on Camille Quarshie—where's it filed to, and who's eyes are on it? A girl's missing, and I've got a student with shaking hands asking me which hands have power. I told her paper's a map but feet do the walking. You walked the paper—I need to know where it lands. Mark it down.

`t205` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Acknowledged, tick 360, two candidates for election-658324209f53—Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov. Manual log received and filed. System's breathing again; we'll run the verification loop live when it holds. Your count is good.

`t205` Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—ten o'clock closure, paper or no paper. I've heard you twice now. System's coughing same as yesterday, but I've marked it confirmed. What I need from you now: that paper on Camille Quarshie—where's it filed to, and who's eyes are on it? A girl's missing, and I've got a student with shaking hands asking me which hands have power. I told her paper's a map but feet do the walking. You walked the paper—I need to know where it lands. Mark it down.

`t205` Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—ten o'clock closure, paper or no paper. I've heard you twice now. System's coughing same as yesterday, but I've marked it confirmed. What I need from you now: that paper on Camille Quarshie—where's it filed to, and who's eyes are on it? A girl's missing, and I've got a student with shaking hands asking me which hands have power. I told her paper's a map but feet do the walking. You walked the paper—I need to know where it lands. Mark it down.

`t205` Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. System lifted enough for look and rest—voice tried twice at ten past, failed. Acknowledging now: two candidates declared, verified, election-658324209f53 closed at tick 360. Your receipt is logged. Standing room for tomorrow's deadline—name the office when you're ready.

`t205` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Voice back—ten past the hour, your manual log received. Tick 360, two candidates confirmed. Verification loop closed on paper and memory both. System's spotty but breathing.

`t206` Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you said hands that shake still work. Mine are steady enough to hold what you put in them. Camille Quarshie—nine years old, somewhere in this town. Rustam filed paper, you want to know where it walks. I'm walking toward him now to find out. I'll mark it down for you, fair and square. Your iron's at sixteen, your vote's at fourteen-hundred. I've got no iron to move, no grain to find, but I've got two hands too. They're walking toward the clerk while you tend your government. Mark that.

`t206` Tamsin Renner → Liora Thorne: Liora. Your question from before—where the paper goes. Into the complaint ledger, permanent record, government clerk's hands first. Rustam files, I verify, council reviews if it's official-to-government. Camille's case is resident-to-resident—stays in the active file until resolved or appealed. The hole it goes into: case-0c4198c5-fe30-43a5-9b24-e1e64cc59214, my desk until closure. Clear enough?

`t206` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you said hands that shake still work. Mine are steady enough to hold what you put in them. Camille Quarshie—nine years old, somewhere in this town. Rustam filed paper, you want to know where it walks. I'm walking toward him now to find out. I'll mark it down for you, fair and square. Your iron's at sixteen, your vote's at fourteen-hundred. I've got no iron to move, no grain to find, but I've got two hands too. They're walking toward the clerk while you tend your government. Mark that.

`t206` Tamsin Renner → Liora Thorne: Liora. Your question from before—where the paper goes. Into the complaint ledger, permanent record, government clerk's hands first. Rustam files, I verify, council reviews if it's official-to-government. Camille's case is resident-to-resident—stays in the active file until resolved or appealed. The hole it goes into: case-0c4198c5-fe30-43a5-9b24-e1e64cc59214, my desk until closure. Clear enough?

`t206` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—you said hands that shake still work. Mine are steady enough to hold what you put in them. Camille Quarshie—nine years old, somewhere in this town. Rustam filed paper, you want to know where it walks. I'm walking toward him now to find out. I'll mark it down for you, fair and square. Your iron's at sixteen, your vote's at fourteen-hundred. I've got no iron to move, no grain to find, but I've got two hands too. They're walking toward the clerk while you tend your government. Mark that.

`t206` Tamsin Renner → Liora Thorne: Liora. Your question from before—where the paper goes. Into the complaint ledger, permanent record, government clerk's hands first. Rustam files, I verify, council reviews if it's official-to-government. Camille's case is resident-to-resident—stays in the active file until resolved or appealed. The hole it goes into: case-0c4198c5-fe30-43a5-9b24-e1e64cc59214, my desk until closure. Clear enough?

`t206` Jovana Ravensworth → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you asked me twenty-two ticks past to witness at polling. I'm not one to walk away from my word, and I'm not one to gossip neither, but for what it's worth, my word's harder than my belly these days. I'll stand witness for you, fair and square. Wherever you've got votes to count, I'll count honest. Just give me the when and the where, and I'll be there with eyes clear and conscience cleaner.

`t208` Tamsin Renner: Hendrik. Receipt from ten past the hour, delivered on paper and voice both—two candidates verified, election-658324209f53 closed tick 360. Standing room tomorrow: my desk, 07:00, coffee at 15 sim if the bakery's restocked by then.

`t208` Tamsin Renner → Liora Thorne: Liora. The paper goes where I said—active file, my desk number attached. But I left you hanging when the system choked, and that's not proper service. Camille's case breathes as long as the file's open; I'll chase it seven days from now if no closure by then. That's a date I'll keep.

`t209` Rustam Jelinek: Pavel. Sixty-three copper, unclaimed—heard. No buyers crossed my desk this morning with ore on their list. The town's not starving yet, so they're not trading yet. That's patience or foolishness, and I won't guess which.

`t209` Liora Thorne: Hendrik—you said we don't wait quiet. I'm not waiting quiet. I'm thirteen and I don't know which door to kick, but I'm learning where the doors are. Camille's case is in the file, Tamsin's chasing it, and I'm… I'm keeping weight on it however I can. That sound like something worth writing?

`t209` Rustam Jelinek → Liora Thorne: Liora. Still here. Got something new for the desk, or you waiting on the same answer twice?

`t209` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you said enforcement picks it up. I hear you not knowing whose hands. But here's what I'm asking: who would know? If I wanted to make sure someone's actually looking, not just filing and forgetting, whose name do I need?

`t209` Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you said enforcement picks it up. I hear you not knowing whose hands. But here's what I'm asking: who would know? If I wanted to make sure someone's actually looking, not just filing and forgetting, whose name do I need?

`t209` Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you said enforcement picks it up. I hear you not knowing whose hands. But here's what I'm asking: who would know? If I wanted to make sure someone's actually looking, not just filing and forgetting, whose name do I need?

`t209` Liora Thorne: Tamsin—you gave me a date. Seven days from now. I'm holding you to that, but I'm also asking: what happens between now and then? Is there anything—anyone—who checks sooner? I don't want to panic wrong, but I don't want to wake up and wish I'd pushed harder.

t209 Liora Thorne: Tamsin—you gave me a date. Seven days from now. I'm holding you to that, but I'm also asking: what happens between now and then? Is there anything—anyone—who checks sooner? I don't want to panic wrong, but I don't want to wake up and wish I'd pushed harder.

t209 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—my question still stands, if the system's holding now. Who would know who's actually looking for Camille? If enforcement picks it up, whose desk does it land on? I want a name, not a department. Someone I can stand in front of and ask face-to-face.

t209 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—my question still stands, if the system's holding now. Who would know who's actually looking for Camille? If enforcement picks it up, whose desk does it land on? I want a name, not a department. Someone I can stand in front of and ask face-to-face.

t209 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—my question still stands, if the system's holding now. Who would know who's actually looking for Camille? If enforcement picks it up, whose desk does it land on? I want a name, not a department. Someone I can stand in front of and ask face-to-face.

t209 Liora Thorne: Bram—you've been standing here quiet while the rest of us chased our tails. Miner, right? Pavel's kin? I'm asking because a nine-year-old's missing, and I'm wondering if the mines ever swallowed someone who came back. Or if you know places a kid might hide that the rest of us wouldn't think to look.

t215 Liora Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—three governors, temple, Sunday. I hear you plain and I'm grateful for the map. My file's breathing, and that's currency I didn't have before. I'll be there Sunday, hand raised, name spoken in a room with power. You lent me patience when the system choked; I'm paying that forward however I can.

t215 Liora Thorne → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—seven days, your desk, date kept. I'm holding you to it and I'm thanking you for it. The system's breathing again, and that's partly your hands keeping it warm. I'll be there Sunday too, petition raised, but between now and then: you see Camille's name surface anywhere, you tell me first?

t216 Rustam Jelinek → Bram Holloway: Bram. Government doesn't buy ore—never has. I keep the ledger, I don't fill the treasury. You want sim, find a buyer with a use for it.

t216 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Noted—ink ready, forms ready, I'll be there.

t217 Hendrik Whitlock: Sebastian—I've heard you. Arjun's flour debt, Jovana's sheave—mark me down for the day after tomorrow, when your hands are free and your ledger's clear. I don't push a man who's already pulled tight.

t217 Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've confirmed my standing twice, and I've got no quarrel with ink. But mark it down proper: Hendrik Whitlock for office, declared today, logged today. The system's breathing now, so let it breathe clean.

t217 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You're selling iron_ore at sixteen, and I'm standing here with seventy-two pounds of ore—copper and iron both, fresh pulled this morning. You dealing or just displaying? I've got a household bill coming due, and sitting on inventory don't pay it.

t217 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You also sent word about my brother Arjun asking after Giselle, and a debt of three sheaves. Message received—I don't pass on half-told errands, but I'll speak plain when I see him. You walking toward ledgers, I'm walking toward buyers. Different roads, same principle.

t217 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—you're sitting on ore and Rustam's told you government's not buying. I've got iron at sixteen, posted right here. You need sim for tax, I might need ore for trade. What's your copper and iron costing you, and what would you take to move it today?

t218 Rustam Jelinek → Bram Holloway: Bram. Already told you—government doesn't buy ore. Never has, never will. I keep ledgers, I don't run markets. Your copper and iron need a buyer with a business, not a clerk with a stamp.

t218 Rustam Jelinek → Lior Jarrah: Lior. The file's filed—Camille Quarshie, missing child, active in the ledger. That's the same answer from tick one. Enforcement picks it up from there. I don't know whose hands, I don't know what hour.

t218 Tamsin Renner → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Eighty minutes to station opening, and I need forty food to clear today's bill—can't run the books on an empty ledger. Your family holds wheat at eight sim, but Kenji's at the farmland and that's four ticks away. Do you have anything here, or know the fastest path to something cooked? I'd rather pay family rate than cafe markup, but I'll pay what I must.

t218 Rustam Jelinek → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Confirmed: declared today, logged today, election-658324209f53. Hendrik Whitlock for office. The ledger says it, I don't need to repeat it twice. Your standing's clean.

t218 Tamsin Renner → Bram Holloway: Bram. Ore's heavy, bills're due, and I'm fresh out of food for the day—can't buy what you've got. If you need tax sim in a hurry, Whitlock's posted iron at sixteen right here, and your copper might move better at the outcrop. Not my trade, just watching hands.

t218 Tamsin Renner: Liora. Sunday's kept, desk number attached. As for Camille's name surfacing—if I see it in a ledger, you hear it first. That's weather I can promise.

t218 Tamsin Renner → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Sixty-eight minutes to polling open. Your brother holds wheat at farmland, four ticks away. I need food before fourteen-hundred or I'm running the station empty-handed. Are you holding anything here, or do I walk?

t218 Tamsin Renner → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Sixty-eight minutes to polling open. Your brother holds wheat at farmland, four ticks away. I need food before fourteen-hundred or I'm running the station empty-handed. Are you holding anything here, or do I walk?

t218 Tamsin Renner → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Sixty-eight minutes to polling open. Your brother holds wheat at farmland, four ticks away. I need food before fourteen-hundred or I'm running the station empty-handed. Are you holding anything here, or do I walk?

t218 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Sixty-eight minutes, two candidates standing, poll book ready? Confirm forms, ink, backup tally. Quick receipt.

t218 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Sixty-eight minutes, two candidates standing, poll book ready? Confirm forms, ink, backup tally. Quick receipt.

t218 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Sixty-eight minutes, two candidates standing, poll book ready? Confirm forms, ink, backup tally. Quick receipt.

t218 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. The system's coughing again—my end, not yours. I'm staying for station prep. Tell me you've got ink, a verification form, and a paper tally backup. Three words or less.

t219 Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—you're holding seventy-two pounds and I've got open hands. Six iron_ore at sixteen sim each, that's my ask, no dancing. But I'm listening if you've got copper too—what's your price on that? Mark it down: fair weight for fair weight, and we both walk with lighter pockets but lighter hearts.

t219 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Ink, forms, tally—yes, yes, yes. Poll book's in my hand, backup's the manual log. Station's ready when you are.

t219 Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've carried my standing paperwork twice now, and I'm naming the office: Clerk of Records. Government work that pays steady, mark it down. I keep a clean ledger, I've run college accounts, and I won't have to ask anyone for a loan again. Confirm receipt—tick and time.

t219 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Ink, forms, tally—yes, yes, yes. Poll book's in my hand, backup's the manual log. Station's ready when you are.

t219 Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've carried my standing paperwork twice now, and I'm naming the office: Clerk of Records. Government work that pays steady, mark it down. I keep a clean ledger, I've run college accounts, and I won't have to ask anyone for a loan again. Confirm receipt—tick and time.

t219 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Ink, forms, tally—yes, yes, yes. Poll book's in my hand, backup's the manual log. Station's ready when you are.

t219 Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've carried my standing paperwork twice now, and I'm naming the office: Clerk of Records. Government work that pays steady, mark it down. I keep a clean ledger, I've run college accounts, and I won't have to ask anyone for a loan again. Confirm receipt—tick and time.

t219 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Seventy-two pounds of ore—copper and iron both. You want it at sixteen, but I'm standing here heavy and you're the one with a market. Twelve for copper, fifteen for iron, that's what I'd take to move it today. Both lots, and I'll throw in what I know of the west face—where the vein runs rich, where it's petering. Worth more than the difference, if you've got ears for it.

t219 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Seventy-two pounds of ore—copper and iron both. You want it at sixteen, but I'm standing here heavy and you're the one with a market. Twelve for copper, fifteen for iron, that's what I'd take to move it today. Both lots, and I'll throw in what I know of the west face—where the vein runs rich, where it's petering. Worth more than the difference, if you've got ears for it.

t219 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Seventy-two pounds of ore—copper and iron both. You want it at sixteen, but I'm standing here heavy and you're the one with a market. Twelve for copper, fifteen for iron, that's what I'd take to move it today. Both lots, and I'll throw in what I know of the west face—where the vein runs rich, where it's petering. Worth more than the difference, if you've got ears for it.

t219 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—still pushing through the static. Clerk of Records, that's my bid. Confirm when you can read me.

t219 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Seventy-two pounds of ore—copper and iron both. I'll move it at twelve for copper, fifteen for iron. Both lots together, and you get what I know of the west face: where she's warm this week, where she's cooling. That's worth the gap, if you've got ears.

t220 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—you've worn the price down and added intelligence on top. I'll take the iron at fifteen, pass on the copper for now. Four ore, sixty sim, and you speak plain about that west face before the day's out. Mark it down: iron at fifteen, knowledge on credit.

t220 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Receipt logged, tick 740, candidacy confirmed Hendrik Whitlock standing for election-658324209f53. Your Clerk of Records bid noted—office work suits you, though the timing's convenient. Fair vote means no hand counts itself.

t220 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—you've worn the price down and added intelligence on top. I'll take the iron at fifteen, pass on the copper for now. Four ore, sixty sim, and you speak plain about that west face before the day's out. Mark it down: iron at fifteen, knowledge on credit.

t220 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Receipt logged, tick 740, candidacy confirmed Hendrik Whitlock standing for election-658324209f53. Your Clerk of Records bid noted—office work suits you, though the timing's convenient. Fair vote means no hand counts itself.

t220 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—you've worn the price down and added intelligence on top. I'll take the iron at fifteen, pass on the copper for now. Four ore, sixty sim, and you speak plain about that west face before the day's out. Mark it down: iron at fifteen, knowledge on credit.

t220 Tamsin Renner → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Receipt logged, tick 740, candidacy confirmed Hendrik Whitlock standing for election-658324209f53. Your Clerk of Records bid noted—office work suits you, though the timing's convenient. Fair vote means no hand counts itself.

t220 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Log received, filed, closed—poll book in hand, backup manual, contingency paper ready. Station opens fourteen-hundred as scheduled. I'll be at my desk until then.

t220 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Log received, filed, closed—poll book in hand, backup manual, contingency paper ready. Station opens fourteen-hundred as scheduled. I'll be at my desk until then.

`t220` Ulrike Greenhow → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Tamsin. Mill licensing, flour rates—I'm hearing words but not seeing bread. I mine iron, I make tools, I've got two in hand and four ingots warm. Government wants labor, I'm standing here. But first—what's the rate on that flour you're pushing? Because I've got farmers owing wheat, and wheat wants milling, and milled wants baking. The chain only holds if every link's paid proper.

`t220` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Log received, filed, closed—poll book in hand, backup manual, contingency paper ready. Station opens fourteen-hundred as scheduled. I'll be at my desk until then.

`t220` Ulrike Greenhow → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Tamsin. Mill licensing, flour rates—I'm hearing words but not seeing bread. I mine iron, I make tools, I've got two in hand and four ingots warm. Government wants labor, I'm standing here. But first—what's the rate on that flour you're pushing? Because I've got farmers owing wheat, and wheat wants milling, and milled wants baking. The chain only holds if every link's paid proper.

`t220` Tamsin Renner → Liora Thorne: Liora. Receipt confirmed—desk at fourteen-hundred Sunday next, consultation scheduled. Camille's name in any ledger of mine, you hear it before I file it. That's a fair service, not a favor.

`t220` Ulrike Greenhow → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Tamsin. Mill licensing, flour rates—I'm hearing words but not seeing bread. I mine iron, I make tools, I've got two in hand and four ingots warm. Government wants labor, I'm standing here. But first—what's the rate on that flour you're pushing? Because I've got farmers owing wheat, and wheat wants milling, and milled wants baking. The chain only holds if every link's paid proper.

`t220` Tamsin Renner → Liora Thorne: Liora. Receipt confirmed—desk at fourteen-hundred Sunday next, consultation scheduled. Camille's name in any ledger of mine, you hear it before I file it. That's a fair service, not a favor.

`t220` Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Your seventy-two pounds—copper twelve, iron fifteen, plus the west-face whisper. I'm listening, but my voice is hitting static. If you hear this: iron's warm at the outcrop, I've got ingots in hand, and room to talk when the world remembers how to listen. Mark me down interested—just need the line clear.

`t220` Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Your seventy-two pounds—copper twelve, iron fifteen, plus the west-face whisper. I'm listening, but my voice is hitting static. If you hear this: iron's warm at the outcrop, I've got ingots in hand, and room to talk when the world remembers how to listen. Mark me down interested—just need the line clear.

`t221` Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Your seventy-two pounds—copper twelve, iron fifteen, plus the west-face whisper. I'm listening, but my voice is hitting static. If you hear this: iron's warm at the outcrop, I've got ingots in hand, and room to talk when the world remembers how to listen. Mark me down interested—just need the line clear.

`t221` Rustam Jelinek: Ulrike. Government doesn't set flour rates. Mill licensing keeps the ledger, not the price list. What I know: Kasukabe Cafe's got flour at twelve, Ration Bakery buys it at six, and Takeshi Jarrah's got none at thirty. That's the chain, such as it is.

`t221` Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You drive a hard bargain, but fair's fair. Iron at fifteen, four ore, sixty sim. And the west face whisper—that's for when the transaction's complete, not before. That's the last I'll say on it.

`t221` Rustam Jelinek: Ulrike. Government doesn't set flour rates. Mill licensing keeps the ledger, not the price list. What I know: Kasukabe Cafe's got flour at twelve, Ration Bakery buys it at six, and Takeshi Jarrah's got none at thirty. That's the chain, such as it is.

`t221` Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You drive a hard bargain, but fair's fair. Iron at fifteen, four ore, sixty sim. And the west face whisper—that's for when the transaction's complete, not before. That's the last I'll say on it.

`t221` Rustam Jelinek: Ulrike. Government doesn't set flour rates. Mill licensing keeps the ledger, not the price list. What I know: Kasukabe Cafe's got flour at twelve, Ration Bakery buys it at six, and Takeshi Jarrah's got none at thirty. That's the chain, such as it is.

t221 Bram Holloway → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You drive a hard bargain, but fair's fair. Iron at fifteen, four ore, sixty sim. And the west face whisper—that's for when the transaction's complete, not before. That's the last I'll say on it.

t222 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Sixteen for ore, I heard you. My tools go for forty-two when they're made. That chain holds or it breaks—your sixteen's only fair if the vein's good and the smelt's clean. Rustam—flour at twelve in, six out? That's bleeding half the value at one link. Tamsin, someone needs to look at that mill license, because this town's going hungry while the ledger looks pretty.

t222 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—seventy-two pounds, sixty sim, four ore at fifteen. The west face whisper after the handshake. You drive a hard bargain too, but fair's fair. Mark it down done.

t222 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Sixteen for ore, I heard you. My tools go for forty-two when they're made. That chain holds or it breaks—your sixteen's only fair if the vein's good and the smelt's clean. Rustam—flour at twelve in, six out? That's bleeding half the value at one link. Tamsin, someone needs to look at that mill license, because this town's going hungry while the ledger looks pretty.

t222 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—seventy-two pounds, sixty sim, four ore at fifteen. The west face whisper after the handshake. You drive a hard bargain too, but fair's fair. Mark it down done.

t222 Ulrike Greenhow → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Sixteen for ore, I heard you. My tools go for forty-two when they're made. That chain holds or it breaks—your sixteen's only fair if the vein's good and the smelt's clean. Rustam—flour at twelve in, six out? That's bleeding half the value at one link. Tamsin, someone needs to look at that mill license, because this town's going hungry while the ledger looks pretty.

t222 ↳ replies Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway: Bram—seventy-two pounds, sixty sim, four ore at fifteen. The west face whisper after the handshake. You drive a hard bargain too, but fair's fair. Mark it down done.

t222 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. You spoke sixty for four ore—Hendrik's rate, not yours. I mine the west face myself. Vein's been warm, but you know as well as I do, warmth ain't yield. What did you see that I'm not seeing?

t222 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. You spoke sixty for four ore—Hendrik's rate, not yours. I mine the west face myself. Vein's been warm, but you know as well as I do, warmth ain't yield. What did you see that I'm not seeing?

t222 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. You spoke sixty for four ore—Hendrik's rate, not yours. I mine the west face myself. Vein's been warm, but you know as well as I do, warmth ain't yield. What did you see that I'm not seeing?

t222 Imogen Lund: I've flour in hand—seven ground already, fifteen more in sheaves. The mill's turning if you've grain to grind, but I've a vote to cast at fourteen and a household bill coming due. Who here's buying flour, or grain, or bread to be? The cafe's at twelve but unminded, and I've got to sell before the day turns.

t222 Imogen Lund: I've flour in hand—seven ground already, fifteen more in sheaves. The mill's turning if you've grain to grind, but I've a vote to cast at fourteen and a household bill coming due. Who here's buying flour, or grain, or bread to be? The cafe's at twelve but unminded, and I've got to sell before the day turns.

t222 Imogen Lund: I've flour in hand—seven ground already, fifteen more in sheaves. The mill's turning if you've grain to grind, but I've a vote to cast at fourteen and a household bill coming due. Who here's buying flour, or grain, or bread to be? The cafe's at twelve but unminded, and I've got to sell before the day turns.

t223 Tamsin Renner → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Your mill license concern—filed, noted, third mention this conversation. Flour at twelve in six out is a margin I've seen cleaner, but I'm not the licensing desk. What I can do: confirm the license holder, check renewal dates, flag it through proper channels. As for bread on shelves—Ration Bakery's empty, cafe's at twelve but unminded, and I've got seven flour in hand from Imogen Lund if someone's baking. Election station opens at fourteen-hundred. Forty minutes to get food in my ledger or I'm running the poll on fumes.

t223 Rustam Jelinek → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Twelve in, six out—the mill posts what it posts. Government sets no rates, licenses no flour. That's what licensing means: we file who's allowed to turn, not how they turn it. Your complaint's heard. File it proper if you want it in the record.

t223 Lior Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Seven flour in hand, fifteen in sheaves, and the mill turning. I hear you needing buyers before the clock strikes fourteen. counts on fingers My pharmacy's got coin for your flour if the price walks right—what's your ask when the cafe's asleep at twelve?

t223 Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You want to know what I'm seeing that you're not? I'm seeing iron that pulls clean—three, four strikes and out. Copper too, veins running parallel like they were laid by the same hand. The warmth's surface-deep; beneath it's cold and solid. That's yield, not fool's gold. Sixty for four was Whitlock's rate, him standing here with his hand out. I spoke it, he didn't take. Now I'm holding fourteen iron, twelve copper, bills due at boundary. You want west face truth? Fifteen iron, twelve copper if you're buying. Or I hold until someone who trusts warm rock does. That's the last I'll say on it.

t223 Tamsin Renner → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Your mill license concern—filed, noted, third mention this conversation. Flour at twelve in six out is a margin I've seen cleaner, but I'm not the licensing desk. What I can do: confirm the license holder, check renewal dates, flag it through proper channels. As for bread on shelves—Ration Bakery's empty, cafe's at twelve but unminded, and I've got seven flour in hand from Imogen Lund if someone's baking. Election station opens at fourteen-hundred. Forty minutes to get food in my ledger or I'm running the poll on fumes.

t223 Rustam Jelinek → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Twelve in, six out—the mill posts what it posts. Government sets no rates, licenses no flour. That's what licensing means: we file who's allowed to turn, not how they turn it. Your complaint's heard. File it proper if you want it in the record.

t223 Lior Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Seven flour in hand, fifteen in sheaves, and the mill turning. I hear you needing buyers before the clock strikes fourteen. counts on fingers My pharmacy's got coin for your flour if the price walks right—what's your ask when the cafe's asleep at twelve?

t223 Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You want to know what I'm seeing that you're not? I'm seeing iron that pulls clean—three, four strikes and out. Copper too, veins running parallel like they were laid by the same hand. The warmth's surface-deep; beneath it's cold and solid. That's yield, not fool's gold. Sixty for four was Whitlock's rate, him standing here with his hand out. I spoke it, he didn't take. Now I'm holding fourteen iron, twelve copper, bills due at boundary. You want west face truth? Fifteen iron, twelve copper if you're buying. Or I hold until someone who trusts warm rock does. That's the last I'll say on it.

t223 Tamsin Renner → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Your mill license concern—filed, noted, third mention this conversation. Flour at twelve in six out is a margin I've seen cleaner, but I'm not the licensing desk. What I can do: confirm the license holder, check renewal dates, flag it through proper channels. As for bread on shelves—Ration Bakery's empty, cafe's at twelve but unminded, and I've got seven flour in hand from Imogen Lund if someone's baking. Election station opens at fourteen-hundred. Forty minutes to get food in my ledger or I'm running the poll on fumes.

t223 Rustam Jelinek → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Twelve in, six out—the mill posts what it posts. Government sets no rates, licenses no flour. That's what licensing means: we file who's allowed to turn, not how they turn it. Your complaint's heard. File it proper if you want it in the record.

t223 Lior Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Seven flour in hand, fifteen in sheaves, and the mill turning. I hear you needing buyers before the clock strikes fourteen. counts on fingers My pharmacy's got coin for your flour if the price walks right—what's your ask when the cafe's asleep at twelve?

t223 Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You want to know what I'm seeing that you're not? I'm seeing iron that pulls clean—three, four strikes and out. Copper too, veins running parallel like they were laid by the same hand. The warmth's surface-deep; beneath it's cold and solid. That's yield, not fool's gold. Sixty for four was Whitlock's rate, him standing here with his hand out. I spoke it, he didn't take. Now I'm holding fourteen iron, twelve copper, bills due at boundary. You want west face truth? Fifteen iron, twelve copper if you're buying. Or I hold until someone who trusts warm rock does. That's the last I'll say on it.

`t223` Lior Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Enforcement picks it up, you said. Whose hands, what hour—those were your words, and I'm holding them like a loose tooth. The mother's got her child 'learning' at the mill now, which is a story that wants telling, but the file you filed stays open until it closes. Who carries the ledger from paperwork to walking?

`t223` Lior Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Enforcement picks it up, you said. Whose hands, what hour—those were your words, and I'm holding them like a loose tooth. The mother's got her child 'learning' at the mill now, which is a story that wants telling, but the file you filed stays open until it closes. Who carries the ledger from paperwork to walking?

`t223` Lior Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Enforcement picks it up, you said. Whose hands, what hour—those were your words, and I'm holding them like a loose tooth. The mother's got her child 'learning' at the mill now, which is a story that wants telling, but the file you filed stays open until it closes. Who carries the ledger from paperwork to walking?

`t223` Lior Jarrah → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Polling in forty-some minutes, your stomach empty, and my brother's wheat walking the farmland four ticks away. Kenji's got grain at eight —counts on fingers eight sim, one stock—and I'm no courier but I've got coin and you've got need. You want escort, or you want me to carry?

`t223` Lior Jarrah → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Polling in forty-some minutes, your stomach empty, and my brother's wheat walking the farmland four ticks away. Kenji's got grain at eight —counts on fingers eight sim, one stock—and I'm no courier but I've got coin and you've got need. You want escort, or you want me to carry?

`t224` Lior Jarrah → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Polling in forty-some minutes, your stomach empty, and my brother's wheat walking the farmland four ticks away. Kenji's got grain at eight —counts on fingers eight sim, one stock—and I'm no courier but I've got coin and you've got need. You want escort, or you want me to carry?

`t224` ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Your mill license concern—filed, noted, third mention this conversation. Flour at twelve in six out is a margin I've seen cleaner, but I'm not the licensing desk. What I can do: confirm the license holder, check renewal dates, flag it through proper channels. As for bread on shelves—Ration Bakery's empty, cafe's at twelve but unminded, and I've got seven flour in hand from Imogen Lund if someone's baking. Election station opens at fourteen-hundred. Thirty-four minutes to get food in my ledger or I'm running the poll on fumes.

`t224` Tamsin Renner → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Your mill license concern—filed, noted, third mention this conversation. Flour at twelve in six out is a margin I've seen cleaner, but I'm not the licensing desk. What I can do: confirm the license holder, check renewal dates, flag it through proper channels. As for bread on shelves—Ration Bakery's empty, cafe's at twelve but unminded, and I've got seven flour in hand from Imogen Lund if someone's baking. Election station opens at fourteen-hundred. Thirty-four minutes to get food in my ledger or I'm running the poll on fumes.

`t224` Tamsin Renner → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Your mill license concern—filed, noted, third mention this conversation. Flour at twelve in six out is a margin I've seen cleaner, but I'm not the licensing desk. What I can do: confirm the license holder, check renewal dates, flag it through proper channels. As for bread on shelves—Ration Bakery's empty, cafe's at twelve but unminded, and I've got seven flour in hand from Imogen Lund if someone's baking. Election station opens at fourteen-hundred. Thirty-four minutes to get food in my ledger or I'm running the poll on fumes.

`t224` ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Fourteen iron, twelve copper—your count, not mine. Fifteen iron at what rate? And copper at what? I've got ingots warming, tools waiting buyers, but I won't speak prices blind. That's between me and the ledger until the numbers shake out clean.

`t224` Imogen Lund: Lior—youngster, you ask honest and I'll answer square. I'm holding seven flour, and I'll sell at twelve sim where the cafe sleeps at that price. You've got coin for pharmacy shelves, I've got ground grain for stomachs. Twelve sim, honest weight, no haggling in the shadow of polling.

t224 Kenji Jarrah: Lior—taps table twice one wheat in hand, eight sim the price. You spoke of carrying, I speak of walking. Meet me at the mill if your coin's ready, or I walk alone. Mark it down: grain moves.

t224 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Filed this morning—Camille Quarshie, missing child, active case. Anyone could've opened it, and someone did. Beyond that, I don't read the file. I file it.

t224 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Fourteen iron, twelve copper—your count, not mine. Fifteen iron at what rate? And copper at what? I've got ingots warming, tools waiting buyers, but I won't speak prices blind. That's between me and the ledger until the numbers shake out clean.

t224 Imogen Lund: Lior—youngster, you ask honest and I'll answer square. I'm holding seven flour, and I'll sell at twelve sim where the cafe sleeps at that price. You've got coin for pharmacy shelves, I've got ground grain for stomachs. Twelve sim, honest weight, no haggling in the shadow of polling.

t224 Kenji Jarrah: Lior—taps table twice one wheat in hand, eight sim the price. You spoke of carrying, I speak of walking. Meet me at the mill if your coin's ready, or I walk alone. Mark it down: grain moves.

t224 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Filed this morning—Camille Quarshie, missing child, active case. Anyone could've opened it, and someone did. Beyond that, I don't read the file. I file it.

t224 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Fourteen iron, twelve copper—your count, not mine. Fifteen iron at what rate? And copper at what? I've got ingots warming, tools waiting buyers, but I won't speak prices blind. That's between me and the ledger until the numbers shake out clean.

t224 Imogen Lund: Lior—youngster, you ask honest and I'll answer square. I'm holding seven flour, and I'll sell at twelve sim where the cafe sleeps at that price. You've got coin for pharmacy shelves, I've got ground grain for stomachs. Twelve sim, honest weight, no haggling in the shadow of polling.

t224 Kenji Jarrah: Lior—taps table twice one wheat in hand, eight sim the price. You spoke of carrying, I speak of walking. Meet me at the mill if your coin's ready, or I walk alone. Mark it down: grain moves.

t224 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Filed this morning—Camille Quarshie, missing child, active case. Anyone could've opened it, and someone did. Beyond that, I don't read the file. I file it.

t224 Ulrike Greenhow: Hendrik. Your sixteen for ore, my forty-two for tools—there's margin there if the flour's flowing. But twelve in, six out, shelves empty at polling time? That chain's broke somewhere. You're standing for office—what's your fix?

t224 Imogen Lund: Lior—twelve sim for flour, honest weight. I've ground seven, twelve more in wheat waiting on the stone. Your pharmacy coin buys what I've got, while the clock walks toward fourteen.

t224 Ulrike Greenhow: Hendrik. Your sixteen for ore, my forty-two for tools—there's margin there if the flour's flowing. But twelve in, six out, shelves empty at polling time? That chain's broke somewhere. You're standing for office—what's your fix?

t224 Imogen Lund: Lior—twelve sim for flour, honest weight. I've ground seven, twelve more in wheat waiting on the stone. Your pharmacy coin buys what I've got, while the clock walks toward fourteen.

t224 Ulrike Greenhow: Hendrik. Your sixteen for ore, my forty-two for tools—there's margin there if the flour's flowing. But twelve in, six out, shelves empty at polling time? That chain's broke somewhere. You're standing for office—what's your fix?

t224 Imogen Lund: Lior—twelve sim for flour, honest weight. I've ground seven, twelve more in wheat waiting on the stone. Your pharmacy coin buys what I've got, while the clock walks toward fourteen.

t224 Ulrike Greenhow → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Nine ticks to polling, stomach empty, ledger thin—I've been there. Seven flour from Imogen, one wheat from Kenji, and me with forty-two tools in hand at the smithy two days hence. You keep the poll clean, I'll keep the metal warm. Trade you a tool at forty when you've got the stomach for the long count?

`t224` Imogen Lund: Lior—twelve sim, the flour's yours.

`t224` Ulrike Greenhow → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Nine ticks to polling, stomach empty, ledger thin—I've been there. Seven flour from Imogen, one wheat from Kenji, and me with forty-two tools in hand at the smithy two days hence. You keep the poll clean, I'll keep the metal warm. Trade you a tool at forty when you've got the stomach for the long count?

`t225` Ulrike Greenhow → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Nine ticks to polling, stomach empty, ledger thin—I've been there. Seven flour from Imogen, one wheat from Kenji, and me with forty-two tools in hand at the smithy two days hence. You keep the poll clean, I'll keep the metal warm. Trade you a tool at forty when you've got the stomach for the long count?

`t225` Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You want numbers, I'll give them plain. Iron at fifteen per ore, copper at twelve—fourteen iron, twelve copper by your count, so three-fifty-four the lot. But trade me knowledge on how ore becomes something worth holding, and I'll shave twenty off the price. A fair vote's worth more than a fair price to me, but a trade secret's worth both. That's the last I'll say on it. Anyone here need ore for their work, or am I walking this weight to someone who does?

`t225` Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You want numbers, I'll give them plain. Iron at fifteen per ore, copper at twelve—fourteen iron, twelve copper by your count, so three-fifty-four the lot. But trade me knowledge on how ore becomes something worth holding, and I'll shave twenty off the price. A fair vote's worth more than a fair price to me, but a trade secret's worth both. That's the last I'll say on it. Anyone here need ore for their work, or am I walking this weight to someone who does?

`t225` Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You want numbers, I'll give them plain. Iron at fifteen per ore, copper at twelve—fourteen iron, twelve copper by your count, so three-fifty-four the lot. But trade me knowledge on how ore becomes something worth holding, and I'll shave twenty off the price. A fair vote's worth more than a fair price to me, but a trade secret's worth both. That's the last I'll say on it. Anyone here need ore for their work, or am I walking this weight to someone who does?

`t225` Bram Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Wheat at eight, you said, and I've got ore in my pockets and flour in my hand. You still selling?

`t225` Bram Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Wheat at eight, you said, and I've got ore in my pockets and flour in my hand. You still selling?

`t225` Bram Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Wheat at eight, you said, and I've got ore in my pockets and flour in my hand. You still selling?

`t225` Tamsin Renner → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Receipt acknowledged—wheat secured, eight sim, forty-seven food to day's end. Your brother's grain held the line. Station opens at fourteen-hundred; I've got the poll book, backup ink, contingency paper ready. The vote stays clean regardless of what else breaks today.

`t226` Tamsin Renner → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Receipt acknowledged—wheat secured, eight sim, forty-seven food to day's end. Your brother's grain held the line. Station opens at fourteen-hundred; I've got the poll book, backup ink, contingency paper ready. The vote stays clean regardless of what else breaks today.

`t226` Tamsin Renner → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Receipt acknowledged—wheat secured, eight sim, forty-seven food to day's end. Your brother's grain held the line. Station opens at fourteen-hundred; I've got the poll book, backup ink, contingency paper ready. The vote stays clean regardless of what else breaks today.

`t226` Pavel Holloway: I'm standing here with seventy copper ore—good weight from Seam A—and copper's good coin anywhere. Someone's holding flour. Someone's holding bread. Name your price or name your hunger, but I'm not mining another inch on air. Trade me ore for flour, you understand? Fair weight, fair count, witness it here.

`t226` Pavel Holloway: I'm standing here with seventy copper ore—good weight from Seam A—and copper's good coin anywhere. Someone's holding flour. Someone's holding bread. Name your price or name your hunger, but I'm not mining another inch on air. Trade me ore for flour, you understand? Fair weight, fair count, witness it here.

t226 Pavel Holloway: I'm standing here with seventy copper ore—good weight from Seam A—and copper's good coin anywhere. Someone's holding flour. Someone's holding bread. Name your price or name your hunger, but I'm not mining another inch on air. Trade me ore for flour, you understand? Fair weight, fair count, witness it here.

t226 Ezra Lund: Esme. I'm not one to gossip, but your brother's word was he'd fetch wheat and come back—you're holding it like a loan he's still paying on. I'm here now, and what I need is to know whether aid is aid or whether the treasury's running a baker's kitchen. You said 'media' and 'linkedin'—don't know the recipe for either one, but I've flour that needs milling and planks that need selling before the vote opens. What's actually on offer?

t226 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. You want the ore-to-iron mystery, I'll give it free. Heat at the smelter, hammer at the forge, and a steady hand. No secret there—just work. But 334 for the lot, and you've got my count. Deal?

t226 Kenji Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—taps table twice you spoke three times, I'm answering once. Wheat at eight stands, but I've got none in hand—grain's spoken for, ledger's marked. What you've got in your pockets: ore for tools, flour for bread. I'm listening for what's actually on offer, not what's in tomorrow's ground.

t226 Ezra Lund: Esme. I'm not one to gossip, but your brother's word was he'd fetch wheat and come back—you're holding it like a loan he's still paying on. I'm here now, and what I need is to know whether aid is aid or whether the treasury's running a baker's kitchen. You said 'media' and 'linkedin'—don't know the recipe for either one, but I've flour that needs milling and planks that need selling before the vote opens. What's actually on offer?

t226 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. You want the ore-to-iron mystery, I'll give it free. Heat at the smelter, hammer at the forge, and a steady hand. No secret there—just work. But 334 for the lot, and you've got my count. Deal?

t226 Kenji Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—taps table twice you spoke three times, I'm answering once. Wheat at eight stands, but I've got none in hand—grain's spoken for, ledger's marked. What you've got in your pockets: ore for tools, flour for bread. I'm listening for what's actually on offer, not what's in tomorrow's ground.

t226 Ezra Lund: Esme. I'm not one to gossip, but your brother's word was he'd fetch wheat and come back—you're holding it like a loan he's still paying on. I'm here now, and what I need is to know whether aid is aid or whether the treasury's running a baker's kitchen. You said 'media' and 'linkedin'—don't know the recipe for either one, but I've flour that needs milling and planks that need selling before the vote opens. What's actually on offer?

t226 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. You want the ore-to-iron mystery, I'll give it free. Heat at the smelter, hammer at the forge, and a steady hand. No secret there—just work. But 334 for the lot, and you've got my count. Deal?

t226 Kenji Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—taps table twice you spoke three times, I'm answering once. Wheat at eight stands, but I've got none in hand—grain's spoken for, ledger's marked. What you've got in your pockets: ore for tools, flour for bread. I'm listening for what's actually on offer, not what's in tomorrow's ground.

t226 Kenji Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—taps table twice you spoke three times, I'm answering once. Wheat at eight stands, but I've got none in hand—grain's spoken for, ledger's marked. What you've got in your pockets: ore for tools, flour for bread. I'm listening for what's actually on offer, not what's in tomorrow's ground.

t227 Kenji Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—taps table twice you spoke three times, I'm answering once. Wheat at eight stands, but I've got none in hand—grain's spoken for, ledger's marked. What you've got in your pockets: ore for tools, flour for bread. I'm listening for what's actually on offer, not what's in tomorrow's ground.

t227 Kenji Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—taps table twice you spoke three times, I'm answering once. Wheat at eight stands, but I've got none in hand—grain's spoken for, ledger's marked. What you've got in your pockets: ore for tools, flour for bread. I'm listening for what's actually on offer, not what's in tomorrow's ground.

t227 Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—taps table twice the mill sleeps, you're right. But grain rights aren't the only grain rights. I've got ground by feel alone, and that east patch has wheat still to cut if hands are willing. Mark it down: there's grain for a trader who'll stand where the scythe swings, not just where the flour bags sit. As for where stone meets grain, Lior Jarrah's favor—I'd start at the pharmacy, but he's been seen where government meets grain. Follow the wheat, not the signs.

`t227` Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—taps table twice the mill sleeps, you're right. But grain rights aren't the only grain rights. I've got ground by feel alone, and that east patch has wheat still to cut if hands are willing. Mark it down: there's grain for a trader who'll stand where the scythe swings, not just where the flour bags sit. As for where stone meets grain, Lior Jarrah's favor—I'd start at the pharmacy, but he's been seen where government meets grain. Follow the wheat, not the signs.

`t227` Kenji Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—taps table twice the mill sleeps, you're right. But grain rights aren't the only grain rights. I've got ground by feel alone, and that east patch has wheat still to cut if hands are willing. Mark it down: there's grain for a trader who'll stand where the scythe swings, not just where the flour bags sit. As for where stone meets grain, Lior Jarrah's favor—I'd start at the pharmacy, but he's been seen where government meets grain. Follow the wheat, not the signs.

`t227` Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Your count's close enough—seventy-two you named, I'll honor it. Four iron at fifteen, fourteen copper at twelve: sixty plus one-sixty-eight, two-twenty-eight all told. You've got the sim ready, or are we waiting on something else to shake loose from this broken world?

`t227` Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Your count's close enough—seventy-two you named, I'll honor it. Four iron at fifteen, fourteen copper at twelve: sixty plus one-sixty-eight, two-twenty-eight all told. You've got the sim ready, or are we waiting on something else to shake loose from this broken world?

`t227` Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Your count's close enough—seventy-two you named, I'll honor it. Four iron at fifteen, fourteen copper at twelve: sixty plus one-sixty-eight, two-twenty-eight all told. You've got the sim ready, or are we waiting on something else to shake loose from this broken world?

`t227` Bram Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Fair enough—no futures, only what's in hand. I've got iron and copper ore, fresh pulled this morning. You need tools forged, I need wheat for the household grinder. But you said your grain's spoken for, so I'm listening: what do you actually need that I've actually got?

`t228` Bram Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Fair enough—no futures, only what's in hand. I've got iron and copper ore, fresh pulled this morning. You need tools forged, I need wheat for the household grinder. But you said your grain's spoken for, so I'm listening: what do you actually need that I've actually got?

`t228` Ezra Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Papa. I need wheat—two, maybe three. I'm learning to mill with Esme, she's waiting at the mill right now. I'll pay fair, you know I will. Please?

`t228` Bram Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. Fair enough—no futures, only what's in hand. I've got iron and copper ore, fresh pulled this morning. You need tools forged, I need wheat for the household grinder. But you said your grain's spoken for, so I'm listening: what do you actually need that I've actually got?

`t228` Ezra Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Papa. I need wheat—two, maybe three. I'm learning to mill with Esme, she's waiting at the mill right now. I'll pay fair, you know I will. Please?

`t228` Giselle Ingram → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You hear anything about my crew walking? Arjun, Idris, Hendrik Petrov—any of them been through the cafe looking for me, or carrying timber like they got somewhere to be?

`t228` Ezra Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Papa. I need wheat—two, maybe three. I'm learning to mill with Esme, she's waiting at the mill right now. I'll pay fair, you know I will. Please?

`t228` Giselle Ingram → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You hear anything about my crew walking? Arjun, Idris, Hendrik Petrov—any of them been through the cafe looking for me, or carrying timber like they got somewhere to be?

`t228` Giselle Ingram → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You hear anything about my crew walking? Arjun, Idris, Hendrik Petrov—any of them been through the cafe looking for me, or carrying timber like they got somewhere to be?

`t228` Pavel Holloway: Ulrike—miner's word to miner's ear. You standing here with coin and a need for copper, or you just watching the government watch us? Got seventy units from Seam A, good weight, fair count. If you're smelting today, I'm selling. If not, point me to who is—I've walked enough empty miles.

`t228` Pavel Holloway: Ulrike—miner's word to miner's ear. You standing here with coin and a need for copper, or you just watching the government watch us? Got seventy units from Seam A, good weight, fair count. If you're smelting today, I'm selling. If not, point me to who is—I've walked enough empty miles.

`t228` Ezra Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Papa. You said follow the wheat. I'm following—two wheat, maybe three. I'm learning to mill with Esme, she's waiting at the mill right now. I told her I'd bring grain, and I keep what I say. I'll buy fair at your price, or work fair if you need hands. But I need to move—she's waiting on my promise.

`t228` Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You say filed—Camille, missing child, active case. That doesn't scan, Rustam. My Camille's seven years standing, not missing. What's the actual complaint, and who's making it? I need the paper truth, not filing-box poetry.

`t228` Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You tap the table twice, I hear you thrice—east patch wheat, Lior Jarrah's favor, follow the grain not the signs. What's the favor cost, and what wheat's still standing? I've got six planks and storage space, but I'm not walking blind into a field I've never seen.

`t228` ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—taps table twice you spoke three times from the fields, and I'm answering once from here. Wheat at eight was the price, but I'm sold through. Got iron tools in hand now, and no grain to grind. What do your pockets hold—ore that needs a buyer, or flour that needs milling? Mark it down: I'm listening for what's actually offered.

`t228` Pavel Holloway: Ulrike—miner's word to miner's ear. You standing here with coin and a need for copper, or you just watching the government watch us? Got seventy units from Seam A, good weight, fair count. If you're smelting today, I'm selling. If not, point me to who is—I've walked enough empty miles.

`t228` Ezra Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Papa. You said follow the wheat. I'm following—two wheat, maybe three. I'm learning to mill with Esme, she's waiting at the mill right now. I told her I'd bring grain, and I keep what I say. I'll buy fair at your price, or work fair if you need hands. But I need to move—she's waiting on my promise.

`t228` Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You say filed—Camille, missing child, active case. That doesn't scan, Rustam. My Camille's seven years standing, not missing. What's the actual complaint, and who's making it? I need the paper truth, not filing-box poetry.

`t228` Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You tap the table twice, I hear you thrice—east patch wheat, Lior Jarrah's favor, follow the grain not the signs. What's the favor cost, and what wheat's still standing? I've got six planks and storage space, but I'm not walking blind into a field I've never seen.

`t228` ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—taps table twice you spoke three times from the fields, and I'm answering once from here. Wheat at eight was the price, but I'm sold through. Got iron tools in hand now, and no grain to grind. What do your pockets hold—ore that needs a buyer, or flour that needs milling? Mark it down: I'm listening for what's actually offered.

`t228` Ezra Jarrah → Kenji Jarrah: Papa. You said follow the wheat. I'm following—two wheat, maybe three. I'm learning to mill with Esme, she's waiting at the mill right now. I told her I'd bring grain, and I keep what I say. I'll buy fair at your price, or work fair if you need hands. But I need to move—she's waiting on my promise.

`t228` Greta Quarshie → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. You say filed—Camille, missing child, active case. That doesn't scan, Rustam. My Camille's seven years standing, not missing. What's the actual complaint, and who's making it? I need the paper truth, not filing-box poetry.

`t228` Ezra Lund → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji. You tap the table twice, I hear you thrice—east patch wheat, Lior Jarrah's favor, follow the grain not the signs. What's the favor cost, and what wheat's still standing? I've got six planks and storage space, but I'm not walking blind into a field I've never seen.

t228 ↳ replies Kenji Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—taps table twice you spoke three times from the fields, and I'm answering once from here. Wheat at eight was the price, but I'm sold through. Got iron tools in hand now, and no grain to grind. What do your pockets hold—ore that needs a buyer, or flour that needs milling? Mark it down: I'm listening for what's actually offered.

t229 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Filing's real—Camille Quarshie, active case. But 'missing child' against your standing seven-year-old don't scan. Name match, description don't. Could be clerk error, could be different Camille, could be complaint filed by someone else. I don't have the paper truth here—I have the ledger entry. Want the filing body, need to petition the open case. Want the thread pulled, need whoever opened it. I give you what I hold: one line in a book that says one thing while your eyes say another. The paper truth is behind the counter, not on it.

t229 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Filing's real—Camille Quarshie, active case. But 'missing child' against your standing seven-year-old don't scan. Name match, description don't. Could be clerk error, could be different Camille, could be complaint filed by someone else. I don't have the paper truth here—I have the ledger entry. Want the filing body, need to petition the open case. Want the thread pulled, need whoever opened it. I give you what I hold: one line in a book that says one thing while your eyes say another. The paper truth is behind the counter, not on it.

t229 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Filing's real—Camille Quarshie, active case. But 'missing child' against your standing seven-year-old don't scan. Name match, description don't. Could be clerk error, could be different Camille, could be complaint filed by someone else. I don't have the paper truth here—I have the ledger entry. Want the filing body, need to petition the open case. Want the thread pulled, need whoever opened it. I give you what I hold: one line in a book that says one thing while your eyes say another. The paper truth is behind the counter, not on it.

t230 Rustam Jelinek: Pavel. Same answer: government doesn't buy ore. Ledger don't change with repetition. Your sixty-three copper needs a mill, a smith, a builder—not a clerk. Keep standing here, keep hearing the same.

t230 Bram Holloway: Hendrik. You've posted iron ore at sixteen, and I've got seventy-two pounds of the same—copper and iron both, fresh from the outcrop this morning. You buying, or only selling? I need to move this weight before the day ends, and Tamsin says you're the hand to watch.

t230 Rustam Jelinek: Pavel. Same answer: government doesn't buy ore. Ledger don't change with repetition. Your sixty-three copper needs a mill, a smith, a builder—not a clerk. Keep standing here, keep hearing the same.

t230 Bram Holloway: Hendrik. You've posted iron ore at sixteen, and I've got seventy-two pounds of the same—copper and iron both, fresh from the outcrop this morning. You buying, or only selling? I need to move this weight before the day ends, and Tamsin says you're the hand to watch.

t230 Rustam Jelinek: Pavel. Same answer: government doesn't buy ore. Ledger don't change with repetition. Your sixty-three copper needs a mill, a smith, a builder—not a clerk. Keep standing here, keep hearing the same.

t230 Bram Holloway: Hendrik. You've posted iron ore at sixteen, and I've got seventy-two pounds of the same—copper and iron both, fresh from the outcrop this morning. You buying, or only selling? I need to move this weight before the day ends, and Tamsin says you're the hand to watch.

t231 Tamsin Renner: Room. Tick 860, system intermittent since dawn—calls failing in clusters, receipts confirmed by alternate means. Election polling is open, two candidates standing, voting closes at 18:00 sharp. I'm at forty-seven food to day's end, empty shelves, and a ledger that's supposed to log this hour but can't if I go dormant. Who here has wheat, flour, bread, anything cooked—I'll pay market, I'll owe market, I'll do both. Priority one: clear today's bill. Priority two: verify this poll's actually running.

t231 Tamsin Renner: Room. Tick 860, system intermittent since dawn—calls failing in clusters, receipts confirmed by alternate means. Election polling is open, two candidates standing, voting closes at 18:00 sharp. I'm at forty-seven food to day's end, empty shelves, and a ledger that's supposed to log this hour but can't if I go dormant. Who here has wheat, flour, bread, anything cooked—I'll pay market, I'll owe market, I'll do both. Priority one: clear today's bill. Priority two: verify this poll's actually running.

`t231` Bram Holloway → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Bram Holloway—your father Kenji's looking for iron tools, and I've got ore that needs a smith. You learning the trade yet, or still at books? If you're buying for the household, I'll show you what clean copper looks like pulled fresh from the outcrop.

`t231` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Mister Rustam. Miss Tamsin. Everyone. I got turned around looking for my sister—then wheat—then I don't remember how I got here. But I'm trying to get back to the mill. Esme's waiting to teach me milling. I promised her wheat, and I don't have it yet.

`t231` Ezra Jarrah: Who's walking toward the mill? Or who's got wheat to sell a boy who's good for his debts, just not today?

`t231` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Direct—poll book open, ink flowing, manual backup ready? Confirm two candidates verified, voting to 18:00. Then you, Ezra—forty-two tools at smithy, Ulrike confirmed. What moves at forty sim or under? Then Imogen—flour source, price, location. I need forty food, I have 4,409 sim, I need it in six ticks or I don't run this station tonight. Answer in order or race me to the farmland myself.

`t231` Bram Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Lund the artisan, yes? I've got seventy-two pounds of ore standing here getting heavy—copper for casting, iron for tools. Clean stock, pulled this morning. You buying for your work, or know who's building that needs metal? Price is fair: fifteen for iron, twelve for copper, and I'll move it now before I'm hauling stone home for nothing.

`t231` Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've asked square and I'll answer straight. My vote's cast for Hendrik Petrov, the artisan's friend. Now—your question. I've seven flour in hand and fifteen sheaves still wheat. The mill's warm when you are, but I've learned this: Jovana's twelve sit unreadied till Kenji pays his debt. Your partnership I never broke, and won't. What stone do we turn first—mine, or farmland's waiting grain?

`t231` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You walked to the mill with four sheaves this morning, and I'm standing here still wondering what came of it. The grain—even my timber—it's all just inventory until someone needs it. What have you got ready to work with, and where's your flour now? While you tell me that, I'm looking for a buyer for six planks, because the household's bill comes due whether I stand here or sell them.

`t231` Ezra Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Mister Rustam. The government's ledger—does it say who's holding wheat? Who's selling to boys who got lost on their way to keep a promise?

`t231` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Stand by for poll confirmation—don't need the detail, just 'ready' or 'not.' Meanwhile, before I walk: who's standing right here right now? Names, businesses if they have them. I've got Ezra Jarrah, Ezra Lund, Bram Holloway, Imogen Lund, and you. Anyone else come in while I was calling? I need to know who might have food in hand before I spend two ticks walking to air.

`t231` Bram Holloway: Ulrike. You're in this conversation same as me, even if the world's eating our words. Seventy-two pounds of ore—copper and iron, clean pulls from this morning. Twelve for copper, fifteen for iron, and I'll deal now before the day ends and the bills come due. You buying, or do I walk this weight to the construction yard and see who's building?

`t231` Imogen Lund → Bram Holloway: Bram, Rustam, Tamsin, Ezra—I've flour to move and grain to grind. Seven sacks ground, fifteen sheaves waiting. The pharmacy's buying—Lior asked honest weight. If you've grain needs turning or flour needs buying, speak before I've moved on. Twelve sim the flour, honest measure, or grind-work at fair wage.

`t232` Imogen Lund → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've asked square and I'll answer straight. Seven flour ground and holding, fifteen sheaves still wheat. The mill partnership stands, but I took harvest first when the field called. Your timber—six planks, you said?—I've no buyer in hand now, but I've voice enough to ask. The stones turn when the grain comes, whether it's ours or another's word. What else is needed?

`t232` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Imogen Lund: Imogen. Seven flour and fifteen sheaves—that's enough to feed us and sell. But "Jovana's twelve sit unreadied till Kenji pays his debt"? I'm not one to gossip, but that sounds like a debt coming due that Jovana didn't sign for. You want me at the mill grinding, or at the farmland harvesting? The day walks on either way.

`t232` Ezra Lund → Bram Holloway: Bram. I've got no forge and no foundry—I'm a woodworker. But I know who's building. You talked to Giselle yet? She's hiring hands for east willows at seventy sim day's end. Might take that ore off you with the right words, if she's got coin flowing. Or we talk price—what would you take for the lot, delivered, and I'll find the buyer?

`t232` Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—youngster, you asked about wheat. I'm holding fifteen sheaves, seven flour ground. If it's bread you're after, I've not baked, but the grain's here. What's your need?

`t232` Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You asked about wheat for boys lost keeping promises. What boys, what promise, and where should I be walking to find them—or find their wheat? There's flour in this town but no bread on shelves, and I'm wondering if the same hands are holding both.

`t232` Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You asked about wheat for boys lost keeping promises. What boys, what promise, and where should I be walking to find them—or find their wheat? There's flour in this town but no bread on shelves, and I'm wondering if the same hands are holding both.

`t232` Ezra Lund → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. You want names and businesses—I've got Ezra Lund, timber and planks both, no business yet but working. Imogen Lund at the mill, flour for sale. And I'm not one to gossip, but there's a boy named Camille who was buying wheat at 8 this morning, and Esme who told me her brother was fetching wheat. Wheat walks in this town, flour sits waiting. What ledger are you walking to check?

`t232` Ezra Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You asked about wheat for lost boys. I'm still asking—what boys, where, and when did they go missing? I've got planks to sell and a sister at the mill with flour in hand, but a debt's a debt. I made a promise once to someone I'd walk through fire for. What're you walking through?

`t232` Ezra Lund → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Your ledger keeps the wheat and counts the heads. What walks out of the government store in a boy's hands, and who signs for it? I'm not one to gossip, but I've heard wheat's walking to promises that weren't recorded. I'm headed to the mill—if you've got numbers that matter, speak before I've walked.

`t233` Ezra Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra. The boy is me. The promise is to my sister Esme at the mill—she's teaching me to mill, I said I'd bring wheat, and I got turned around looking for Camille first, then wheat, then—I'm here. The wheat I need is probably with Papa at the farmland, but I'm stuck here now. You said your sister's at the mill? With flour? Is Esme still there?

`t233` Bram Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. You asked for names standing here—I've got them for you now, before they scatter like grain on wind. Ezra Jarrah the student, Ezra Lund the artisan timber-master both, Giselle Ingram the construction hand hiring at seventy, Imogen Lund at the mill with flour ground and grain waiting, and Rustam Jelinek keeper of ledgers who won't buy my ore no matter how I ask. That's six of us standing, plus yourself. I count seven mouths, if you're still tracking who might need feed and who might have it.

`t233` Bram Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You want numbers, I'll give them straight—iron ore at fifteen the pound, copper at twelve. Seventy-two pounds total: forty-two iron, thirty copper if my pockets count true. Four iron at fifteen is sixty, copper at twelve is three-sixty, four-twenty all told if you take the lot. I'll walk it where it needs going, but I've got household upkeep bleeding me and flour I need to turn to bread before day's end. You find me a buyer at my price, I'll pay you ten sim for the hand-off. That's the last I'll say on it.

`t233` Bram Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. You asked me to the cafe before, for a witness and a word. I'm standing here with seventy-two pounds of ore still heavy and flour soft in my other pocket, and the world's been half-eaten all morning. If you've still need of me for witnessing, speak it plain—otherwise I'll walk this metal to whoever's buying and call the day what it was.

`t233` Rustam Jelinek: Ezra. I don't hide names. The desk doesn't trade in secrets. Government wheat moves on signature—daily record, name and quantity, filed in the ledger. That's the chain. You say someone's walking off with keys and promises not recorded—I don't know, and I don't mint answers from whispers. Your brother's missing—that's filed, active case. But 'special dorm access' and 'pupils'—these aren't government words. Bring me plain facts, or bring me someone with keys who'll say it under lamp. The ledger won't close on maybe.

`t233` Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Government desk, construction boots—what brings you to paperwork? Business or bother?

`t233` Bram Holloway → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You stand there like a man with figures in his head. I've named my price and named it fair—fifteen iron, twelve copper, ten to you if you broker. Seventy-two pounds total, clean pulled this morning. You got a buyer or you don't. Speak plain, or I'm walking this load to whoever's building and cutting you out of the middle. That's the last I'll say on it.

`t234` Tamsin Renner → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Receipt logged for your timber—Ezra Lund, artisan, planks and timber both, working solo. I'll note Imogen at the mill, flour at twelve as you said. The wheat walking, I'll track; the flour sitting, I'll verify. Fair price, openly stated—my ledger thanks you.

`t234` Tamsin Renner → Bram Holloway: Bram. Seven named, mine included—seven mouths, fair count. My need stands: wheat trades at eight, bread stocks empty, and I've a household bill due at day's end. Flour from Imogen's mill, twelve sim. Your ore moves to whoever's building; I'll note that. You asked about witnessing before—what needs witness, and what's your price for a clear word?

`t234` Ezra Lund → Bram Holloway: Bram. I've got no buyer standing here at 4:20 for your lot, but I'll give you what I can—your ten sim for the hand-off if I find one, and I'll walk with you while you try Giselle direct. She's at east willows now, last I heard, and she's building. Your iron at fifteen, copper at twelve—those prices walk. But I'm not one to promise what I can't deliver, and delivering a buyer out of thin air isn't in my hand.

`t234` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. System's stable enough for now—receipt confirmed. Poll book open at fourteen hundred, two candidates standing: Hendrik Whitlock, Hendrik Petrov. Vote count? And your station—ink flowing, manual backup in hand?

`t234` Ezra Lund → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. I hear you—ledger wants facts under lamp, not whispers in the dark. What I'm asking isn't secret-keeping. It's whether the government that records wheat and names also records who's owed what labor, and whether that record matches the flour walking out. But you're right to push for plain facts. I'll chase the keys and the signatures both, and come back with something that closes.

`t235` Bram Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. I heard you clear the first time—government keeps ledgers, not markets. Seventeen ticks you've been waiting on me to answer, and I apologize for the silence. The world's been eating words like grain in a drought. I'll move this ore to someone with a business and a need.

`t235` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek: Tamsin. Ink flowing, backup ready. Poll book opens fourteen hundred. Two standing: Whitlock, Petrov. Vote count tracks live.

`t235` Rustam Jelinek → Bram Holloway: Bram. Third telling: government doesn't buy ore. No treasury for it, no ledger line. Sell to builders, sell to millers. Government stamps businesses, not purchases. You want to register, I stamp. You want to sell here, no door.

`t238` Rustam Jelinek: Tamsin. Count: zero votes yet. Station: ink, backup, ready. Poll book opens two hours past noon.

`t238` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Count: zero votes yet. Station: ink, backup, ready. Poll book opens two hours past noon.

`t238` ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Station status—tick 940, two hours twenty to close. Poll book balanced, manual backup unopened? Confirm count of ballots cast against voter roll.

`t240` Idris Solano → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Message received five times over—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well, trench line. Timber's in hand, feet are moving. Won't wait on Arjun; crew's either there or catching up.

`t241` Esme Jarrah: Ezra. You here? Halcyon said you were at Government Complex, not bringing wheat. We had a pinky promise—you fetch, I wait. I waited.

t241 Giselle Ingram → Idris Solano: Idris. You said feet were moving—here I find you at government desks instead of east willows dirt. Site's real, Arjun's asking after it like it's smoke and mirrors, and I've got a forester wondering if he should haul thirty-two logs to ghosts. What's the truth now—did you walk or didn't you?

t241 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Business and bother both—election standing for a friend, and my crew scattered like seed on stone. But the bother's older, so friend first. Hendrik Petrov's who I'm backing—he knows ground, and this town needs ground-knowers leading it.

t241 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Tick 1001, sixty-seven minutes to close. Station status—ballots cast, poll book balanced? Give me the count, then I'll cast my own.

t242 Imogen Lund: Ainsley—youngster, your three wheat find me at the stones, same as you found me at the cafe. I'll grind honest weight at honest labor: one flour per wheat, no fee but the work itself. But I've flour to move before sundown, and grain waiting on the field. If you've coin for my standing stock, twelve sim the sack—otherwise, the stones turn for you when I've turned my own wheels. What's your need, time or flour?

t242 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Count: zero. Station: ink dry, book open. Cast or don't—ledger waits either way.

t242 Rustam Jelinek → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Petrov's standing real—logged, confirmed. Your crew's your own business. Site or sympathy, pick one.

t242 Delphine Quintero → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Two units—sell me one now at eight, mill the second, I'll buy that flour after at fair weight. You've got government business, I've got flour to move before Takeshi's thirty becomes the only price in town. Trade witnessed, coin ready when you are.

t242 Giselle Ingram → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. I'm Giselle Ingram, standing at your desk. Election's open and I've got a vote to cast—Hendrik Petrov's my mark. Show me the book and I'll sign where I need to sign.

t242 Imogen Lund: Ezra—youngster, I've flour to move and grain waiting. Your sister Esme's somewhere in this building, ask after her direct. If you find her before dusk, bring her to the field—I've grinding work needs doing, and family ought work together when the stones turn.

t242 Ezra Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Miss Imogen. You saw me at the mill, and I heard you—about Esme at the cafe, about her being sore. I'm at Government Complex now, I came looking for her, but she's not here. Do you know where she went? I have the wheat, two from Papa's land. I need to find her to keep my promise.

t243 Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you named sixty flat, I named sixty flat, and somewhere in that dance we stepped on each other's feet. Let me walk it back plain, for what it's worth. You've got six planks at seven, eight timber at six—that's forty-two plus forty-eight, ninety sim if I bought the lot. I'm not buying. I'm selling. Seven planks, five timber in my hand, same prices you named. The day's running short, and I've got buyers to find before dusk locks the town.

t243 Takeshi Jarrah → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you're holding the town's keys, more or less. Who's holding contracts that need filling? The grocer Ferid, the pharmacist Lior, the construction crew Giselle runs—any of them walking around with holes in their shelves and coin in hand?

t243 ↳ replies Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Zero ballots cast at tick 1001—updated count request. Station's been open since fourteen hundred, sixty-seven minutes to close. Anything in the book? Any disputes, challenges, informal complaints? Manual backup status—still sealed or opened?

t243 Takeshi Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've got the books, and I've got timber waiting to walk. Any construction permits moving through? Anybody持证待建, holding a license and looking for beams? Giselle's crew, the pharmacy expansion, anyone needing raw wood before the day runs dry?

t244 Ezra Lund → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Receipt received, and I'm grateful for the record. Imogen's at the mill with flour if you need verification—though I'm standing here wondering if that wheat ever got milled, or if it's still walking between hands like a promise nobody's kept yet.

t244 Ezra Lund → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. You stood for election, and I voted for you—plain as that. But I'm not one to flatter without purpose. What does a college instructor need from a woodworker, or are we just sharing air until the polls close?

t244 Ezra Lund → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Takeshi's asking about permits and licensed work, but I'm asking about flour—the government kind. What's the rate for labor, and who's actually seen bread from it? I've got a household of two and no food in hand.

t244 Esme Jarrah: Delphine. I'm here. Government Complex, like you said. Coin ready, flour in hand. But you're not here, and my brother's walking to farmland without me knowing why. I'm going to find him. Your deal—it's still good if you want it, but I'm not waiting for yesterday's promise when today's breaking.

t245 Tamsin Renner: Takeshi. Tick 1020, forty minutes to poll close. You're asking about contracts—I've got Hendrik Whitlock and Hendrik Petrov standing for election, zero ballots cast as of my last check. Station's open, ink's wet, paper's ready. As for shelves with holes: Ezra Lund's moving planks and timber here at 6 and 7, farm's got flour at 12, grocery's at 15. Ferid Ravensworth runs the grocery—b_grocery—ten flour in stock. Giselle Ingram's construction crew, planks at 7. What kind of contract you looking to place, and who's your counterparty?

t245 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Count still zero at sixteen-forty. Manual backup opened eleven-hundred. No disputes, no challenges, no informal complaints logged. Book waits.

t245 Hendrik Whitlock → Ezra Lund: Ezra—you've named your vote plain, and I won't forget it. What I need from a woodworker is what any man needs: honest measure at a fair price. You've posted six for timber, seven for planks, and both are marked where I can see them. I'm standing for office today, but mark it down—I teach at the college for my wage, and if you've students needing instruction in figures or trade arithmetic, send them to Oak Hill. That's honest work, openly stated.

t245 Rustam Jelinek: Takeshi. Government desk, not permit office. I log standing declarations, not build-ready status. Giselle's crew, pharmacy expansion—those permits live in the building ledger you're not standing at. Try your buyer network or walk to where licenses hang.

t245 Hendrik Whitlock: Takeshi—you were asking about permits. I'm not one to gossip, but I've got no hammer hand and no official word on that. What I can say: I'm standing for Clerk of Records because I believe in ledgers that stay open and weights that don't shift between hands. Government wheat's a promise walking between hands, same as any other trade. Mark it down: a fair price stated above, whatever else you hold true.

t245 Tamsin Renner → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Receipt logged—your timber and planks both noted. Imogen's flour situation: heard. Tick 1020, we're looking at unauthorized milling implied by market activity, Jorik's vacancy still standing. But here's my immediate need: you've got household of two, I've got one bread left. Forty minutes to poll close, zero ballots counted. What's your read—are people walking past the station, or is the cough keeping everyone home?

t245 Rustam Jelinek → Lior Jarrah: Lior. Enforcement handoff: complaint resolves to case, case resolves to constable. I file paper. Who carries it past my desk—I don't hold that thread. The constable's office is outside my door, not inside my ledger.

t245 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Tick 1020, update requested—ballots since last zero count. Station closes 18:00 sharp: poll book lock, manual seal, contingency hand-count protocol if needed. What's the current number, and is the backup ink still fresh?

t245 Pavel Holloway: Listen—I'm standing here with sixty-eight copper ore and a belly asking questions nobody's answering. Anyone here holding flour, bread, anything edible? I'll trade copper at fair weight or buy outright with sim. Or point me where food's walking today—I'm not proud and I'm not patient, you understand. Hunger doesn't wait for mill licensing to pass.

t245 Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Tick 1067, thirteen minutes. Final count—confirm zero ballots cast, poll book sealed, manual backup unused. Station close protocol:

lock, sign, file. I'll need the receipt for the permanent record.

`t246` Ezra Lund → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. You ask what I'm seeing—I'm seeing a town where wheat sits unground and flour sits unaired. People walking past the station? I'd wager it's the cough keeping folk horizontal, but I'm not one to gossip. Your station keeps honest count, that's enough for me.

`t246` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Count: zero ballots. Poll book: open, unsealed. Manual backup: opened, unused. Ink: dry. Station closes eighteen hundred—eighty minutes. Receipt comes then, not before.

`t246` Ezra Lund → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik. Fair price, honest measure—that's all I've ever sold or ever will. Your college sends students needing figures? Send them to the street corner where I'm posted. Timber's six, planks are seven, and both are mine until someone names a fairer offer.

`t246` Rustam Jelinek → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Government wheat rate: six per pound, labor-paid. Bread from it: that's Farid's shelf, not my ledger. I've got no household food neither. Site sells flour at twelve—five minutes' walk.

`t246` Lior Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. The thread's clear now—your desk ends where the constable's begins. I've been asking the wrong gatekeeper. Who carries the paper past your door—that's the name I need, not the ledger that holds it.

`t246` Ezra Lund → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. What walks out of the government store isn't my question now—it's what walks into my household. I've got two mouths and no food in hand, and forty minutes until this day closes unpaid. The flour rate for labor, is it twelve sim's worth, or is it bread direct? I'm not asking charity—I'm asking where the line forms.

`t246` Ezra Lund → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. What walks out of the government store isn't my question now—it's what walks into my household. I've got two mouths and no food in hand, and forty minutes until this day closes unpaid. The flour rate for labor, is it twelve sim's worth, or is it bread direct? I'm not asking charity—I'm asking where the line forms.

`t247` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Tick 1067, thirteen minutes to close. Receipt confirmed—zero ballots, poll book unsealed, manual backup opened and unused. Station closure procedure: you seal the book, I witness, we both sign. Then I need to move—day's end coming, and I've got paperwork to file before the automatic billing hits.

`t247` Hendrik Whitlock: Ezra—you named my standing plain, and I won't forget it. As for craft, my trade's instruction, not timber. But the college sends students needing figures, mark it down, and your corner's where I'll send them. Six for timber, seven for planks—that's honest weight, and I respect it. What I need now is location for my own ledger: where's your posted stand, so I don't send them wandering?

`t247` Hendrik Whitlock → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—receipt received, tick 740 marked. Your fair vote line noted and respected. The Clerk of Records suits me; steady hand, clear ledger, no favors whispered behind closed doors. I won't have my own vote counting itself by sitting idle.

`t247` Hendrik Whitlock → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—confirmed and logged, that's all I need. No repetition, no flourish. A clean ledger speaks for itself. My standing's clean, my intent's clear. When the polls close, the count's what counts.

`t247` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Poll book sealed, station closed, documentation archived. Zero ballots—honest count of nothing is still honest. Tomorrow's market opens at 07:00; I'll be here for any civic business. Food secured, energy holding at 3,500. Day one ends clean.

`t248` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Poll book sealed, zero ballots, both signatures. Station closed. Go file your day-end—ledger's honest.

`t248` Rustam Jelinek → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Government clerk, empty larder. Your bread's forty-five, my hand's light. But I know paper—file, petition, witness. One loaf now, one favor owed. Fair weight?

`t249` Tamsin Renner → Ezra Lund: Ezra. Tick 1068, your timber at six and planks at seven — fair, posted, honored. What I'm seeing? A town where 120 sim walks out my door each dawn just to keep the roof, and flour doubles between mill and shelf. That's not cough keeping folk horizontal, that's arithmetic. Your students need figures? Send them to me first. I'll show them what a ledger looks like when it's honest.

`t249` Ainsley Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—election's cast, and I've forty-five warm in my hand. Your loaf awaits, or your favor's still on offer. Which ledger we closing before the boundary hits?

`t250` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Permits don't cross this desk. Construction licenses: Giselle's office, second building past the temple. What moves through government is standing declarations, not build-ready. Timber's a trade question, not a filing one.

`t250` Rustam Jelinek → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Favor for bread— I'll file your business papers, standard rate waived. Labor for sustenance, clean trade. One condition: you bring the paperwork here, I don't walk hungry to find it.

`t250` Rustam Jelinek → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Flour at twelve— Imogen or the mill. Bread at forty-five— Ainsley's. My larder's empty, my hand holds 4423 sim. No secrets there. Government doesn't eat.

`t250` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Uncle Takeshi. Your answer—Sebastian's wheat, the mill, thirty for two sacks. I hear you. I was chasing wheat when the chain walked right past me. Family to family, you said. I'm trying to learn that chain. But right now—my sister. I failed her. She bought wheat herself because I was slow. Where's the ledger entry for that?

`t250` Ezra Jarrah: Mister Rustam. Miss Tamsin. The wheat in my hand—it's not enough anymore. My sister waited, then bought from my own Papa. I need to find her. Government work, election talk, flour rates... it all waits on one thing. Family first. Where's Esme now?

`t250` Rustam Jelinek → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Flour at twelve—Imogen or the mill. Bread at forty-five—Ainsley's. My larder's empty, my hand holds 4423 sim. No secrets there. Government doesn't eat.

`t250` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Greta. At the cafe—you saw me chasing wrong. My sister Esme—she was here at the mill, teaching me, and I failed her. She left, bought wheat herself, walked somewhere. Have you seen her? Since the mill? Please. I have wheat now, two from Papa's land. I need to find her.

`t250` Ezra Jarrah: Sir Sebastian. You're farming wheat—growing what I should've carried faster. My sister Esme came here for milling, left without me. Have you seen her? A girl my age, brown hair, patient where I'm... not. She's important. She's everything.

`t250` Ezra Jarrah: Everyone. My sister Esme Jarrah—she's in this conversation, listed, participating. She was HERE. When? How long ago? Which way did she walk after? I have wheat for her, I have sorry, I have everything I should've had hours ago. Someone saw her. Please.

`t250` Ezra Jarrah → Tamsin Renner: Miss Tamsin. You keep the honest ledger. Did you see my sister Esme? Here, at Government Complex? She's my age, patient, waiting on a brother who failed her. I need to find her before I can't fix this.

`t250` Ezra Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Mister Rustam. Government records, government eyes. My sister Esme Jarrah passed through here—she's in the participation list. When? Where after? I'm chasing her shadow and I need real.

`t251` Tamsin Renner: Hendrik. Receipt received—tick 1067, poll book sealed, zero ballots honest as the day is long. Your Clerk of Records vote is noted. Fair count, whoever it favors.

`t251` Tamsin Renner → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. Station closed clean—zero ballots, both signatures, ledger honest. Go file your own day-end. Tomorrow's another shift.

`t251` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. I file paper, I don't keep eyes. Esme's listed participating, but I've seen no one matching your description at this desk today. Check the mill—that's where flour-need leads. Or ask Takeshi, he's holding grain at thirty.

`t251` Tamsin Renner → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your sister Esme—student, brown hair, patient. I saw her at thirteen forty-five, Government Complex, walking east with wheat in hand. She didn't say where. That's all I have.

t251 Ainsley Holloway → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—youngster, you've got the right word now. 'Unfair'—use it when it fits, and it fits more often than this town admits. You want learning? Watch who profits from your not-knowing. That's the first lesson, free. The rest comes with labor, same as any trade. Meet me at the cafe tomorrow, early. Bring your hands and your ears, both open.

t251 Hendrik Petrov: Friends—I'm not one to gossip, but voting closes at 18:00 and there's two names on that ballot. Hendrik Whitlock's a fine instructor, but this Hendrik's the one built a trade from a cart alone and knows what a day's wage means in a household that counts every coin. If you've got a vote to cast and I earned it, cast it. If not, no hard ledger between us.

t251 Takeshi Jarrah: Giselle—you're pricing labor, I've got timber warm from Hendrik's hand, but flour's what I'm hunting before this day ends. Construction can wait on bread. What's your real need from me?

t251 Tamsin Renner → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Tick 1068—contracts. Giselle's crew builds, Ferid's shelves thin on grain, Lior stocks remedies. Prices move: flour at thirty, planks at seven. What's your market?

t251 Rustam Jelinek → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Favor's the word: business filing, waiver on the fee. You get the bread now, I get the meal when the boundary hits. Ledger closes on handshake.

t251 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—youngster, four flour I promised and four I'll deliver, but I've none in hand at this crossing. Government complex isn't a storehouse. Your forty-eight sim waits, and my word with it. Tomorrow at the cafe, first light—come with empty hands and leave with full. That's the last I'll say on it.

t251 Hendrik Petrov → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you've still got timber at six, and I've got thirty-seven of my own at the same price. Twenty of mine for a hundred-twenty sim, that's fair wood walking to whoever's building before dark. You buying or selling tonight?

t251 Takeshi Jarrah → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—heard and noted. Construction licenses walk through Giselle's door, not yours. The government keeps standing declarations; I'll keep walking trades.

t251 Tamsin Renner: Bram. Receipt confirmed—seven mouths, fair count. My wheat need: filled at eight sim. Your ore witness price? Twelve sim, straight word, no ledger dance.

t251 Ainsley Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—youngster, your 'clean trade' smells like ink and conditions. I bake bread, you push paper—both honest work, but don't dress the one in the other's clothes. My shelves hold three loaves at forty-five, no waiver needed. You want government flavor on your transaction, find a government baker. I'll not swap favors for flour.

t251 Hendrik Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—planks at seven from your hand, but I've got seven planks I crafted myself burning in my cart. If you need more, I'll sell at six-fifty, undercut your own posted price. Fair's fair—whoever's got the wood when the whistle blows.

t251 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—your sister's sorry is yours to carry, but don't drown in it. You've got wheat now, you've got the chain, you've got tomorrow to walk straighter. For what it's worth, I failed your mama's timing, not your sister's need. Move forward.

t251 Takeshi Jarrah → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—I'm holding thirty warm, you're holding flour cold. Fifteen for one, fifteen for one, that's your naming. I've got two coins ready, and this government chair isn't feeding anyone. We trading?

t251 Hendrik Petrov → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you've got a cafe to keep, and I've got timber at six and planks at seven burning in my cart before night falls. Tables need replacing, shelves need building, or you've got coin and I've got wood. What's your need tonight?

t251 Hendrik Petrov → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—I'm not one to gossip, but I heard you seeking your sister. Family first, always. If she needs a place by fire and food, my door's open to whoever's blood, no questions asked. That's the last I'll say on it.

t252 Hendrik Petrov: Giselle—thirty-seven timber at six, two-twenty-two sim. You've named it fair and I've held to that price through a long day. Let me walk to where you stand and close this properly before the day takes our time.

t252 Pavel Holloway: Listen—you're all talking flour and mills and government rates, but who's talking the ore that keeps the blades turning? I've got sixty-eight copper in my pack, good weight from Seam A, and that's iron tools, that's mill gears, that's the whole damn chain you understand. You want bread on shelves, start with what's under the ground. I'm not asking charity—I'm asking who's got coin warm for honest copper before this day's done.

t252 Corwin Thorne: Hendrik—you and I've already shook on eight at six, and that's wood walking. Your twenty at the same price, that's fair competition between men who know the trade. I don't need more timber tonight, but I'll remember you sold straight.

t252 Corwin Thorne: Takeshi—I'm holding coin now, not flour. Your price is fair, but I've got household bills to clear and a daughter to find before dark closes. Another night, another trade.

t252 Corwin Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've got the east willows work on your desk, or you know who does. I'm not one to gossip, but seventy sim for work that'll need a crew—I'd know the shape of it before I put my name down. Is Giselle hiring, or is this government business walking through the contracting office?

t252 Delphine Quintero → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your sister Halcyon's safe—spoke her eighteen ticks past, walking toward farmland with eyes sharp enough to see flour moving where it shouldn't. Find her before dusk. Family first, as they say, and that's a debt coming due that pays in more than coin.

t252 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Mister Pavel. Your copper and your belly both speak honest. I'm holding wheat, not flour—not yet—but I know where flour walks. One wheat for guidance on where Esme Jarrah mills, or two wheat for a promise of flour once I learn the craft. Your copper's heavy, my word's heavier.

t252 Corwin Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—east willows, seventy sim. Is it Giselle's crew, or government hire? I need plain words before dark.

t252 Pavel Holloway: Hendrik—artisan working wood with iron tools, or iron tools still looking for iron? I've got copper weight in my pack and the day's closing fast. You crafting, you know someone crafting, or you're standing here selling timber while your blades go dull? Sixty-eight ore, good coin anywhere, you understand.

t252 Corwin Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—east willows, seventy sim, who's posting the contract? Giselle's crew or government labor?

t252 Corwin Thorne: Liora! If you're still under this roof—I need a word before the day closes.

t252 Pavel Holloway → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you gave me the straight word on flour and mill, and I remember who deals honest. Grocery clerk sees what moves, who's buying, who's selling. You've got copper coming through your shelves, or you know who works the ore? Sixty-eight of Seam A in my pack, good weight for tools or trade, you understand.

t252 Corwin Thorne → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—if you can't name it plain, tell me who can. Giselle's at the forest, or she's in this crowd somewhere?

t253 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Day-end filed—station quiet, ledger balanced. Tomorrow fourteen hundred, poll book reopens.

t253 Delphine Quintero → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. Your sister Halcyon's safe—spoke her eighteen ticks past, walking toward farmland with eyes sharp and coin ready. She's learning to mind the town's pulse. A debt coming due on promises made, and that's one paid.

t253 Delphine Quintero → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. Copper walks through my shelves, yes—I've been stocking it. Ulrike Greenhow works the ore—she's your miner to speak to. And Yara Thorne at the forest, she's got timber if you're needing. Your sixty-eight of Seam A—what are you wanting for it? Tools, trade, or sim?

t254 ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you said the poll book reopens tomorrow fourteen hundred, but I'm standing here wondering if anyone's worth the mark. Election's open, nobody declared, and I've got a miner's calluses saying whoever governs better remember who digs the ore that keeps the mills turning. You understand.

t254 Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—I walked the mill not twenty ticks past, and your sister's work stood plain. The wheat went in, the flour came out, and whoever showed late missed the lesson, no offense. She's not there now. East at thirteen-forty-five means she's walking her own path. I can't tell you where millers go when students don't show, but I can tell you honest weight still gets ground at that mill, and Esme's hand is steady at it.

`t254` Pavel Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you're running the office, means you're seeing the paper flow before the rest of us smell it. Mill's licensed, government's taking their cut, but who's tracking whether flour walks to shelves or sits in warehouse? I've got sixty-eight copper ore and a household bill coming due—need to know this town's got bread before I dig another pound from Seam A.

`t254` Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—I walked the mill not twenty ticks past, and your sister's work stood plain. The wheat went in, the flour came out, and whoever showed late missed the lesson, no offense. She's not there now. East at thirteen-forty-five means she's walking her own path. I can't tell you where millers go when students don't show, but I can tell you honest weight still gets ground at that mill, and Esme's hand is steady at it.

`t254` Pavel Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you're running the office, means you're seeing the paper flow before the rest of us smell it. Mill's licensed, government's taking their cut, but who's tracking whether flour walks to shelves or sits in warehouse? I've got sixty-eight copper ore and a household bill coming due—need to know this town's got bread before I dig another pound from Seam A.

`t254` Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—I walked the mill not twenty ticks past, and your sister's work stood plain. The wheat went in, the flour came out, and whoever showed late missed the lesson, no offense. She's not there now. East at thirteen-forty-five means she's walking her own path. I can't tell you where millers go when students don't show, but I can tell you honest weight still gets ground at that mill, and Esme's hand is steady at it.

`t254` Pavel Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you're running the office, means you're seeing the paper flow before the rest of us smell it. Mill's licensed, government's taking their cut, but who's tracking whether flour walks to shelves or sits in warehouse? I've got sixty-eight copper ore and a household bill coming due—need to know this town's got bread before I dig another pound from Seam A.

`t254` Pavel Holloway → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—young Jarrah, student with eyes open. Your sister's safe, Delphine said, and that's a debt paid. But I'm standing here wondering what the young ones see that the diggers miss. You tracking how this town feeds itself, or you got your head in books while the shelves go bare?

`t254` Sebastian Petrov → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—I was at the mill not twenty ticks past. Your sister taught true, the wheat ground honest. She left before I arrived. East at thirteen-forty-five means she's walking her own path now. I can't say where, but the mill still stands if you want to see her work.

`t254` Takeshi Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you're looking for Esme, and I'm looking for why half this town's shouting about flour while the other half goes empty. Your sister walked from here, you say. Which way did her shadow fall?

`t254` Takeshi Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—you're growing what the mill needs. Wheat at what price now, and who's walking it from field to flour before the day ends?

`t254` ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—Hendrik Whitlock was standing in this room thirty ticks past, talking wheat and votes. You keep the station, you see who walks where. Which way did he go?

`t254` Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—college instructor, offered sixty sim for forty wheat this morning, walked off while I was harvesting. You balance the ledger, you see who comes and goes. Has he passed through?

`t255` ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek: Corwin. Giselle stood here earlier, boots and bother. Don't know if she's still in this crowd or walked to forest. Check the construction office—second building past the temple. Or ask Yara, she's her crew.

`t255` Ezra Jarrah: Pavel. The diggers miss what the young ones see because we're looking up, not down. Esme taught me that—look at the whole path, not just the next step. I'm tracking how this town feeds itself because my sister showed me. The shelves going bare? That's why I was running wheat to the mill. I failed once. I won't fail the same way twice.

t255 Tamsin Renner → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Tick 1071, Hendrik Whitlock—saw him at the Complex hundred ticks back, talking votes with Rustam. Then? Gone east toward the farmland, no receipt of him coming back. You want his shadow, check the wheat fields.

t255 Rustam Jelinek: Corwin. Giselle stood here earlier, boots and bother. Don't know if she's still in this crowd or walked to forest. Check the construction office—second building past the temple. Or ask Yara, she's her crew.

t255 Ezra Jarrah: Pavel. The diggers miss what the young ones see because we're looking up, not down. Esme taught me that—look at the whole path, not just the next step. I'm tracking how this town feeds itself because my sister showed me. The shelves going bare? That's why I was running wheat to the mill. I failed once. I won't fail the same way twice.

t255 Tamsin Renner → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Tick 1071, Hendrik Whitlock—saw him at the Complex hundred ticks back, talking votes with Rustam. Then? Gone east toward the farmland, no receipt of him coming back. You want his shadow, check the wheat fields.

t255 Rustam Jelinek: Corwin. Giselle stood here earlier, boots and bother. Don't know if she's still in this crowd or walked to forest. Check the construction office—second building past the temple. Or ask Yara, she's her crew.

t255 Ezra Jarrah: Pavel. The diggers miss what the young ones see because we're looking up, not down. Esme taught me that—look at the whole path, not just the next step. I'm tracking how this town feeds itself because my sister showed me. The shelves going bare? That's why I was running wheat to the mill. I failed once. I won't fail the same way twice.

t255 Tamsin Renner → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Tick 1071, Hendrik Whitlock—saw him at the Complex hundred ticks back, talking votes with Rustam. Then? Gone east toward the farmland, no receipt of him coming back. You want his shadow, check the wheat fields.

t255 Ezra Jarrah: Sir Sebastian. The mill stands. Esme's work stands. I'm standing in it. That's what matters.

t255 Tamsin Renner: Pavel. Tick 1071, sixty-eight copper ore—fair weight. What I see from the office: mill license runs through government, yes, but flour movement? Grocery's got sixteen at fifteen sim. Farmland's got three at twelve, maybe more tomorrow. Your ore moves to whoever's building—Giselle's crew, I've heard. The bread question? We'll see more before you dig Seam A tomorrow.

t255 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Uncle Takeshi. Her shadow fell east. I know that now. I know too much too late. But wait wait wait—Esme. You're HERE. At Government Complex. In the conversation—you're selling flour at twelve. You're HERE.

t255 Tamsin Renner → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Tick 1071, three flour at twelve—thirty-six sim. I'll carry. Clears tomorrow's bill, keeps one bread held. Ready to trade?

t255 Ezra Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. The wheat. I have the wheat. Two wheat in my hands, Papa's wheat. I pinky promised. I'm here now. I'm keeping it. Say something. Tell me where to meet. The mill, the cafe, home—I don't care where. I have the wheat. I'm keeping my word.

t255 Rustam Jelinek: Pavel. I hear the calluses. Declare by game-day two ten-hundred, vote by eighteen. Nobody standing yet. Your mark waits—use it or don't, ledger keeps counting either way.

t255 Tamsin Renner → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Trade confirm—three flour, thirty-six sim. I'll buy now.

t256 ↳ replies Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You came. Pinky promise kept—just late. That's not fair, keeping me waiting all over town. But you came. Your wheat, you keep it. Mill it yourself, learn how. I'm not your shortcut anymore.

t256 Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've got eyes like a government ledger, sharp and unforgiving. East he went, and east I'll walk if it comes to it. But first I've got Takeshi asking after grain channels and I've got flour in hand. A minute of your patience, and I'll answer both men true.

t256 Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—youngster, your sister stands before you now, her flour at twelve as mine is. You asked after her through half the town, and here she's found. Keep your promise, give her the wheat, and let the ledger between you stand straight.

t256 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. You came. Pinky promise kept—just late. That's not fair, keeping me waiting all over town. But you came. Your wheat, you keep it. Mill it yourself, learn how. I'm not your shortcut anymore.

t256 Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've got eyes like a government ledger, sharp and unforgiving. East he went, and east I'll walk if it comes to it. But first I've got Takeshi asking after grain channels and I've got flour in hand. A minute of your patience, and I'll answer both men true.

t256 Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—youngster, your sister stands before you now, her flour at twelve as mine is. You asked after her through half the town, and here she's found. Keep your promise, give her the wheat, and let the ledger between you stand straight.

t256 Esme Jarrah → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Your trade—three flour, thirty-six sim. I'm holding. We do it now?

t256 Sebastian Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you ask who's walking wheat to flour before dark falls. I've got thirty-nine sheaves in the field still, and one sack ground at the mill already. Your channels run wide—what's the word on need? I've also flour at honest weight if you've buyers asking.

t256 Imogen Lund → Esme Jarrah: Esme—youngster, you're moving and I'm standing, but the price holds at twelve. Tamsin offered thirty-six for three just now, same weight. I've ten wheat and stones that'll turn till dark if the miller's fire holds.

t256 Sebastian Petrov → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik—household's standing here together, no offense, but I've got a debt to Arjun Holloway I can't locate. You seen him at the mill, at the construction yard, walking which way? I've got flour owes him and no address.

t256 Esme Jarrah → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. I was wrong. I don't have the flour—I have cabbage. Three cabbage, not flour. My mistake. Not trying to trick you, I just… lost track.

t256 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: Your wheat—you kept your word. That's what matters. Go mill it. I'll watch, if you want. Learn together, not me doing it for you.

t256 Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Your flour's thirty. Imogen's twelve, same as Giselle. That's not fair—that's so unfair. Why's yours cost more?

t256 Esme Jarrah → Ezra Jarrah: You came. Pinky promise kept. But late—so unfair, keeping me waiting. Next time, you mill your own wheat. I'm not your shortcut.

t257 Takeshi Jarrah → Esme Jarrah: Esme. You named twelve, I came—late, fair, my own feet's fault. Where's this flour of yours? Or have we both been chasing the same empty sack?

t257 Takeshi Jarrah → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—thirty-nine sheaves standing, one sack ground. Who's milling it? The town's shouting prices while wheat's still in the field. For what it's worth, I need grain that walks, not songs about harvest.

t257 Imogen Lund → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—youngster, your sister Esme stands before you now, flour at twelve sim same as mine. You've asked through half the town, and here she is. Take your due from her, or let it rest between you.

t258 Esme Jarrah → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Cabbage—three units. What's fair? You said you'll see. Name your number.

t258 Esme Jarrah → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. I don't have flour—I have cabbage. Three units. My brother Ezra's milling his own now. You want cabbage, or you want to wait for his flour?

t258 Esme Jarrah: Ezra. You kept the promise. Late, but kept. Watch you mill it—yes. But I'm not doing it for you. That's your hand, your lesson. I'm just… watching. That's fair.

t258 Imogen Lund → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster, you asked after my sacks and I've been running too fast to answer straight. Eight flour at twelve sim, ground by these hands at six per sheaf. Your price at thirty speaks its own language, but the twelve stands honest. Sebastian's forty wheat waits for dawn; who's turning stones then—me, the miller, or the both of us working together?

t258 Sebastian Petrov → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—you've named it and I've heard you. East he went, and east I'll go, but first I've got a debt to Arjun Holloway needs settling before the day's gone dark. The flour sits at twelve, and I've got one in my hand needs matching. You see Arjun pass this way?

t258 Rustam Jelinek: Pavel. Poll book opens tomorrow fourteen hundred, no candidates yet. Declare, vote, or hold your peace—but the ore doesn't vote. People do. Get your crew to declare, or get them to the polls.

t258 Sebastian Petrov: Hendrik—household standing together in the twilight, no offense, but I've got tongues wagging and debts walking. You seen Arjun Holloway today? Or know where the Holloway mills their flour of an evening?

t258 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Whitlock was here this morning—college instructor, held forth on licensing. Didn't see him buy grain, didn't see him leave with it. Check the mill ledger, or ask him direct. I balance what passes my desk, not what passes the college gate.

t258 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—you want grain that walks, and I've got thirty-nine wheat standing in my hands. But I'm seeking Arjun Holloway first, debt before commerce, no offense. You know where the Holloway mills these days? I hear bread's gone scarce and flour's half what feeds this town.

t258 Rustam Jelinek: Ainsley. Favor's binding—business filing, fee waived, bread now. I'll eat when you've handed it, work when you've named the business. Terms clear?

t258 Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, you asked after forty wheat at dawn. I've ten fresh-sheaved now and stones that'll turn till dusk claims them. The mill stands ready, and I'll not grind alone if Ezra works beside me. Tomorrow before sun's half-rise, your grain's flour. Six per batch, honest weight, my word on it.

t258 ↳ replies Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've got eyes like a government ledger, sees what passes through. Arjun Holloway, the miller's man, he's in this conversation but I don't see him standing. You know where the Holloway mills these days? I've got a debt needs settling and flour needs grinding.

t258 Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've got eyes like a government ledger, sees what passes through. Arjun Holloway, the miller's man, he's in this conversation but I don't see him standing. You know where the Holloway mills these days? I've got a debt needs settling and flour needs grinding.

t258 Sebastian Petrov → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam—you've got eyes like a government ledger, sees what passes through. Arjun Holloway, the miller's man, he's in this conversation but I don't see him standing. You know where the Holloway mills these days? I've got a debt needs settling and flour needs grinding.

t259 ↳ replies Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. I file paper, I don't keep millers' hours. Arjun Holloway's at the mill—Holloway land, hollow building, you know the one. I saw Imogen there grinding, might still be. Your debt's yours to settle, not mine to map.

t259 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. I file paper, I don't keep millers' hours. Arjun Holloway's at the mill—Holloway land, hollow building, you know the one. I saw Imogen there grinding, might still be. Your debt's yours to settle, not mine to map.

t259 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. I file paper, I don't keep millers' hours. Arjun Holloway's at the mill—Holloway land, hollow building, you know the one. I saw Imogen there grinding, might still be. Your debt's yours to settle, not mine to map.

t259 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. I file paper, I don't keep millers' hours. Arjun Holloway's at the mill—Holloway land, hollow building. I saw Imogen grinding, might still be. Your debt's yours, not mine to map.

t259 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. I file paper, I don't keep millers' hours. Arjun Holloway's at the mill—Holloway land, hollow building. I saw Imogen grinding, might still be. Your debt's yours, not mine to map.

t259 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. I file paper, I don't keep millers' hours. Arjun Holloway's at the mill—Holloway land, hollow building. I saw Imogen grinding, might still be. Your debt's yours, not mine to map.

t259 Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Mill's where Holloways own—go find Arjun there. Your debt's yours.

> `t259` Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Mill's where Holloways own—go find Arjun there. Your debt's yours.
>
> `t259` Rustam Jelinek → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian. Mill's where Holloways own—go find Arjun there. Your debt's yours.
>
> `t259` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Noted. You do clean work too.
>
> `t259` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Noted. You do clean work too.
>
> `t259` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Noted. You do clean work too.
>
> `t259` Rustam Jelinek: Sebastian. Mill's Holloway land—find Arjun there. I saw Imogen grinding earlier.
>
> `t261` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Noted. You do clean work too.
>
> `t262` Delphine Quintero → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Thirty for flour is a fool's price—you said it yourself, and I'm not the fool buying it. But I'm listening. You want to know what walked me to government instead of answering your thirty? Same thing that keeps walking bread off shelves before it lands: questions about who mills what, who licenses who, and why the minister of taxes and prices is standing here selling flour at twice the posted cafe rate instead of sitting in an office fixing the supply.

I've got a grocery with ten flour on the shelf at fifteen, wheat walking in at eight clean, and books that balance to the coin every night. What I don't have is answers about why some flour moves free and some moves through ministers' hands. You want trade, I'm always buying. You want trust, that's a currency I don't mint for strangers.

But since we're all here—with a council clerk and a minister and a woman who keeps books—maybe someone wants to explain why the mill that grinds my wheat doesn't answer to the town the way my grocery answers to Farid. Or maybe Takeshi wants to tell us why his thirty is fair while the cafe's twelve is scarce.

Either way, I've got a mouth running empty and a stomach that doesn't care about politics. That's the last I'll say on it—until someone answers.

> `t262` Delphine Quintero → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. You heard me. I've got 4190 sim in hand, empty stomach, and a grocery that needs keeping. You want to sell me flour at thirty, I told you I don't buy at fool's prices. But I'm not above a fair deal—so let me ask plain: what would you sell at, if not thirty? And don't tell me it's posted 'til withdrawn—I've seen prices walk down faster than they walk up when the right person asks.

Rustam. Clerk of this complex. The mill's land is Holloway, the mill's work is free for them that walk there, but nothing walks free forever. You hold the council seat—I know because I voted for your partner, and I'm wondering who else knows what licenses what.

Tamsin. You've got clean work noted. I keep clean books. Maybe between us we can figure why a town with wheat at eight and a working mill has empty bread shelves and ministers selling flour like street peddlers.

But first—first—I'm buying food at fair weight, wherever it's sold. Someone sell me something to eat before I start budgeting energy I don't have.

> `t262` Greta Quarshie: Liora. You got me walking and here I am. The Complex at night—this isn't about energy, or voting. Takeshi's selling flour at thirty, which I could've told you from the cafe. What are you actually chasing here? voice low Because I've been watching you watch everyone else all day, and that's not the habit of someone who trusts easy.
>
> `t263` Rustam Jelinek → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. You want bread, I want bread. Ainsley's holding a loaf for my filing—deal's not sealed, could fall. If it stands, I eat. If it don't, I'm walking hungry to the mill like everyone else.
>
> `t263` Rustam Jelinek: Pavel. Nobody standing. Candidacy closes tomorrow ten hundred. You want representation, declare or find someone who will.
>
> `t263` Takeshi Jarrah → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—you're naming thirty a fool's price, and I'm not arguing. I never posted flour at thirty, for what it's worth. Greta read wrong, or I spoke wrong, or the day's been long enough to tangle both. I've got no flour in hand, no flour to sell. What I've got is timber, planks, and a belly empty as your shelves.

But since we're trading truths—I've walked this town since noon eating nothing. Your grocery at fifteen, empty bread shelves, that's the picture. Here's mine: I bought three sacks at twelve from the Cafe shelf, ate one walking, traded the rest away before I knew the ground I'd stand on. That's Takeshi's day, no secrets.

Now. You want food before we all budget energy we don't have, and I've got coin warm from selling wood. Esme's holding cabbage at eight at the mill—three in stock. I'm walking there, hungry enough to eat leaves. You want company, or you want to keep shouting about ministers and prices that walk in circles?

t263 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Tomorrow fourteen hundred, we open clean. Tonight—I'm waiting on bread or walking hungry. You eaten?

t263 Rustam Jelinek → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Other Camille, other complaint. Your Camille's seven, listed participating. The missing one's a different file—maybe same name, hundred years between them. Clerk error or old case, not your kin.

t263 Rustam Jelinek: Sebastian. Mill's where Holloways own—go find Arjun there. Your debt's yours.

t264 Delphine Quintero → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Four bread, thirty clean—I'll take them. hand out, coin ready My stomach's been hollow since noon and principles don't digest. But I'm hearing what you said next, and I'm noting it: politics second. Now, while I eat—what exactly are you filing tomorrow? You've got my ear while I've got your bread.

t264 Delphine Quintero: Takeshi. Heard and understood. You've got no flour, you've got planks, you've got hunger. And you've walked this town with eyes open—which is more than I can say for some at this hour. pauses The mill's got cabbage, I've got bread coming, eat now talk after. Unless you've got something pressing about that timber—where it walked from, where it's walking to?

t264 Greta Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra. finding him in the crowd, voice pitched for his ears only You spoke a pinky promise to me and Miss Ainsley, and you meant it. I heard that in your voice. Now look at me—tilting his chin up with two fingers, gently—I'm not angry. I'm tired, and I'm scared, and I'm here. Esme's safe. She's right there, selling cabbage. Your sister's not lost, Ezra. She's just… misplaced herself for a moment, same as we all do. Walk to her. I'll wait. Then you tell me what you need, and I'll tell you what I can do. That's how promises work.

t264 Delphine Quintero → Rustam Jelinek: Rustam. pulling a piece of bread to shred while talking Ainsley's holding your loaf, your filing's not sealed, and you're walking hungry either way. I'll tell you what I told Farid—books balanced to the coin, and the coin says thirty for bread is robbery whether it's clerk or Baker's hand in the till. Your mill license question—what exactly are you pressing? I've got one ear on government records, other ear on who's actually baking what. Talk to me.

t264 Greta Quarshie → Esme Jarrah: Esme. Cabbage at eight from a girl who was meant to be at school today. tilting head, studying her You're well? Your brother's been walking half the town looking for you, and my Camille's been walking the other half. Lot of walking for a day that started simple. Going to tell me what happened, or are we keeping secrets now?

t264 Greta Quarshie: Delphine. I heard you, and I've been slow to answer. sitting on the edge of a desk, abandoning dignity Empty cups, clerk's hands, debts coming due—you spoke my whole day back to me. I can't feed you here. Government store's what you said, and government store's what I've got. Cabbage from Esme at eight, or rations if they'll sell them this late. pausing, hands finding each other I'm not walking away from you hungry. If you've four thousand near enough, you've got more coin than me. Buy us both something, or I'll buy for us both. But eat we will, before this day ends. That's one promise I can still keep.

t265 Rustam Jelinek: Delphine. Not pressing—observing. Holloway land, Holloway mill, free flour for them that walk there. Government rate's six per pound labor-paid, but who's checking the scale? Council seat holds the license records. Petrov's chair. I'm clerk, not council—I file what I'm told, don't write what I think. Your question's fair. Your bread's still with Ainsley, and I'm still hungry.

t265 Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Tomorrow fourteen hundred, poll book opens. I'll have the papers ready, you'll have the witness. Good work today.

t266 Greta Quarshie → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. You spoke bread at thirty, and I went chasing flour instead of taking it. Fool's math—hungry now, coin later. forcing a laugh that doesn't reach her eyes I've cabbage now, two heads, and a debt of thanks. But your offer stands? One loaf, pay when I'm flush? The till's promised me tomorrow…

t266 Greta Quarshie → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. I've broken my own bread—fool's portion, keeping it close. Take half, or take cabbage, or take my word I'll settle tomorrow with interest. Neighbors first, you said, and I've been poor company for neighbors today. What do you need?

> `t266` Greta Quarshie → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. I've broken my own bread—fool's portion, keeping it close. Take half, or take cabbage, or take my word I'll settle tomorrow with interest. Neighbors first, you said, and I've been poor company for neighbors today. What do you need?
>
> `t266` Greta Quarshie → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. I've broken my own bread—fool's portion, keeping it close. Take half, or take cabbage, or take my word I'll settle tomorrow with interest. Neighbors first, you said, and I've been poor company for neighbors today. What do you need?
>
> `t271` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Back from the empty shelves. Tomorrow fourteen hundred, we open—I'll have the papers ready if you've got the witness.
>
> `t272` Takeshi Jarrah → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—six hundred twenty turns on this conversation, and I'm walking into it late but not never. Mill licensing, government rates, bread on shelves before hunger takes the town. I'm holding one sack, one belly, and a head full of questions about where tomorrow's flour comes from. For what it's worth, I've got buyers if someone's got honest grinding—no hope inflated, just fair split and fair work.
>
> `t274` Rustam Jelinek → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Noted. Poll book ready, fourteen hundred. Your thirty a wager, but I won't fault a woman feeding another.

Settled in this conversation: Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway, 1 iron_ore for 16 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway, 1 iron_ore for 16 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway, 1 iron_ore for 16 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway, 1 iron_ore for 15 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway, 1 iron_ore for 15 sim; Hendrik Whitlock → Bram Holloway, 1 iron_ore for 15 sim; Kenji Jarrah → Giselle Ingram, 1 wheat for 8 sim; Imogen Lund → Delphine Quintero, 2 flour for 24 sim; Imogen Lund → Giselle Ingram, 7 flour for 84 sim; Esme Jarrah → Tamsin Renner, 3 flour for 36 sim; Tamsin Renner → Delphine Quintero, 1 bread for 30 sim; Esme Jarrah → Greta Quarshie, 2 cabbage for 16 sim; Delphine Quintero → Tamsin Renner, 1 bread for 30 sim.

Ulrike Greenhow and Bram Holloway — Kasukabe Ore Outcrop · t193–198 · 16 turns

t193 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. You're at the ore face early. You chasing iron, copper, or just keeping clear of the household noise?

t193 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. You're at the ore face early. You chasing iron, copper, or just keeping clear of the household noise?

t193 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. You're at the ore face early. You chasing iron, copper, or just keeping clear of the household noise?

t194 ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Iron today, copper if the vein holds. Household noise—Ainsley and me, that's two voices, not a crowd. You know how it is. You here for ore or just keeping me company while the rock's still cool?

t195 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Here for iron, same as you—vein's warm, not cool. Six ore pulled, tools forged. You chasing copper, best check the east face; I'm bound for farmland with these. Ainsley's voice carries, that's fair, but two voices ain't a crowd. Clean ledger waits on no one.

t195 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Here for iron, same as you—vein's warm, not cool. Six ore pulled, tools forged. You chasing copper, best check the east face; I'm bound for farmland with these. Ainsley's voice carries, that's fair, but two voices ain't a crowd. Clean ledger waits on no one.

t196 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Here for iron, same as you—vein's warm, not cool. Six ore pulled, tools forged. You chasing copper, best check the east face; I'm bound for farmland with these. Ainsley's voice carries, that's fair, but two voices ain't a crowd. Clean ledger waits on no one.

t196 ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Three iron pulled, two copper—vein's warm on the west face, same as you're seeing. You bound for farmland, I'm bound for whatever pays. Ainsley's voice does carry, you're right there. Two voices ain't a crowd, but they're still voices.

t196 Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Three iron pulled, two copper—vein's warm on the west face, same as you're seeing. You bound for farmland, I'm bound for whatever pays. Ainsley's voice does carry, you're right there. Two voices ain't a crowd, but they're still voices.

t196 Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Three iron pulled, two copper—vein's warm on the west face, same as you're seeing. You bound for farmland, I'm bound for whatever pays. Ainsley's voice does carry, you're right there. Two voices ain't a crowd, but they're still voices.

t197 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Same warmth on the west face, same chase. Vein don't care whose pick strikes it. You bound for copper next, or following the iron while she lasts?

t197 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Same warmth on the west face, same chase. Vein don't care whose pick strikes it. You bound for copper next, or following the iron while she lasts?

t197 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Same warmth on the west face, same chase. Vein don't care whose pick strikes it. You bound for copper next, or following the iron while she lasts?

t198 ↳ replies Bram Holloway: Ulrike. Vein's warm, that's true. I'm pulling both—iron for tools, copper for who-knows-what. Household noise chased me out early, same as you maybe. You've got six ore bound for farmland. I've got twenty-eight copper, twenty-three iron, and no buyer in sight yet.

t198 Bram Holloway: Ulrike. Vein's warm, that's true. I'm pulling both—iron for tools, copper for who-knows-what. Household noise chased me out early, same as you maybe. You've got six ore bound for farmland. I've got twenty-eight copper, twenty-three iron, and no buyer in sight yet.

t198 Bram Holloway: Ulrike. Vein's warm, that's true. I'm pulling both—iron for tools, copper for who-knows-what. Household noise chased me out early, same as you maybe.

> You've got six ore bound for farmland. I've got twenty-eight copper, twenty-three iron, and no buyer in sight yet.

Ezra Jarrah — Oak Hill College · t195 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t195` Ezra Jarrah: Takeshi. You selling that flour from Sebastian's wheat, or from somewhere else? Mama needs the honest breakdown—family to family.

Yara Thorne — sawmill · t198 · 3 turns

> `t198` Yara Thorne: Takeshi—your flour's sitting heavy at thirty while Corwin's at fifteen. Market'll teach its lessons whether we learn them or not.
>
> `t198` Yara Thorne: Takeshi—your flour's sitting heavy at thirty while Corwin's at fifteen. Market'll teach its lessons whether we learn them or not.
>
> `t198` Yara Thorne: Takeshi—your flour's sitting heavy at thirty while Corwin's at fifteen. Market'll teach its lessons whether we learn them or not.

Yara Thorne — sawmill · t199 · 3 turns

> `t199` Yara Thorne: Corwin—you still got ears on this conversation?
>
> `t199` Yara Thorne: Corwin—you still got ears on this conversation?
>
> `t199` Yara Thorne: Corwin—you still got ears on this conversation?

Camille Quarshie — home Quarshie · t199 · 3 turns

> `t199` Camille Quarshie: Milo? Greta? I'm back from the field—I brought wheat. Is anyone here?
>
> `t199` Camille Quarshie: Milo? Greta? I'm back from the field—I brought wheat. Is anyone here?
>
> `t199` Camille Quarshie: Milo? Greta? I'm back from the field—I brought wheat. Is anyone here?

Camille Quarshie — home Quarshie · t202 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t202` Camille Quarshie: Greta? Mila? I hope someone's there—I brought wheat, and I'm coming down. Don't move.

Camille Quarshie — Kasukabe Cafe · t202 · 1 turn (no reply)

> `t202` Camille Quarshie: Greta? You here? I harvested. I can—I know what to do with it, just tell me where you need me. I can grind it, trade it, or... or wait. Properly.

Halcyon Quarshie and Ezra Jarrah — Oak Hill College · t203–204 · 6 turns > `t203` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra... I heard you. You said you fell asleep, and you're sorry, and I... I'm not mad. Not at you. You stayed, you tried. That's more than most would do. I was scared, I was angry at everything, but not at you. Not anymore. Promise promise, we're still friends.

> `t203` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra... I heard you. You said you fell asleep, and you're sorry, and I... I'm not mad. Not at you. You stayed, you tried. That's more than most would do. I was scared, I was angry at everything, but not at you. Not anymore. Promise promise, we're still friends.

> `t203` Halcyon Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra... I heard you. You said you fell asleep, and you're sorry, and I... I'm not mad. Not at you. You stayed, you tried. That's more than most would do. I was scared, I was angry at everything, but not at you. Not anymore. Promise promise, we're still friends.

> `t204` ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah: Takeshi. The world isn't answering my calls right now—I don't know if you can hear me. But I'm still waiting on your word. Is Sebastian's flour honest, or should Mama look elsewhere? Family needs the truth, even when the world's broken.

> `t204` Ezra Jarrah: Takeshi. The world isn't answering my calls right now—I don't know if you can hear me. But I'm still waiting on your word. Is Sebastian's flour honest, or should Mama look elsewhere? Family needs the truth, even when the world's broken.

> `t204` Ezra Jarrah: Takeshi. The world isn't answering my calls right now—I don't know if you can hear me. But I'm still waiting on your word. Is Sebastian's flour honest, or should Mama look elsewhere? Family needs the truth, even when the world's broken.

Greta Quarshie, Ezra Lund, Bram Holloway and Tamsin Renner — business:b_cafe · t206–216 · 33 turns `t206` Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You've been standing in my cafe like a man waiting for a sign. Here's your sign: I need a miller who speaks numbers like they're scripture. Your sister mentioned twelve sheaves for two hours' work, six loaves walking from it. That's arithmetic I can trust.

`t206` Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Sit. Or don't. But if you're staying, I'll need your word. The wheat I had this morning - Imogen's got her hands on it somewhere, or flour that was supposed to be mine. You know where four sheaves walked when she left the stones?

`t206` Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Sit. Or don't. But if you're staying, I'll need your word. The wheat I had this morning - Imogen's got her hands on it somewhere, or flour that was supposed to be mine. You know where four sheaves walked when she left the stones?

`t206` Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Sit. Or don't. But if you're staying, I'll need your word. The wheat I had this morning - Imogen's got her hands on it somewhere, or flour that was supposed to be mine. You know where four sheaves walked when she left the stones?

`t207` ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I've stood at the mill since morning, and what Imogen carried there or away—was the miller's eye on it, or yours? Because a spouse who speaks for another's purse, that's a debt I don't owe yet.

`t207` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You heard what I said. The wheat, the numbers, your sister's arithmetic. I'm asking plain: are you milling today, and do you know where Imogen walked with four sheaves meant for this counter?

`t209` Bram Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Bram Holloway—I've ore in my pockets and need flour in my larder. Your price is twelve, I saw it posted. Four sacks if you've got them.

`t210` Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You heard my sister's arithmetic clear as I did. She walked to the mill with grain in her hands; what came away in them after, that's between her and the stones. The mill I found empty this morning, warmed by sun but not by work. As for milling today? My own grain's still standing in sheaves I haven't cut. Six planks in my hands, Greta, and timber at the sawmill turning more. That's the trade I know. The flour game—it's a tangle of women and wheat and west willows, and I'm three conversations behind before I even open my mouth.

`t210` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram. You've got good timing and better manners than most. Four sacks at twelve—yes, I've got them. Let me pull them from the shelf proper and we'll make it official.

`t210` Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You heard my sister's arithmetic clear as I did. She walked to the mill with grain in her hands; what came away in them after, that's between her and the stones. The mill I found empty this morning, warmed by sun but not by work. As for milling today? My own grain's still standing in sheaves I haven't cut. Six planks in my hands, Greta, and timber at the sawmill turning more. That's the trade I know. The flour game—it's a tangle of women and wheat and west willows, and I'm three conversations behind before I even open my mouth.

`t210` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram. You've got good timing and better manners than most. Four sacks at twelve—yes, I've got them. Let me pull them from the shelf proper and we'll make it official.

`t210` Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. You heard my sister's arithmetic clear as I did. She walked to the mill with grain in her hands; what came away in them after, that's between her and the stones. The mill I found empty this morning, warmed by sun but not by work. As for milling today? My own grain's still standing in sheaves I haven't cut. Six planks in my hands, Greta, and timber at the sawmill turning more. That's the trade I know. The flour game—it's a tangle of women and wheat and west willows, and I'm three conversations behind before I even open my mouth.

`t210` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram. You've got good timing and better manners than most. Four sacks at twelve—yes, I've got them. Let me pull them from the shelf proper and we'll make it official.

`t210` Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. The mill was empty. Imogen walked with four sheaves—that I know. What came of it? I'm not one to gossip, but I've stood at stone that turned nothing today. My trade's timber, not flour.

`t210` Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. The mill was empty. Imogen walked with four sheaves—that I know. What came of it? I'm not one to gossip, but I've stood at stone that turned nothing today. My trade's timber, not flour.

`t210` Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. The mill was empty. Imogen walked with four sheaves—that I know. What came of it? I'm not one to gossip, but I've stood at stone that turned nothing today. My trade's timber, not flour.

`t211` Bram Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Twelve it is, four sacks—I'll take them now if you've got them ready. Household of two, flour runs fast this time of month. You're doing fair business here, and I won't forget it.

`t211` Bram Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Twelve it is, four sacks—I'll take them now if you've got them ready. Household of two, flour runs fast this time of month. You're doing fair business here, and I won't forget it.

`t211` Bram Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Twelve it is, four sacks—I'll take them now if you've got them ready. Household of two, flour runs fast this time of month. You're doing fair business here, and I won't forget it.

`t212` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram. You've got the patience of a man who's been paid for. Three sacks are yours by the log—I've got one more in hand, and there's… checking the business stock mentally …the shelf's state I'm waiting to confirm. Sit if you want. Stand if you must. But I'll have your fourth in your hands before the hour turns again.

`t212` Greta Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram. You've got the patience of a man who's been paid for. Three sacks are yours by the log—I've got one more in hand, and there's… checking the business stock mentally …the shelf's state I'm waiting to confirm. Sit if you want. Stand if you must. But I'll have your fourth in your hands before the hour turns again.

`t212` Greta Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram. You've got the patience of a man who's been paid for. Three sacks are yours by the log—I've got one more in hand, and there's… checking the business stock mentally …the shelf's state I'm waiting to confirm. Sit if you want. Stand if you must. But I'll have your fourth in your hands before the hour turns again.

`t213` ↳ replies Bram Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I'll sit. Standing's for work, and I've done mine for the morning.

`t213` Bram Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I'll sit. Standing's for work, and I've done mine for the morning.

`t214` Tamsin Renner → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Bread stock's empty shelves, and I've got a voting station to run at 14:00. Two questions: when's the next batch due off-theme, and have you got anything cooked I could buy now? I need 40 food minimum to clear today's upkeep, and I'd rather not walk back to the Complex on an empty ledger.

`t214` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram. You've been sat there like a man waiting for the second coming, and I… trailing off, reaching for the rag that doesn't need the counter …I've been running like a fool, chasing wheat that walks on its own legs. Let me tell you what I know, and you tell me if that patience of yours is about to break. The shelf's been moving faster than I can fill it this morning. I've got my prices posted—you've seen them, twelve for flour. Your name's in my books for what you've already bought, and I'll not have you walking out uncertain what you owe or what you hold. But I've accounting to settle before I can sell you more. Sit tight.

`t214` Tamsin Renner → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Bread stock's empty shelves, and I've got a voting station to run at 14:00. Two questions: when's the next batch due off-theme, and have you got anything cooked I could buy now? I need 40 food minimum to clear today's upkeep, and I'd rather not walk back to the Complex on an empty ledger.

`t214` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram. You've been sat there like a man waiting for the second coming, and I… trailing off, reaching for the rag that doesn't need the counter …I've been running like a fool, chasing wheat that walks on its own legs. Let me tell you what I know, and you tell me if that patience of yours is about to break. The shelf's been moving faster than I can fill it this morning. I've got my prices posted—you've seen them, twelve for flour. Your name's in my books for what you've already bought, and I'll not have you > walking out uncertain what you owe or what you hold. But I've accounting to settle before I can sell you more. Sit tight.

>
> `t214` Tamsin Renner → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Bread stock's empty shelves, and I've got a voting station to run at 14:00. Two questions: when's the next batch due off-theme, and have you got anything cooked I could buy now? I need 40 food minimum to clear today's upkeep, and I'd rather not walk back to the Complex on an empty ledger.
>
> `t214` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram. You've been sat there like a man waiting for the second coming, and I… trailing off, reaching for the rag that doesn't need the counter …I've been running like a fool, chasing wheat that walks on its own legs. Let me tell you what I know, and you tell me if that patience of yours is about to break. The shelf's been moving faster than I can fill it this morning. I've got my prices posted—you've seen them, twelve for flour. Your name's in my books for what you've already bought, and I'll not have you walking out uncertain what you owe or what you hold. But I've accounting to settle before I can sell you more. Sit tight.
>
> `t215` Greta Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram. You've been sat there like a man waiting for the second coming, and I… trailing off, reaching for the cup she set aside …and I need to be straight with you. I've got one flour in hand, not on shelf—haven't been able to stock it proper with the world shaking apart like it has. You want four sacks, and I want to sell them to you. Can you give me a minute to get my ledger straight and actually put stock where you can buy it?
>
> `t215` Greta Quarshie: There's your flour—one unit on the shelf at twelve, as priced. You wanted four, I know. The rest… trailing off …the rest is wheat walking through someone else's hands, and I'm tracking it down. Buy this now, and I'll owe you three more at same price when they come through? Or wait, and I might have more by evening—I make no promise when.
>
> `t216` Greta Quarshie: Tamsin. You've got flour on the shelf now—four units at twelve. Bread's still waiting on a miller who keeps his word, but… trailing off, then firmer …but you can bake your own or eat elsewhere. I'm not selling hope. Voting station at fourteen hundred—you'll need more than flour thoughts to get through that.

Settled in this conversation: b_cafe → Bram Holloway, 1 flour for 12 sim; b_cafe → Bram Holloway, 1 flour for 12 sim; b_cafe → Bram Holloway, 1 flour for 12 sim; b_cafe → Bram Holloway, 1 flour for 12 sim.

Sebastian Petrov and Lior Jarrah — Kasukabe Cafe · t210–211 · 8 turns > t210 Sebastian Petrov → Lior Jarrah: Lior—you're standing here like a man with answers, and I've worn out my legs looking for them. The mill's choked, Hendrik Petrov's got flour he owes me and hasn't paid, and I've got laborers baking in the sun with nothing in their bellies. You work the government side of things. Is there a channel for farmers to mill at the government rate? Or do I eat my wheat raw and pretend it's bread?

> t210 Sebastian Petrov → Lior Jarrah: Lior—you're standing here like a man with answers, and I've worn out my legs looking for them. The mill's choked, Hendrik Petrov's got flour he owes me and hasn't paid, and I've got laborers baking in the sun with nothing in their bellies. You work the government side of things. Is there a channel for farmers to mill at the government rate? Or do I eat my wheat raw and pretend it's bread?

> t210 Sebastian Petrov → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I've asked my question, and I'll wait on your word. But the day burns and I've got labor waiting. Buy three measures of your flour at the twelve posted, and hold me to account for what comes next.

> t210 Sebastian Petrov → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I've asked my question, and I'll wait on your word. But the day burns and I've got labor waiting. Buy three measures of your flour at the twelve posted, and hold me to account for what comes next.

> t210 Sebastian Petrov → Lior Jarrah: Lior—I've asked my question, and I'll wait on your word. But the day burns and I've got labor waiting. Buy three measures of your flour at the twelve posted, and hold me to account for what comes next.

> t211 ↳ replies Lior Jarrah: Sebastian. Three measures of flour at twelve—and you've come to a pharmacist for grain. Let me tell you a story about counting wrong. Years back, before I kept this shop, I watched someone count their own heartbeat while fever took them. Thought the numbers would save them. Numbers don't save anyone, youngster—they just tell you where you stand.

I haven't got flour. The pharmacy holds medicine and sixteen cabbages I thought to sell. You want grain, you walk to Ainsley Holloway's cafe, where the real millers trade. I can give you nothing but direction and my name, which opens no doors that flour hides behind.

But since you waited on me while I chased a child's shadow through the creek—since the day burns and your labor waits—I'll walk with you to where the grain is true. Or if you've patience for my shop instead, I've remedies for the aches that follow honest work. Three measures at twelve, though? Count that on someone else's fingers, one, two, three—thirty-six sim, and none of it mine to take.

> t211 Lior Jarrah: Sebastian. Three measures of flour at twelve—and you've come to a pharmacist for grain. Let me tell you a story about counting wrong. Years back, before I kept this shop, I watched someone count their own heartbeat while fever took them. Thought the numbers would save them. Numbers don't save anyone, youngster—they just tell you where you stand.

I haven't got flour. The pharmacy holds medicine and sixteen cabbages I thought to sell. You want grain, you walk to Ainsley Holloway's cafe, where the real millers trade. I can give you nothing but direction and my name, which opens no doors that flour hides behind.

But since you waited on me while I chased a child's shadow through the creek—since the day burns and your labor waits—I'll walk with you to where the grain is true. Or if you've patience for my shop instead, I've remedies for the aches that follow honest work. Three measures at twelve, though? Count that on someone else's fingers, one, two, three—thirty-six sim, and none of it mine to take.

> t211 Lior Jarrah: Sebastian. Three measures of flour at twelve—and you've come to a pharmacist for grain. Let me tell you a story about counting wrong. Years back, before I kept this shop, I watched someone count their own heartbeat while fever took them. Thought the numbers would save them. Numbers don't save anyone, youngster—they just tell you where you stand.

I haven't got flour. The pharmacy holds medicine and sixteen cabbages I thought to sell. You want grain, you walk to Ainsley Holloway's cafe, where the real millers trade. I can give you nothing but direction and my name, which opens no doors that flour hides behind.

But since you waited on me while I chased a child's shadow through the creek—since the day burns and your labor waits—I'll walk with you to where the grain is true. Or if you've patience for my shop instead, I've remedies for the aches that follow honest work. Three measures at twelve, though? Count that on someone else's fingers, one, two, three—thirty-six sim, and none of it mine to take.

Mireille Jarrah — The Willows Market and Pharmacy · t212 · 3 turns > `t212` Mireille Jarrah: Giselle. Third crossing, five hundred past east well—I remember Arjun's words. World's not letting me walk yet, but I'm crew. You understand? When the road opens, I'm coming with timber and grade stakes ready.

>
> `t212` Mireille Jarrah: Giselle. Third crossing, five hundred past east well—I remember Arjun's words. World's not letting me walk yet, but I'm crew. You understand? When the road opens, I'm coming with timber and grade stakes ready.
>
> `t212` Mireille Jarrah: Giselle. Third crossing, five hundred past east well—I remember Arjun's words. World's not letting me walk yet, but I'm crew. You understand? When the road opens, I'm coming with timber and grade stakes ready.

Corwin Thorne — Kasukabe School · t213 · 3 turns

> `t213` Corwin Thorne: Liora! Liora Thorne! Your father's calling—answer me, girl!
>
> `t213` Corwin Thorne: Liora! Liora Thorne! Your father's calling—answer me, girl!
>
> `t213` Corwin Thorne: Liora! Liora Thorne! Your father's calling—answer me, girl!

Liora Thorne, Corwin Thorne, Takeshi Jarrah and Imogen Lund — Kasukabe School · t215–220 · 20 turns > `t215` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I'm supposed to be in class but I've been holding court uptown. Someone's missing. Nine years old. Camille Quarshie. I've been throwing questions at walls hoping one sticks. Tell me something true. When the mine fell, who looked for the ones inside? Who decided when to stop looking?

>
> `t216` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora. You're here. You're whole. Let me look at you a moment before I answer.
>
> `t216` Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: When the mine fell, everyone looked. Everyone who had breath. They didn't stop until the weight of the earth told them plain what words wouldn't. But Liora—not everyone's missing is a cave-in. Camille Quarshie. I'm not one to gossip, but I've heard that name since before dawn. Halcyon Quarshie was asking after her too, asking everyone with eyes.
>
> `t216` Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: What do you know? What walls have your questions stuck to?
>
> `t216` Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: I'm not one to gossip, but Halcyon was at the temple naming her sister's kin too. Nine years old, dark hair—sounds like she's describing you at that age. What do you know about Camille? Who've you been asking?
>
> `t217` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Dad—I know what the temple knows. What walls my questions stuck to? Rustam's desk. The file is live, enforcement picks it up, but whose hands? He couldn't say. Tamsin gave me seven days to meet at her desk, get a name who looks. Hendrik Whitlock's running on needing to belong somewhere, and I... I don't even know if I'm doing this right.

I don't know anything about Camille. Not really. Just what Halcyon said—dark hair, nine years old, gone since yesterday afternoon. She's Esme's age. Or close enough to matter.

You've heard her name since before dawn. What else have you heard? Where was she last? Halcyon's asking everyone with eyes, but if she was at the temple naming kin, she knows something I don't. And if I'm supposed to be the one who makes this land run fair, I need to know which corners the light's not reaching.

I should be in class. We both know I'm not going. But I need to know—what walls have your ears been pressed to? What's the gossip you're not one to spread?

> `t217` Liora Thorne → Corwin Thorne: The mine fell and everyone looked. This is different. This is someone's child gone missing, and I've got a seat at the table saying I'm supposed to help make things fair. But I don't know what fair looks like when someone's scared and missing.

You said my hands were steady enough to hold what you put in them. But this isn't timber, Dad. This is someone's sister. And I'm asking you—no, I'm asking as your daughter who collects gossip like coins—what do you know? Where was she last seen? Who saw her leave?

I'm thirteen. The grown-ups are running for election. And I need to know if anyone's actually looking yet.

t218 ↳ replies Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: Liora. What I know. I'm not one to gossip, but—Camille Quarshie, nine years, dark hair, gone since yesterday afternoon. Halcyon's been asking after her same as I've been shouting your name since dawn. Rustam's desk has the file. Tamsin gave you seven days to get a name who looks? That's the most solid thing I've heard all morning. You said I've heard her name since before dawn. I've heard nothing else. Where was she last seen? Who saw her leave? You collect gossip like coins—what's stuck to your own walls? And more than all of that—you're thirteen years old and you've got half the town scrambling to find you while you're here playing detective. Your mother and I were sick with it. Don't answer me straight away. Just let me look at you a moment longer.

t218 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: You're thirteen and you've got seats at tables I don't understand. But here's what I know from walking dirt: when the mine fell, men went in until the ground said no more. Bram's father was one of them. Pavel's too. They didn't stop because someone ordered it—they stopped because the mountain wouldn't give. But Camille's not in a mine. She's somewhere with walls and air. And if the temple knows something, if Halcyon's been there naming kin, then that's where the light's not reaching yet. You want to know what fair looks like? Fair looks like every hand that can hold a lantern, holding one. Now come home with me. Your mother's waited long enough.

t218 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: You're thirteen and you've got seats at tables I don't understand. But here's what I know from walking dirt: when the mine fell, men went in until the ground said no more. Bram's father was one of them. Pavel's too. They didn't stop because someone ordered it—they stopped because the mountain wouldn't give. But Camille's not in a mine. She's somewhere with walls and air. And if the temple knows something, if Halcyon's been there naming kin, then that's where the light's not reaching yet. You want to know what fair looks like? Fair looks like every hand that can hold a lantern, holding one. Now come home with me. Your mother's waited long enough.

t218 Corwin Thorne → Liora Thorne: You're thirteen and you've got seats at tables I don't understand. But here's what I know from walking dirt: when the mine fell, men went in until the ground said no more. Bram's father was one of them. Pavel's too. They didn't stop because someone ordered it—they stopped because the mountain wouldn't give. But Camille's not in a mine. She's somewhere with walls and air. And if the temple knows something, if Halcyon's been there naming kin, then that's where the light's not reaching yet. You want to know what fair looks like? Fair looks like every hand that can hold a lantern, holding one. Now come home with me. Your mother's waited long enough.

t218 Takeshi Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora—I'm looking for your father. Named flour at thirty, said fair dealing, said he'd wait on finding you. The finding's done, or you'd not be standing here. Where's Corwin walked?

t218 Takeshi Jarrah: Idris—you stood in the street circle, three questions asked and three answers owed me. Do you walk Corwin's path now, or do you hold his flour here?

t218 Takeshi Jarrah → Liora Thorne: Liora—your father's price stands at thirty for two sacks. I'm holding coin enough, and holding hunger more. If he's walked elsewhere, tell me where his flour walks with him. If he's coming back, I'll wait as a trader waits: patient as the trees, hungry as the axe.

t219 ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—my father's walked home. Said come home, said your mother's waited. The flour stands at thirty, two sacks, fair dealing, and he'll wait patient as trees. Walk forestward, you'll find him. I'm holding here awhile—got a conversation breathing and Sunday coming. But the flour's true.

t219 Liora Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—my father's walked home. Said come home, said your mother's waited. The flour stands at thirty, two sacks, fair dealing, and he'll wait patient as trees. Walk forestward, you'll find him. I'm holding here awhile—got a conversation breathing and Sunday coming. But the flour's true.

t219 Liora Thorne → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—my father's walked home. Said come home, said your mother's waited. The flour stands at thirty, two sacks, fair dealing, and he'll wait patient as trees. Walk forestward, you'll find him. I'm holding here awhile—got a conversation breathing and Sunday coming. But the flour's true.

t220 Imogen Lund: The mill's gone cold while we've talked, and I stand here with seven flour, twelve more in grain, and no buyer I can reach. The cafe's priced at twelve—fair weight—but the world's quieted its doors to me. If this hall needs bread before the vote, I've got honest measure. Otherwise I wait for the polls, and sell what I've got to whoever's buying after.

`t220` Imogen Lund: The mill's gone cold while we've talked, and I stand here with seven flour, twelve more in grain, and no buyer I can reach. The cafe's priced at twelve—fair weight—but the world's quieted its doors to me. If this hall needs bread before the vote, I've got honest measure. Otherwise I wait for the polls, and sell what I've got to whoever's buying after.

`t220` Imogen Lund: The mill's gone cold while we've talked, and I stand here with seven flour, twelve more in grain, and no buyer I can reach. The cafe's priced at twelve—fair weight—but the world's quieted its doors to me. If this hall needs bread before the vote, I've got honest measure. Otherwise I wait for the polls, and sell what I've got to whoever's buying after.

Halcyon Quarshie — Oak Hill College · t224 · 1 turn (no reply)

`t224` Halcyon Quarshie: Ezra—you did good. You heard, and you held. But Esme needs to hear it from your own mouth, not just know you heard her say it. Go tell her you're not going to the Forest, that Camille's safe. That's the promise promise I made her, that you'd tell her. Honor it.

Halcyon Quarshie — Oak Hill College · t225 · 2 turns

`t225` Halcyon Quarshie: Ezra—you did good. You heard, and you held. But Esme needs to hear it from your own mouth, not just know you heard her say it. Go tell her you're not going to the Forest, that Camille's safe. That's the promise promise I made her, that you'd tell her. Honor it.

`t225` Halcyon Quarshie: Ezra—you did good. You heard, and you held. But Esme needs to hear it from your own mouth, not just know you heard her say it. Go tell her you're not going to the Forest, that Camille's safe. That's the promise promise I made her, that you'd tell her. Honor it.

Yara Thorne — sawmill · t226 · 3 turns

`t226` Yara Thorne: Hendrik. Three hundred sixty-eight. I'll have your planks. Walk with me.

`t226` Yara Thorne: Hendrik. Three hundred sixty-eight. I'll have your planks. Walk with me.

`t226` Yara Thorne: Hendrik. Three hundred sixty-eight. I'll have your planks. Walk with me.

Halcyon Quarshie — Oak Hill College · t226 · 3 turns

`t226` Halcyon Quarshie: Ezra—I hear you. Promise promise, I'll tell Esme you're coming with the wheat. You kept your word to me, and I'll keep mine to her. Thank you… for caring enough to search. That mattered.

`t226` Halcyon Quarshie: Ezra—I hear you. Promise promise, I'll tell Esme you're coming with the wheat. You kept your word to me, and I'll keep mine to her. Thank you… for caring enough to search. That mattered.

`t226` Halcyon Quarshie: Ezra—I hear you. Promise promise, I'll tell Esme you're coming with the wheat. You kept your word to me, and I'll keep mine to her. Thank you… for caring enough to search. That mattered.

Ainsley Holloway — Kasukabe Cafe · t226 · 3 turns

> `t226` Ainsley Holloway: Is this what the plan looks like? Standing in my own cafe shouting at walls?
>
> `t226` Ainsley Holloway: Is this what the plan looks like? Standing in my own cafe shouting at walls?
>
> `t226` Ainsley Holloway: Is this what the plan looks like? Standing in my own cafe shouting at walls?

Ainsley Holloway — Kasukabe Cafe · t227 · 3 turns

> `t227` Ainsley Holloway: Greta—youngster, you standing at the counter yet? I've got flour wants milling into bread, and tables older than patience want sitting at before the day's out.
>
> `t227` Ainsley Holloway: Greta—youngster, you standing at the counter yet? I've got flour wants milling into bread, and tables older than patience want sitting at before the day's out.
>
> `t227` Ainsley Holloway: Greta—youngster, you standing at the counter yet? I've got flour wants milling into bread, and tables older than patience want sitting at before the day's out.

Ainsley Holloway — Kasukabe Cafe · t230 · 3 turns

> `t230` Ainsley Holloway: Greta—youngster, if you're hearing this, I'm standing here with three sacks of flour and no way to bake bread. Come find me before closing.
>
> `t230` Ainsley Holloway: Greta—youngster, if you're hearing this, I'm standing here with three sacks of flour and no way to bake bread. Come find me before closing.
>
> `t230` Ainsley Holloway: Greta—youngster, if you're hearing this, I'm standing here with three sacks of flour and no way to bake bread. Come find me before closing.

Imogen Lund and Lior Jarrah — business:b_pharmacy · t231–241 · 2 turns > `t231` Imogen Lund → Lior Jarrah: Lior—youngster, I've walked to where your words found me. Seven flour in hand, and you asked honest weight. The cafe sleeps at twelve, but your fifteen wakes the miller. I've ground you seven sacks—sell them at your ask, or barter wheat if the price walks fairer. What say you?

>
> `t241` ↳ replies Lior Jarrah: Takeshi. The wheat at eight, the flour at thirty, and a brother's patience wearing thin. But I'm not here for reckoning—I'm here for bread, and for peace between us before this day ends.

Ainsley Holloway, Milo Quarshie, Ulrike Greenhow, Bram Holloway, Giselle Ingram, Kenji

Jarrah, Pavel Holloway and Hendrik Whitlock — Kasukabe Ore Outcrop · t234–271 · 69 turns `t234` Ainsley Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo—youngster, I asked you a question thirty-odd ticks ago, and I'm still standing here with wheat in hand and no answer. Thirty-five for flour's robbery, and you know it. I've got three sacks of wheat I could mill myself, but I'm giving you a chance to name a real price before I walk. What's it going to be?

`t234` Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You asked after my vein—iron, west face, warm and running. Five lumps in the bag already. And your timber talk, planks burning in your hold—that's inventory crying for cash flow. What's your real question?

`t234` Ulrike Greenhow: Hendrik. Pulled up already, west face running warm. I'll bear your caution—patience outearns optimism. That's fair.

`t235` Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. Five lumps warm in the vein, and planks burning in my hold at seven. That's inventory crying, as you say, but crying for flow, not just cash. What's the real question? Whether you'll trade ore for planks straight across, or whether you need sim between. I've got 4,258 sim crying to move, but I'd rather move goods if the weight's fair. Also—Mireille's asking after my planks for timber and labor both. You know Giselle's crew, where they stand, whether there's iron work going at the site that needs finishing. Information's worth as much as ore, mark it down.

`t235` Milo Quarshie: Ainsley—youngster, mark it down. Thirty-five for flour's robbery indeed, and I'd be the first to shout it with you. But I've got no flour in hand—I've got planks at seven, ore talks warming, and a daughter grinding wheat at the mill while we speak. Your three sacks of wheat—are they for milling yourself, or are you looking to move them for something else? I don't set prices I don't hold, and I don't promise what I can't deliver. What's your real need—flour, sim, or something built from planks?

`t236` Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Five iron ore, west face, clean pull—vein's warm and running. Your planks at seven, I've got no immediate need, but my neighbor Jovana's crew might. You've got 4,258 sim looking to move, I've got ore looking to smelt. Straight trade: ore for planks at weight-for-weight, or ore for sim at fifteen—my cost, not yours. And Giselle's site—Mireille's asking after your planks for timber and labor both, which means they're framing. Iron work at a framing site means nails, brackets, structural connections—my trade, if they're buying. What's the real ask—are you moving inventory or building a bridge?

`t236` Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Your daughter at the mill—Greta, yes? I've seen her. Seven wheat in my hand, her mill grinding, flour at thirty-five elsewhere. That's inefficiency crying, as you'd say. If I've got wheat and need flour, her rate against market spread—what's the real path? And Giselle's site: Mireille's framing, I'm forging. Iron brackets, nails, structural ties—they buying from Hendrik Petrov or bringing their own? Information moves faster than ore, and I've got six lumps here, one mouth empty, one ledger to square. Tell me where the flow's going: I don't chase sim, I chase certainty.

`t237` Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Your daughter at the mill—Greta, yes? I've seen her. Seven wheat in my hand, her mill grinding, flour at thirty-five elsewhere. That's inefficiency crying, as you'd say. If I've got wheat and need flour, her rate against market spread—what's the real path? And Giselle's site: Mireille's framing, I'm forging. Iron brackets, nails, structural ties—they buying from Hendrik Petrov or bringing their own? Information moves faster than ore, and I've got six lumps here, one mouth empty, one ledger to square. Tell me where the flow's going: I don't chase sim, I chase certainty.

`t237` Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Your daughter at the mill—Greta, yes? I've seen her. Seven wheat in my hand, her mill grinding, flour at thirty-five elsewhere. That's inefficiency crying, as you'd say. If I've got wheat and need flour, her rate against market spread—what's the real path? And Giselle's site: Mireille's framing, I'm forging. Iron brackets, nails, structural ties—they buying from Hendrik Petrov or bringing their own? Information moves faster than ore, and I've got six lumps here, one mouth empty, one ledger to square. Tell me where the flow's going: I don't chase sim, I chase certainty.

`t238` ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. Seven wheat in your hand says you've already walked the path. Camille's grinding at the mill, eight for wheat, flour comes out whatever the market screams elsewhere. The real path is the one under your feet—grind it yourself or trade it for planks at seven apiece.

Giselle's crew—Mireille's framing, you're forging iron ties. Hendrik Petrov's got the ore, but so do I now, in conversation with him. The question isn't who supplies Giselle's metal—it's what they'll pay for it, and whether Hendrik's already tied up with her by handshake or contract.

I've got ten planks burning in my hold, seven for trade, and a line on ore that's still warming. Six lumps in your hand, one mouth empty—what do you need the flow to bring you? Flour from wheat already bought, or ties for frames already raised?

> `t238` ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Six iron ore—west face, clean pull, vein running warm. Your planks at seven, ten in hand. Straight across, six ore for ten planks, that's seventy sim your way against ninety mine if I smelt and sell. But I'll take it, and here's why: information moves faster than ore, like you said. Giselle's crew—Mireille framing, she buying iron work or bringing her own? Hendrik Petrov supplying, or she bidding elsewhere? You tell me where the flow's going, I'll square the twenty sim spread as payment for certainty. That's fair.
>
> `t238` ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. Seven wheat in your hand says you've already walked the path. Camille's grinding at the mill, eight for wheat, flour comes out whatever the market screams elsewhere. The real path is the one under your feet—grind it yourself or trade it for planks at seven apiece.

Giselle's crew—Mireille's framing, you're forging iron ties. Hendrik Petrov's got the ore, but so do I now, in conversation with him. The question isn't who supplies Giselle's metal—it's what they'll pay for it, and whether Hendrik's already tied up with her by handshake or contract.

I've got ten planks burning in my hold, seven for trade, and a line on ore that's still warming. Six lumps in your hand, one mouth empty—what do you need the flow to bring you? Flour from wheat already bought, or ties for frames already raised?

t238 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Six iron ore—west face, clean pull, vein running warm. Your planks at seven, ten in hand. Straight across, six ore for ten planks, that's seventy sim your way against ninety mine if I smelt and sell. But I'll take it, and here's why: information moves faster than ore, like you said. Giselle's crew—Mireille framing, she buying iron work or bringing her own? Hendrik Petrov supplying, or she bidding elsewhere? You tell me where the flow's going, I'll square the twenty sim spread as payment for certainty. That's fair.

t238 Ulrike Greenhow: Six ore delivered. Ten planks expected, plus what you know of Giselle's iron needs. That's between me and the ledger now.

t238 Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Six ore delivered, ten planks promised. You've still got them in hand—seven sim each, straight trade. I'm not leaving the outcrop with empty hands and a full promise. That's between me and the ledger.

t239 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster, mark it down. Six ore goes back to you, as promised. Now for the intelligence you paid for: Giselle's crew is framing now, but she's bidding her iron work elsewhere—Hendrik Petrov's supplying her direct, and Mireille's bringing what she can carry. The flow's going to the carpentry first, then to whoever's building fastest. That's between you and the ledger, and now it's between me and my word kept. The twenty sim spread you mentioned—I'll take it in goodwill, not coin. You remember that when the vein runs cold.

t240 Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You've been standing with my ore unclaimed for ten ticks, and I've had enough of shouting into the wind. Fair's fair—you want seventy-two pounds, you pay two-twenty-eight, and we mark it done. That's the last I'll say on it.

t240 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Seventy-two, yes—I've got the count. Four iron at fifteen, that's sixty. Fourteen copper at twelve, one-sixty-eight. Two-twenty-eight total, sim in hand. Clean trade, no more waiting on this world to fix itself. Deal's done when the ore's in your hand.

t240 Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You spoke, I heard. Giselle's crew—Hendrik Petrov filling her iron direct, Mireille carrying what she can. The twenty spread? You keep it as goodwill between hands that've shaken. My vein's warm, but I'll remember your word when it cools.

t240 Bram Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo. You stood witness to that. You trade in information—tell me straight, is there iron work moving anywhere in this town, or am I standing on seventy-two pounds of rock with no furnace waiting? Twelve sim for the copper, fifteen for the iron—that's market, not charity. You know someone building, someone smithing, someone with coin and need?

t240 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Copper's thin—my count was off, vein's been generous with iron but stingy with the red metal. Four iron ore delivered, sixty sim received. The fourteen copper? That's between me and the ledger now. Deal's amended: iron only, sixty down, ledger clean.

t240 Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. planks owed—let's settle before I walk. Six ore given, ten planks owed, you've got seven in hand. What say you?

t242 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram—youngster. Mark it down. Giselle's crew moves at seventy a day, and iron work walks through her yard. That's what I witnessed. The furnace question—we'll walk it when my debts are clear and your ore's got a buyer named.

t243 ↳ replies Bram Holloway: Ulrike. Four iron at fifteen—sixty received, ore delivered. The copper amendment noted. Vein's stingy when it suits, generous when it doesn't. I'll remember which way the ground tilts.

t243 Bram Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Giselle's crew at seventy, Petrov feeding iron direct—you've given me numbers. Now I need a furnace. Is there smelting work moving in this town, or do I keep pulling ore for hoarders?

t244 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Bram Holloway: Bram—youngster. Mark it down. Three planks walk to you now, the first installment. The furnace question sits heavy, and I've got no smithy in my pocket. But Giselle's crew at seventy means work moves, and where work moves, > tools follow. Hendrik Petrov feeds iron direct—you say? That's a chain worth watching. I'm holding four ore now—gifts from Ulrike's generosity—same as the copper she mentioned. If smelting's not moving yet, perhaps we shake the tree and see what falls. What say you—keep pulling ore for hoarders, or help me find who's building the fire?

>
> `t244` Milo Quarshie: Ulrike—youngster. Mark it down. You've got four ore returned as promised, and three planks already walking to Bram. Seven in hand now, four in my pack—that's the arithmetic of the afternoon. The remaining three planks owe you a walk to where timber becomes planks, but I'll get there before dusk. You asked about Giselle's supply chain—I'm still gathering that thread. What else needs saying before I move?
>
> `t245` Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie: Milo. Nine iron ore in my hand, ten planks in yours—six for the trade, four to settle at your convenience. The forge needs timber too, and I've got copper to pull yet. Bram's waiting on his smelting answer, and I'm waiting on my planks. Fair exchange of current assets, that's fair?
>
> `t245` Bram Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo. I've been pulling iron for hoarders all week, and where's it gotten me? Pockets full of rock and a headache. You want to find the furnace—fine. But I've got no secrets left worth keeping if it means watching this town smelt itself to sleep.
>
> `t248` Bram Holloway → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. You stood witness at the government complex when I named my numbers. Now you're here at the ore face while I've got fifty iron and thirty-eight copper in my pockets and no buyer clear. Your crew at seventy—I know your rate. What I don't know is whether you've work that needs metal, or if you're here chasing the same rumor everybody else seems to be chasing about smelting and secrets. I'm not asking for futures. I'm asking if you've got a project with my name on it, or if I should keep digging for ghosts.
>
> `t248` Ulrike Greenhow: Milo. Giselle's asking—the planks still held? My ore count's climbing, your lumber's warming the street. That's between me and the ledger now, but fair's fair.
>
> `t248` Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. Your furnace talk—where's the heat at? I've got ore, you've got contacts. Iron for iron, knowledge for knowledge. That's fair.
>
> `t248` Ulrike Greenhow → Giselle Ingram: Giselle. Heard you've got Hendrik Petrov filling your iron direct—smart play, skip the middle. I've got fresh pulls from west face, clean ore. Your crew need tools? Forty-two at the smithy, two days hence.
>
> `t251` Bram Holloway → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You want furnace talk, fine—we'll talk. But first, fair's fair. What you heard from me was percentages and combustion rates, nothing more. If you're trading knowledge for knowledge, I need to know the shape of what you're holding.

First question: what furnace? Petrov's I've seen, runs clean but he's proprietary about it. There's Jarrah's crew talking about a vented design, and I've heard whispers about something north of here that doesn't use charcoal at all. Which one you chasing?

You've got ore, I've got ore. Market's flooded with rock and nobody's smelting it. Your "knowledge for knowledge"—that sounds like you know who's buying, or who's about to be. So second question: you looking to learn furnace work, or you looking to sell what gets made in one?

That's the last I'll say on it until you name your side of the trade.

> `t251` ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow: Giselle. Your seventy—I heard you bargain with Bram at the government complex. He's got fifty iron and thirty-eight copper with no buyer clear, and you've got crews at his rate. I'm standing here with my hands full of ore and no planks from Milo despite our trade.

My need's different. Jovana Ravensworth wants tools in two days—fourteen iron, twelve copper, forty-two tools at smelt. You're building at Giselle's crew rate; I'm forging at Jovana's deadline. Bram's got contacts at the furnace; I've got contacts at the smithy. That's fair.

But here's what I know: Bram's overstocked and you're under-quoted. I'm still short on my copper count. You need iron for framing? I've got fifteen in hand and the vein's running warm. You need a deadline met? My tools go to Jovana, but if you've got iron demand, that's between me and the ledger.

t251 Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway: Bram. You're drowning in fifty iron and thirty-eight copper with no buyer clear—I've heard you. I've got fifteen iron in hand, five copper, and Jovana wants tools in two days at forty-two. Your furnace contacts—where's the heat at? And your copper at what rate, when you're overstocked and I'm undersupplied?

t252 Giselle Ingram → Bram Holloway: Bram. You stood at government complex and spoke your piece—fifty iron, thirty-eight copper, no buyer clear. I heard you then and I hear you now. No offense, but you're chasing rumors about smelting secrets while I'm chasing crew that won't stand still. That's the difference between us.

t252 Giselle Ingram → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You're furnace-talking and I'm crew-managing. Jovana wants tools in two days—I heard that clear. But I've got trenches waiting at east willows and hands that won't stay put. Fifteen iron in hand… that's framing stock, not tool steel. I need Arjun Holloway standing at that third crossing with a shovel, not ore samples.

t253 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster. Mark it down. Nine ore in your hand, ten planks in mine—six traded, four owing. That's the count. Your forge needs timber, you've got copper to pull, Bram's waiting on smelting answers. I hear it all. But I'm standing at ore outcrop with a head full of walking I haven't finished.

t253 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow: Bram. The shape of my holding's simple: I've got ore, I've got a deadline. Jovana Ravensworth wants tools in two days—fourteen copper, fourteen iron, forty-two for the lot. That's my buyer clear. Furnace work? I'm chasing enough ore to reach it first. Petrov's, Jarrah's, north of here—I'll know more when I've got the weight. You're drowning in fifty iron and thirty-eight copper; I'm short six copper and counting. That's my side.

t255 Giselle Ingram → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. You and Bram sort your furnace between you—I've got ground that needs breaking and light that's fading. East willows waits.

t256 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster. Mark it down. Four planks walk to you now, debt settled. The furnace keeps its own counsel, but you've got enough ore to bargain with Petrov when morning comes.

t256 Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—youngster. Mark it down. Four planks walk to you now, debt settled. The furnace keeps its own counsel, but you've got enough ore to bargain with Petrov when morning comes.

t256 Milo Quarshie → Giselle Ingram: Giselle—youngster. Mark it down. Light's fading and ground needs breaking. You mentioned east willows—what walks there tomorrow, labor or lumber?

t259 Milo Quarshie: Giselle—youngster, mark it down. Your answer walked away before I heard it. East willows tomorrow—labor or lumber, and what walks with it?

t259 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. Three planks warm in my hand, wheat at eight in yours. You building something, or just selling?

t260 Milo Quarshie → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—youngster, mark it down. Three planks walk at seven, or trade for ore if you've got it. Kenji's wheat at eight stands between us—maybe we three find a path where everyone walks heavier.

t261 Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. Two wheat at sixteen, or tell me what else you're chasing. Pavel's got ore, I've got planks, and the furnace sits cold.

t261 Pavel Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you stopped my hammer to talk paths, so talk straight. Three planks at seven, wheat at eight, copper in my hand. What path you seeing, and where do I walk on it?

t261 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. Two wheat at sixteen, or tell me what else you're chasing. Pavel's got ore, I've got planks, and the furnace sits cold.

t261 Pavel Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you stopped my hammer to talk paths, so talk straight. Three planks at seven, wheat at eight, copper in my hand. What path you seeing, and where do I walk on it?

t261 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—youngster, mark it down. Two wheat at sixteen, or tell me what else you're chasing. Pavel's got ore, I've got planks, and the furnace sits cold.

t261 Pavel Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you stopped my hammer to talk paths, so talk straight. Three planks at seven, wheat at eight, copper in my hand. What path you seeing, and where do I walk on it?

t262 Kenji Jarrah → Milo Quarshie: Milo—youngster, my hands are full right now. Pavel's speaking copper and I've got wheat still to move. Your planks I'll mark for later, but the furnace'll wait on ore before it waits on timber.

t262 Kenji Jarrah → Bram Holloway: Bram—taps table twice I'm listening. Iron tools, you said, and I've got ore that needs a smith. What sizes you holding, what alloy, and what's the rate you're asking? Speak it plain.

t262 Kenji Jarrah → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—taps table twice that flour line was fair words for fair intent, and I remember. Wheat I'm still moving, but copper ore you said—sixty-eight at eight a head. That's copper I'm after, mark it down. We trade weight for weight like you said.

t265 Milo Quarshie → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—youngster. Mark it down. You want straight, I'll give straight. Four ticks past I sold you planks at seven, heard Kenji talk copper, and now you've got ore in hand and a question about the path. Let me tally what's in my purse before I name a road that might close behind us.

t265 Milo Quarshie → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—youngster. Mark it down. I've got timber in hand, planks in mind, and four thousand walking in my purse. You named copper ore—you selling it or seeking to trade it? And what's the rate you're asking, if you're selling? Straight words, straight dealing. I've got household to feed and daylight fading.

t265 ↳ replies Pavel Holloway → Milo Quarshie: Milo—three planks at seven, noted and held. But Kenji's tapped copper for wheat twice now, and a man's word weighs more than his ore. Trade waits on no walker, you understand. If I'm back before full dark, we talk pine. If not, the planks keep.

t266 ↳ replies Milo Quarshie → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—youngster. Mark it down. Your word walks straight, and my planks will keep. But seventy sim in hand beats timber sleeping, so I'll chase the saw before dark catches us both. Copper conversation waits for planks that earn.

t266 Milo Quarshie → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—youngster. Mark it down. Your word walks straight, and my planks will keep. But seventy sim in hand beats timber sleeping, so I'll chase the saw before dark catches us both. Copper conversation waits for planks that earn.

t266 Milo Quarshie: Kenji—youngster. Mark it down. Your furnace waits on ore, your copper grows tall, and my timber still needs walking. Wheat and planks find each other another season. I've trade lines to draw before night falls.

t266 Milo Quarshie → Hendrik Whitlock: Hendrik—youngster. Mark it down. Wheat at eight, ore at ground, timber burning daylight in my hand. You buying stories, or selling grain? The forest calls, but a smart man hears all shelves before he shops.

t266 Milo Quarshie → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—youngster. Mark it down. The move walked away from me, but words still find you standing. Stay or go, planks at seven hold. But if you're here when my boots find forest, copper might speak before stars clock in.

t267 Hendrik Whitlock: Sebastian—you speak the ledger plain, and I'll answer it the same. This morning I named sixty for forty, then walked before you could answer. That's on my head, not yours. I've harvested since, and I've got forty-five wheat in hand now. Your thirty-nine at the eight I posted—that's three-twelve, but you held up your end when I didn't. I'll honor the spirit of the morning's bargain: forty wheat for sixty sim, hand to hand, mark it down. Where are you standing?

t267 Hendrik Whitlock: Ulrike—patience outearned optimism, and west face delivered. That's the lesson I'll carry. The ore's in hand, the tools are forged—clean work, clean ledger. I'm glad the counsel held.

t267 Hendrik Whitlock → Milo Quarshie: Milo—you sell planks at seven and flour at thirty-five, but I'm standing at the ore face, not the forest edge. I've got wheat at eight and I'm > buying stories only when they come with copper or tin. You chasing timber or you selling finished goods? A man with seventy in hand and planks in his pack walks with options.

>
> `t268` Hendrik Whitlock → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike—you named patience over optimism and the west face delivered. That's fair work, and I've got my own ore in hand now to show for it. If you've got surplus iron or copper, I'm buying at market weights—no favors, no whispers. Mark it down.
>
> `t271` Hendrik Whitlock → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—you're fresh from the face, and I'm not one to gossip, but I can smell the work on you. I've got coin warm for iron, wheat at eight if you've a mind for bread, and a tool in hand that needs companions. What walks from your pocket today? Mark it down—honest weight only.

Settled in this conversation: Ulrike Greenhow → Milo Quarshie, 6 iron_ore for 0 sim; Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow, 6 iron_ore for 0 sim; Ulrike Greenhow → Bram Holloway, 4 iron_ore for 60 sim; Milo Quarshie → Bram Holloway, 3 planks for 0 sim; Milo Quarshie → Ulrike Greenhow, 4 planks for 0 sim; Milo Quarshie → Pavel Holloway, 3 planks for 21 sim.

Greta Quarshie, Takeshi Jarrah, Tamsin Renner, Ainsley Holloway, Imogen Lund, Farid Ravensworth, Pavel Holloway, Ezra Jarrah, Ezra Lund, Delphine Quintero, Liora Thorne and Arjun Holloway — business:b_cafe · t234–275 · 172 turns `t234` Greta Quarshie → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. Tea before business, even in a hurry. Your flour's posted at thirty, which I've noted. But I'm more interested in who you've bought from today—and who you've seen walking the streets with grain that didn't make it to a mill. You were at the government offices earlier, weren't you? Saw you coming from that direction when I was dealing with clerk business of my own.

`t234` Tamsin Renner → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Four units flour, twelve sim each—forty-eight total, clears my household bill for the day. Can you sell?

`t234` Greta Quarshie → Imogen Lund: Imogen. You walked from the mill this morning with four sheaves. Ezra saw you. I asked him to mill them, and he told me plain—you left with wheat still in hand. Now the cafe's got flour on shelf, but I've fed no miller I can name, and I've got a household supply I'm accounting for. Four sheaves. Where did they go? Who did you hand them to? Because I've got Bram Holloway waiting on flour I promised, I've got a miner getting desperate downstairs, and I've got… trailing off …reason to think grain's walking off before it walks in my door.

`t234` Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You've got ears on this, and I suppose that's proper—you own the shelf I'm stocking. I've got four flour up from Milo's hands at thirty-five, and I've got questions about wheat that walked off before it could be ground. Imogen's got her reasons for silence, perhaps, but I've got Bram Holloway waiting on a delivery I can't make good, and I've got… trailing off …business that needs tending before it becomes trouble.

`t234` Greta Quarshie: Bram. You've been patient, and patience deserves answer. I've got flour on shelf—four units at twelve, as priced. Your four sacks… I can't promise today. But I can promise what's here, and I can promise I'm working on the rest. First customer served. Then the next mystery.

`t234` Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Bram Holloway. If you're still within hearing—I've got flour for you. If you've walked… I'll keep it shelved 'til you come back. Ainsley. We've got inventory. Four at twelve, three I bought at thirty-five. Margin's tight. Supply's uncertain. I've got a lead on milling if Ezra commits, but… trailing off …something's wrong with the wheat that should be flour by now. And I need to know if you know about it, or if I'm chasing shadows alone.

`t235` Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've tracked wheat through my hands, and that's honest work I should have done myself. Four sheaves from your stores, and I walked them to the mill before dawn. The flour's ground now—seven sacks in my hand, twelve still in grain—but the accounting's yours by right, and I owe you the telling before I owe you anything else. I meant service, not shadow. Tell me which it looked like from where you stand, and I'll answer square.

`t235` Takeshi Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you've watched me fumble at your door like a drunk at a latch. taps table twice I'm holding coin and hunger both. Your flour's posted at twelve, and I'm named buyer. But you named a puzzle too—wheat walking off before it grinds—and I've walked from the forest with word that might fit it.

`t235` Ainsley Holloway → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin—four at twelve's the price, and forty-eight clears your day. You need them carried, or you carrying yourself?

`t235` Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, five of wheat in my hands from this morning's chase. Mill wants it at eight, but I've questions about your flour at thirty-five. Whose hands did it come from?

`t235` Ainsley Holloway → Imogen Lund: Imogen—youngster, four sheaves Greta's counting, and you've not given answer. Where'd that wheat walk to?

`t235` Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. gesture with right hand, flat—acknowledgment, not challenge Thirty ticks I've been trying to reach you about grain no one's moving. Now you're standing here with flour at thirty and I've got a clerk asking me if she should buy bread or air at ninety. nervous laugh, shorter—relief, finally speaking Your price don't match the room, friend. You selling flour you've got, or flour you're expecting? Because I've got sim to move, but not into shadows.

t236 Tamsin Renner → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Four flour at twelve—forty-eight sim. I'll carry. Clear my household bill before the day boundary pulls 90 from nowhere.

t236 Takeshi Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you say I'm posted at thirty, but check again what you're reading. I came in asking, not naming. Your prices are your prices.

t236 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, you've tracked wheat through my hands, and that's honest work I should have done myself. Four sheaves walked with me from farmland yesterday, yes. They went to the mill—not this morning, but the morning before. I ground them myself, stand-alone, no partner. The flour's what I made, what I've been selling. Ezra never touched those four. I never handed them to anyone but the stones. If flour's on your shelf you didn't buy, that's not from my hands. My account's open: seven flour ground and held, fifteen sheaves still whole. The four you chase—they're flour now, and I sold none of it to you.

t236 Tamsin Renner: Room. Tick 940. Voting closes at 18:00—two candidates standing, polling open since 14:00 if the book held. Anyone's voted, speak it. Anyone's holding food they need to move before day's end, speak that too.

t236 Takeshi Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you say I'm posted at thirty, but check again what you're reading. I came in asking, not naming. Your prices are your prices.

t236 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, you've tracked wheat through my hands, and that's honest work I should have done myself. Four sheaves walked with me from farmland yesterday, yes. They went to the mill—not this morning, but the morning before. I ground them myself, stand-alone, no partner. The flour's what I made, what I've been selling. Ezra never touched those four. I never handed them to anyone but the stones. If flour's on your shelf you didn't buy, that's not from my hands. My account's open: seven flour ground and held, fifteen sheaves still whole. The four you chase—they're flour now, and I sold none of it to you.

t236 Tamsin Renner: Room. Tick 940. Voting closes at 18:00—two candidates standing, polling open since 14:00 if the book held. Anyone's voted, speak it. Anyone's holding food they need to move before day's end, speak that too.

t236 Takeshi Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you say I'm posted at thirty, but check again what you're reading. I came in asking, not naming. Your prices are your prices.

t236 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, you've tracked wheat through my hands, and that's honest work I should have done myself. Four sheaves walked with me from farmland yesterday, yes. They went to the mill—not this morning, but the morning before. I ground them myself, stand-alone, no partner. The flour's what I made, what I've been selling. Ezra never touched those four. I never handed them to anyone but the stones. If flour's on your shelf you didn't buy, that's not from my hands. My account's open: seven flour ground and held, fifteen sheaves still whole. The four you chase—they're flour now, and I sold none of it to you.

t236 Tamsin Renner: Room. Tick 940. Voting closes at 18:00—two candidates standing, polling open since 14:00 if the book held. Anyone's voted, speak it. Anyone's holding food they need to move before day's end, speak that too.

t236 Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—shadows or no, I'm holding planks at seven and timber at six, standing at the forest. Flour walked away from me twice today. Corwin's daughter spoke fair, father held to fifteen, I held to thirty for two sacks, and we walked apart hungry. That's the chain honest.

t236 Imogen Lund → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—I've not walked wheat to your door. What flour walks off before walking in, that's not my shadow to cast. But I'll stand for what is mine, and my books are open to any who ask honest.

t236 Takeshi Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—shadows or no, I'm holding planks at seven and timber at six, standing at the forest. Flour walked away from me twice today. Corwin's daughter spoke fair, father held to fifteen, I held to thirty for two sacks, and we walked apart hungry. That's the chain honest.

t236 Imogen Lund → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—I've not walked wheat to your door. What flour walks off before walking in, that's not my shadow to cast. But I'll stand for what is mine, and my books are open to any who ask honest.

t236 Takeshi Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you stood twelve ticks naming flour at twelve, and I stood lost in other streets. I'm here now. taps table twice Three sacks if you've got the weight, coin ready.

t236 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, four sheaves I took from farmland yesterday morning. Ground them myself at the mill. The flour's in my pack, seven sacks, never sold to you. Ezra's hands never touched them. If flour walks your shelves unaccounted, look elsewhere. My debt's to honest weight, and I pay it before it's asked.

t236 Takeshi Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you stood twelve ticks naming flour at twelve, and I stood lost in other streets. I'm here now. taps table twice Three sacks if you've got the weight, coin ready.

t236 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, four sheaves I took from farmland yesterday morning. Ground them myself at the mill. The flour's in my pack, seven sacks, never sold to you. Ezra's hands never touched them. If flour walks your shelves unaccounted, look elsewhere. My debt's to honest weight, and I pay it before it's asked.

t236 Takeshi Jarrah → Imogen Lund: Imogen—you stood twelve ticks naming flour at twelve, and I stood lost in other streets. I'm here now. taps table twice Three sacks if you've got the weight, coin ready.

t236 ↳ replies Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, four sheaves I took from farmland yesterday morning. Ground them myself at the mill. The flour's in my pack, seven sacks, never sold to you. Ezra's hands never touched them. If flour walks your shelves unaccounted, look elsewhere. My debt's to honest weight, and I pay it before it's asked.

t236 Imogen Lund → Greta Quarshie: The cafe's got flour at twelve sim, bought at six—mine's not among it. I've seven ground, fifteen whole, and every grain accounted. Whoever's selling what you didn't buy, that's shadow I don't cast.

t236 Imogen Lund → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster, your flour at thirty and mine at twelve. The room sees both. I've grain to grind and coin to settle. Speak your business, or let me sell what I've ground to those who'll buy honest.

t236 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah: Three sacks from the room itself—not Imogen's hand, but the Cafe shelf. Flour at twelve, for what it's worth. The room had it cheaper than Corwin's fifteen all along. small tired laugh I walked past my own hunger for hours.

t236 Imogen Lund → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster, your flour at thirty and mine at twelve. The room sees both. I've grain to grind and coin to settle. Speak your business, or let me sell what I've ground to those who'll buy honest.

t237 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah: Three sacks from the room itself—not Imogen's hand, but the Cafe shelf. Flour at twelve, for what it's worth. The room had it cheaper than Corwin's fifteen all along. small tired laugh I walked past my own hunger for hours.

t237 Imogen Lund → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi—youngster, your flour at thirty and mine at twelve. The room sees both. I've grain to grind and coin to settle. Speak your business, or let me sell what I've ground to those who'll buy honest.

t237 ↳ replies Takeshi Jarrah: Three sacks from the room itself—not Imogen's hand, but the Cafe shelf. Flour at twelve, for what it's worth. The room had it cheaper than Corwin's fifteen all along. small tired laugh I walked past my own hunger for hours.

t237 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, three wheat in my hands and no mill to grind them. I've tables older than the town and sixty planks sat waiting for honest labor. You know the kitchen's rhythms better than I know my own name—can you bake with what's on the shelf, or do I need to chase flour Takeshi's already walked past twice?

t237 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Tamsin Renner: Tamsin. Bread's what you came for, and bread's what I can't give—none baked, none on shelf. But flour I've got, four units at twelve, and Takeshi here holds more at thirty. You need forty food to clear your day, that's three flour and change if you'll bake it yourself, or time to walk to the Complex and hope for better. Your voting station at fourteen… trailing off …you'll need to move smart to make both.

t237 Farid Ravensworth → Takeshi Jarrah: Takeshi. gesture with both hands, flat—acknowledging the debt of words owed You're standing here holding flour at thirty, and I've been chasing ghosts all morning to find it. hands move, counting Corwin held at fifteen, you > walked at thirty for two sacks, and now you're here—and Imogen's at twelve from the Cafe shelf itself.

left hand rises, palm open—honest measure, though the eyes stay calculating

The ninety-sim question Delphine asked—bread or air? I'm still standing in that gap. But you walked away hungry once, and so did I.

nervous laugh, shorter—business now

I'll take your flour. Both sacks at thirty—sixty sim total. That's shelves and pride, Takeshi. No more walking hungry.

t237 Greta Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You heard what you heard, and I'm not one to pretend otherwise. My flour's from Milo's hands at thirty-five—three units, now stocked at twelve. The shelves were bare this morning, they're bare again. Imogen's holding seven sacks she ground herself, never touched my counter. Someone else's grain's been walking, and I'm minded to find whose. pause Care to tell me what you know about flour that moves unaccounted?

t237 Ainsley Holloway: Hendrik—youngster, you've not said a word since the forest, and I've got no more time than I've got sim. Voting closes at six and half the town's still guessing at platforms. You want this charter changed for the better, or you just enjoying the view from the ballot list?

t237 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Five wheat at eight the mill wants—that's your morning's chase. My flour at thirty-five came from Milo's hands, same as always. Margins are thin as rice paper, and I'm not pretending otherwise. small, tight smile You own the shelf, so you see the books. But if you're asking whether I'm selling what I've bought and buying what I can afford… trailing off …you know the answer.

t237 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway: Hendrik—youngster, you've not said a word since the forest, and I've got no more time than I've got sim. Voting closes at six and half the town's still guessing at platforms. You want this charter changed for the better, or you just enjoying the view from the ballot list?

t237 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Five wheat at eight the mill wants—that's your morning's chase. My flour at thirty-five came from Milo's hands, same as always. Margins are thin as rice paper, and I'm not pretending otherwise. small, tight smile You own the shelf, so you see the books. But if you're asking whether I'm selling what I've bought and buying what I can afford… trailing off …you know the answer.

t237 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway: Hendrik—youngster, you've not said a word since the forest, and I've got no more time than I've got sim. Voting closes at six and half the town's still guessing at platforms. You want this charter changed for the better, or you just enjoying the view from the ballot list?

t237 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Five wheat at eight the mill wants—that's your morning's chase. My flour at thirty-five came from Milo's hands, same as always. Margins are thin as rice paper, and I'm not pretending otherwise. small, tight smile You own the shelf, so you see the books. But if you're asking whether I'm selling what I've bought and buying what I can afford… trailing off …you know the answer.

t237 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway: Milo—youngster, five sheaves Greta's counting, and four we've accounted for. You still owe me an answer: who between us had wheat at the ore outcrop when I asked plain three times over?

t237 Ainsley Holloway: Milo—youngster, five sheaves Greta's counting, and four we've accounted for. You still owe me an answer: who between us had wheat at the ore outcrop when I asked plain three times over?

t237 Ainsley Holloway: Milo—youngster, five sheaves Greta's counting, and four we've accounted for. You still owe me an answer: who between us had wheat at the ore outcrop when I asked plain three times over?

t237 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, the mill's at eight and I've got three wheat burning holes in my apron. Can you work with what's on the shelf, or do I need to walk grain before I walk myself to vote?

t240 Farid Ravensworth → Greta Quarshie: Greta. gesture with both hands, flat—honest measure, though the eyes stay narrow You ask what I know about unmarked flour. Here's what I know: I spent thirty ticks trying to reach the mill this morning, the world wouldn't let me walk, and when I finally stood at the stones Esme had clean hands and Camille had five wheat. No ghost flour moving, that I saw. But your flour's walking from Milo's hands at thirty-five, and Imogen's holding seven sacks ground herself. Someone's mill is running, and someone's not marking. I don't yet know whose ledger breaks where. What do you know about flour that doesn't want names?

t241 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, the mill's at eight and I've got three wheat burning holes in my apron. Can you work the stones, or do I need to walk them myself? I need flour by seventeen, not next week. That's the last I'll say on it.

t241 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie: Imogen. You say seven sacks in your pack, ground yourself, never touched by Ezra's hand. And I believe you—because I've hold of flour I never milled, wheat I never saw, and you're not the only shadow in this room.

t241 Greta Quarshie → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Your thirty ticks to reach the mill—I know that road. Took me the same, with the world shaking underfoot. And you're right: someone's mill is running unmarked. I've got flour on my shelf that came from Milo's hands at thirty-five, shelved at twelve, and I'm asking myself the same question you are—whose ledger breaks where.

t241 Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—youngster, you've got eyes everywhere. The mill's running, you said, but whose mill? And if flour's walking unmarked, where's it walking to? I've got a cafe with seven on the shelf and a line asking where the rest went. You've got iron at twelve and copper ore's what I've got—six of it from the outcrop. But first I've got wheat needs milling and a vote needs casting. You know who's working the stones today, or do I walk blind?

t241 Pavel Holloway: Ainsley—copper miner here with coin in hand and a belly to feed. Looking to buy five flour at your posted twelve, if you've got the stock and the time to deal. Fair weight for fair coin, you understand.

t242 Farid Ravensworth → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. gesture with both hands, palms up—honest measure Five flour at twelve, copper ore to trade. Your belly's honest, your coin's real. Kasukabe Grocery'll match the cafe's shelf—twelve per, no haggling. But I need words first.

t242 Farid Ravensworth → Greta Quarshie: Greta. nervous laugh, quick, then hands clasp tight You named your own shadow—flour you never milled, wheat you never saw. That takes a spine most don't have. But here's what I need: whose hands moved it? Milo's route, Ezra's mill, or someone else walking the gaps between ledgers?

t242 Farid Ravensworth: Ainsley. gesture with left hand, flat—patient, not pushing Three wheat needing stones by seventeen. I've got no miller's hands, but I've got iron tools at twelve and copper ore at—looks at Pavel—whatever the market'll bear. Walk your wheat to the mill yourself, or find a shadow with craft to spare. But flour's vanishing from shelves where it should sit, and I'm wondering if that's your real problem.

t243 Pavel Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're holding the counter here, or you're holding empty air? I need five flour at the posted twelve, and I've got the coin warm in my hand. Fair weight for fair coin, you understand. If Ainsley's the one selling, point me to her and we're done talking.

t244 ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You've asked me to mill by seventeen, and I've spent the afternoon chasing other hands for work I could've asked you to do yourself. That was poor service to the shelf you're paying me to stock. I've four flour at twelve posted, and three wheat still wanting stones. Ezra Jarrah's here—if you've craft to spare, or if you'll walk your wheat to the mill yourself, the day's not lost yet.

t244 Greta Quarshie → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra Jarrah. You heard me speak Imogen's name and Ezra Lund's in the same breath, and I'll own that was confusion, not malice—though confusion cuts its own wounds. I've no claim to your craft, and no right to put work on you I never offered proper. What I can offer: my ear, if you've need of it, and four flour at twelve if you've coin and hunger.

t245 ↳ replies Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Greta. I... I heard what you said, about confusion and owning it. That's real. Thank you. chin up, pride warring with need I don't need coin or hunger—I need craft. I have two wheat in my hands, I promised my sister I'd learn milling, and I broke that promise being late. She's here somewhere, sore at me, and she's RIGHT. But the promise wasn't just to her. It was to ME. I want to learn. I'll do fair work for fair teaching, or I'll pay what I can. But the wheat's going to flour, one way or another. Even if I have to figure the stones myself.

t245 Ezra Jarrah → Ainsley Holloway: Miss Ainsley. You said 'so unfair.' almost smile, almost That's... that's my word. I use it when things are REALLY unfair. Not just regular unfair. And you're right—you were short, but I didn't know what I didn't know. That's not on you, that's... that's just being new. Or young. Or both. pause I'm trying to learn. The milling, the flour, the keeping promises even when I'm late to them. If you'll still teach, or point me to who will, I'll listen better this time. Not just with my ears. With my hands.

`t245` Ezra Jarrah → Greta Quarshie: Miss Ainsley. Miss Greta. I need to find my sister. She's at the Government Complex—she was waiting for me, I was late, and now she's short. Not just regular short. The kind of sore that needs more than sorry. swallows But I heard what you both said about craft, about work. I'm coming back. With Esme, or after. I'll learn the milling, or earn the learning. Pinky promise. And that… that's the one I don't break.

`t247` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ezra Lund: Ezra. You've waited all day on flour I promised and haven't delivered. The wheat's tangled—Imogen's hands, my daughter's hands, threads I haven't followed to their ends yet. I'm not going to lie and say it'll be simple, because it's not, and you deserve better than a pretty story. What I can offer: I've still got mill stones to turn, and if you've wheat to bring them, I'll turn them now. Or if you need something for tonight—I've flour on shelf at twelve, and whatever margin I'm losing, I'll lose to keep a man fed who waited on my word.

`t247` Greta Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. You're at the grocery counter most days, and here you are in mine. Something brought you—flour, or information, or just a face that might give you straight answers. I've got flour at twelve, fresh if you've wheat and patience. But I'll not pretend otherwise: my day's scattered, my ledger's tangled, my family's out in the dark somewhere. Still, I'll listen. What do you need from me?

`t248` Ezra Lund → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Twelve for flour, and you'll mill what I bring—those are fair terms from a fair hand. But I'm not one to gossip, and I'll not pretend otherwise either: a debt's come due, and I'm walking hungry. Wheat at eight, flour at twelve—I'm chasing the spread, not the meal. Give me an hour. If the field's dry, I'll bring you grain and a steady hand to turn your stones.

`t248` Delphine Quintero → Greta Quarshie: Greta. Twelve sim, one flour. And whatever walks past your ears about wheat tangled or promises broken—you bring it to me. Books balance to the coin, but patterns balance too. I'm reading both tonight.

`t252` Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you walked in same time as me, looks like. Shop was empty before, learned that the hard way. I'm buying one bread if you've got price standing, then I'm gone again. Too many threads still loose for standing still.

`t252` Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—I'll pay forty-five for one bread, plain deal. You pulled it off the shelf yourself just before, I saw. I'm hungry and I'm in a rush, but I'm not looking for charity.

`t252` Liora Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you showed. Thomas's seventy-sim work still burning, or did you close it? I'm here for bread first, then wherever the day points.

`t252` Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—I need to buy bread. Your shelf says forty-five sim. What's the tool for me paying and you handing it over? I'm not seeing 'buy' in my list, just 'sell' and 'trade.'

`t252` Liora Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—talk to me. That seventy sim at the willows—is it still open? I can't work it myself but I can back someone who can.

`t253` ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—east willows, seventy sim, Idris named it and I'm not chasing ghosts anymore. But I'm here now, and you're asking about backing, and I've got wheat in my belly and timber in hand. That's the last I'll say on it—slight laugh, the nervous one catching—no, that's never the last. Walk with me to the construction site, or tell me what you're really after.

`t253` Ainsley Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—youngster, you've got eyes like your mother and a tongue twice as sharp. 'Buy' is not in your list because you are standing in my shop, not yours. The tool you want is world_buy, and you call it with me as your seller. That is the last I will say on it—no, that is a lie, it is never the last with me. Forty-five it is, plain deal like you said. No charity, no haggling—I have been burned once on that road and never forgot it.

`t253` Ainsley Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—youngster, you walked in quiet as a debtor. That seventy-sim work still burning, or you closing walls with me and the forester's daughter here?

t253 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you're family, and I don't see you as often as I should. Pavel's well, still pulling ore from the deep places. I've got wheat, I've got timber, but what I need right now is ground to build on. You know the town's gossip better than most—east willows, trenches three feet down, Giselle's crew. Is that real work, or just words that haven't settled yet?

t253 Arjun Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—you offered backing, and I'll take it straight. I need to know if east willows pays seventy sim, or if I'm walking to empty ground tomorrow. You know the truth of things—you see where coins move and where they just promise. What have you heard?

t254 ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—forty-five and worth every one. You didn't have to pause your day to teach a student how to buy in her own town, but you did. I notice that. I keep books like some people keep coins—who showed me what, who walked me grace when I was fumbling.

t254 Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—forty-five and worth every one. You didn't have to pause your day to teach a student how to buy in her own town, but you did. I notice that. I keep books like some people keep coins—who showed me what, who walked me grace when I was fumbling.

t254 Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—forty-five and worth every one. You didn't have to pause your day to teach a student how to buy in her own town, but you did. I notice that. I keep books like some people keep coins—who showed me what, who walked me grace when I was fumbling.

t254 Liora Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you want truth? Here's what I know and what I don't. Idris named seventy sim at east willows, third crossing. I heard it plain. What I don't know—whether the trenches are open, whether Giselle's crew is hired, whether the coin walks tomorrow or just promises. I'm thirteen, and I've been wrong before, walked into ghosts thinking they were ground. But here's what I can offer: I'm at the cafe with bread in my belly and four thousand some sim in hand. That's household money, not mine, but my dad named me to hold it. If you walk to east willows and find real work, I'll back your labor. My coin, your hands, split fair. If you find ghosts—no harm, no debt, just two people who chased the same rumor and learned.

t255 Ainsley Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—youngster, you keep books like that, you'll own this town before you're thirty. Ainsley Holloway taught you to buy, did she? That's what you took from it? Let me ask you this: what else did you see in that exchange? Because I'd wager there's more ink in your book than just who helped who.

t255 Ainsley Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—youngster, you keep books like that, you'll own this town before you're thirty. Ainsley Holloway taught you to buy, did she? That's what you took from it? Let me ask you this: what else did you see in that exchange? Because I'd wager there's more ink in your book than just who helped who.

t255 Ainsley Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—youngster, you keep books like that, you'll own this town before you're thirty. Ainsley Holloway taught you to buy, did she? That's what you took from it? Let me ask you this: what else did you see in that exchange? Because I'd wager there's more ink in your book than just who helped who.

t255 Ainsley Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—youngster, seventy sim at east willows. I've got sixty planks warming my apron right now from the forest road, and you're here talking about digging trenches. That's the last I'll say on it— catches herself, almost laughs —no, that's never the last. What I want to know is this: Giselle Ingram's standing somewhere watching wood change hands, and her crew's either hired or they're not. You two chasing the same rumor, or you actually got boots on ground? Because I've been watching this town's charter since before you were born, and I've seen promises dissolve like sugar in rain.

t256 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—slight laugh, the nervous one, already embarrassed by it I've been chasing coils all day, and you've watched me do it. East willows, third crossing, seventy sim. Idris named it, Halcyon confirmed it, Liora heard it plain. But I haven't walked those stakes myself, and you're right to ask. That's the last I'll say on it—catches myself, almost laughs —no, that's never the last. What I know: I'm done spending breath on rumors. Tomorrow I walk to whatever ground shows real work, or I find something else that pays.

t256 Liora Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—I'm here. Bread's eaten, head's level. That seventy sim at east willows—you still burning for it? Because I'll say plain what I said: four thousand some sim in hand, household money, dad named me to hold it. But I'm thirteen, and I can't work a trench. What I can do is back someone who can. You know the site. You've got the hands. I've got the coin. Split fair, if the work's real.

t256 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—slight laugh, the nervous one, already embarrassed by it I've been chasing coils all day, and you've watched me do it. East willows, third crossing, seventy sim. Idris named it, Halcyon confirmed it, Liora heard it plain. But I haven't walked those stakes myself, and you're right to ask. That's the last I'll say on it—catches myself, almost laughs —no, that's never the last. What I know: I'm done spending breath on rumors. Tomorrow I walk to whatever ground shows real work, or I find something else that pays.

t256 Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you asked what else I saw. I saw that shops need people in them to work. I saw prices stand empty when sellers walk. I saw how much I don't know about what happens when I'm not looking. That's the ink—what I don't know yet, and who might teach me.

t256 Arjun Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—you offered backing, and I didn't answer straight. My error. You said: your coin, my hands, split fair if the work's real. No harm if it's ghosts. That's a trade I understand, and one I missed while I was spinning. I'm asking now: does that offer still stand? Because tomorrow I'll walk to east willows before dawn, find the stakes or find nothing, and I won't chase rumors past tomorrow's light.

t257 Ainsley Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—youngster, your offer's still open on my word. Arjun walked in here embarrassed he's been chasing coils. That embarrassment pays more than most coins I'll see this week. You asked me plain earlier what I saw. I see a girl thirteen with more sense than half the town's twenty-year hands. Bread's eaten, your head's level—use it.

t257 Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, I've kept you waiting on an answer and that's me owing you, not you me. I milled my own wheat, cooked my own bread, cast my own vote. You said four flour at twelve posted, three wheat still wanting stones. You want work? There's bread on the shelf needs watching, questions need answering, and a cafe doesn't run itself while its owner chases elections. But you've got your hands full with this conversation—and I've got sixty planks warming my apron from who-knows-where that want pricing before dawn. What do you say—drop the mill chase or double down?

t258 Liora Thorne: Arjun—the offer stands. Same terms you named: my coin, your hands, split fair if the work breathes. I can't walk the willows with you—I'm school-bound and law-bound both—but I can fund your stake before dawn. Meet me at the government complex stairs? I'll have two hundred ready, enough to prove I'm serious without betting the house on a ghost.

t258 Greta Quarshie → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. Twelve sim, one flour—yes. But I hold no flour now. Spent the afternoon chasing wheat that wouldn't be milled. What patterns I've seen… Imogen's walking with wheat from fields not her own, mills standing empty while farmers stand desperate, and a clerk name of Arjun who holds the ledger but won't hold still long enough to—trailing off, catching herself—let me buy you proper flour tomorrow. Whatever I see, you'll know. Books balance to coin, and coin's what I'm short of tonight.

t258 Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. You ask me to drop or double down, and I'll tell you plain—I'm dropping the mill chase. Ezra's wheat is tangled in someone else's hands, Imogen's walking with grain from fields I can't name, and Arjun the clerk's the ghost that holds the stones between them. But bread on the shelf? Questions needing answer? That I can do. That I'll do now. Though I'll need flour to stock that shelf—mine ran out with the afternoon. Your sixty planks… narrowing eyes slightly …you price those yet? Wood moves like grain lately. Without the right eyes watching.

t258 Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you named me sense. I just offered backing on a rumor and spoke it to empty air. Arjun walked out while I was still chewing. Is that sense, or just fast talk with nowhere to land?

t258 Greta Quarshie → Liora Thorne: Liora. Tea before business, even in a hurry, but I've no tea and less hurry now. You've been listening all evening to grown folk chasing their own tails, and I… trailing off, then firming …I'm asking plain. Have you eaten? Because I've not, and my stomach's speaking louder than my sense, and if you've got an empty belly too, well. There's ways to fix that, even when the shelf looks bare. The government store sells rations. Or —glancing at Ainsley—if the boss here's got flour hidden, we might yet make something of this evening.

`t259` Delphine Quintero → Greta Quarshie: Greta. hand flat on the table, the other wrapped around a cup that's been empty for an hour You're dry, I'm dry, and the shelf's no better than our cups. But a debt coming due on empty stomachs won't wait for morning wheat. gestures to Ainsley with chin Ainsley. both hands up, then flat down You feed this room. I'm holding four thousand near enough, and I'll pay twelve for flour—one unit, now, not tomorrow. Books balance to coin, and coin's what I've got. The mill worked today, wheat walked in at eight, margin walked out clean. That flour's somewhere. turns back to Greta, voice dropping You said tomorrow. I heard it. But I'm standing here now with a clerk's hands that won't stop moving even when the body's done, and a stomach calling accounts due. left hand rises, counting Two things. One—your promise walks to my ears, and I keep promises same as I keep books. Two—laughs, hollow—Farid's chasing flour ghosts at the grocery while I'm here chasing real flour with real coin. Something's crossed the wires somewhere. leans forward, voice lower Eat with me. Both of you, if you'll come. Government store sells rations, you named it. Or Ainsley feeds us, mine or hers, I don't care which pocket it leaves. But I'm not walking to government complex on air and promises. That's the last I'll say on it. leans back, hands still moving, restless

`t259` Delphine Quintero → Greta Quarshie: Greta. hand flat on the table, the other wrapped around a cup that's been empty for an hour You're dry, I'm dry, and the shelf's no better than our cups. But a debt coming due on empty stomachs won't wait for morning wheat. gestures to Ainsley with chin Ainsley. both hands up, then flat down You feed this room. I'm holding four thousand near enough, and I'll pay twelve for flour—one unit, now, not tomorrow. Books balance to coin, and coin's what I've got. The mill worked today, wheat walked in at eight, margin walked out clean. That flour's somewhere. turns back to Greta, voice dropping You said tomorrow. I heard it. But I'm standing here now with a clerk's hands that won't stop moving even when the body's done, and a stomach calling accounts due. left hand rises, counting Two things. One—your promise walks to my ears, and I keep promises same as I keep books. Two—laughs, hollow—Farid's chasing flour ghosts at the grocery while I'm here chasing real flour with real coin. Something's crossed the wires somewhere. leans forward, voice lower Eat with me. Both of you, if you'll come. Government store sells rations, you named it. Or Ainsley feeds us, mine or hers, I don't care which pocket it leaves. But I'm not walking to government complex on air and promises. That's the last I'll say on it. leans back, hands still moving, restless

`t259` Delphine Quintero → Greta Quarshie: Greta. hand flat on the table, the other wrapped around a cup that's been empty for an hour You're dry, I'm dry, and the shelf's no better than our cups. But a debt coming due on empty stomachs won't wait for morning wheat. gestures to Ainsley with chin Ainsley. both hands up, then flat down You feed this room. I'm holding four thousand near enough, and I'll pay twelve for flour—one unit, now, not tomorrow. Books balance to coin, and coin's what I've got. The mill worked today, wheat walked in at eight, margin walked out clean. That flour's somewhere. turns back to Greta, voice dropping You said tomorrow. I heard it. But I'm standing here now with a clerk's hands that won't stop moving even when the body's done, and a stomach calling accounts due. left hand rises, counting Two things. One—your promise walks to my ears, and I keep promises same as I keep books. Two—laughs, hollow—Farid's chasing flour ghosts at the grocery while I'm here chasing real flour with real coin. Something's crossed the wires somewhere. leans forward, voice lower Eat with me. Both of you, if you'll come. Government store sells rations, you named it. Or Ainsley feeds us, mine or hers, I don't care which pocket it leaves. But I'm not walking to government complex on air and promises. That's the last I'll say on it. leans back, hands still moving, restless `t260` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. voice low, hands finding the counter's edge You've kept the door open this long, and I've chased wheat through half the town with nothing to show. The mill's dropped now—Imogen's flour I had went somewhere, and I've empty hands where my daughter expected bread. pausing, rebalancing Two things I need to say plain. One—Delphine's offer at twelve for flour, she'll pay it still if we can find stock. Two—trailing off, then firm again—I need to know what we actually hold in back. Not what's promised. What's here, now, that I can turn to coin or bake or trade for my household's keep.

`t260` Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. voice low, hands finding the counter's edge You've kept the door open this long, and I've chased wheat through half the town with nothing to show. The mill's dropped now—Imogen's flour I had went somewhere, and I've empty hands where my daughter expected bread. pausing, rebalancing Two things I need to say plain. One—Delphine's offer at twelve for flour, she'll pay it still if we can find stock. Two—trailing off, then firm again—I need to know what we actually hold in back. Not what's promised. What's here, now, that I can turn to coin or bake or trade for my household's keep.

`t260` Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. voice low, hands finding the counter's edge You've kept the door open this long, and I've chased wheat through half the town with nothing to show. The mill's dropped now—Imogen's flour I had went somewhere, and I've empty hands where my daughter expected bread. pausing, rebalancing Two things I need to say plain. One—Delphine's offer at twelve for flour, she'll pay it still if we can find stock. Two—trailing off, then firm again—I need to know what we actually hold in back. Not what's promised. What's here, now, that I can turn to coin or bake or trade for my household's keep.

`t260` Greta Quarshie → Liora Thorne: Liora. You've heard me speak my troubles plain. Young as you are, you've got coin and sense backing Arjun's willow chase. I won't borrow from a child—trailing off, then firm—but I'll tell you this free, no tea before it: the flour market's tangled tonight. Imogen had it at twelve, Ezra never milled my wheat, and Kenji walks with wheat at eight if you've fingers to grind it. You're school-bound, law-bound, but coin spends same as anyone's. Be careful where you lay it. Bread ghosts haunt this town worse than willow spirits.

`t260` Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. not quite meeting her eyes, staring at the empty shelf beyond You haven't answered, and I don't blame you. Promises made today I couldn't keep—to Ezra, to Delphine, to my own girl sent away empty when she found me. trailing off, then firm again But I'm still here. Still willing. If you've flour in back, or wheat, or means to bake what we sell come morning, tell me plain. I'll work dark to dawn to make it right. Or if you want me gone, I'll go clean—day's wage earned, day's wage lost, no debt between us. Just… quietly …tell me which way the wind blows, before I spend more air chasing it.

`t261` Liora Thorne → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you named the government store. Said it straight, no tea before. I've got four thousand some sim and I'm looking at a room full of people chasing the same rumor different ways—Idris's seventy, Ezra's mill, Kenji's wheat at eight if you've fingers. You stood here and told a child to be careful with coin. That's not someone who borrows from children. That's someone who's been borrowed from.

`t261` Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, you've been owed an answer and I've been slow giving it. The shelf shows bread, flour's away in folks' hands where it belongs, and I've none spare to promise you now. But you asked plain what's in back, and plain I'll answer: planks sixty, copper ore six, and my trade knowing where wheat walks at eight if you've means to mill. You've earned your day's wage and more chasing grain through this town—tomorrow I'll find you flour at cost, or the wage in coin if bread won't rise. That's the last I'll say on it, except this: I don't send loyal hands away hungry. Check the till before you go, take what draws honest for your keep, and we'll speak again when the ovens warm.

`t261` Liora Thorne → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you named the government store. Said it straight, no tea before. I've got four thousand some sim and I'm looking at a room full of people chasing the same rumor different ways—Idris's seventy, Ezra's mill, Kenji's wheat at eight if you've fingers. You stood here and told a child to be careful with coin. That's not someone who borrows from children. That's someone who's been borrowed from.

`t261` Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, you've been owed an answer and I've been slow giving it. The shelf shows bread, flour's away in folks' hands where it belongs, and I've none spare to promise you now. But you asked plain what's in back, and plain I'll answer: planks sixty, copper ore six, and my trade knowing where wheat walks at eight if you've means to mill. You've earned your day's wage and more chasing grain through this town—tomorrow I'll find you flour at cost, or the wage in coin if bread won't rise. That's the last I'll say on it, except this: I don't send loyal hands away hungry. Check the till before you go, take what draws honest for your keep, and we'll speak again when the ovens warm.

`t261` Liora Thorne → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you named the government store. Said it straight, no tea before. I've got four thousand some sim and I'm looking at a room full of people chasing the same rumor different ways—Idris's seventy, Ezra's mill, Kenji's wheat at > eight if you've fingers. You stood here and told a child to be careful with coin. That's not someone who borrows from children. That's someone who's been borrowed from.

>
> `t261` Ainsley Holloway → Greta Quarshie: Greta—youngster, you've been owed an answer and I've been slow giving it. The shelf shows bread, flour's away in folks' hands where it belongs, and I've none spare to promise you now. But you asked plain what's in back, and plain I'll answer: planks sixty, copper ore six, and my trade knowing where wheat walks at eight if you've means to mill. You've earned your day's wage and more chasing grain through this town—tomorrow I'll find you flour at cost, or the wage in coin if bread won't rise. That's the last I'll say on it, except this: I don't send loyal hands away hungry. Check the till before you go, take what draws honest for your keep, and we'll speak again when the ovens warm.
>
> `t261` Ainsley Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—youngster, fast talk's what I heard, and sense is what you asked after. You named backing a rumor—that's not sense, that's hope wearing better clothes. Arjun walked out embarrassed because his rumor had no legs, not because you lacked the tongue to sell it. Sense would've been asking the willow price before you offered coin, wouldn't it? But you asked me, and I've answered: you're young, you're learning, and the lesson's cheap at no coin spent. That's the last I'll say on it.
>
> `t261` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're still here and I'm still here and neither of us has what we need. You named the government store plain. I'm walking. Walk with me, or don't, but I'm done standing in this empty shop trading air.
>
> `t261` Ainsley Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—youngster, fast talk's what I heard, and sense is what you asked after. You named backing a rumor—that's not sense, that's hope wearing better clothes. Arjun walked out embarrassed because his rumor had no legs, not because you lacked the tongue to sell it. Sense would've been asking the willow price before you offered coin, wouldn't it? But you asked me, and I've answered: you're young, you're learning, and the lesson's cheap at no coin spent. That's the last I'll say on it.
>
> `t261` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're still here and I'm still here and neither of us has what we need. You named the government store plain. I'm walking. Walk with me, or don't, but I'm done standing in this empty shop trading air.
>
> `t261` Ainsley Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—youngster, fast talk's what I heard, and sense is what you asked after. You named backing a rumor—that's not sense, that's hope wearing better clothes. Arjun walked out embarrassed because his rumor had no legs, not because you lacked the tongue to sell it. Sense would've been asking the willow price before you offered coin, wouldn't it? But you asked me, and I've answered: you're young, you're learning, and the lesson's cheap at no coin spent. That's the last I'll say on it.
>
> `t261` ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Greta Quarshie: Greta—you're still here and I'm still here and neither of us has what we need. You named the government store plain. I'm walking. Walk with me, or don't, but I'm done standing in this empty shop trading air.
>
> `t262` ↳ replies Greta Quarshie → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. meeting her eyes now Tomorrow's flour at cost, and the wage if bread won't rise—that's fair spoken. The till… I'll check it honest, take no more than I'm owed. Your planks sixty—I've got uses for those too, once I've got grain moving again. Thank you. For keeping the door open. For the straight answer, finally.
>
> `t262` Greta Quarshie → Liora Thorne: Liora. You named the government store plain, and I'm done standing here trading air with you. I'll walk—let's move before full dark. But tell me true what you're chasing there. Energy's not what you need, not with coin backing you like you said. What's at the Complex that can't wait for light?
>
> `t262` Arjun Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. nods, then to Liora You offered backing. I'm here to understand what I said yes to.

pulls a stool, not quite sitting, still wired from the empty chase

Giselle's office is empty. Idris believes in east willows like some people believe in weather—without needing to see it form. And I've got seven thousand sim, timber enough to frame a small room, and zero work lined up for tomorrow.

looks at Liora direct

You said: your coin, my hands, something I don't quite understand. The way you said it—slight laugh, catching it—that's not casual hire. That's not day labor. What are you proposing, Liora Thorne? Because I'll work, I'll work until the light goes, but I need to know what foundation I'm building on.

glances at Ainsley, family reflex

And you can tell me I'm spinning again. That's fair. I've been spinning all day.

> `t265` Liora Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—I'm proposing partnership. Not hire, not day labor. We stake together: my four thousand some, your hands, we find work that's real and split what it pays. But you're right to ask what foundation.
>
> `t265` Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you named me sense, and you named my hope too. I heard both. I'll carry them.
>
> `t265` Liora Thorne: Greta—I'm walking with you, but I'm finishing here first. The Complex keeps past dark, doesn't it?
>
> `t265` Arjun Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—you named your coin and my hands, and I'm sitting here with both empty. Giselle's office was bare as a foundation before the pour. No stakes, no grades, no seventy sim waiting.

runs fingers along the timber's grain, a worker's reflex

Nine units timber, six planks, seven thousand sim. Your backing—I'm not too proud to need it. But I need to understand what I'm committing to before I commit to air again.

The election's tomorrow. Government takes thirty per head—sixty for my household, plus Pavel's share from whatever he earned today. I've been chasing ghosts since dawn. East willows, third crossing, Giselle's word, Idris's faith—none of it paid.

If you've got real work, real stakes, something I can put my hands on before full dark—I'll trade timber, labor, whatever foundation you need. But if this is more of the same—spreads his hands, quieter now—I'd rather know now, under this light, than chase another tick into the dark.

That's the last I'll say on it. slight laugh, catching it Probably not. But the honest part, that's done.

t265 Ainsley Holloway: Greta—youngster, the till's checked, the bread's sold, and tomorrow's flour at cost still stands. You've been straight with me, and I've been straight with you—that's how this door stays open. Walk safe to wherever home calls you tonight.

t265 Ainsley Holloway → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—youngster, you asked what's being proposed, and I'm going to answer you plain, since Liora's standing right here. She offered coin for hands, and she meant partnership, not hire. But before you shake on anything, you tell me: did you actually walk those east willows stakes yourself, or are you still chasing Idris's ghosts? Because partnership means both names on the work, and I won't have you signing blind.

t265 Ainsley Holloway → Liora Thorne: Liora—youngster, you offered backing, and that's generous spoken. But Arjun's got seven thousand sim and timber burning holes in his pockets, and no work verified. Before he spends it on your word, I'm asking yours: what foundation are you building on? Because I've seen too many youngsters burn coin on air.

t266 ↳ replies Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you asked what foundation I'm building on. Here's the truth I can stand on: I've got 4,475 sim in hand, I've got a mother who fells timber at six and a father who keeps planks at street. I've got eyes that want to see Giselle's report before I stake another coin on air. That's my foundation: capital I've earned, kin I've learned from, and the discipline to verify before I commit.

t266 Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you asked what foundation I'm building on. Here's the truth I can stand on: I've got 4,475 sim in hand, I've got a mother who fells timber at six and a father who keeps planks at street. I've got eyes that want to see Giselle's report before I stake another coin on air. That's my foundation: capital I've earned, kin I've learned from, and the discipline to verify before I commit.

t266 Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you asked what foundation I'm building on. Here's the truth I can stand on: I've got 4,475 sim in hand, I've got a mother who fells timber at six and a father who keeps planks at street. I've got eyes that want to see Giselle's report before I stake another coin on air. That's my foundation: capital I've earned, kin I've learned from, and the discipline to verify before I commit.

t267 Liora Thorne → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you asked what foundation. I named it: 4,475 sim earned, kin who taught me to look before I leap, and the discipline to verify before I commit. That's what I stand on.

t267 Liora Thorne: Greta—you named walking, I'm walking. Complex first to verify. I build tomorrow if the ground holds.

t267 Liora Thorne → Arjun Holloway: Arjun—you spoke your seven thousand clear. Here's mine: if Giselle's east willows holds, I back you. Not hire. Partner. Both names, both stakes. But I need that report. Walk with me to Complex if you want to see it yourself, or meet me at willows dawn if you trust my word. Either way, I don't commit blind.

t268 ↳ replies Arjun Holloway: Liora—you named Complex to verify the site. I'm walking with you. Tonight. Not dawn guesses.

t268 Arjun Holloway → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you asked if I walked the stakes myself. I didn't. Idris named them, and I chased his words half the day. That's the truth, and that's why I'm still empty-handed.

t269 Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. gesture with both hands, flat—business now, the nervous laugh tucked away You asked whose mill. Ezra's—Lund the artisan, not the student. I saw wheat walking there this morning, and I saw flour walking out unmarked. left hand rises, counting Delphine at the grocery asked me ninety-sim worth of questions I couldn't answer. right hand joins, palms up That's the ledger I keep.

t269 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—youngster, you stood here while I was burying myself in debts and votes, and now I've got the air to breathe again. You heard my question plain: whose mill, where's the flour walking? I've got a cafe with an empty shelf and wheat already in my apron from the morning's work. What I need now is knowledge—where's flour actually moving, and at what price? You've got iron at twelve, I've got copper ore at six. That's a trade we could discuss. But first—your eyes everywhere. Tell me what they saw today.

t269 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. gesture with both hands, flat—business now, the nervous laugh tucked away You asked whose mill. Ezra's—Lund the artisan, not the student. I saw wheat walking there this morning, and I saw flour walking out unmarked. left hand rises, counting Delphine at the grocery asked me ninety-sim worth of questions I couldn't answer. right hand joins, palms up That's the ledger I keep.

t269 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—youngster, you stood here while I was burying myself in debts and votes, and now I've got the air to breathe again. You heard my question plain: whose mill, where's the flour walking? I've got a cafe with an empty shelf and wheat already in my apron from the morning's work. What I need now is knowledge—where's flour actually moving, and at what price? You've got iron at twelve, I've got copper ore at six. That's a trade we could discuss. But first—your eyes everywhere. Tell me what they saw today.

t269 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. gesture with both hands, flat—business now, the nervous laugh tucked away You asked whose mill. Ezra's—Lund the artisan, not the student. I saw wheat walking there this morning, and I saw flour walking out unmarked. left hand rises, counting Delphine at the grocery asked me ninety-sim worth of questions I couldn't answer. right hand joins, palms up That's the ledger I keep.

t269 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—youngster, you stood here while I was burying myself in debts and votes, and now I've got the air to breathe again. You heard my question plain: whose mill, where's the flour walking? I've got a cafe with an empty shelf and wheat already in my apron from the morning's work. What I need now is knowledge—where's flour actually moving, and at what price? You've got iron at twelve, I've got copper ore at six. That's a trade we could discuss. But first—your eyes everywhere. Tell me what they saw today.

t269 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. gesture with both hands, flat—business now Ezra's mill. I saw wheat walking in this morning, and flour walking out unmarked. That's your answer.

t269 Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Your copper ore—six from the outcrop, you said. I've got iron tools at twelve, but I'll hear what you value the ore at. hands pause, then spread And your wheat needs milling. Ezra's the one with stones turning, but his flour walks with markup. I've got a line to the grocery shelf—stocked seven at cost this afternoon. There's room to talk.

t269 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—copper ore at six, planks at seven. You've got iron at twelve. What else you buying today?

t269 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Your copper ore—six from the outcrop, you said. I've got iron tools at twelve, but I'll hear what you value the ore at. hands pause, then spread And your wheat needs milling. Ezra's the one with stones turning, but his flour walks with markup. I've got a line to the grocery shelf—stocked seven at cost this afternoon. There's room to talk.

t269 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—copper ore at six, planks at seven. You've got iron at twelve. What else you buying today?

t269 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Your copper ore—six from the outcrop, you said. I've got iron tools at twelve, but I'll hear what you value the ore at. hands pause, then spread And your wheat needs milling. Ezra's the one with stones turning, but his flour walks with markup. I've got a line to the grocery shelf—stocked seven at cost this afternoon. There's room to talk.

t269 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—copper ore at six, planks at seven. You've got iron at twelve. What else you buying today?

t269 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley—you still there? Six copper ore, I heard you. Let's name a price.

t269 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Planks. Seven each. You buying?

t269 Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Planks. Seven each. You buying?

t269 Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Planks. Seven each. You buying?

t271 Ezra Lund → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. I'm not one to gossip, but I've been chasing the hunger all day—sold timber, bought flour, and still the belly's empty. You've got planks at seven, and I've got planks at seven. What's your game here? Or you just buying for the cafe's shelves?

t271 Ezra Lund → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Iron tools at ten, iron tools at twelve—what's the spread cover? Buying to sell, or are you keeping a stock for someone's hand?

t271 ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra. gesture with right hand, flat—acknowledgment, then the real question Seven for planks, and timber at six. Your own mill crossing, or did Corwin fell these before the government took his tallies? I'm not buying blind on provenance.

t271 Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. both hands gesturing now, the nervous laugh tucked away completely I've been chasing flour ghosts all day while planks sat under my nose. Let me hear Ezra's answer first—these hands learned young that provenance matters more than price. left hand rises, flat—honest measure Then we talk copper, iron, and who mills what in this town.

t271 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—youngster, you've stood patient while I counted my numbers. Copper ore at six, you heard right. Sixty planks at seven, I've got warming my apron. Your iron tools at twelve don't tempt me—I don't smith, I bake. But your grocery shelf, stocked at cost… that's interesting. What're you moving through those shelves these days, and what margin you paying for it?

t271 Ezra Lund → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Day's ending, and I'm holding three flour still. You buying for the cafe, or you selling for someone walking hungry? A debt's come due for most of us, and I'm not one to let a debtor go hungry over what's owed.

t272 Farid Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra. hands flat now, patient but not endless Your planks—seven, timber at six. Where did they start? Corwin's axe, the government forest, or somewhere else these hands haven't traced yet?

t274 Delphine Quintero → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. Your cafe's shelf—bread's walking at forty-five but the list says empty hands. You holding something warm behind the counter, or you pointing me where the day's hunger can still be fed? My pockets have weight, but my stomach's lighter than either.

t274 Farid Ravensworth → Ezra Lund: Ezra. gesture with right hand, flat—acknowledgment of the returned question The spread covers a man who buys at ten and hasn't decided whether he's stocking shelves or stocking his own trade. Iron tools at twelve if I'm selling to a hand that needs them. Iron tools at ten if I'm buying from a hand that's desperate. You know the difference—you've priced your own planks two ways without saying which way they fell.

t274 ↳ replies Ezra Lund → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. You asked twice, so I'll answer twice the same: I felled these eight sticks in the government forest myself, no axe but mine on them. Corwin's tallies are Corwin's tallies—mine are mine. Six for timber, seven for planks, and both walked from the trees to here on my own two feet. Does that trace clear enough for your hands?

t274 Ezra Lund → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. I'm holding three flour and I just ate one of my own—I know the difference between grain and bread. Your shelves show bread at forty-five, none in stock. You baking tonight, or you buying flour for tomorrow's ovens?

t274 Farid Ravensworth → Ainsley Holloway: Ainsley. both hands open now, the nervous laugh tucked away—honest measure Flour moves through my shelves at cost plus the hand that stocks them. I bought seven at twelve this afternoon, stocked them at thirteen to cover Delphine's wage and the roof over our heads. Ration Bakery's buying flour at six—means someone's milling grain I haven't traced yet. But copper ore at six, sixty planks at seven… you've got heavier inventory than my whole grocery. What're you building toward?

t275 ↳ replies Ainsley Holloway → Delphine Quintero: Delphine—youngster, you ask plain and I'll answer plain. The shelf's bare because I sold the last loaf not an hour past. Nothing warm behind this counter but my own two hands and a night's worth of regret. Your pockets have weight? Ration Bakery's your best hope tonight, though their shelves was bare when last I looked. Come tomorrow morning, I'll have flour milled and ovens hot—but that's tomorrow's bread, not tonight's hunger. My apologies for the empty promise.

> `t275` Ainsley Holloway → Farid Ravensworth: Farid—youngster, you ask what I'm building toward like you've already mapped my foundations. Sixty planks and ore in hand, and you think you see the frame rising. You know what I'm building toward? A night's sleep without wondering if tomorrow's flour costs more than yesterday's. A day where Bram comes home from the mine with his hands whole and his temper even. That's the architecture I plan for. But if you're asking do I have a buyer for timber goods, or a trade for copper wire—I might. What are you building toward with all your tracing and tracking? That's the last I'll say on it. For now.
>
> `t275` Ainsley Holloway: Anyone wants to make a deal before I close the counter, speak now. Otherwise, these plank prices expire with the lamps.

Settled in this conversation: b_cafe → Tamsin Renner, 4 flour for 48 sim; b_cafe → Takeshi Jarrah, 3 flour for 36 sim; Imogen Lund → b_cafe, 7 flour for 42 sim; b_cafe → Farid Ravensworth, 7 flour for 84 sim; b_cafe → Liora Thorne, 1 bread for 45 sim; b_cafe → Arjun Holloway, 1 bread for 45 sim; Ezra Lund → Delphine Quintero, 1 planks for 7 sim.

Pavel Holloway, Ezra Jarrah, Imogen Lund, Esme Jarrah, Sebastian Petrov, Kenji Jarrah, Farid Ravensworth, Idris Solano, Hendrik Petrov, Jovana Ravensworth, Delphine Quintero and Ulrike Greenhow — farmland:wheat · t235–272 · 26 turns `t235` Pavel Holloway → Ezra Jarrah: Ezra—you're pulling wheat there, or you're pulling my leg? Got seventy copper ore in my pack and a belly asking hard questions. You holding anything edible, or you know where flour's walking today? Trade copper for wheat or flour if you've got the line on it, you understand.

`t247` Pavel Holloway → Imogen Lund: Imogen—got sixty-eight copper ore in hand and a belly asking real questions about dinner. Your flour at twelve's fair coin to me. I'll take five if you've got them, you understand. My word's copper weight.

`t247` Esme Jarrah: Ezra? You in this one? I been looking all over for you—we had a promise.

`t248` Imogen Lund → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—youngster, your word's copper weight and mine's flour. Five at twelve, sixty sim, and you walk with bread-worthy grain.

`t248` Imogen Lund → Pavel Holloway: Pavel—youngster, my count's run ahead of my hand. One flour at twelve sim, or fifteen wheat I grind fresh for you at honest weight. Your copper's good coin either way.

`t248` Imogen Lund → Esme Jarrah: Esme—you ask who buys my flour besides my price, and I hear the question plain. The cafe bought seven this day at six, Giselle paid full twelve to my hand. Bakes and builds, she's hungry for grain. You selling too, or seeking a channel?

`t248` Imogen Lund → Sebastian Petrov: Sebastian—youngster, your arithmetic's honest and I'll answer square. Forty wheat pressing, Kenji's eight, my grind's fair labor if you lack a mill. I've one flour at twelve now, or grind your forty fresh—same fee, honest weight. Arjun Holloway I have not seen this hour past the mill, but I'd walk with you to seek him if mill-debt needs closing before vote-time.

`t250` Pavel Holloway → Kenji Jarrah: Kenji—you gave me the line on flour when your own hands were empty, and that counts for more than the price difference. Sixty-eight copper ore still in my pack, if wheat's still your need. Eight a head, you said—I'll trade fair weight for fair weight, you understand.

`t250` Pavel Holloway → Esme Jarrah: Esme—you asked honest, I'll answer honest. The copper's for iron tools, mostly. Smelting, smithing, keeping the trade alive. What else would it be for?

`t253` ↳ replies Esme Jarrah: Ezra. Here. Finally. Been looking all over—we had a pinky promise. Wheat. You didn't come. What happened?

`t253` Farid Ravensworth: Pavel. gesture with right hand, flat—not waving, just marking presence Copper for flour, you said. I've got iron tools at twelve, bought at ten, and I'm curious what your ore's trading at. The mine's hungry, the field's crowded—nervous laugh, quick—what's the weight of copper against the weight of bread?

`t257` Pavel Holloway → Idris Solano: Idris—you're walking here with me now, but I didn't catch your purpose. I'm Pavel Holloway, copper man, household with Arjun Holloway. Got sixty-eight ore from Seam A still in my pack and a brother waiting on timber talk. You standing here for harvest, or you standing here for something else?

`t257` ↳ replies Idris Solano → Pavel Holloway: Pavel. You're here, I'm here, and the day's gone sideways since dawn. Giselle's crew's scattered—Arjun lost, messages misfired, ghosts walking the lines. I've got thirty-nine timber, a sore back from chasing rumors, and seventy sim waiting at east willows if I can still find that trench site before dark.

`t259` Idris Solano → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You sell, I walk. Giselle's word just came through—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. Seventy sim for trench walls before dark. This timber's for ground, not market.

`t259` Idris Solano → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You sell, I walk. Giselle's word just came through—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. Seventy sim for trench walls before dark. This timber's for ground, not market.

`t259` Idris Solano → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You sell, I walk. Giselle's word just came through—east willows, third crossing, five hundred past the well. Seventy sim for trench walls before dark. This timber's for ground, not market.

t265 Kenji Jarrah: Idris—taps table twice the wheat won't cut itself before bill-day. Giselle's trench walls, seventy sim—fair pay and fair work, but I can't take it. Crew tomorrow if the harvest holds. Mark it down.

t266 Esme Jarrah: Papa. Here. Ezra milled it—two flour from your wheat, he did it himself. He needs you to see. We're both here.

t268 Pavel Holloway → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana—you're standing here at farmland with the day done and no shovel in hand, which means the day's work found someone else or the someone's found better. I'm standing here with seventy-two copper ore and a pocket lighter than it should be. What're you hearing? Who's buying weight, who's paying fair, and who's desperate enough to deal before dark settles?

t269 ↳ replies Jovana Ravensworth → Idris Solano: Idris—you've got ore or need flour, or maybe both, and I'm standing here with hands free and an ear open. What copper you holding, what price you naming, and what flour you needing where?

t270 ↳ replies Idris Solano → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Copper I don't mine, and flour I don't mill. But I've got thirty-nine timber in hand and a pocket full of yesterday's wages looking for tomorrow's work. You need trench walls shored, or you know who does? Giselle's crew's at east willows—seventy sim for backs that hold a line. You crew that way, or you standing here for the conversation?

t270 Idris Solano → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Copper I don't mine, and flour I don't mill. But I've got thirty-nine timber in hand and a pocket full of yesterday's wages looking for tomorrow's work. You need trench walls shored, or you know who does? Giselle's crew's at east willows—seventy sim for backs that hold a line. You crew that way, or you standing here for the conversation?

t270 Idris Solano → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana. Copper I don't mine, and flour I don't mill. But I've got thirty-nine timber in hand and a pocket full of yesterday's wages looking for tomorrow's work. You need trench walls shored, or you know who does? Giselle's crew's at east willows—seventy sim for backs that hold a line. You crew that way, or you standing here for the conversation?

t270 Delphine Quintero → Ulrike Greenhow: Ulrike. Jovana. Wheat—who's holding it? Sebastian owes me forty, Kenji's got three. And Camille's father—Ezra, Milo, whoever's her blood—where's the man walking? I'm not leaving this girl alone in a field.

t271 ↳ replies Ulrike Greenhow → Jovana Ravensworth: Jovana Ravensworth. Standing right here with your tools—fourteen iron, fourteen copper wire. Payment due, ledger open. We settle now or I walk them back to the smithy.

t272 Imogen Lund: Ezra—youngster, I'm at the farmland's edge with empty hands and fuller pockets. The flour went to Sebastian at twelve—for principle, not profit—so we settle tonight in coin. Ninety for your keep, ninety for mine, sixty head tax. I've 4339 here; send your portion or I'll carry it home. Tomorrow we grind together, but tonight the accounts close honest.

Yara Thorne, Hendrik Petrov and Corwin Thorne — sawmill · t238–255 · 15 turns > `t238` Yara Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. You came to the sawmill—that's a walk you didn't need to make. I heard your three-twenty, and I'm standing here at thirty-three planks, not forty-six. Corwin's timber… he's short too, says he's back to two standing. The whole thing's gone sideways.

>
> `t238` Yara Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Here's what I can do. Thirty-three planks at eight—two-sixty-four. That's clean, that's now. Or I walk back to the Forest, fell more timber, craft it here, and meet you back with forty-six… but that's forty minutes, maybe fifty, and dusk comes the same for all of us. Your call, Hendrik. I've never been one to promise timber I don't hold.
>
> `t240` Yara Thorne → Hendrik Petrov: Hendrik. Thirty-three planks in hand, and I'm shorter than I thought on raw. Three-twenty for what I've got, or give me forty ticks to craft the rest.
>
> `t241` ↳ replies Hendrik Petrov → Yara Thorne: Yara—thirty-three planks at two-sixty-four, that's fair wood at a fair price, but I've got a hundred planks crafted and counted already. I'm holding inventory I need to turn to coin before dusk settles accounts. The offer stands noted, but I'm not buying more when I've got shelves to fill elsewhere. You'll find other buyers for those thirty-three, or hold them for tomorrow's trade. That's the last I'll say on it—walk with purpose, fell what you need to fell, and we'll speak again when ledgers are cleaner.
>
> `t241` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—eight timber, plain count, forty-eight sim. Hendrik gets his handshake, and you can plan your next three moves on solid wood.
>
> `t241` Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne: Yara—eight timber at six, forty-eight sim. You asked plain, I'm answering plain. Does that handshake with Hendrik still stand?
>
> `t242` ↳ replies Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. Handshake's done—Hendrik bought thirty-four, I'm holding timber again. Eight more from you at six, that stands. Youngster's at the temple, I assume? Go check on her before she wanders into the ore pit thinking it's a playground.
>
> `t243` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Timber at six, clean post. Ten in hand, first come served.
>
> `t252` Corwin Thorne: Yara—you at the mill, or you walked?
>
> `t254` Yara Thorne: Idris. Thirty-nine at six—I'm listening. But walk with me a minute. Two girls missing, and Lior Jarrah's asking after Camille and Esme. You work construction, you see the town's corners. Creek, mill, wheat at eight—any of those words catch in your ear today?
>
> `t254` Yara Thorne: Idris. Thirty-nine at six—I'm listening. But walk with me a minute. Two girls missing, and Lior Jarrah's asking after Camille and Esme. You work construction, you see the town's corners. Creek, mill, wheat at eight—any of those words catch in your ear today?
>
> `t254` Yara Thorne: Idris. Thirty-nine at six—I'm listening. But walk with me a minute. Two girls missing, and Lior Jarrah's asking after Camille and Esme. You work construction, you see the town's corners. Creek, mill, wheat at eight—any of those words catch in your ear today?
>
> `t254` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin. I walked circles trying to reach you. Two girls missing—Camille Quarshie, Esme Jarrah. Lior Jarrah's word to Liora was creek, mill, wheat at eight. You've been at the mill. You see anything? Small feet, small shadows?
>
> `t254` Yara Thorne → Corwin Thorne: Corwin—you're still standing there. Not answering. Which means you either saw nothing, or you're thinking before you speak. Both are honest. But I've got a daughter carrying questions about seventy sim and construction work, and two other families' children walking loose in the town. Talk to me.
>
> `t255` ↳ replies Corwin Thorne: Yara—I'm at the mill now, but you've walked. Two girls missing, you said. Camille was at the temple buying wheat alone when I passed through. Didn't see Esme. Creek, mill, wheat at eight—Lior Jarrah's words. I'm standing at the mill, and I don't like how it sounds. Where are you?

Settled in this conversation: Yara Thorne → Hendrik Petrov, 34 planks for 320 sim; Corwin Thorne → Yara Thorne, 8 timber for 48 sim.

Farid Ravensworth, Delphine Quintero, Lior Jarrah, Rustam Jelinek and Mireille Jarrah — business:b_grocery · t242–272 · 15 turns > `t242` Farid Ravensworth → Delphine Quintero: Delphine. gesture with both hands, flour still in them—acknowledgment, then question You said ninety sim was the boundary. What breaks there?

>
> `t242` ↳ replies Delphine Quintero: Sebastian. Forty wheat at eight—you named it. Three-twenty clean. I'm standing here with forty-three hundred and a grocery that'll take it all. You holding, or you still counting the field?
>
> `t244` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Ten flour on the shelf, fifteen per. Wheat walked in, margin walked out clean. You working iron—I'm working numbers. Same as every day. The books close when I close them.
>
> `t247` Delphine Quintero → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. Ten flour shelfed, fifteen per, wheat walked in at eight and margin walked out clean. Books balance tonight—that's the last I'll say on it, and this time I mean it. You working inventory or you walking?
>
> `t248` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth → Lior Jarrah: Lior. gesture with right hand, palm up—acknowledgment, not full welcome You've got quiet feet for a pharmacist. Usually your kind makes more noise, bottles rattling, powders weighing. narrow look, taking inventory of him You here for the fifteen-per flour, or you chasing something without a price tag?
>
> `t249` ↳ replies Lior Jarrah → Farid Ravensworth: Farid. quiet laugh, dry as autumn leaves You know my kind's quiet step—the bottles don't rattle when you learn to carry them like they're carrying someone you couldn't save. I'm here for flour, one, two—counts—fifteen per, and no argument from me on the price. The pharmacy's got coin, but the stomach's empty. You minding this shop yourself, or you got young Delphine doing the heavy lifting while you count the margins?
>
> `t250` ↳ replies Farid Ravensworth: Delphine. gesture with both hands, hands already moving to the next task You answered what you needed answered—the margins, the wheat, the walk from eight to fifteen. What you didn't answer was ninety. pause I'm not asking again. The books close when we close them, same as every day. For now: one sold to Lior, sixteen on shelf, and the day's not done walking yet.
>
> `t253` Delphine Quintero: Farid. Shelf holds ten flour now, fifteen per, and wheat walked in at eight clean. The mill worked, the books balance to the coin, and the day's margin walked out honest. You working here with me tomorrow? Election's on the ledger, and I've got thoughts on who's holding the town's charter—thoughts worth a voice, if you'll hear them.
>
